TEXAS FINEST golfers will tee off tomorrow in the qualifying rounds of the Texas Golf Association's tournament at the San Antonio country club. Three Dallas sharpshooters and Lieut. Ken Rogers, San Antonio, are among those favored to take the prize. Leading Dallas' bid for the title is Harry Todd, defending champion, who played well in the National Open at Springfield, N. J., last week. His fellow townsmen who get high pre-tourney ratings are Reynolds Smith and Don Schumacher. Smith beat Schumacher, 3 and 2, Sunday afternoon to win the Corsicans country club's invitation meet. Smith, a 1936 Walker cup team member, was 1 up at the halfway mark. Qualifying rounds in the Santone tournament will be played tomorrow. Championship rounds will begin Thursday and the title will be decided Saturday afternoon.

DISCH URGES YOUNGSTERS TO CHOOSE BASEBALL

COLLEGES FURNISH MANY MEN

AUSTIN, June 9 (UP)—Choose a baseball career, young man—if you have the stuff. So advises "Uncle Billy" Disch, 61, baseball coach at the University of Texas. And he should know whereof he speaks—for he has given most of his life to the game. William J. Disch is the grand old man of baseball to Texas fans. His Longhorns have won something like 21 Southwest conference titles in the 25 years they have been under his guiding hand. "Baseball offers as many opportunities to a young man equipped for the sport as law, engineering and other professions, in proportion to the number who participate," says Disch. "The salaries in most instances are better, and while a baseball career is comparatively short, a player who uses judgment is well taken care of when his active playing days are over."

Younger players, says Disch, have easier sailing today than when he started his career. "The older players are more willing to help the youngsters than before," he explains. "When I hit the diamond back in '97 I had to know my baseball or get out, because the veterans had little use for the rookie. Even the umpires delighted in calling bad ones on us to see if we could take it. If we did, and handed something just as good back at them, we were regulars."

College Men Want! Prospects are promising for college players, the veteran mentor estimating 68 per cent of the major league recruits last year were college men. In his quarter century at Texas, Disch has sent an average of one player each year to the big time.

He regards Bib' Falk, former Chicago White Sox and Cleveland star, and Pinky Higgins, Philadelphia Athletics' third sacker, as his most finished players.

Baseball offers an opportunity to combine intellectual talents with physical ability, Disch adds, continuing: "The game is mentally stimulating to one who is really interested in it and is one of the best forms of exercise."

Baseball players, Disch declares, are neither born nor made. They are developed. He opines: "The ball player needs both a rugged physique and brains. He must have an even temperament, and, of the three, I believe the last is most important. Many a good player has failed to reach stardom because he lacked the proper temperament."

Brains An Asset "Uncle Billy," are even more important than physical qualifications. He cited Evers, physically small but mentally alert, players who have made good in fast company. Pat Ankenman, former University of Texas star, who is back with the Columbus Red Birds in the American Association after a trial with the St. Louis Cardinals this spring, was known as "half-pint" during his college days.

Disch teaches his players strategy, not the least important of which is keeping the umpire in good humor.

He recalls the story of how "Ox" Blanton, the great Texas athlete recently burned to death, captivated an umpire during an exhibition tour.

"The umpire said, after the tour, he was glad there were no more games because Blanton had won him over so completely he was afraid the home team fans would mob him for being prejudiced in favor of my boys," Disch explains.

Coches Against League Signing Of Undergrads

PHILADELPHIA, June 9 (UP)—Major league scouts who sign undergraduate collegiate baseball players are ruining more boys than they are helping, according to R. Stuart "Pep" Young, Temple university baseball coach.

Young, a former Detroit Tiger and Philadelphia Athletic catcher who saw 10 years of big league service, says the big league teams are ultimate losers when undergraduates are signed. They receive an unfinished and undeveloped player with whom a college coach could have done wonders, contends Young. Usually the youngster is sent to a minor league farm club where he re-launched William Lawson Little, Jr., on his career.

CHUCK DRESSEN'S Cincinnati Reds have set some sort of record for coming from behind. When the Reds were playing Boston recently the Bees late in the game were jogging along with a seven-run lead. But the game went in to the official records as a victory for Cincinnati. A few days later the Pittsburgh Pirates went into the last half of the ninth inning leading the Reds 3-0, but before they could get anybody out the Redlegs had sewed up the ball game by a 4-3 score by virtue of Sam Byrd's pinch homer with the bases loaded. Then, on a recent visit to Chicago, the Cincinnati team went into the ninth on the short end of a 3-0 score. But in the twinkling of an eye the Reds drove five runs across the plate thereby sending the champions down to defeat.

Coaches Seek Success Hints From Bierman

Minnesota Mentor To Tell How He Wins Games

By GERALD LISKA (United Press Staff Correspondent) MINNEAPOLIS, June 9 (UP)—Athletic coaches of the nation who want to learn how it's done—in championship style—will visit Coach Bernie Bierman, mentor of the best football team in the country, at the University of Minnesota coaching school, June 15 to 20. Approximately 250 "students" will spend five days assimilating the methods of training and technique offered by able instructors in nine courses, but the branch that has attracted athletic directors, physical department heads and coaches from 27 states and Canada, will be the one conducted by the gray-haired major domo of the Gopher grid juggernaut which has spread-eagled the field for three years.

Bierman's class in football will top the curriculum of athletics, which includes basketball, track, baseball, swimming, recreational games, athletic training, wrestling and tennis.

Live Models Promised Dr. George Hauser, Gopher line coach, will be Bierman's chief aide in the football course. "Live models" from the Gopher team will be used to illustrate the lectures and discussions presented by Bierman, who is one of the strongest advocates of fundamentals and rudimentary play in the game today.

Baseball, another sport in which Minnesota has been remarkably proficient, having won the Big Ten conference title twice in the past three years, will have as its headmaster Frank G. McCormick, Minnesota athletic director. McCormick will stress offensive team strategy and position play.

Two of the Northwest's leading basketball coaches will combine to offer the instruction in that sport. They are Dave McMillan, whose Minnesota team was a stumbling block to conference teams last year, and J. D. Kelly, director of athletics and head coach of De Paul university, Chicago. DePaul was one of the leading free-lance quarters in the middle west last winter.

Course On Conditioning Athletic training, including a study of the conditioning of athletes and the treatment of injuries, will be under the instruction of Dr. L. J. Cooke, assistant director of athletics, and Dr. Hauser. Cooke, Minnesota's "grand old man of athletics," coached the Minnesota cage team for 29 years.

The course in track will be taught by George Oterness, Minnesota track coach and former Gopher cinder great. He will be aided by Kelly of De Paul. Swimming will be under Ralph Piper, coach of Minnesota's championship gymnastic team and former swimming coach at Kansas State coaches little personal attention or coaching. "College baseball will cease to be a fertile field for the major leagues unless the scouts discontinue signing collegiate players who have not yet finished their educations," declares Young.

"I have no objection to a boy wanting to go up," he says, "for I think baseball is a fine profession. I don't want to prevent any of my boys from going into the big leagues, but they can wait until their education is completed."

Young understands the competition in the "baseball supply field," but is unable to understand why baseball "bigwigs" cannot see that they are doing more to ruin the game than to aid it in holding the title of the "national pastime."

The petroleum industry of the United States buys more than $7,000,000 worth of goods annually from hundreds of other industries.

Agricultural colleges. Phil Brain, whose Minnesota net teams always have been top flight performers in the Western conference, will handle the course in tennis, while Dave Bartolma, Minnesota wrestling coach, will teach that sport. Recreational games will be outlined by Piper.

Billiard ACE TO BE HERE Frank Taberski of Schenectady, New York, former world's pocket billiard champion, will devote one hour of his two-hour exhibition, at the Union club here on Monday, June 15, to instruct on the fundamentals of billiards. All players and devotees of billiards desiring to receive expert advice and instructions should not fail to witness Taberski's exhibition. The invitation is especially extended to women, tyros and mediocre players.

The former cus titleholder, ranking among the world's "first ten" pocket billiard experts, comes here under the auspices of the National Billiard Association of America on their third annual national "better billiards" program. The pocket ace is one of the 21 experts now touring the country in three separate groups under the "better billiards" banner and one of the seven cusp stars who have appeared or will appear here.

Dark-Hued Picture Of Brown Bomber 'Lightens Up' On Closer Inspection

SCRIBE FINDS JOE LOUIS IN FINE SHAPE

Negro Battler Has Speed And Punch When Necessary

By EDDIE BRIETZ LAKEWOOD, N. J., June 9 (UP)—It really is just too bad about poor old Joe Louis, isn't it?

The Brown Bomber actually is in such terrible shape that it may require three instead of two rounds for him to start the birdies twittering for Herr Max Schmeling in the Yankee Stadium, New York, June 12.

For weeks Promoter Mike Jacobs' high-powered ballyhoo experts have been crying by the column about Louis.

He was slow. He was listless and he was fat. He wasn't put-

Max Schmeling ting any steam behind his punches. He could not duck the half-hearted licks of his sparring partners. He just didn't seem to give a darn.

So your correspondent came here today to see the "hollow shell" that once was Louis.

Here's The "Inside Story" Instead, just as might have been suspected, he found:

The sleek, well conditioned athlete who can do just about what he wants to whenever he pulls on a pair of boxing gloves and climbs into the ring.

They said Louis was fat. Well he weighed exactly 198 today and that's about two pounds less than he'll scale when he goes in against Schmeling.

They said he couldn't punch any more. Today he all but knocked the head off Frank Schildknecht of Kansas City, who was Joe's last amateur opponent and who is now laboring as a sparring partner.

"You can see that left coming," said Frank after the work-out, "but you can't do anything about it."

"Glad I Ain't Max" "He's the same old Louis. I don't say he can hit any harder than the night he almost killed me in the amateurs, but he's more polished. He knows how to handle himself. Me? I'm glad I ain't Schmeling."

Joe does appear a bit listless in his boxing and some of his playmates do not seem to have much trouble connecting with an occasional right hand belt, but this may be explained by the fact that the negro has been ordered to proceed under wraps.

Otherwise, Louis looks just as keen, just as well conditioned, just as fast (when speed is necessary) and just as hard to beat as when he trained for Max Baer and Primo Carnera.

John Roxborough, general manager of the Bomber's menage, has the answers to the older stories of Mr. Jacobs' professional crephangers.

"Sure, we're holding Joe back," explained Roxborough, who may or may not have been talking out of school. "He's been inactive for five months—the longest he has ever gone without fighting—and he needs work. Do you think he would get it if we let him go out and knock everybody's block off with the first punch? Why he'd be so slow rounding into form Schmeling might even stay five rounds with him."

"We have a man here who is supposed to be a clever boxer. All we want Joe to do with him is experiment—look for openings. We have three other known cockers. Every time they hit Joe we give them cheers. None of them has hurt him yet. It shows he can take it. The others are reputed to be able to withstand any man's punches. Just wait till I whistle and see what Joe does for them."

The truth of the matter, as you may already have guessed, is that all these SOB calls from the Louis camp are just a part of the good Mr. Jacobs' gigantic ballyhoo plot.

The heroic efforts of Signor Francis Albertini and his assistants to build up Schmeling having fallen somewhat flat, what was more natural than for Mr. Jacobs to order a drive to tear down Louis?

This is proceeding apace. But it doesn't fool the Lakewood visitors who find Mr. Jacobs' agents, with their tongues in their cheeks, busy tearing down Joe Louis for a terrific build-up.

BULLDOGS MEET LORAIN, TRENT

Loraine has won two of three games played with Goahoma this season, and the Bulldogs lost their only encounter with Trent.

Navy Wrestler

DICK TROUT who learned the fine points of wrestling while sailing with Uncle Sam's sailor boys, will meet Ernie Arthur tonight at the Big Spring Athletic club in a best two out of three fall semi-final match.

MATSURA AND HADDOCK MIX IN MAIN SHOW

Nerve Specialist To Meet Hefty Detroit Showman

Wrestling fans at the athletic club tonight will be treated to a jujitsu show, with Mateuda Matsura as the main attraction. The Japanese nerve specialist is slated to meet Dale Haddock, hefty young middleweight from Detroit.

Both main event men are new here. Several wrestlers have appeared here and used the jujitsu times, but Matsura knows all the fine points of that kind of wrestling and his matches pack punch and plenty of fast action. Haddock rates as one of the few clean and scientific bone-benders left on the southwest circuit. His pleasing tactics have caused him to be known as "the Gentleman from Detroit."

The main go will be two out of three falls with a two-hour time limit.

Ernie Arthur, who was popular here last year but sluggish in his match a week ago, drew a place on the semi-final with Dick Trout. Although not as high in rank, Trout's ring tactics are similar to Haddock's clever maneuvering.

Arthur, a heavy Canadian, came in early for a light workout to get in shape for his bout tonight.

U.S. Polo Team Plays British

Twelfth Westchester Cup Competition Is Slated For Tomorrow

LONDON, June 9 (UP)—The United States meets Great Britain tomorrow in the first match of the 12th Westchester cup competitions and is the favorite to retain the international polo championship held for 27 consecutive years.

The contest will be the Golden Jubilee of the Westchester cup competitions between Britain and the United States.

It will be the first appearance of an international American team in England since 1921 when the visitors defeated Britain 11 to 4 and 10 to 6.

The first Westchester cup competition was played at Newport, R. I., in 1888 with the British team scoring 10 to 4 and 14 to 2 victories.

The second match in the current series will be played June 13, weather permitting, and a third contest if necessary is scheduled June 20.

SQUEEZE OUT 6 TO 5 DECISION

By HANK HART A great throw by "Skeels" West from short center field to "Mile-away" Baker at home plate nipped Scotty Scott yards from his goal as the Frost catcher failed in his attempt to score on Roland Swatzy's hit, and the Oilers won out over the Freezers, 6-5 for their ninth successive win.

The perfect toss from West came with the bases loaded. The Freezers had already chased two runs across the plate in that frame by working opposing Pitcher Bill Reed for three hits and a walk, and Swatzy's base hit seemed good enough to push Scott across, but Baker pulled the ball in and had the runner blocked completely from the plate.

The game went nip and tuck all the way with the Druggists taking the lead in the first stanza and the Oilers the second.

George Neel got the first of his two base hits by singling into left field in the initial stanza, and all the way around on overthrows by the Cosden infield and a hopper by Ward Inall.

The Cosdenites retaliated by sending West across in their part of the first frame, and Jack Smith put the Oilers in front by adding a run in the second.

Freddy Townsend tripped to begin the Oilers' part of the third and scored on Morgan's single, and the Oilers piled up their biggest lead of the night when Morgan counted in the fifth on Miller Harris' fly into right field.

Scott and Neel added runs for the Freezers in the sixth and seventh frames but the Oilers came right back to count another pair in the seventh and scored what proved to be the margin of victory.

Pepper Martin collected a third of the Oilers' blows in garnering three singles in four trips while Neel, with a single and a double, led the Freezers' 10-hit assault.

Pattern No. 278

For that bare spot on the wall of your hall or living room, here's a panel that you can make. And you'll enjoy embroidering it, too, because it is simple and effective. Suggestions for color and stitches are given with the pattern; or, you can have a grand time experimenting with new stitches and working out your own ideas.

The pattern envelope contains genuine hot-iron transfer pattern 14 by 16 inches, together with complete, easy to understand illustrated directions, and diagrams to aid you; also what material and how much you will need.

To obtain this pattern, send for No. 278 and enclose 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) to cover service and postage. Address Big Spring Herald, Needlework Dept., P. O. Box 500, Station D, New York, N. Y. (Copyright, 1936, the Bell Syndicate, Inc.)

Mrs. Koehler Is Contest Winner

Lomax Club Woman Awarded First Place In Clothes Closet Contest

Mrs. Charlie Koehler of the Lomax Home Demonstration club won first place in a closet contest held Monday, according to report of the judges.

Mrs. Koehler, for less than five dollars, had constructed a commodious closet with linen shelves, sufficient room for a rod for clothes hangers and a shoe rack below. The closet was painted white and the shelves attractively lined with self paper. The exterior was also painted white. An upper shelf above the clothes rod was arranged for storage.

Miss Gladys Harris of Vincent was awarded second place. In addition to making the two closets themselves light and attractive with wall paper she had many of the closet accessories that make such a place convenient, such as hat stands on the hat shelf, wall pockets and shelf space. There was plenty of storage space in the house in addition to the closets.

Mrs. Tom Spencer of Luther won third place. Her closet met the requirements of lightness, convenience and space, with large linen shelves, a hat shelf and a door painted white. An additional bedroom closet in a corner was cleverly adapted to the needs of the bedroom.

Mrs. Shirley Fryar of Highway was given fourth place. She made excellent use of an old double wardrobe of her mothers arranging plenty of shelves in it where she stored winter clothing, linens, hats, magazines, etc.

Mrs. Mayme Lou Parr and her judge visited 12 contestants, all the women visited being wardrobe demonstrators for their respective clubs.

The homes were those of: Mmes. J. M. Wilson, Coahoma, Tom Spencer, Luther; W. D. Caldwell, Vealmoor; H. C. McClaine, Knott; Shirley Fryar, Highway; Leatus Langley, Fairview; H. C. Reid, R-Bar; L. O. Leonard, Center Point; Charles Koehler, Lomax; Duke Lipscomb, Elbow; E. T. Sewell, Overton; C. A. Ballard, Chalk.

In 19 years, the Big Spring Farm Loan association has loaned a total of $1,858,450 in 782 loans.

SELISSIE MAY GO TO ROME TO NEGOTIATE WITH ITALIAN HEAD

LONDON, June 9. (UP)—Emperor Haile Selassie may go to Rome to negotiate directly with Premier Benito Mussolini if the league of nations refuses to fulfill its obligation to oppose firmly Italy's conquest of Ethiopia, well informed French quarters said.

A little while before Haile Selassie fled from Ethiopia, this known now, Mussolini was ready to offer him retention of his throne and rule over a portion of the Amharic provinces of Ethiopia.

It is not known whether Mussolini is still ready to restore the emperor to a dynastic position as an Italian puppet with a narrowly circumscribed domain. But if confronted with the choice of passing his life as an exile or again ruling even a part of his country, it was believed the emperor might elect to rule.

INDIGESTION—GET QUICK RELIEF

Millions of men and women are suffering from disturbances of their digestive systems, due to acidity, and this is often the real cause of ill health, tired-out, run-down feeling, loss of "pep" and seat for living. If you are suffering from indigestion, atonic dyspepsia, sour stomach, gas pains, "raw stomach," inflammation of the intestines (enteritis), gastric acidity and sick headaches, you can't afford to ignore these warning signs. Take Gas Tablets, the Doctor's Prescription, which are intended to soothe the raw, inflamed lining of the "acid stomach," and to help convert the starchy foods into dextrase. Because of this remarkable success in many cases of acidity and digestive troubles, Gas Tablets are offered to sufferers under a guarantee that the first bottle must produce results or money back. NOT AMERICA'S AFFAIR

Slowly but steadily and surely approaching conflict between Japan and China, because of penetration of the armies of the former into China, brings to some students of world affairs the question of the effect this conflict will have on United States, and what our action will be in the premises.

There is talk of a concert of action in the Pacific between Great Britain and United States, which means in the ultimate that this nation would be expected to send warships and soldiers to cooperate with Britain in holding her Asiatic possessions against encroachments of the Japanese or rebellion of the natives of the countries now governed by Britain.

The interests of United States in China are small compared to those of either England or France—much too small to justify us making war to try and preserve them. Our trade with China is not large and of little profit compared to what it was many years ago.

Man About Manhattan

NEW YORK—Permitting oneself to editorialize, however slightly, does present its hazards. These New York columns are apt to be forgotten for months and then boom right up and nip you in the ear.

Several years ago, for instance, a confrere wrote: "With a bit of a tear, sigh and rosemary for remembrance, Broadway must resign itself to the ending of another era. For the first time in years the rialto will not see any 'Follies,' 'Scandals,' or 'Vanities.'"

"Ziegfeld is dead. Earl Carroll has sold himself down the river to the movies. George White, in his eagerness to produce serious dramas, is laying aside his 'Scandals' for awhile. So that ubiquitous institution, the Tired Business Man, must turn to new managers for front row seats to see statuesque blondes attired in a little bit of nothing as they march across gaudily decorated stages."

Three seasons ago there was indeed a dearth of glorified American girls, as presented by the Messrs. Carroll, White and the late Zieggle, but the situation was not permitted to continue. This year saw an elaborate edition of the "Follies" dedicated to Ziegfeld himself, and new and shining productions of the "Scandals" and "Vanities" crowd their way into the thick of New York's busiest theatrical season in six years.

None of them earned much money. One highly dramatic moment in the "Scandals," however, brought to mind episodes of the old days of Belasco and Ziegfeld. Unfortunately, the customers didn't get to see it. After the curtain was down Rudy Vallee got into an impasse with George White—an unpleasantly that ended in fisticuffs. After that the "Scandals" closed, and then the Rialto was right back where a prognosticating columnist left it three seasons ago—sans Ziegfeld, sans Carroll, sans White.

This comes under the heading of high-voltage thrills bounding out to a baseball game between the Giants and Cubs with Bob Reud, who kicks around with Greta Garbo when she is in New York, I made the distressing discovery along about the third inning that all my cigarettes had been smoked.

"This is terrible," I moaned, knowing I should have to resign myself to an interminable wait, as Bob doesn't smoke, and sometimes it takes those Polo Grounds attendants hours to find anything.

"On the contrary," said Reud, "you're in luck. Have one of these."

Magically he produced a half-filled package of cigarettes. Suddenly it dawned on me. "Can it be?"

"That's correct," he grinned, "I was carrying these for her. . . I forgot to return them." And that was my first smoke on Greta Garbo.

Glen Hunter has bid Broadway adieu and will take to the hills for the summer season. . . He'll star in "The Petrified Forest."

The Daily Washington Merry-Go-Round

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

CLEVELAND—Random jottings of a roving reporter as the Grand Old Party stages its quadrennial version of the greatest show on earth:

Bill Borah has been grumbling backstage, more bellicose than ever against the Old Guard. He thinks the bunch that ruled Harding and Coolidge are now dominating Landon.

Probably Bill still remembers the convention of 1924—also held in Cleveland—when he had a chance to be vice-president. Coolidge had been nominated on the first ballot. Hours of secret debate on his running-mate followed. Finally Postmaster General Harry New told the party bosses:

"The kind of vice-president you want was crucified 1900 years ago." In the end they picked Charley Dawes. But at the moment William M. Butler, Coolidge's manager, informed them: "I have been talking by telephone to the White House. We must nominate Borah for vice-president."

Icy silence. Butler turned to Andrew W. Mellon. "Mr. Secretary," he asked, "what do you think of Borah?"

"I never think of him unless someone mentions his name," replied the greatest secretary of the treasury since Alexander Hamilton.

No wonder Borah hates the Old Guard.

Question-Mark Hoover: Everyone is speculating about Hoover. What he will do, is the big question-mark.

Contrast this to the last Republican convention at Chicago. On the opening day no one mentioned him. Not a picture of him in the convention hall.

Hoover's pals say he is still down on Landon. The latter, incidentally, wrote a piece for Red Book magazine just before the big show gathered here in which he mentioned only two republican presidents—Teddy Roosevelt and Abe Lincoln.

Diplomatic Observer: The man who is enjoying this convention most is Oswald Aranha, forthright ambassador of Brazil.

Aranha has a different way of nominating presidents in his country. He picks them himself. The present president, Vargas, was put in office by Aranha six years ago after a brief and bloody civil war. Aranha spent one year in the saddle organizing that war, was wounded five times, still carries a bullet in his shoulder.

Wonder What's Become Of—? A lot of familiar figures at past republican conventions are missing today.

There is Hiram Johnson of California, for years a stormy figure in republican politics. He was offered the vice presidency with Harding, but turned it down. It would have made him president instead of Coolidge. Hiram now has the blessing of the new deal.

Then there is Frank O. Lowden, now 75 years old and living in quiet retirement on his model farm at Oregon, Ill.

General Leonard Wood, whose deadlock with Lowden and Johnson caused the hopeless tangle of 1920, is now dead. So is Harding, who finally won out. At 11 a. m. Harding told friends he was quitting politics to devote his time to newspaper work. At 6:15 p. m. he was nominated.

And Charles Evans Hughes, for years a familiar figure at republican conventions: Remember the letter he wrote Woodrow Wilson, resigning from the supreme court in order to run against him in 1916? It merely said:

"To the President: I hereby resign the office of associate justice of the supreme court of the United States. I am, sir, respectfully yours, Charles Evans Hughes."

Almost as brief as the belated letter of congratulations which Hughes finally sent Wilson after Wilson's victory.

Some of those around the convention lobbies who are not so hopeful of defeating Roosevelt seem to think Landon is a fool to be pushed into the present race. They think he ought to save himself for 1940.

They recall the republican convention of 1892, held at Minneapolis to renominate Harrison. That was done on the first ballot, but McKinley got 182 votes. At the end of the balloting Mark Hanna burst into McKinley's hotel room, exclaiming:

"Well, William, that was what I call a damned tight squeak!"

Hanna was afraid Cleveland would win, was grooming McKinley for four years later. And he was right.

Landon, however, figures that opportunity knocks but once.

Governor Landon is nominated he will be the eighth state executive since 1940 to be chosen as standard bearer of a major party while still serving as governor.

The others were Tilden, Cleveland, Wilson, Cox, Smith and F. D. Roosevelt, democrats; and Hayes, republican. Four of the seven Cleveland, Wilson, Roosevelt and Hayes—were elected.

In addition to these eight, other candidates had been governors prior to their presidential nomination. They are W. H. Harrison, Van Buren, Polk, Seymour, McKinley, Theodore Roosevelt, Hughes, La Follette and Coolidge.

Among oil men a "wildcat" is an oil well drilling operation in new or undeveloped territory, or "out among the wildcats." The driller is known as a "wildcatter."

Constitutionality Of Graduated License Contested By Stores

DALLAS, June 9 (UP)—Chain store owners challenged the constitutionality of Texas' new graduated license today with allegations that the levy was arbitrary and discriminatory.

Suit testing the new law in district court was brought by 327 chain stores in Texas, after they had enjoined its enforcement since last January, the date the tax went into effect.

The first witness was W. C. Johnson, manager of the J. C. Penny company's Houston store. Attorney questions were designed to show that ownership of more than one store does not necessarily constitute an advantage.

Johnson said J. C. Penny operated 99 stores in Texas, and that they are operated separately. He admitted on cross-examination by Assistant Attorney General Earl Street that chain stores had an advantage by having money available when one branch gets in financial straits.

Courts Can't Change Fact Car Is Lemon

WASHINGTON, June 9 (UP)—Vernon L. Haynes threatened Monday to carry to the supreme court the battle over his rights to identify his automobile, with art work on its sides, as the source of lemon ever towed into a repair shop.

This ragged individualist claims his motor car rattles and bumps and groans and uses three quarts of engine oil every five hundred miles. He says it squeaks and chuffs and snorts and burns up a gallon of gas every couple of blocks. The paint's peeling off, the brakes are egg-shaped, the brightwre is turning rusty, the top leaks.

Haynes hired himself an artist to decorate his bus. Yellow letters a foot high on each side say: "This car is a lemon." Entwining these words are life-size portraits of lemons, in clusters, bunches and groups, and numerous white elephants with smears on their faces.

When these decorations were finished, Haynes, who works for the navy department, took his automobile out for a spin. The Whiz Bang Eight (which isn't its name) people had Haynes arrested on a charge of operating an unauthorized, perambulating advertisement.

"No, no," Haynes told the police department. "I wasn't advertising anything, not anything at all." The more the police thought about it, the more they agreed with Haynes. So they let him go.

The Whiz Bang dealers banded together, hired themselves an attorney, Joseph E. Sherier, and applied to the district supreme court for an injunction.

Haynes retaliated by hiring a lawyer of his own and announcing: "I've got the Whiz Bang outfit on the run. They're suing because they think I've done them more damage than they did me."

"Well, sir, they never tried to take a ride in my Whiz Bang. If the district court will go down for a spin with me, I'd win hands down. If I lose, the case goes right up to the supreme court and if the Whiz Bang gets tough, I'm going to invite the chief justice to take a ride with me. That'll fix 'em."

Chapter 18 AMATEUR DETECTIVE

Hope did not come down to breakfast, and Rupert had already left when Dirk, later than usual, started for the office. Dirk, having, with mixed motives, taken on himself the office of spy, visited Rupert's room before leaving, as he had visited Hope's the night before.

Hope might safely have brought the gems back with her, but he had no way of looking in the cache this morning. There was a chance that Rupert had them now. In that case, he knew where to look.

He found the jewel-box in the inner drawer of Rupert's desk, the strand of pearls lying loose beside it, the contents intact. Hope's companion had not robbed her, nor permitted her to be robbed.

Hope, herself, when he saw her that evening, seemed much the same—a bit tired, for, as she explained, she had been shopping again. She and Rupert had lunched together. They had also looked at cars, and they had a disagreement regarding them. Rupert wished her to have a town-car and a chauffeur. Hope wanted a coupe, and to drive it herself.

"What do you think?" Rupert asked Dirk at dinner.

Dirk was in favor of the chauffeur. Hope's eyes met his with the shadow of surprise. Apparently she had expected him to take her side.

She had shown no inclination to confide in him, though there had been opportunity. Before dinner Dirk had sat with her in the library. She had bought that day, had played and sung for him. He would soon forget the picture.

He had not known the room could be so beautiful. The presence of Hope had seemed to draw out its latent colors, to warm and kindle it. And now she filled it with song.

Her voice had for Dirk the disturbing quality of her eyes. A rich voice, liquid and warm and deep. She sang plaintive things, a little dark-haired Lorelei, in a blue dress, in the freight. Dirk had not let the vision, the song, lure him to complete forgetfulness.

He said, when she had stopped singing, and sat plucking cords, looking at the fire—said with every intention of disturbing her: "I saw you last night." She gave him her swift dark glance, and he added, "At 'The Black Swan,' You looked wonderful." Her eyes had gone back to the fire. She asked, "Was that Isabel beside you—the one in pink?"

"So she had seen him, too. And who had told her about Isabel?" Rupert, no doubt.

Yes, it was Isabel, he said. "She wants to meet you. I waited around last night after I got home. Wanted to ask what you thought of the play. You must have got in first."

She said that, she was not sure. At any rate, she had been sleepy, and had gone straight to her room. Which was no doubt true.

Rupert came in the library then, and must be shown the new guitar, must be sung to. She sang again in Spanish, the most tender, the most passionate of all her songs. Her eyes moved now and then to Rupert's face, ecstasy and pathos in her glance.

Rupert liked the song. He asked what the words meant.

"A little turkey," she said, "about Dirk laughed outright, feeling a distinct relief. He supposed it, of course, a love-song. Rupert too laughed, asked her to sing again. She sang a cowboy song, swinging and valiant, tapping her small blue-slipped foot. A song full of hi-y's, and git-alongs, that ended in a clear whoop. Rupert was delighted.

At dinner it was learned that Elinor had called that afternoon, Elinor and her aunt, Mrs. Raeburn, Isabel's mother. No one had been at home, and Elinor had left a note. She wished to give a party for Rupert's wife. Would dinner a week from Thursday be agreeable?

Rupert affected indifference. If Hope wanted to be entertained, he had no objection. Dirk knew that they would go. Later, alone with Rupert, he brought up the subject of the car.

"Hope probably knows nothing about driving in New York. I'll find the right chauffeur, if you like."

Rupert was glad to be relieved. He agreed that Hope was safer with a chauffeur.

"It's the formality he wants," Dirk thought. "So much the better."

By Saturday Dirk, who had had no difficulty in tracing the green taxicab finally found its driver at home. He and another had drove the cab for a man in Harlem.

The day driver had been easy enough to find, but the night driver appeared never to take time for sleep. Dirk caught him, however, a toughened bachelor with no memory for dates or places. Dirk, who had discovered this lack by obscure processes learned at the bar, finally said:

"Suppose I told you that last Monday morning at exactly three o'clock you wrecked my car, parked in Lockett Street in Brooklyn. I'll say you didn't know it, since you were going so fast, but here's your number."

Three o'clock was the moment when Dirk, detained by a red light, had seen the green cab vanish in the direction of East River. But the driver could be forced into no enlightening alibi.

"Well, suppose you told me," he remarked, "I'd say see the cab-owner, or the bonding company."

Dirk replaced the notion of hearing and number in his pocket. "Since you recall the accident..." he observed.

"I don't recall no accident. I run this cab all over Long Island, New Jersey. If I remembered things I'd go nuts. You see the bonding company."

Dirk said that he would, and left, calling himself a sorry detective. He had raised the man's suspicions? He could not tell. Certainly the man had increased his own. It had been no casual taxi that Hope had signaled.

Rupert had bought a fashionable town-car that morning, and Dirk went from the cab-driver's house to call on Genevieve, his one time nurse. Genevieve had married a moderately successful plumber. A widow now, she lived in the Bronx with her son Martin, a steady, clean-eyed lad of twenty-one.

Martin and Dirk had played together as children and often in the last two years Dirk had ridden out of his way to turn in at the garage where Martin worked and have the boy look at his gas or change a tire. It was Martin he had in mind when he promised Rupert to find the right chauffeur.

Martin could hardly believe his luck at the prospect of work in Master Dirk's family. Dirk knew his love and loyalty, and while Rupert might find some fault with his youth, Dirk knew, too, that Martin's skill with a car, his good sense and habits, and perhaps most of all, the appearance of his fine young figure in the Joris livery would have their effect.

When Genevieve had gone out he gave Martin a brief version of the situation. Mrs. Joris, without her knowledge, was to be guarded and protected. Martin, also without her knowledge, was to make careful note of what places she visited, or whom she took into the car. These were to be reported to Dirk. Mr. Rupert Joris was in no way concerned.

"You are doing this for me. And you are to keep absolutely quiet. You are also Mrs. Joris's chauffeur, and at her command. You will be paid for both jobs."

Martin said that he understood, and believed that he did. It was, he considered, like the job of a friend of his, chauffeur and guard to a child whose wealthy father had received threats from kidnappers. Mister Dirk had no doubt got wind of some such conspiracy against his sister-in-law.

"You can depend on me, Mister Dirk."

Martin, Dirk felt, was enough for the daytime, but, a chauffeur at her command, or not, nothing was to prevent Hope from making nocturnal excursions in a taxi, if she felt so inclined. He therefore stationed two detectives near the Joris gates at night.

Dirk knew that Hope had not been out at night since Monday, except in Rupert's company. He had himself kept watch. Now he could sleep.

Winners Of "Oldest Chevrolet" Contest Receive New Car Award

When Chevrolet built its 11,000,000th car, it was offered as an award of merit to the owner of the oldest Chevrolet in regular use as a passenger car. Hiram Dohner, of Quenton, Pa., whose Chevrolet Royal Mail roadster, a 1913 model, had been licensed every year since he purchased it, was found to be the winner. His old car had a mileage record of 200,000 miles. Dohner and his wife, Mary, received their new sedan at Detroit last week. The photograph shows them, standing between the old and the new car, receiving the keys of their 1936 model from M. E. Coyle, president and general manager of the Chevrolet Motor company.

Has The President Been Friendly To Liquor Traffic?

Tugwell Article Cited By W. C. T. U.

Q. Has the Federal administration shown itself friendly toward the liquor traffic?
A. As soon as beer was legalized, it was introduced into the White House and particularly to the younger set, with a blare of newspaper trumpets.

As soon as high wines were legalized they were introduced into the White House social functions, again with the beating of the publicity tomtoms. Even before the present administration entered the White House, the soon-to-be first lady of the land said in a widely quoted radio broadcast: "The average girl of today faces the problem of learning, very young, how much she can drink of such things as whiskey and gin, and sticking to the proper quantity."
Prof. Rexford Tugwell, who has been high in administration affairs and much quoted as the spokesman of the White House, in the official "Democratic Review" published an article under the head of "Wine, Women and the New Deal," in which he said:

"It would be treason to the entire spirit of the new deal to lose sight of the fact that its objective, as stated by President Roosevelt himself, is to make possible a more abundant life for the American people."
"One of the oldest and quietest roads to contentment lies through the conventional trinity of wine, women and song."
"The women of this country have a great opportunity to establish and maintain a civilized attitude towards wine. . . . If they follow

Richard Arlen Cast As Crusading Pastor

Harold Bell Wright's gripping novel, "The Calling of Dan Matthews," is brought to the screen of the Lyric theatre for two days Wednesday and Thursday with Richard Arlen cast as the crusading young minister who drives relentlessly to clean up a town.
In his attempt to rid the town of vice, Arlen steps on some very important toes and unwittingly places the father of his sweetheart in a tight spot. However, Dan Matthews is not the sort to back down and he fights his troubles through with physical as well as verbal force.
Charlotte Wynters, Broadway stage star, is in the role of Hope Strong, opposite Arlen, in her movie debut.
Others in the cast are Douglas Dumbrille, Donald Cook, Mary Korman, Frederick Burton and Lee Moran.

BIRTH NOTICE

Mr. and Mrs. Hubert C. Stipp are parents of a son born at 7:30 Monday evening. The young man's name is Louis Cushing. Both mother and son are doing well.

Taxes on gasoline have cost the motoring public more than $5,300,000,000 in the last 16 years, enough to build ten Panama Canals and several Boulder Dams!

a new and more civilized line, they can accompany their men to the cafes and beer gardens."
"American women should follow the example of Mrs. Roosevelt and serve wine in their own homes."

Paul Kelly Starred As Rattling Engineer In Queen Attraction

With the scene centered on a luxury liner and a jewel theft the center of interest, "Here Comes Trouble," starring Paul Kelly and Arline Judge makes the Fox production showing Wednesday and Thursday at the Queen engrossing entertainment.
Kelly has the role of a scrupulous engineer who gets demoted to a stoke-hole for his part in a riot. While there he saves a beautiful girl who plants the stolen jewel on him; she invites him to her lavish New York apartment and when he arrives he finds a group of gangsters ready to rid him of his unsuspected treasure.
Always the battler, Kelly chooses to make a fight of it and is saved from insurmountable odds in the nick of time when his sweetheart (Miss Judge) arrives with a platoon of policemen.

In 1919 the average gasoline tax was nine-thousandths of one cent per gallon; today it exceeds five cents.
