Ladder of Death, State Contends

The ladder from which the state contends Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr., fell to his death was the center of a bitter battle that raged at the Bruno Hauptmann trial, as the defense fought to exclude it from admission as evidence. Shown here as it was brought in sections into court, the ladder drew the comment from Hauptmann, "If I made that ladder, I'd be a second-rate carpenter."

BLOODSHED IS LOOMING IN LOUISIANA

'Square Dealers' Demand Repeal of Dictatorial Laws

BATON ROUGE, La., Jan. 11.—While objectors to the Huey Long dictatorship hurried threats in the senator's direction yesterday a false report that Long's chief lieutenant, Governor Oscar K. Allen, had resigned, stirred Louisiana with unusual excitement.

The report surged over the state like a tidal wave and its falsity was not established until Long denied it from his Washington office and Mrs. Allen declared it was untrue.

The governor himself was secluded in the swamps of Iberville Parish at a fishing camp accessible only by boat. He has been absent from his executive offices since Monday and attaches there said they could not reach him.

The report followed closely on the heels of a huge mass meeting here at which the "Square Deal Association" was organized on a statewide scale and hinted that force would be employed if Long's administration fails to heed the Square Dealers' demand for repeal of the so-called dictatorial laws.

Ernest Bourgeois, president, sounded the "Square Dealers' threat to carry out their demands, "forcibly if necessary," in the following declaration:

"If the administration does not do what we demand in the prescribed time, we will force them. We are bending every effort to accomplish our ends without bloodshed, but if it takes bloodshed to get it, there will be more bloodshed than this state has ever seen. We ask no quarter and we will give none."

ANDARCO, Okla., Jan. 11.—A confession that Mrs. William Royer, 45-year-old bride of eight weeks ago, was slain with an axe then dragged to a shallow grave under a farmyard hen house, was obtained last night, said Deputy Sheriff C. Lovable

BEGIN HERE TODAY

ANN HOLLISTER breaks her engagement to TONY MICKLE the same day that PETER KENDALL tells VALERIA BENNETT, his fiancée, that everything is over between them. Ann thinks she still loves Tony and Peter believes he still cares for Valeria, but when chance brings the two together and Peter asks Ann to marry him she agrees.

They go to Florida and are happy there. Then Peter is recalled home. His family snubs Ann and Valeria tries to make trouble between Ann and Peter. She succeeds and Ann goes away, leaving no hint of her whereabouts.

Peter, desperately in love with Ann, grows lonelier as the weeks pass. His efforts to locate her are fruitless.

She has found work as governess in the home of MRS. TRACY, an artist. ALLAN VINCENT, Mrs. Tracy's brother, is attentive to Ann.

CHAPTER XXV

"There is always more than one way to kill a cat" Valeria told herself on the night after Peter left her so abruptly. Parties were evidently not the way to bring him around. It had been a mistake to take him to Dirk's.

But there were ways! Every man has a weak spot in his armor. What was Peter's? Valeria must find out soon.

She invited Millicent over that afternoon for bridge. "The others are coming about 2:30," she said. "I wish you'd come early so we can have a good talk. It's been ages since I have seen you."

The half hour failed to reveal anything useful. But in the course of the afternoon, Valeria learned a piece of news. It was Leslie Willoughby who said, "I hear Peter may sell that darling place he bought from Ronnie Brent."

"I don't know anything about it," Millicent answered.

Valeria looked up. "So Peter bought the Brent place?"

"You should know."

"I didn't. Peter has never mentioned it to me."

"If I had been Peter I would have felt a little queer about buying the place. Ronnie was so much in love with Paula, and then to have her sue him for a divorce before the house was completed—" Sue broke off, a little confused as Millicent's eyes met hers calmly.

Leslie, noting Sue's hesitation, said boldly, "I've heard Peter's wife is away. For long?"

"You'll have to ask Peter," Millicent answered shortly. "I believe it is your play, Sue."

Millicent was first to leave. When the door had closed behind her, Leslie said, "The Kendall! Aren't they funny? So passionately loyal, if you know what I mean. Daring people to discuss their affairs. As if they could stop tongues wagging when Peter goes out and marries some girl he scarcely knew and Carol elopes with the chauffeur."

"When you are as rich as Carol of you can get by with anything," Sue said.

"Everybody knows Peter's new wife has pulled out." This from Leslie. "Although nobody—except you, perhaps, Valeria—knows why."

"Why should I know?" Valeria lit a cigaret coolly.

"No one expected Peter's marriage to stick. Everyone knew he loved you. Peter was a darn fool to go out and pick up that girl in a fit of pique. He's evidently come to his senses. It's commendable of him, I think."

Valeria was silent. She knew it was a becoming silence. Everybody would be saying, "Valeria's sweet not to crow when Peter walked out on her. He tried to do the decent thing by the girl he married, but of course they simply couldn't make a go of it, with Peter still in love with Valeria."

That was what people would think. Not one of her crowd dreamed that Peter had fallen for Ann.

Later, alone with her thoughts, Valeria was conscious of failure. She remembered the sarcasm in Millicent's "You ought to know."

It was always that way whenever Peter's affairs were being discussed.

Well, she would play her cards more carefully in the future—and not as she had played bridge this afternoon. She had played really dreadful bridge. Once Millicent's voice had broken through her abstraction, "Come back to the game, Valeria." She had led spades after a declared suit and after a heart discard from her partner.

Mrs. Wainwright was amazed to hear Valeria call off her date for the evening, pleading a headache.

"No. Just tired. I think I'll go to bed right after dinner."

"A very good idea."

About nine her niece went to her room. Drawing the Venetian blinds to the window ledge, Valeria began stripping off her clothes. Her bath was running. That was what she needed. A warm bath and a good night's sleep. This constant going and getting nowhere was getting on her nerves. With her vivid velvet robe about her, Valeria sat down at her dressing table, studying the mirrored face.

Yes, she was lovely. The ash-blond hair rippling away from her face, her big blue eyes and soft, red lips. Why didn't Peter love her? The answer was Ann.

To be honest, Valeria had to admit the girl was attractive. Very attractive. Valeria hated her. Absent, Ann was dominating Peter's every thought.

Hope for 'Peek' at Hauptmann

It's a little tough on that bottom lad, but his turn will come next and maybe he'll catch a glimpse of Bruno Hauptmann in the Flemington, N. J., jail. These lads, risking broken bones, have climbed to the grated windows of the stone prison by employing a little teamwork, in the hope of seeing the prisoner.

away from Ann more than she had ever wanted anything in her life. The combination—jealous rage and yearning—brought pain that was almost more than she could bear.

The warm, fragrant bath quieted her nerves and after a while she slept. Her last waking thought was, "Whatever it takes, I'm ready for. I'll make any sacrifice if I can have him back again."

As the days passed Mrs. Wainwright became aware of what she called "a changed Valeria."

The restless girl who had opened sleepy eyes about noon was gone. In her place was a freshly groomed niece, ready for breakfast at the conservative hour of nine, prepared to plunge with zest into her day's program.

The program itself amazed her aunt even more. Valeria, who had shirked similar tasks throughout her girlhood, had volunteered to aid in a half dozen worthy enterprises. She had become actively interested in her guild's welfare work. She spent most of the days for one entire week collecting garments for the needy. She had accepted the chairmanship of a group that was doing valiant work in the Community Chest drive. She had inspired the sponsorship of a new free clinic for children. Her picture had appeared in the papers frequently, but never in any studied pose.

She had been caught by a photographer among a group of children at the clinic. During the drive she was photographed pinning a button on the coat of a contributor. Another time, a two-volume picture appeared showing Valeria entering a poverty-stricken home, her arms filled with packages.

Mrs. Wainwright was amused at first, then puzzled. As the days passed, she was almost convinced that at last Valeria had decided to give up her "wild ways" and settle down.

Valeria confirmed the idea one morning. "I'm fed up with parties," she said pensively. "I realize I've wasted a lot of time."

"I'm glad you've waked up," her aunt said dryly. She added, because she was not entirely convinced that her niece's transformation was genuine, "if you have."

Valeria did not flare up. She said, "I have. I want to marry and have a home of my own."

"Well, Jack Latimer is probably ready to give you one."

"Jack?"

"He's not a bad catch. Has a very good position, hasn't he?"

"He's light wood. I want stronger support for my future."

"Somebody like Peter?"

"Yes."

"Pity you didn't know you were so much in love sooner. I hear he's been turning the city upside down looking for his wife."

"I suppose you've been talking to Mrs. Kendall. It's true he had two private detectives trying to find her. They finally found the taxi driver who drove her away the morning she left. The man said she got out at a restaurant. They lost the trail there."

"I can imagine how sorry Mrs. Kendall was when the detectives failed to find her!"

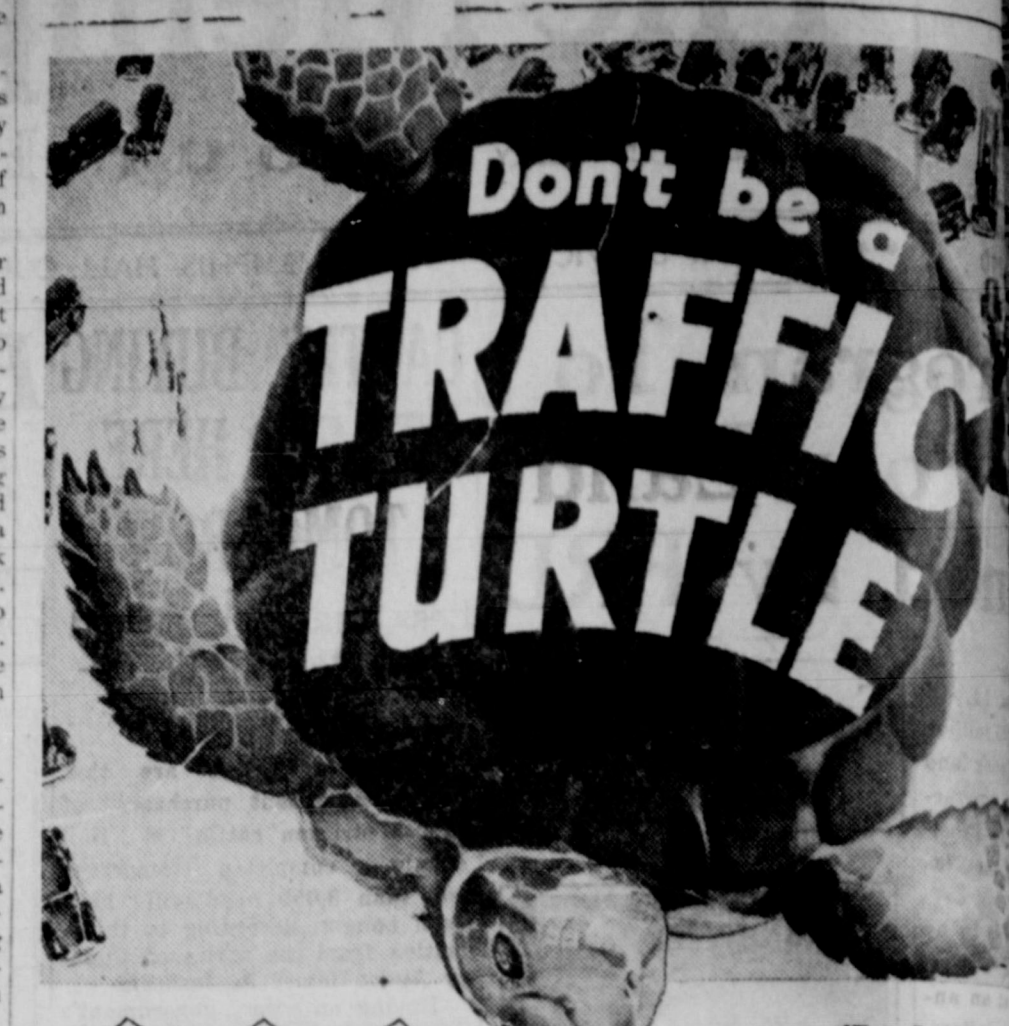

"Now, Aunt Louise, don't be sarcastic. Of course she realized he and Ann were not really suited to each other."

"And of course you and Peter are!"

Valeria got up from the table, saying reasonably, "I do think so. Peter and I grew up in the same world. Our friends are the same. But I won't stop to argue with you. I've worlds to do."

Is This Too Good for Your Cough?

Cremulsion may be a better help than you need. It combines seven helps in one. It is made for quick relief, for safety. Mild coughs often yield to lesser helps. No one can tell. No one knows which factor will do most for any certain cough. So careful people, more and more, are using Cremulsion for any cough that starts. The cost is a little more than a single help. But your druggist is authorized to guarantee it, so it costs nothing if it fails to bring you quick relief. Coughs are danger signals. For safety's sake, deal with them in the best way known. (adv.)

All phases of the work of this church are doing fine and we are determined to do more this year, and I think we have made a good start. Our series of lectures is occupying most of our time this week. — so far as we know tobacco was first used about 400 years ago —
— throughout the years what one thing has given so much pleasure..so much satisfaction

They came looking for gold ... but they found tobacco

...and tobacco has been like gold ever since! The tobacco raised in Virginia and exchanged for goods helped the struggling colonists to get a foothold when they came to America.

Later on, it was tobacco that helped to clothe and feed Washington's brave army at Valley Forge.

Today it is tobacco that helps—more than any other commodity raised in this country—to pay the expense of running our Government.

In the fiscal year 1933-34 the Federal Government collected $425,000,000 from the tax on tobacco. Most of this came from cigarettes—six cents tax on every package of twenty.

Yes, the cigarette helps a lot—and it certainly gives men and women a lot of pleasure.

Smokers have several reasons for liking Chesterfields. For one thing, Chesterfields are milder. For another thing, they taste better. They Satisfy.

Early Colonial planters shipped hundreds of pounds of tobacco to England in return for goods and supplies.

Photography in Color Is Science Just Developing

AUSTIN, Jan. 11.—Always keenly interested in making pictures, whether of flowers, clouds or less ethereal subjects, Dr. J. M. Kuehne, professor of physics at the University of Texas, has turned his attention to one of the latest developments in his field, color photography.

"Color photography is a science which enables one to obtain a real impression of persons and things," he said. "Another attractive feature is the relatively small amount of work which has been done along these lines. The field is open for improvement and advancement."

The process of taking colored pictures does not differ greatly from the ordinary process of making snapshots, Dr. Kuehne explained. The only requirements are a good kodak, high speed lens, and a special type of film.

Dr. Kuehne has had unusual success in using German ultra-speed films which enable the photographer to snap pictures of moving persons or animals. The colors are imparted to the picture by a finely woven color screen which is compressed in each glass. The colors are reproduced from the primary tints of red, green, and blue. From these, any desired color may be obtained.

During the years he has made photography his hobby, Dr. Kuehne has become quite an authority on the subject. He teaches classes in amateur photography, and is well-known throughout the state as a lecturer on the work. He has a noted collection of photographs of Texas native flowers.

Mrs. Donald Lindsey returned yesterday from a few days visit with relatives in Amarillo.

Big names—Virginia Bruce, Conrad Nagel, Melvyn Douglas and Ian Keith, with Erin O'Brien-Moore, Henry Wadsworth and Betty Furness—are marquee stoplights for passersby when RKO Radio's "Dangerous Corner" shows for the last times today at the Palace.

Not since "Strang Interlude" came to the stage and screen has there been such a unique contribution to the structural fabrication of a play or motion picture as in that of "Dangerous Corner." "Dangerous Corner" turns the searchlight of truth on a little group of friends and relatives and shows what goes on beneath the surface of outward calm and serenity.

Finds Newspaper Advertising of Greatest Value

Newspaper advertising will again form the backbone of Continental Oil Company's 1935 sales promotion program, the largest in the history of the company, it was announced here by Hylton Buster, Conoco's local manager, who stated that the Democrat has been selected to carry Conoco advertising.

"Proof of the value of newspaper advertising, backed by quality products and outstanding service," said Buster "is seen in the fact that our company during 1934 showed a gain of 65 per cent in the sale of Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil as compared to the previous year.

"As a matter of fact, Conoco's gross sales in 1934 were better than for any year since 1929—a fact that leads us to believe that general business conditions are definitely on the upgrade. Of course, Continental Oil company hasn't just marked time, but has gone out after business, backed by a larger advertising program year after year.

"This year marks the sixtieth anniversary of Continental Oil company, and we expect 1935 to be the best in our history.

Texas Payrolls, Employment Keep Up Steady Climb

AUSTIN, Jan. 11.—Employment and payrolls in Texas during December made a favorable showing both in comparison with November and with December, 1933, according to the Bureau of Business Research of the University of Texas. Reports to the bureau from 1,573 Texas establishments for the week ending December 15 give a total of 80,853 employees, an increase of nearly one percent over November and 1.6 percent over the corresponding week in December last year. Payrolls for the week totaled $1,842,000, up 1 per cent from the previous month and 5.1 per cent above that in the corresponding week a year ago.

Cities in which the increase in number of workers exceeded the average increase for the state were Beaumont, Dallas, Denison, El Paso, Fort Worth, Laredo, San Angelo, and Waco.

Classes of establishments in which the increase in number of workers showed an increase greater than the average for all establishments were: Women's clothing manufacturing, furniture

C OF C LOOKS TO 'BIG' YEAR

THE Senior Chamber of Commerce started off the new year this week with the election of Roy R. Fultz to the presidency, and looks forward to the most successful 12 months the organization and the Memphis Area has seen in nearly a half dozen years.

Headed by Mr. Fultz and Floyd Springer, as vice-president, the board of directors is made up of men who have assisted this area materially in reaching the high standard of business and social prestige it now enjoys and who will play a big part in the progress of this city in the future. The directorate is composed of such men as F. N. Foxhall, W. C. Dickey, S. T. Harrison, Tomie M. Potts, R. S. Greene, W. R. Cabaness, C. C. Meacham, Oren Jones, E. E. Roberts, D. J. Morgensen, Thomas E. Noel, treasurer, and William Russell Clark, secretary.

Immediately upon taking office, Mr. Fultz stated that he would render his best services to the organization and asked the help and counsel of the directors and members in making the year ahead a memorable one.

The Senior Chamber of Commerce has possibilities of great accomplishments ahead of it, in the assisting of farm, school and community programs throughout the area and in securing for Memphis and its trade territory business, civic and other enterprises that will tend to build the area, draw its people together in better and more sympathetic understanding and raise the standards of living and entertainment throughout the Upper Red River Valley.

The men who are now at the head of this worthy organization understand the problems facing the Memphis Area and have the interests of the entire commonwealth at heart. Just as in the past, we believe the Senior Chamber of Commerce will do "great things" for the territory it serves, and that it is going into a "memorable year".

WAYS TO PREVENT RELEASE OF GUILTY

ONE of the things which the last year brought us was a new attitude toward our crime problem. We are no longer discouraged about, or ready to admit that the problem is insoluble. Some of our most notorious lawbreakers are under the ground and some of them are behind the bars, and we are beginning to see that putting them there isn't an impossible job, after all.

Nevertheless, our machinery for dealing with criminals needs overhauling; and one of the places that it needs it the most is the courtroom where the crook stands trial.

Prof. Mason Ladd of the University of Iowa discussed needed changes in the law of evidence before the 32nd annual meeting of the Association of American Law Schools, in Chicago recently.

There are ways, says Prof. Ladd, by which we can make the conviction of guilty persons easier without increasing the hazards which an innocent man must face when he goes to trial. One of them is by tightening up the laws governing an alibi defense.

Let us provide, suggests Prof. Ladd, that where an accused person plans to plead an alibi he be required to give notice to the state's attorney in advance of the trial.

As things stand now, a man being tried in San Francisco can assert that he was in New York when the crime was committed, and it is practically impossible for the prosecution to meet his claim when it is sprung suddenly in the middle of the trial.

If advance notice were required, the state could make the necessary investigation ahead of time and marshal evidence to refute the claim, if the claim were false. Some states already have such a law; Prof Ladd suggests that the law should be made universal.

Then, he continues, the state should be allowed to comment when a prisoner takes advantage of his constitutional rights and refuses to testify. In 42 of our states the criminal may refuse to testify and the prosecutor may not remark upon it in any way.

Surely no innocent man's rights would be jeopardized if the state were permitted to draw inferences from such silence.

None of these changes would increase the hazards of an innocent man. As Prof. Ladd suggests, they would simply provide a fair trial for the state as well as for the defense.

THE JOB PROBLEM

HEALTH

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygeia, the Health Magazine

When a person complains of pain, don't ridicule him, don't ignore him. It may be quite serious.

Pain is a warning signal of a physical disturbance, although fear, anger, rage, anxiety and despair may modify it somewhat. For example, the pain associated with a blow or a knife wound differs from that associated with a surgical operation. The pain associated with a severe illness differs from the difficulty of breathing that comes from too much exercise.

The pain from a sudden violent blow may be accompanied by sensations of anger or fear of death. The pain from a sudden severe attack of colic is likely to be accompanied by a feeling of anxiety. The pain of a toothache may produce simply a sense of suffering.

Physicians find that persons vary in their ability to describe their pains. Obviously, the doctor has to depend first on what the patient tells him, to learn about the place of the pain, its seemed like an hour. A man who was suspended by a live wire realized that the duration of the shock could not have been more than a couple of seconds, but it seemed to him "ages" until he lost consciousness.

The doctor who undertakes to treat a patient because of painful sensations must have a complete understanding of the nature of the pain, if he is to do his best in overcoming it. He must treat not only the physical condition responsible for the pain, but the associated mental factors.

It is interesting to see the ways in which different people describe pain. Some use terms relating to colors—violent pains giving a sense of whiteness; more intense pains, yellow and red, and dull headaches a sense of black. Pains also have been described as lightning-like and shooting; others as soft, dull, or blunt.

Physicians find that persons vary in their ability to describe their pains. Obviously, the doctor has to depend first on what the patient tells him, to learn about the place of the pain, its 11 HARROUN, with a 16-cylinder Marmon, traveled the 500-mile course at an average of 74.59 miles an hour. The Syracuse road consisted of 8-foot planks three inches thick, covered with dirt so that the wood would not be torn by horses' hoofs. The religious review was "The Herald of Gospel Liberty," first issued every other Thursday, later once a month.

Doctors who take care of babies must find out for themselves whether the baby has pain, the nature of the pain, and its intensity.

There is no exact method of measuring the intensity of pain, and the amount of pain that may cause one person to suffer excruciatingly may hardly be noticed by another less sensitive organ.

It is because of the inability to measure pain as it occurs in two different persons that it is difficult to measure the effects of various drugs and methods of treatment used to relieve pain.

We know that young people are more sensitive to pain than are older people, and most women are more sensitive to pain than are men. People who are delicately nurtured and who have been carefully guarded during most of their lives suffer more from pain than those who have been brought up under less protective conditions.

The really simple and yet vitally important things are the details. The rest is a matter of combination.—Henry Ford.

BEHIND THE IN WASHINGTON

BY RODNEY DUTCH

The Democrat's Washington Correspondent
WASHINGTON, Jan. 11.—Denial of the facts has but slightly cooled the hot spot that was made for several New Deal folks with the explosion into print of the Burlew incident. Here's the inside story:

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt has the ax out for Ebert K. Burlew, administrative assistant to and closest lieutenant of Interior Secretary Harold Ickes. The president, Secretary Wallace and Postmaster General Farley are also among the many who privately have expressed strong disapproval of Burlew.

Considering the lineup, it may seem rather astonishing that Burlew is a hard person to budge. The chief reason is the well-known obstinacy of Ickes, who may resign from the cabinet rather than swerve in loyalty to his trusted subordinate.

Burlew went on Mrs. Roosevelt's bad books weeks ago. Privately she blames him for the mess that has been made of the Subistence Homesteads, especially her pet project at Reedsville, W. Va.

Both she and the president have heard of other instances in which Burlew, whom Ickes has granted great power, is alleged to have sidetracked projects of especial interest to them and other New Dealers.

Similarly, Louis R. Glavis, another Ickes favorite, who heads the vast Ickes investigative force, or "spy system," and may well be called America's super-sleuth—has incurred White House displeasure by his almost incredible espionage into the affairs of officials high and low.

Just as the capital teems with stories of Burlew's anti-New Deal activities, so does it teem with wild tales of the Glavis methods.

The two men, who usually work in harmony, operate through a wide field—Interior affairs, PWA, Oil Administration, Indian affairs, territories and insular possessions, Office of Education, and many other sections of the Ickes domain.

Between them, they have created a sort of terrorism in some of those areas. They even come into conflict with officials in other agencies.

Farley frankly dislikes Burlew because the latter—usually carrying out Ickes's wishes—hasn't, as personnel officer, appointed enough Democrats. Secretary Wallace privately accuses this powerful sub-ordinate of driving a wedge in his friendships with Ickes and Harry Hopkins.

Here's Burlew Closeup
Let's take a close look at these two men whom Ickes is defending so vigorously.
Burlew was chief clerk at Interior.

Skyrockets Smear Cyclone in Cage Opener

Local Quintet To Invade Estelline

The Wellington Skyrockets lived up to advance notices on the painted court here last night, smeared the Cyclone all over its "cracker box" gymnasium and otherwise ruined the local quintet's season opener.

The outcome was a double victory for the Rockets. After the second stringers had drubbed the little boys of the Cyclone crew, 40 to 7, the Skyrocket regulars took the court to smear Coach Arthur Howard's starting squad, 31 to 4.

HARRY GRAYSON

CRY RISES UP AGAINST RACE GAMBLING — BUT WHY PICK ON PONIES?

This being the season of the stove league, one hears the annual barrage against gambling. This year, of course, the really heavy guns are being turned loose because of the legalization of horse racing in so many states, and the so-called sensational exposures of widespread football betting.

"The rapid spread of betting," "Baltimore sucked dry by the horses," "Pay envelopes slaughtered at race tracks and bookie joints," are only a few of the expressions common upon the lips of reformers and those who woe-fully review a year of badly judged bets—you never heard of a successful gambler squawking, did you?

As for widespread increase in gambling, we must give a gentle, if derisive, sniff. Gambling is always with us, even as the poor. Prehistoric man listed gambling as one of his few arts, and many a set of bone dice has been found, as well as other gambling devices.

Moreover, the gentlemen of our great colonial period greatly enjoyed gambling on their horses, pit dogs, and fighting chickens. Also, they gambled in such way as to make our $2 or even $50 bets seem like chicken feed.

So worthy a gentleman as John Randolph bet his entire estate in Virginia on the result of Eclipse's historic struggle against Henry, and another southern gentleman wagered no less than 200 negro slaves on the result.

Possibly, with bookie joints and race track operating, men in the city have forgotten the great old game of stud poker. But go to any small town and the boys in only moderate circumstances will show you a game of poker that will take your breath away. And plenty of women can show you how bridge is played for money.

So while football, baseball and racing may have diverted some money from the gambling tables, it is highly doubtful if they have increased wagering. A man can gamble on anything down to the production of the Drosophila fly if he is so inclined.

As for the argument that mutual betting sucks a community dry, it was no doubt invented by some avaricious gentleman whose reasoning was no better than his betting judgment. You know how it goes—if there is a million dollars to make, the track will take out 6 per cent, and when the balance is rewaraged, the track will take out another rake, and so on, until the total is gone.

Now this sounds quite logical, and would be, were it not for the fact that out of its "take" the track must pay purses, salaries, upkeep of the track, taxes on the property, and other expenses. And it is the strangest thing, but horses have a habit of translating money into hay, oats and straw, and owners, trainers, jockies and handlers also seem to be able to get rid of their wages in a hurry.

In most states a track cannot take more than 6 to 8 per cent of the money bet. This is regulated by law, and represents the track's fee for acting as a broker—bets being figured as a commodity.

But did you ever stop to think that most other commodities you buy, such as clothes, refrigerators, cars, food, houses, etc., carry profit, or handling fees which run as high as 200 or 300 per cent?

Now we hold no particular brief for gambling, but if persons must gamble, it seems just as well that they do it at race tracks. Moreover, any number of communities which have risen up in wrath and expelled the "bang-tails" have found to their amazement that racing actually represents increased business. Lexington and Louisville can both attest this fact.

Tonight, the Cyclone goes in search of more experience, and is apt to find plenty of it, as dealt out by the Estelline Bear Cubs. The affair at Estelline will also be a doubleheader, with the second stringers taking the court in the first encounter at 7 o'clock.

This will not only be the Cyclone's second game this year, which Estelline has played nine or more, but the club for Memphis also will see action for the first time on a regulation court, on which they probably will be completely lost, at least for a portion of the game.

Shows Good Defense
Although the Cyclone made only one field goal during the entire game and got few more chances last night, the affair did not present an entirely dark outlook for the more than 100 fans who peered over the side rail.

For three quarters, Memphis held Wellington to only 16 points—playing out in the final period—which was no mean accomplishment against the Skyrockets, who defeated Childress by more points and have scored as high as 50 in one game.

In other words, the locals presented a fairly strong defense. And they have had little opportunity to learn more than defense, having obtained a late start in drills and starting from scratch with no experienced players.

On both defense and offense, the club was ragged and handled the ball poorly, but at times they showed excellent form and gave promise of developing rapidly as the season progresses.

Lead Cyclone
Chester Grimes and Bales led the Cyclone squad, although the former seemed to lose control after he had gone into action near the basket, fumbling often and passing poorly. Bales, besides playing a heads-up, all-around game, accounted for the lone field goal, at the start of the third period.

McAbee made the free tosses, both coming in the first half. He also showed fair defensive form, as did Springer, Childress and Cecil Grimes. All were slow offensively and unable to evade their guards in the front court.

Brown Amburn, Wellington's scoring ace, and Kennedy, big center, tied for scoring honors with eight points each. Amburn's coming from two field goals and four free tosses while Kennedy made four from the floor.

The visitors held the Cyclone scoreless in the first quarter, while they ran up a total of eight points. They increased their own score to 11 and allowed McAbee his two gratis shots before the first half ended.

Cyclone Fags
Opening the third period, Bales accounted for the two-pointer from the floor and, as the Cyclone had possession most of the time, it appeared they might get underway. However, E. Amburn hooked a side shot and brother Brown made three of four gratis tallies

WINNING BASKETBALL

By Nat Holman

One of the most difficult short shots in basketball, a try from the front, is illustrated here in perfect form by Nat Holman, coach of the College of the City of New York.

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the third of a series of three general stories and 18 diagrammed basketball plays by Nat Holman, famous coach of the College of the City of New York.

BY NAT HOLMAN
(Famous Player, Coach, and Author of "Winning Basketball")

There has been a startling revival of basketball interest all over the country this year. Particularly in the east this can be noticed. Newspapers which heretofore have treated basketball as the stepchild of winter sports now are giving it a place of honor among the headlines, and other sports are being hardpressed by current basketball news.

One reason for the growing popularity of the cage game is the inter-sectional angle, which seems to have been emphasized this year. New York this winter is to be the scene of several contests between teams of east, west, and south, already one game, that between Notre Dame and New York University, has attracted more than 16,000 fans to Maison Square Garden.

Other teams which will appear here are Kentucky, the wonder team of the south; Duquesne; and Purdue, champion of the Big Ten. Class of these quintets is sure to attract big crowds and result in increased popularity.

Football Shows Way
I await this series of games with eagerness. I know the part that the box score:

CHAMPION AND DAVIS LETTER AT WTSTC

Memphis, Lakeview Players Receive Grid Honors

Special to The Democrat
CANYON, Jan. 11.—Ezell Champion of Memphis and Jack Davis of Lakeview are to be lettered football men at the West Texas State Teachers college this year.

At a banquet held Thursday night in honor of the West Texas State Teachers college Buffalos of 1934, 16 players were designated by the coach, Al Baggett, as lettermen.

John Rankin of Miami was chosen captain for the coming year and Cagle Teague of Childress was selected as the most valuable man to the Buffalos during the season on the basis of ability, attitude, hard work, leadership, and scholarship.

5 Intersectional Football Battles On Tech Schedule

Special to The Democrat
LUBBOCK, Jan. 11.—Coach P. W. Cawthorn of Texas Technological college announces the following tentative schedule for his 1935 Matador team:

- September 20, Hardin-Simmons* at Abilene.
- September 27, Daniel Baker or T. C. U. or Baylor at Lubbock.
- October 4, Wichita University at Lubbock.
- October 12, St. Louis University at Lubbock.
- October 25, Loyola university* at Los Angeles.
- November 2, De Paul university at Chicago.
- November 11, University of Arizona at Lubbock.
- November 23, St. Mary's university* at San Antonio.
- November 28, Detroit university* at Lubbock, (Thanksgiving).
- December 6, Oklahoma City university* at Oklahoma City.
- *Definite teams and dates.
- St. Louis will play here on the above date providing the date with De Paul can be changed to November 2 from October 12. The Red Raiders will play in Chicago on Soldiers Field.

intersectional games have played in arousing far-flung excitement and interest in football. Together with the East-West, Sugar Bowl, Rose Bowl, and Orange Bowl games, the clashes between different sections have been largely responsible for football's prominence in the field of sports.

Basketball is certain to benefit in like degree from contests of this type.

A recent news report informed us basketball is to be included in the Olympic Games. It was great news for the basketball public, and certain proof of the game's international growth.

In line with this international spread, I believe that Dr. Phog Allen, Kansas coach, recently made the statement that basketball was being played by more than 18,000,000 people in all parts of the world.

Strive For Olympic Honors

There is a definite stimulant for the game in the decision to display it at the Olympic. I believe that, as a result, there will be a greater number of sectional tournaments than ever before, in an effort to be selected to carry Uncle Sam's colors and with them a keener brand of competition. The A. A. U. basketball tournament this year will be instilled with new life. There is a rumor afoot that the east intends to send the leading college team in its section to participate, and it is likely that western and southern colleges will be close behind.

With each section of the country represented, the competition to choose the Olympic representatives in this tournament is certain to be intense.

Which gives rise to the prediction that there's a great basketball year ahead.

Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Morgan of Wichita Falls spent Tuesday night here in the home of Mrs. Morgan's parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Estes. They were en route home from a visit with Mrs. Morgan's aunt, Mrs. J. J. Walker, at Canyon.

and if he plays this summer like he has been belting them of late, our chances of winning back the cup are exceptionally bright.

That's the opinion of Martin Buxby of Texas University, who is one of the ranking net players of the United States.

"The old boy is at the peak of his game," Buxby says. "I hit a few shots with him recently and he chased me off the court. Strangely, it seems that he has twice as much speed as he had two years ago when he was a member of our Davis Cup squad.

"When he extended Fred Perry in the finals at Forest Hills last fall, fans thought it was a fluke. It wasn't!"
