REVIVAL STARTS AT METHODIST CHURCH

Rev. R. N. Huckabee, Amarillo, Opens Meeting Here

The revival meeting at the First Methodist Church got off to a good start yesterday with two splendid sermons by Rev. R. N. Huckabee, evangelist pastor of the San Jacinto Methodist Church of Amarillo.

Plans announced this morning are for four day services this week, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, and every night during the week. The message tonight, Rev. Huckabee stated, will be on the subject of Holiness, and a special invitation is extended to all who believe in Holiness, and to all who are not believers as well.

Tuesday night will be a special Christian Patriots meeting, and a special invitation is extended to all ex-service men and their families.

"The messages will all be practical, every-day subjects dealing with results of sin in this country as I have seen them, and will be helpful for every-day life," Rev. Huckabee stated.

Beginning tonight, the singing will be conducted by Ira Huckabee of Amarillo, brother of the evangelist pastor, and the singing will be made a drawing feature of the revival.

"I believe we will have a great meeting, and desire that all people who are interested in bettering the religious conditions will attend as many of the services as possible," Rev. T. J. Rea, pastor, said.

MOTHER OF FOUR KILLED BY HIT-AND-RUN DRIVER

MAYNARD, Mass., March 25.—A mother of four children was killed and her husband critically injured Sunday by a hit-and-run driver.

Mrs. Anna Kunelius, 49, and her husband, John, 50, were found lying in the road and were taken to a hospital where Mrs. Kunelius was pronounced dead. Her husband suffered two broken legs and internal injuries and is not expected to live.

EXPECTS QUICK RELIEF ACTION

WASHINGTON, March 25.—Speaker Burns today expressed hope for final congressional action on the work relief bill by the week-end, after conferring with Roosevelt and Appropriations Committee Chairman Buchanan.

Meanwhile, 30 members of the House silver bloc agreed to attempt to force House acceptance of Senate amendments, especially the Thomas proposal for moderate silver currency inflation.

SENATE FAVORS DIVISION OF PARDONING POWERS

AUSTIN, Mar. 25.—The Senate reversed itself today and voted 20 to 7 for a constitutional amendment to divide pardoning power between the governor and a state pardon board.

Lack of State Aid May Cause Schools To Cut Term Short

Not more than 75 per cent of the approved state aid grants for rural schools can be paid by the state for the present school term, it was learned today by Hall County rural school teachers in a letter from Pat Bullock, director of state rural school aid.

This would indicate that unless special grants are made by the federal or state governments, many of the rural schools in the county will be forced to cut their present teaching term short, or operate by issuing delinquent vouchers, it has been explained by county school officials.

"Federal aid," Mr. Bullock explained in the letter, "depends upon action of the state legislature on the Equalization Bill now before that body. The federal government evidently wants to know what the state proposes to do about the situation for next year before granting aid for Texas rural schools for the balance of this term."

Last year 90 per cent of the approved rural aid grants were paid by the state. The maximum this year will be 75 per cent according to Mr. Bullock's letter.

Two From County Among Educators' Executive Group

CANYON, March 25.—Hall County has two representatives on the executive committee of the Northwest Texas Conference for Education, which closed here Saturday.

The two selected from the county were Mrs. Carl Periman of Memphis and Lee Vardy of Turkey.

Three thousand educators were registered for the second annual conference here. W. B. Irwin of Perryton was elected President of the organization and F. E. Savage of Canyon, secretary, for the ensuing year. The executive committee is composed of 38 members.

SALOONS 'FULL BLAST' IN HOUSTON, RANGERS CLAIM

AUSTIN, Mar. 25.—Ranger W. H. Kirby told the Harris County grand jury today, in a letter responding to an inquiry why state Rangers made Houston raids, that "it is a matter of common and notorious knowledge that saloons and gambling houses were operating full blast."

New Rival for Shirley Temple

Rivals for Shirley Temple's fame are appearing so fast in Hollywood, it is hard to distinguish those having any prospects of success. But here's one who's hailed as a winner. She's Joan Gay, of Dallas, Tex., pictured in a scene from Kay Francis' latest picture, "Stranded." Joan is 4 years old and is a niece of Mr. and Mrs. Alan Dinehart.

HITLER CLAIMS RUSSIA CAUSE OF WORRY

TO INVESTIGATE BURNING OF ROADHOUSE

Six Die, 22 Injured In Blaze Early Sunday

CHICAGO, March 25.—An investigation was launched today into the fire which Sunday swept the interior of the Club Rendezvous near suburban Morton Grove and took the lives of four men and two women. Twenty-two injured, two seriously.

Encircled by the swift-spreading fire early Sunday morning, panic-stricken patrons fought for the one exit and many were trampled. Outside, a motorist made an ineffectual attempt to open another avenue of escape by ramming his car against the side of the blazing resort.

The Club Rendezvous was one of a group of night resorts clustered in the little town of Morton Grove on Dempster street, several miles west of Evanston. The suburb was the scene of the sensational kidnaping two years ago of John (Jake the Barber) Factor, international speculator, who had been celebrating at the Dells, another roadhouse.

Smoke started to curl up from the cloakroom of the Club Rendezvous at 2:30 a. m.

For a few minutes the 80 revelers in the place showed little concern. Then, witnesses said, the flames suddenly burst out from the checkroom, lapping up the heavy silk and crepe paper draperies.

The dancers screamed. The orchestra music stopped. The patrons rushed for the narrow corridor leading to the only exit. They clawed and shoved each other in frantic efforts to escape.

Many of those burned were caught by the blazing draperies, which fell on the crowd milling in the room.

Representative To Address Teachers

H. A. Finch, field representative for the study of curriculum courses, will be in Memphis Saturday morning to meet with Hall County school teachers for a study of the local situation, it has been announced by the Hall County school superintendent.

Mr. Finch will speak to local teachers at 10:30 o'clock Saturday morning at the Baptist Church annex. The state and federal plan of curriculum revision will be discussed at length during the program.

ETHIOPIAN IS SLAIN

ROME, Mar. 25.—An official communique today announced a new combat between Italians and Ethiopians on the turbulent Eritrean frontier, wherein one Ethiopian was slain.

Cotton Totals

Hall County produced 7,934 bales of cotton last year, according to complete figures just released by the Department of Commerce, as compared to 38,292 bales in 1933. The figures included round bales counted as half bales.

Collingsworth County led the group included in the Memphis Area in cotton production for the season. The county produced 10,040 bales, as compared with 41,394 in 1933.

Donley County was third with 7,122 bales, as compared to 18,353 the previous year. Childress County produced 4,519 bales last season and 86,870 in 1933. Briscoe ginned only 1,283 bales, as compared to 11,760 the previous year.

Williamson County, near Austin, led the state in cotton production during the past season, the department figures show, with 62,913 bales.

Pioneer of Memphis Has 'Seen It Rain'

The weatherman says the sandstorms are not over. But to make the most of the situation, we're going to consider it as a joke, anyway.

A tourist passed through Memphis recently and stopped to chat with one of our oldest residents. The tourist scanned the sky and asked, "Do you think it'll rain?"

The pioneer replied, "Well, I don't much care whether it does or not. I've seen it rain—but I would like to see for my boy to see it."

Levee, Blasted To Save Uplands, Guarded by Troops

A dynamite explosion which ripped open this levee near Philipp, Miss., freeing torrents of the Tallahatchie river, brought militiamen rushing to the scene, to halt further blasting by upriver planters, whose lands had been flooded by high waters. Heavy property toll was taken when the river went far out of its banks, in the series of floods which have ravaged eight states.

EVIDENCE USUALLY CIRCUMSTANTIAL

THE Bruno Hauptmann defense funds now contains enough money to relieve the state of New Jersey of the job of financing Hauptmann's appeals.

On the same day that this announcement was made, it was also announced that Mrs. Hauptmann and a committee would make a tour of the middle west to solicit contributions.

This being a free country, the right to solicit funds of this kind is inalienable—as is the right of any citizen to contribute. But it is a little hard to figure out just why under the shining sun anyone should feel moved to shell out in this case.

The principal reason, apparently, is a wide-spread feeling that a man sentenced to die on purely circumstantial evidence has not had quite a square deal.

This theory is worth examining. Boiled down, it can mean nothing less than that a conviction is shaky unless it be bolstered by direct eye-witness testimony as to the major facts at issue. And that is equivalent to saying that unless a murderer is thoughtful enough to commit his crime in the presence of witnesses, it is impossible to punish him.

As a matter of fact, the testimony of eye-witnesses is frequently the most shaky and unreliable kind of testimony there is.

Consider for a moment the two criminal cases of the post-war era in which the greatest numbers of people became convinced that men had been wrongfully convicted—the Sacco-Vanzetti case and the Mooney-Billings case.

Whether Sacco and Vanzetti were murderers or innocent men, it is an indisputable fact that the very weakest part of the case against them was the evidence of eye-witnesses. If eye-witness testimony were as much superior to circumstantial evidence as some people believe, there never could have been the slightest question as to these men's guilt.

And Mooney—where was the circumstantial evidence in his case? Practically all the important evidence against him came from eye-witnesses. The agitation about his case would have died years ago if direct evidence were as foolproof as some innocent souls suppose.

This is not to say that these men were convicted through error. It is simply to point out that it is silly to suppose that circumstantial evidence is in the nature of things open to suspicion. On the contrary, it is apt to be the strongest kind of evidence there is.

Contribute to the Hauptmann defense fund if you wish. But don't do it on the ground that it is wrong to convict a man on circumstantial evidence.

BEGIN HERE TODAY
MILLICENT GRAVES' employer, GEORGE DRIMGOLD, tells her he has a confession to dictate and warns her against a woman in a black ermine coat.

Millicent leaves the office and sees such a woman. Later she finds her purse has been taken and a similar one substituted. In the elevator she meets a distinguished-looking man of middle age.

Returning to the office, Millicent finds Drimgold dead. In panic she rushes away and registers at a hotel under an assumed name. Next day she meets the stranger again. He tells her his name is JARVIS HAPP. Happ sends her to a beauty shop where, in spite of her protests, she is transformed into a brunet.

Happ takes her home, introducing her as his secretary. ROBERT CAISE, Happ's stepson, accuses Millicent of being the girl sought in the Drimgold murder.

CHAPTER VIII
Millicent knew there was no use denying Robert Caise's accusation that she was the girl the police were looking for. In the first place, the photographic evidence was damning. In the second place, she realized that to question the conclusions he had reached would simply make him more difficult to handle. So she stared steadily at him and said, "Well, what are you going to do about it?"

He started so say something, then paused as he heard the rattle of the door knob.

"Nothing," he said. "Sit tight." He turned and was, apparently, just leaving the room as Jarvis Happ and Dick Gentry entered.

"Just getting some stuff," he said, keeping his eyes averted from those of Jarvis Happ. "Hope I'm not intruding?"

"Not at all," Jarvis Happ said, but Millicent noticed there was something about his voice that was not entirely cordial—a certain harshly strained note of suspicion. When she glanced at his face, however, she was able to see nothing in his eyes. His face was a perfect mask.

He indicated a small table. "I think," he said, "you'd better sit there for the present, Miss Grabes. Tomorrow I'll purchase a secretarial desk and have it sent up here. Then you can get at things in a businesslike way."

She seated herself and the two men lit cigars. Jarvis Happ went on talking in his smoothly eloquent voice—a voice which seemed so certain of itself, so soothing to tired eardrums.

"Dick and I," he said, "each put in $5000 as capital and started speculating in stocks. I may as well confess to you that we were selling stocks short. I see nothing whatever wrong with that type of business transaction. However, of late there has been a certain public sentiment against it."

"When one realizes that commodities are going down, there is no sane reason why he shouldn't capitalize upon that knowledge. Moreover, were it not for the so-called 'short' sales, the market

Stories in STAMPS

IN MEMORY OF MILLIMETERNICH

AUSTRIA'S recent issue of a 24-groschen stamp with a wreath of mourning around a portrait of the late Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss recalls a hectic two years while this small, but stout-hearted statesman was leader of that country. From May, 1932, until his assassination in July, 1934, Dollfuss was the target of several attempts at his life. Yet this man, who was called the "Millimeter-nich of Vienna," continued to defy Nazi attempts to gain control of the government and ally it with Germany, in trade at least.

In his short two years of control, Dollfuss succeeded in gaining the support of Italy against Germany in a attempt to form a union with Austria.

picked up the suitcase and said, "It would be a relief to have something on which I could concentrate. Would you mind very much if I started looking things over tonight?"

"Not at all," Happ said, "Suit yourself. If you're going to start working you might prefer to take them into your own room."

"I think," she said, "that I would."

"Go ahead," he told her. She started for the door, but Dick Gentry gained her side in two swift strides.

"Permit me," he said, "to carry the suitcase for you. It's heavy."

The suitcase was indeed heavy, and she surrendered it to him with a smile, leading the way down the corridor to her room. She opened the door. Gentry stepped in swiftly after her, dropped the suitcase on the floor, and kicked the door shut.

"Listen," he said, "how did Jarvis happen to pick you up?" She faced him defiantly.

"Mr. Happ," she said, "employed me after having made an investigation of my references, if that's what you mean. I assure you there was nothing of the 'pick-up' about it."

"I didn't mean that," he said. "I wanted to know how he happened to get in touch with you." "Don't you think," she asked, "that it would be better to ask Mr. Happ about that?" "No, I'm asking you."

to Mr. Happ and ask him to answer your question." She moved as though to open the door and Gentry grabbed her shoulder, pushed her back from the door, then suddenly shot an arm about her waist, held her close to him.

"Now wait a minute, sister," he said, "don't get excited. I'm not trying to pull anything funny."

She realized that she was helpless, and simply quit struggling, staring up at him with her face a cold mask.

"When you have quite finished," she said, "with your cave-man tactics, perhaps you'll..." "Forget it," he told her roughly. "That's not what I'm after. Use your head, you little fool."

She saw that his eyes drifted uneasily toward the door. "Listen," he said, "there's no reason why you can't be sitting pretty in this thing. Do you understand?"

"What do you mean?" "You're not a fool," he said, "and if you're a girl who's had a bit of experience working for a living you understand that it's a life that doesn't get you any place. You can make a living, I grant you that, but that's all. You'll put in all of your youth slaving over a typewriter somewhere, and as soon as your youth has gone you'll find that you're crowded into the background by a crop of younger girls with more pep, more beauty, and more vitality, who can stand the gaff and keep swilling. You'll get shoved back into a corner some where, get a lot of gray hairs, and wind up by being..."

"Wind up by being a woman who has lived her own life and been true to herself," she interrupted him. "If you don't like the way I'm living my life, you can kindly let me go and..."

"You still don't get me," he said. "You're young, you're beautiful. How would you like to travel while you've got the beauty to attract men? How'd you like to take long ocean trips where you were thrown in contact with men of money and influence, where they would have to notice your beauty? How would you like to take in the swell places of the world, see Monte Carlo, Europe? How would you like to get your gowns in Paris, spend your winters in the south? How would you like to really live instead of managing to barely exist?"

"Are you," she asked with a sneer, "proposing marriage to me?" Gentry's eyes slid over her features as a woman's fingers slide over a pair of silk hose she is contemplating buying.

"I might," he said, "at that. It's an idea."

"Are you crazy," she asked, "or drunk, or both?" He looked down at the suitcase and laughed.
