Mrs. Dorothea Livermore, divorced wife of the famous Wall Street stock operator, is pictured in friendly pose with D. B. Neville her reputed fiance, who was present in her Santa Barbara, Calif., home when she is alleged to have shot her 16-year-old son Jesse Livermore, Jr., in an argument over intoxication. Mrs. Livermore was jailed as doctors frantically tried to save her son's life.

Current bills were read by the City Secretary and ordered paid, and reports were received on routine matters from various committees of the city government.

Rev. O. W. Carter of the First Methodist Church here was guest speaker at the regularly weekly luncheon of the Memphis Rotary Club yesterday noon.

J. Ross Bell, A. W. Adams and Jimmie Mahan, all of Childress, were visiting Rotarians.

.WE. SAW

Oh boy, oh boy! We've got a fan letter, or rather, a fan postal card. Of course, the customer doesn't seem to be pleased, but better any kind of notice than to be ignored. The postal is as follows:

Lakeview, Dec. 3, 1935. Dear Weesawyer:

If you can't find anything better to write about in your column than an "old pair of shoes," I think you had better take out.

And, by the way, why do the King Bros. get all the "lime light"?

Yours till a new editor for "We Saw" is procured, Kritical Kid.

Can you imagine that? The item which aroused his ire was evidently the one about seeing a pair of old shoes in the street in front of the King Mortuary. Then he doesn't like for us to mention the King Bros. so often.

Can it be that "Pegleg" has a rival at Lakeview?

As for the item about the old pair of shoes, we have one of our best operatives at work on that, and will have more to say about it later.

A sign in the business section, reading: "Hot Tamales, One Cent Apeace." If they have as much pepper in the tamales in question as in some of them, a man won't have much "peace" after eating them.

Doc, MacMillan down town without Jiggs.

C. L. Sloan writing a check on our front window, to pay his laundry bill, while "Soapy" Tribble hovered expectantly in the background.

H. J. Rice at the First National Bank, depositing a big wad of Uncle Sam's currency.

Charlie Meacham giving his views of nagging wives. He gave us to understand, of course, that there wasn't anything personal in the matter.

A fairly good crowd of natives out yesterday afternoon to see the T. C. U. Special go through, headed for California.

Nath Hudgrins, Jr., go into a local cafe with his family last Sunday for a turkey dinner. When the waiter came around, Nath ordered a hamburger.

J. D. Webster bragging to cronies about his betting ability. He claims he has his bets so placed on the Hereford-Panhandle game that he can't lose, and stands a good chance to win two dollars.

Bud McAbee and a couple of his friends debating the question of "playing hooky" from school. They decided to go on to school, since they'd have to make up the time they missed anyway.

Alfred Burks planning a trip to Lubbock. Said he was going to take the "doodle-bug" over, but he didn't say just what the "doodle bug" was.

Young "Goggles" Powers going about with his chest stuck out and lording it over some of his fellow Cyclone squadmen, due to being selected on the Democrat All-District team while some of them only got a mention.

Ben King Boswell accusing Mamie Bakke of "swiping" an issue of the Ballyhoo off the news stand. Can you imagine anyone accusing the president of a missionary society doing a thing like that.

And how we'll get our water bill goes up.

TRAINING THE FARMERS OF TOMORROW

NO CLASS of people and no method of making a living are receiving more attention at the present time than are farmers and farming, and one of the more interesting phases of farm cooperative work lies in the encouragement and knowledge given young farm people.

In earlier days, and not so far back, much fun was made of the man who tried to get the farmer to use scientific methods in his work. The agronomist was the laughing stock of the "dirt farmer," and any man who presumed to suggest that the tiller of the soil might well take a leaf from the book of the scientist was given the wild and merry horse laugh.

But these days are gone forever. At last the farmer is beginning to realize that there is something more to successful farming than merely handling the lines over a span of mules, plowing a furrow, planting some seed and covering them up, then praying for rain and hoping for the best.

Actual scientific farming, demonstrated in the field, instead of on paper, has convinced the farmer that there is a better method.

He is today much interested in crop control, soil erosion prevention, shelter-belt planting, and the hundred and one things that the scientist has contributed to the success of farming.

And perhaps the most encouraging feature of it all is that the present day farmer is not taking chances on his son, who is going to follow in his father's footsteps, having to learn his lesson in the school of experience.

The young folks nowadays have many things to create an interest in farming as a business. Numerous clubs of budding tillers of the soil are organized and teach their lesson of modern methods and cooperation.

Contests are held for livestock and crops raised by these young farmers-to-be. Instruction is given them in scientific farming, marketing and distribution. Theirs is an opportunity that few of their forebears had.

The result of this is to better the outlook for the agriculture of the future—and to make it inevitable that the farmer of tomorrow will be a better crop scientist, a better business man, and a more valuable citizen, than the farmer of the past.

the Cameron front door earlier in the afternoon but now it had disappeared.

"It's like turning the clock back," Mrs. Weatherford said. "Agatha Cameron used the very same tactics to push the child's mother into a loveless marriage when she was eating her heart out for you, Westbrook. I always thought Agatha deserved everything she got in the way of unhappiness for that affair."

"Well, nobody would guess her granddaughter is being pushed," Mrs. Prescott sniffed. "I've heard that when she found out he was the richest boy in town she got out that old rattletrap car of theirs and staged a breakdown right in front of his home. A friend of mine saw her!"

"Grandmothers and granddaughters today both want the same thing—money," Mrs. Weatherford said, adding hastily. "That is, some of them do. I've always said the happiness of my girls is all that matters to me."

The drive carried her past a large, deserted building on the outskirts of town. Once it had been the most fashionable girls' school in the state. Above the entrance arch, in great letters, were carved the words, "That Our Daughters Shall Be as Cornerstones, Polished After the Similitude of a Palace."

And girls had been polished, their manners flawless in those days. Many times in the past her carriage had whirled past this building. The lawn had been alive then with graceful young figures. Mrs. Cameron could always single out one girl with rich, brown hair. Some of her classmates had hinted that Dana's mother washed her hair in champagne to get that beautiful vivid sheen.

Mrs. Cameron pulled the old car sharply to one side as a powerfully built roadster, driven at what she was sure was a horribly reckless speed, bore down upon her, flashing ahead. The driver was Ronnie Moore. He lifted his hat in the gallant way she liked, and she flushed with pleasure. Not all young men were so courteous to older people as Ronnie was. Some of them nodded, without lifting (Continued on page 5)

Grandmother Cameron was driving home as this conversation took place. She had gone out into the county for eggs. Four dozen of them, boxed, were hidden beneath an old rug in the back of the car. Eggs were cheaper, bought that way. It was one of the petty economies Grandmother Cameron loathed but had practiced for years. She had never really become accustomed to being poor. Not even during the depression. When friends flaunted their economies and talked brazenly about shopping for cheaper things, or not shopping at all, she had kept up a pretense of ample funds. She had always hidden the eggs.

Millions have found in Calotabs a most valuable aid in the treatment of colds. They take one or two tablets the first night and repeat the third or fifth night if needed.

How do Calotabs help Nature throw off a cold? First, Calotabs is one of the most thorough and dependable of all intestinal eliminants, thus cleansing the intestinal tract of the germ-laden mucus and toxins.

Second, Calotabs are diuretic to the kidneys, promoting the elimination of cold poisons from the system. Thus Calotabs serve the double purpose of a purgative and diuretic, both of which are needed in the treatment of colds.

Calotabs are quite economical; only twenty-five cents for the family package, ten cents for the trial package. (Adv.)

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

BY MARY E. DAGUE
NEA Service Staff Writer

LAST NIGHT for dinner we had canned red raspberries chilled to the nth degree. Every one of us praised the simple dessert and of course you know that ever so many inexpensive but luxurious alluring desserts can be concocted from the fruit we canned last summer.

The juice of canned fruits, combined with lemon juice, makes a good fruit for breakfast. Light colored juices are excellent in salad dressings. Any fruit juice thickened with cornstarch and made piquant by a little lemon juice does as pleasing sauce for steamed puddings. Stiffened with gelatin and molded attractively, fruit and juice together are grand with whipped cream.

These desserts add interest to winter meals by furnishing the flavor and minerals of summer fruits at a time when the diet is apt to be rather heavy and monotonous.

Jellied Strawberries

One pint can strawberries, 1 tablespoon granulated gelatin, 4 tablespoons cold water, 4 tablespoons orange juice, 1 or 2 bananas (optional).

Any variety of berries or small fruit can be used in this recipe. The bananas are added to increase the amount and they do combine deliciously with the favor of strawberries or raspberries.

Drain fruit from juice. Soften gelatin in cold water for five minutes. Heat juice to boiling point and stir in softened gelatin. Stir until dissolved and let stand until cool and beginning to jelly. Add orange juice and fruit and turn

Mrs. Cameron opened her mouth to speak, and then closed it again. There was no use telling Ellen she was a fool. She probably knew it, anyway.

After a silence Aunt Ellen said meekly, "Dana left for a walk. I was afraid it was going to rain."

"Young idiot!" Mrs. Cameron was thinking, putting two and two together. "Ronnie picked her up. He was driving this way. He must have met her when she was starting out."

"Her voice sounded quite cheerful over the phone," Ellen said.

"I don't think you need to worry."

"I'm not worried," snapped Mrs. Cameron. And she was not worried—now that she had figured it all out.

It had been a hot, stifling day. Even the big house with tall ceilings and wide windows had failed to prove a haven from the intense heat. In the afternoon Dana had gone to her aunt's room and found her dozing, comparatively comfortable with an old electric fan buzzing noisily close by. Dana sat down in a chair where, at intervals, she felt a cooling whiff. Aunt Ellen opened her eyes. "You poor dear! Take that fan to your room—I don't need it a bit. It's really quite cool in here."

"It's a regular oven," Dana laughed. "I've a better idea. I'm going walking. It's sure to be cooler outside."

"I think I heard thunder," Aunt Ellen cautioned. "I'm afraid a storm is brewing."

"I hope it brews a big wind," Dana replied. "A nice, big, cold wind!"

Another protesting murmur from her aunt had been missed entirely, as Dana ran to her room. She tucked on a white beret and started out.

The sun was still shining as she began her walk, but a few dark clouds had hovered dramatically near the golden globe, scudding across it adventurously at times.

A light wind had sprung up and whipped Dana's linen skirt about her.

Bi-district Game To Be at Paducah

McLean's black and gold Tigers, conquerors of this district's gridiron wars, will tangle with the Matador Bullfighters, district no. 4 champion, for bi-district honors at Paducah Friday afternoon. Officials of the two schools have announced. Game time is 3 o'clock on the Dragons' field, Paducah.

The meeting place and time were set Sunday night at a meeting in Childress.

Matador downed Paducah Thanksgiving Day for the title of district 4 class B, and McLean eked out a 6-0 win over Shamrock in a play-off game for district honors, the previous game having been a 7-7 deadlock.

Several Memphis football fans are planning to witness the bi-district struggle in Paducah Friday.
