Mayor Threatens To Equal Strength Of State Militia

By Associated Press
NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 4.—Senator Huey Long today closed himself in the governor's mansion at Baton Rouge while a state of deadlock continued on the New Orleans "front," where opposing forces of state militia and city police have been drawn up behind their leaders for six days.

Long refused to talk about the New Orleans situation, but Mayor T. Semmes Walmesley, his antagonist in a bitter struggle for political supremacy in New Orleans, replied to the continued refusal of the state authorities to withdraw the troops from the city by threatening to increase the police force to 10,000 men if necessary, to match strength of the militia.

The troops already have seized the city voting registration office but Walmesley said no other office would be yielded to the militia "without a fight."

Seek Men Who Hid Dynamite On Route Used By President

By Associated Press
SPOKANE, Aug. 4.—Officers today sought the identity of two roughly dressed men who hid nine sticks of dynamite on the Union Pacific railroad right of way near Spokane four days ago.

The nearness of the explosives to the tracks over which President Roosevelt's train passed today caused secret service agents to take a hand in the investigation.

Sheriff George Miles said the railroad tower man saw the men leave the dynamite and notified a special agent of the railroad.

TWO BOYS ARRESTED HERE ON OLD CHARGE

WICHITA FALLS, Aug. 4.—Mrs. Cora Lee Hawthorne was shot and killed today as she stood near a meat counter in a crowded store, preparing to purchase groceries for Sunday dinner.

Two shots were fired and Mrs. Hawthorne fell. Bystanders said nothing else was said between the two.

Mrs. Hawthorne died enroute to a hospital.

Reporters Win Battle To Keep News Source

DANVILLE, Ky., Aug. 4.—Two young newspaper men who had declared they would go to jail daily "from now on" rather than break a newspaper confidence won their fight in police court here Friday.

Police Judge Jay W. Harlan, who had been sending them to jail for three to six hours or fining them daily since July 24, did not formally give up his legal right to punish them for contempt in refusing to answer questions about Danville's now famous hanging effigy. He simply ended the whole inquiry after two other men, out of many suspected, had pleaded guilty to taking part in the hanging. He then dismissed Jack Durham and Wesley Carty the two newspaper men, with the explanation that, since the inquiry was ended, the court "therefore can not inquire of you further as to your knowledge of the offense."

SOPHIE KERR'S SUPERB LOVE STORY "STAY OUT OF MY LIFE!"

By Sophie Kerr

BEGIN HERE TODAY

JANE TERRY comes to New York determined to show her home town and especially AMY JACKSON that she can make a success of her life. Amy had been her best friend until HOWARD JACKSON broke the engagement Jane had forced upon him and married Amy. In New York Jane obtains a position in a real estate office and soon is making a large income.

She has an affair with ROGER THORPE who is married but tires of him. When he offers to bear the expense of their child she contemptuously dismisses him. She confides in Amy, realizing she is her only friend. Jane insists on giving her daughter away and Amy takes the child, promising never to reveal its parentage. The baby is named NANCY.

For two years Jane stays away from Marburg. Then, on a business trip, she goes to Amy's home and asks to see her daughter.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

For two years Jane stays away from Marburg. Then, on a business trip, she goes to Amy's home Amy's fears that Jane will insist on taking the child appear to be unfounded.

When America enters the World War Howard is eager to enlist but puts off his decision until after commencement.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER XXV

The last day of Commencement the dean's wife telephoned, in a flurry. "Amy, Rufus is terribly sick, one of those awful stomach upsets he has when he gets too tired, and I'm in such a fix—we were to have two of the trustees for dinner tonight, you know, Wilbur Barney and Louis Prentice, a couple of old tycoons as ever were! Could you take them? I'll send over the whole dinner, all cooked, and a maid to serve it. And listen, Amy, there's plenty for a dozen, so ask some more people if you feel equal to it. There's gallons of soup and three roast ducks, and I'll send cocktails and some really good old Burgundy Rufus has been saving, and oh, Amy, do give them a real time. They've been so generous with the Endowment Fund and we want them now to do something about the scholarships—you see how it is! I do wish you could dig up an entertaining pretty woman or two, but I suppose that's impossible. Marburg might be Sahara so far as extra women are concerned, but of course they'll enjoy you, dear. They haven't got their wives with them, thank heaven!"

It was a nuisance, thought Amy, but she could not refuse. She knew both Mr. Prentice and Mr. Barney. They were, as the dean's wife had said, tycoons, and rather formidable tycoons, too. Greedy and autocratic. Now who on earth could she rake up as extra guests at this hour—not her father and mother, for they had a party of their own. Indeed no one in the faculty circle was available, not even an unattached instructor.

Edgar Moreland and his pretty young wife. Yes, they might come. She telephoned at once and they accepted. Then she remembered Miss Rosa Terry. "Miss Rosa's a good bit of a tycoon herself. She ought to get along with them," she reflected. She'd been neglecting Miss Rosa lately. This would make up.

Miss Rosa's voice, over the wire, sounded very sprightly. "Why, I'd love it, Amy, only—Jane's here again for a day or so, came to finish up some of my business. But I daresay she won't mind—"

"Oh, bring Jane along—no, it will even up the table instead of throwing it out. Half past seven, then."

She realized as she put down the phone how completely Jane had faded out of her thoughts, and that she didn't matter any longer. The stress of worrying about Howard had finished Jane with Amy.

There was plenty to do to get ready for the dinner. The dining-room required extra cleaning. Leaves must be put into the table, glass and china and silver arranged for a strange maid's serving. Mrs. Pearce, ever available, would help. She had been on hand every day during Commencement Week because Amy had to be out so much. She could give Nancy her supper and put her to bed and still be ready to open the door for the guests and later help behind the scenes. Amy wondered what to wear. She had only two evening dresses and one had been torn to rags at the Senior dance. The other and older was very tired and shabby and just now spotted from a soiled mayonnaise at a reception. Even if she could find time to clean it, it would reek of benzine.

With quick resolution she went to the closet and took down her wedding dress, unwrapped it from its enfolding tissue paper and muslin. It was in style, but its simplicity, the quality of its ivory satin made it dateless, classic. She stood with it in her hands, thinking of her wedding day, of Howard. He would like to see her again in that dress. "My dear love! You and I have had so much happiness. And nothing, nothing can take that away from us." The sting of tears came up behind her eyes, but she shook it away. She must not, she must not begin to speak of that happiness as if it was already ended.

When Howard came in, late and hurrying, she was already dressed and the shining satin was covered by an engulfing apron, the skirt tucked up, while she finished the last things in dining room and kitchen. That was why he did not see her until he ran downstairs just as the first guests rang the bell. He stopped and exclaimed: "Why, Amy—darling! You look like an angel—that lovely dress—Do you remember it?"

"Di I! What do you take me for?" He could not go on, for Mr. Prentice was entering, red and puffy and obviously disgruntled at being switched from the dean to an obscure and young member of the faculty. But he unobtrusively of Amy with the cocktail tray in the background. Perhaps it would not be too bad, after all.

And now Edgar Moreland was coming and Alice, his wife—pink cheeks and curly hair and ruffled pink party dress—and at the sight of another pretty woman Mr. Prentice began definitely to brighten. Barney was next, tall and gray and skeptical, but he also liked pretty women and cocktails and was much less assertive of himself and his money and opinions and prejudices than Prentice, being better bred and surer of himself and having the advantage of height. He gazed about him critically, observed that the room showed the usual professional good taste and lack of means, but that his hostess was an extraordinary creature. Really he had not expected Lowe's little girl to grow up to such distinction. He took his cocktail and sipped it, watching Amy appreciatively.

At the same time Mr. Barney opened with an easy gambit to Amy: "Aren't those old-fashioned Pink Daily roses in your centerpiece? I haven't seen any for years. They used to grow in my grandmother's garden in Maryland when I was a little chap."

"They grow in my garden," said Amy. "They only last a little were coming in, Miss Rosa trailing her best black chiffon and glittering with her entire set of old pink topaz, necklace, brooch, bracelets, earrings, and behind her, with the expression on one who lends herself to a small town diversion with kindly patronage, came Jane. Jane at her most sophisticated in a bareback golden frock pointed up with a jade cigarette holder and an enormous jade clasp on her girdle. Jane expected no competition in that costume. She had brought it with her, knowing that this was Commencement Week and hoping against hope for one chance to show it off in Marburg where Howard might see her in it. She had not anticipated the luck to wear it in his own house.

The borrowed maid appeared at the door. "Dinner is served, Mrs. Jackson," she murmured.

Amy led them out, seated them—Howard at the head, Miss Rosa at his right. Yes, and she would put Jane at his left and Prentice between Alice and Jane, leaving Edgar and herself to fill the other side. Prentice beamed to find himself between these two attractive young women. Miss Rosa always got along well with Howard and Edgar. Jane alone was discontented with that fat little pig beside her was clamoring for her attention. She wanted to talk only to Howard. She wondered if he had asked to have her beside him or if Amy had arranged it. At any rate, there she was and she would make the most of it. "I must finish my story about Mr. Sears," she said eagerly. "You remember, the man whose house you wouldn't help me buy?"

At the same time Mr. Barney opened with an easy gambit to Amy: "Aren't those old-fashioned Pink Daily roses in your centerpiece? I haven't seen any for years. They used to grow in my grandmother's garden in Maryland when I was a little chap."

"They grow in my garden," said Amy. "They only last a little

Reunion Marks Golden Wedding Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Cudd of Corpus Christi, formerly of Memphis, celebrated their golden wedding anniversary Tuesday with a family reunion and dinner Tuesday evening.

managed and operated by three of his sons, M. L., B. E. and Tom Cudd.

Proceeding the dinner a program was given at the South Bluff Methodist church at 7:30 o'clock, with the family and immediate friends seated in the main auditorium.

To the strains of Lohengrin's Bridal Chorus Mr. and Mrs. Cudd entered the church, escorted by the pastor, Rev. E. C. Calhoun. Mrs. Marvin Cudd sang, "I Love You Truly." An appropriate reading was given by Mrs. H. H. Cudd. Rev. Calhoun made a talk and Mrs. Calhoun read a poem.

While the recessional was played the entire group passed to the entertainment room of the church where the Wesley Fellowship Sunday School class served the dinner.

The long table was artistically laid in colors of gold. Floral centerpieces completed the pretty motif with Marigolds and fern in graceful clusters. The beautifully decorated wedding cake was placed on the table in front of the honored guests.

Following the dinner a curtain was drawn where a table was laden with many useful gifts for Mr. and Mrs. Cudd.

Those present for the occasion were Mr. and Mrs. L. U. May and children, Herbert, Lee, George, Reba Claire, Ethel Louise, Roy and Troy, Memphis; Mr. and Mrs. Noel Cudd and children, Heron, Ineva, Wayne and Noel, Jr., Wellington; Mr. and Mrs. E. E. A COMEDY—BUT NO LAUGHING MATTER AT PRESENT

North Dakota and Louisiana probably are the two most unprofitable carnival locations in the world. People wouldn't pay three cents to see a whole clan of sideshow freaks there—they don't have to—they have them in their governments.

The political squabble now going on in New Orleans beats any $3 comedy-drama the stage has produced. North Dakota is having an intermission right now, but the play is not over.

New Orleans resembles San Francisco during the recent strike, what with heavily armed police and national guardsmen parading the streets (in fact, if this were happening in Miami, we would believe it because Florida is jealous); yet the situation differs a great deal. In San Francisco the national guard and city police combined to fight strikers. At New Orleans the two groups are guarding each other—that's all, just watching each other—because Huey Long and Mayor T. S. Walmsley are not on speaking terms.

The Louisiana comedy differs from the North Dakota affair. In the latter state, William Langer put up a fight because he did not wish to give the governor's chair. We've never found out what the argument is about in Louisiana.

As the latest development, Mayor Walmsley negotiated a civil court order demanding that the national guard troops be demobilized. But the commander found out about it too soon and refused admittance to the barracks where he lives to civil sheriffs, thereby avoiding the order.

But Huey was not so smart. His order was served. If it is not complied with, he goes to jail, it was announced. But Huey is only in the background. He did not actually order the troops out and he is not in command. So he appears safe.

In North Dakota, Langer has retired in favor of his wife—they're going to try a Ferguson act. Its progress will be worth following.

Watching these comedies takes our mind off our own situation, but all that anyone has to do to quite us is to say, "You're laughing at Louisiana and North Dakota because of their Longs and their Langers; yet look at your Fergusons and your Elys."

DROUTH CAUSES NO FEAR OF FAMINE

THE arrival of a searing, crop-burning drouth at a time when the United States government is spending millions of dollars to get farmers to reduce their crops is almost enough to make one suspect that the weatherman is trying to play a joke on somebody.

If it is a joke, it is a mean one. Baking heat, blistering sunlight, and a sky which remains pitilessly cloudless for weeks at a time, with never a drop of rain to lay the dust—these are, or can be, the makings of a national calamity, and the farmers can be pardoned if they fail to see anything very funny in the situation.

When a spell of weather like this hits a land where the social organization is primitive, famine results. It was to guard against such disasters that the ancient agrarian tribes of the American southwest developed such elaborate rites to appease the rain gods; it is to help mitigate the effects of such disasters that the American public is called on every so often to contribute to Chinese famine relief funds.

Yet the United States today, for all the damage that the drouth is causing, is in no danger of famine. Cattle are dying for want of water, grain is being burnt brown in the fields, vegetable gardens are being scorched into aridity—but we are not going to have a real food shortage this winter.

If any people go hungry it will be because our economic machine is still out of gear and not because the national granary has been stricken.

For the same factors which led the government to hire farmers to produce less than usual also operate to soften the blow which the elements have launched at us.

Into the oldest and simplest business in the world—the raising of foodstuffs on the land—we have injected so many complications that the whole picture has changed. Bumper crops no longer mean automatic prosperity for farmers; instead, they tend to glut the markets and flatten the farmer's purse.

On the other hand, natural disasters which cut the production of foodstuffs no longer mean famine and want.

It is because of the intricacy of our whole economic organization that we have to cook up such measures as the AAA. But that very intricacy is the factor that keeps us from going hungry when the age-old causes of famine are abroad in the land.

NEWS OF MOTORDOM

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
The Democrat's Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4.—If you haven't grasped the significance of these federally aided self-helped colonies—industrial and agricultural—which have sprung up over the country, it's because Harry Hopkins and his Federal Emergency Relief Administration crowd are so awed by the implications that they're reluctant to discuss them yet.

Privately, many of the planners—in and out of FERA—admit that development of these colonies may lead to a new system of national economic life. Or, rather, to two separate economic systems. They see:

One great group of the population, the majority, operating in the same old competitive system with all its incentives of profit, advancement, and luxuries.

A second group of millions, the unemployed, living and working outside the competitive system in a giant co-operative whose members would be guaranteed comfortable subsistence in exchange for their labors in production of goods for mutual exchange under federal or state supervision.

Citizens in each group would have complete freedom to change their status. Those in the non-competitive system who might be able to get jobs in the competitive system could do so. And those who lost out in the competitive system could join the second group.

Eventually, it is believed, the federal government would coordinate the innumerable self-help, non-profit farming and factory, and bartering projects which are to be found all over the country.

There's no definite program for this yet and FERA thus far has granted only a million dollars for such organizations.

But FERA right now figures the scheme is its best bet in the face of 10,000,000 unemployed and about 15,000,000 persons on relief rolls. It is paying out about $100,000,000 a month for relief and plenty of people are wondering how long that can go on.

The Federal Surplus Relief Corporation has plenty of powers to develop the plan.

One of Roosevelt's closest and most trusted advisers, whose name can't be revealed here, for years has been privately proposing a vast sub-section of the present economic system in which persons within a given age limit would work for 25 years or so for subsistence and then be given retirement pensions for the rest of their lives.

FERA is quietly planning to bring widespread self-help or-

Mills or Stone for G. O. P.

A seasoned veteran of the Coolidge and Hoover administrations, who keeps as closely in touch with Republican affairs and sentiment as anyone, was asked by a friend the other day who the G. O. P. would nominate.

"If it looks as if we haven't a chance, we'll probably nominate Ogden Mills," he replied.

"But if it looks as if we might win, we'll pull Justice Harlan Stone down off the supreme bench and run him."

Republican dope for 1936 is far from coagulated, but such an answer is in line with efforts of the best guessers. Some strong big business backing for Congressman James W. Wadsworth is reported, but there's little doubt that the party will have to put up a liberal if it hopes to get the votes.

Providence Menaces AAA

One of the greatest fears in the hearts of Secretary Wallace and the AAA today is the psychological danger of the situation. Reports to AAA indicate that many farmers are convinced that the drouth was a divine punishment visited upon them for slaughtering little pigs, plowing crops underground, and reducing acreage.

Many farmers have been writing to Washington about it and so have some ministers. Other ministers have been spreading the doctrine among farmers that the soil should be tilled to the utmost and that if AAA doesn't stop interfering still worse retaliation from Heaven is in prospect.

Wallace and the AAA are certain that their program must continue to call for crop restriction, despite temporary effect of the drouth. They fear they'll have a much harder time obtaining cooperation if this doctrine spreads.

"If any doubt lingers in your mind that the Ford Exposition has 'stolen the show' this year at A Century of Progress Exposition in Chicago, get rid of it," says Ed Foxhall, representative of the Foxhall Motor Company here, who recently made a visit to the Ford Exposition in Chicago.

"When, last December, Henry Ford announced his intentions of being represented at the Fair this year, everyone knew that something sensational was to be expected. Ford has the reputation of taking plenty of time to make up his mind, but once it's made up he goes through with his decision in a 'big way,'" Foxhall said.

And he did in Chicago. By this time, everyone is familiar with the fact that the Ford Exposition is the largest exhibit ever contributed to an international exposition by a single exhibitor. As the largest new feature of the 1934 edition of the Chicago Fair, it was talked about and written about from coast to coast, even before ground was broken for the project.

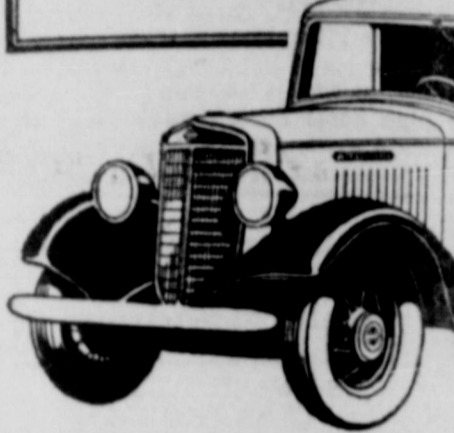

When it was completed in record-breaking speed, in time for the Fair opening day, May 26, 125,000 people, more than eighty percent of the entire Fair admission for the day came to see it. And from that time on, day in and day out, the Ford Building, which is only a part of the entire eleven-acre exposition, has attracted more than two-thirds of the daily gate admission to the Fair.

And that does not include the 4,000 people who listen every day to the two-hour concerts of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra in Ford Symphony Gardens, the thousands who throng Ford Gardens to see the historic "Roads of the World" and ride over them in Ford courtesy cars, and the thousands, many of them from rural sections, who spend hours in the Ford Industrialized Barn, where Henry Ford's ideas for the improvement of farm conditions are presented in graphic fashion.

FORD V-8 has an all-steel body

Ford's all-steel, electrically-welded, one-piece body is actually more expensive to build than composite wood and steel bodies. Electric welding is more expensive than a few odd bolts and screws, but the Ford V-8 body, made of heavy gauge steel reinforced with steel, cannot deteriorate like a combination wood and metal body where the wooden parts always warp and rot . . . it cannot loosen and develop rattles. The Ford safety steel body is built in the same way that safety laws require the railroads to build their cars in order to eliminate frightful injuries and loss of life in wrecks. Isn't this added protection for your family worth something, particularly when it costs no more?

No one should deny his family the protection of an all-steel body!

Johnson Pledges Aid To Small Businesses

CHICAGO, Aug. 3.—Gen. Hugh S. Johnson has pledged the full powers of the NRA to maintain the status quo of the small business man.

Addressing a luncheon meeting of Illinois code authorities he foresaw a day when the evolution of mass distribution methods might eliminate small enterprises, but added:

"This is no time to permit such sudden and explosive change." He asserted that the recovery administration did not favor price fixing, and would never permit exploitation of the public by price provisions in codes. Nevertheless, the NRA chief promised that such provisions would never be withheld when necessary to save an industry or maintain decent labor standards.
