CONFIDENCE IN PLAN

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—The confidence in the new farm program proposed under the soil erosion and conservation laws would be maintained for the purposes of the program and bring what he considers a soundly-founded agricultural life. He estimated that new taxes would be necessary since the proposed taxes killed, but said he was not ready to discuss that part of the matter.

CANDAL CLOSED

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—France's Staveland scandal was closed today with the conviction of only nine of twenty defendants, accusing them of complicity in pawnshops resulting in rioting and the overthrow of the Cabinet. The late Stavisky the swindler, was among those accused.

CONDON MAY RETURN

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—Doctor Condon today informed General Wilentz that he would return immediately from the Panama Canal Zone, if desired. Wilentz replied there was no need for Condon to change his plans. This was the chief development of a report by Governor Hoffman today pursuing an investigation which gave him "divers reasons for relieving Bruno Condon. Albert Hermann, Condon's clerk, said he had signed the reprieve and will be delivered to the prison warden today. In a message to Condon, Wilentz said the governor gave no reason for the reprieve and no new evidence was presented. Legal technicalities will fix the new execution date between March 16 and April 1. Governor Hoffman said the grounds of impeachment were "just a dream."

QUE ELLSWORTH

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—The British expedition today flashed the word of the Antarctic word of the rescue of Lincoln and Herbert Hollick, long-lost explorers, and well in the frozen continent of Little America. The royal research ship pierce the ice locking the Bay of Whales and found that the two stranded their plane safely having exhausted their fuel. The bold projected flight to the South Polar regions. The silence was due to the failure of their plane's radio. They had been un-announced November 23.

NEW TRAFFIC BUTTONS HERE

New Type of Traffic Buttons Being Put In Place in City

The old high type of traffic buttons which have been in use in the city for several years are this week being replaced by a new type of flat-top button. The buttons are being paid for by the various firms whose ads appear on the buttons, at no cost to the city. The new type button is effective and has a red reflector lens which shows up well. It is much lower than the old type, and if run over doesn't give you the jar the old type did. (Continued on Page 12)

Sixty Days More of Life

Richard Bruno Hauptmann, sentenced to death in the electric chair today for the kidnaping and murder of the 20-month old Lindbergh baby on March 1, 1932, was yesterday afternoon granted a 30-day reprieve by Governor Hoffman of New Jersey. Inasmuch as four weeks must elapse after sentence is repassed before the execution, the last-minute reprieve gives Hauptmann sixty days more to live.

ARRANGEMENTS GOING FORWARD FOR GALA CARNIVAL OF VALUES

Amusement Program Three Days Event Is Taking Shape

The amusement program to be offered to Memphis visitors during the Carnival of Values, Jan. 23 to 25, will be rivaled only by the excellent values in merchandise to be offered by the business men of the city, who are sponsoring the affair. Entries in practically all of the events in the amusement line are being received daily. A number of horseshoe pitchers are warming up for the affair. Chairman Leonard Doss, of the boxing committee, says he is receiving many inquiries about the bouts, and has signed up two fighters already. The two who have signed for the tournament are James Gatlin, 18, 6 ft., wt., 145, and Ivy Blankenship, 16, 5 ft. 5 inches, weight 138. These two young men are but the first of a dozen or more boxers who have asked for information about the bouts. Residents of the Memphis area should begin now to make arrangements to attend the three day event here next Thursday, Friday and Saturday, for they are going to be offered unheard of bargains in all lines of merchandise, specially marked-down for the Carnival of Values, and they will be en-

The Weather

WEST TEXAS: Partly cloudy and colder, cold wave in north with temperatures of 14 to 18 in the extreme north, 20 to 26 in central portion, and 26 to 30 in northeast tonight; Saturday, partly cloudy, colder in southeast, livestock warnings in north and east. Locally, the day is no cooler than yesterday, although the temperature was lower at 8:00 a.m., by 7 degrees, registering 38 degrees. By noon the thermometer had risen to 55, one degree higher than at noon yesterday. Sky clear, but indications in north predicted cold wave on its way.

An epidemic of card table punch boards at several stores in the city.

The usual morning procession of big trucks, carrying the workers from OCG camp out to their labors in the field.

Jack Boone trying to explain why his bowling team never did get organized.

Coach "Chesty" Walker making slighting remarks about the ability of the We Saw editor as a bowler. Well, anyway, we're glad Shamrock, McLean and Estelline don't have bowling teams.

Major Wood got real generous and pay for "cats" for the We Saw editor and the advertising manager last evening at the Club Cafe. Thanks, Major, have a Coca Cola on us sometime.

Marie Williamson with her eyes so red this morning she was afraid to look them, for fear they'd break off.

Barnie Wattenbarger with a pipe that looks like a twin to the one Floyd smokes. Wonder if Floyd gets his dad's pipes, after they're broken in?

The publisher explaining to the office staff this morning just how he came to miss the early morning train to Amarillo. Oh yeah, we sometimes sleep through the alarm ourselves.

Charlie Williams about the busman in town yesterday morning getting things in shape at poultry show.

Biryman Hagemeier and Char-Drake vigorously shaking hands with each other this morning. We don't know either of them candidate for anything.

Chief Gardner in circulation on Memphis streets again. Looks natural to see the Chief about again.

W. H. Youngblood talking to a group of farmers yesterday afternoon. From his gestures and from the nods of assent by his critics, we'd say he was either talking about what he saw in Washington last summer, or what President Roosevelt should do in way of farm legislation.

S. Montgomery superintending activities while Jimmie Patch hitched a wagon to the end of his car.

Dirty, ragged little urchin on the streets, who should have been in school, trying to sell for an old belt he'd picked up where.

E. McNally, Jr., take a punch on a punchboard—on the limit.

Results of a college-wide survey at W. T. S. T. C. which revealed that three of the college students to one were bottle babies when infants. The same survey showed that 60 per cent of the students knew and sang "The Music Goes Round and Round."

Pat Noel asking to have his name put in the We Saw column.

L. C. Snyers of the high school faculty eating dinner today at noon at Mayfield's store with eleven Senior girls. Well, we wonder how long this has been going on.

Two prospects for the Carnival of Values boxing bout—a couple of twelve-year-olds putting on a real fistie battle in front of the Texas Theatre today at noon. They were pretty good with their tongues as well as their fists, and were exchanging both words and blows.

The Democrat may not always be right in the stand it takes; it may not always be wise in standing for what it believes; but, right or wrong, wise or unwise, the Democrat will stand for the things it believes are for the welfare of the community.

MUCH ADO ABOUT NOTHING

If you hear a queer flapping noise up and down in the land these days, it is undoubtedly being caused by honest citizens throwing back the lids of their cyclone cellars and sticking their heads out to learn what all the hollering is about.

The combination of a presidential race which is about to break loose, a Congress with divers discordant things on its mind, and a supreme court which is swinging the axe has created an uproar which will probably get worse and worse until next November arrives.

So far it seems to be producing more heat than light, and more noise than heat.

On the one hand we are assured that the only way to preserve the liberties of the American people is to toss the administration out, neck and crop, and install a leader of the opposite party.

On the other hand we are assured that these same liberties will inevitably die in agony unless the administration stays in power and keeps its foot on the neck of the opposition.

If the Supreme Court fails to stand firm and crack down on all unwise legislation, our liberties are as good as done for; contrariwise, if it does not stop exercising its power to nullify acts of Congress, the American eagle will be caged forever.

Are we in as much danger of losing our liberties as the rival factions would have us believe? This republic has endured for more than a century and a half, and it has been through some very bad times.

It has survived the KuKlux Klan and the Know-Nothing movement, the Populists and the Greenbackers, the Credit Mobiler and the Teapot Dome. It has lived through the Abolitionists and Prohibitionists eras, the times of Jay Gould and the times of Al Capone, the California gold rush and the Miami land boom.

It has taken awful beatings from every imaginable source, including its own occasional stupidity, and has always come back for more.

This is a pretty tough old country, and the liberty it prizes is one of the hardest growths on the planet.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

BY RODNEY DUTCHER, NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON. — There are several possible denouements of the especially tense European crisis—and don't let anyone tell you your guess isn't practically good as the next fellow's.

One outstanding possibility which has become much likely in the last month, however, is the lapse of the League of Nations. Although it did appear for a while that the league had been greatly strengthened by its unexpectedly firm attitude toward aggressor Italy—an appearance which Britain contributed no substance here is now a distinct chance that the western European powers may agree to ditch the league and form an old-fashioned imperialistic alliance.

The object, sought earnestly by certain European capitals, would be a four-power pact entered into by England, France, Germany and Italy.

Objective of this pact would be the preservation of the status quo and of peace—for England, France and simultaneous rejection of the grim German and Italian ambitions for expansion. Soviet Russia and Ethiopia would be the goats.

Terms of the ill-fated Hoare-Laval peace plan demonstrate that neither the British nor the French government is afflicted with sentimental regard for the league and its principles or its surances of protection for small nations.

If the plan had been adopted the league would have been good as dead. Subsequently, the demand of the sanctions program has created the fear here that the league may soon die on the anvay.

England and France will do if they possibly can the general European war which so many servers regard as inevitable. They who most of their statesmen are willing to give Italy what she wants in Africa and why, do not the outburst of indignation which sank the Hoare-Laval plan, may do just that in one way or another unless the Ethiopians fight the Italians to a standstill.

But Hitlerized Germany is the big problem of Europe, a force which has constantly frustrated England and France as they sought to deal with Italy.

(The big British navy will have a tough time fighting in the North Sea and the Mediterranean simultaneously in case Germany and Italy were to fight as allies to say nothing of trying to prevent England's Far Eastern post against an aggressive Japan.)

There are powerful elements both England and France who hold that destruction of the league government would be a boon for the world.

An alternative plan calls for "iron rings" around Germany which would require appeasement of Mussolini and co-operation from Italy. (The appeasement presumably would cover a belated Anglo-French attitude toward Italian designs on Abyssinia. That alternative may yet be chosen.)

rebels with a heavy hand.

Enroute to the city from the coast, he had captured 175 rebels. Trenches were dug for their common graves, they were seated on logs rolled up beside them, and in groups of ten massacred and allowed to drop off into the hole in which they were buried. All 175 were massacred.

An overwhelming army of Spaniards under Arredondo had no trouble capturing the 300 rebels defending San Antonio. They were given a night's respite before being executed, and jammed into a building that would hardly hold them all. Eighteen died from suffocation during the night. The rest were placed on the edge of trenches in groups of from ten to twenty, and shot and dumped into them. Not a man was spared, and none escaped.

The male population exterminated completely, the women who survived them were driven into the Quinta House. For days and nights, the Spaniards ate and drank and celebrated their victory. There were no more rebels in sight, so they had a good time. They made the widows of the men they had slain cook for them and wait on them.

But the word spread of their ruthless slaughter of San Antonio's 300, and of their imprisonment and enslavement of the women. Rebels from throughout South Texas began to drift toward San Antonio. One day General Arredondo, swaggering amid the imprisoned women in the Quinta House, got a complaint from one of them for an insult which she said had been offered by one of his soldiers. His answer to raise a welt across her shoulders with his sword.

Blazing with anger, she upbraided him for his cowardice, and offered to have one hand tied behind her and fight him in a duel to the death. He reddened in the face, and started to back away. The other imprisoned women surrounded him. Before he could escape, they spat in his face pulled his hair, clawed the skin from his face and neck, and bit and kicked him. He broke loose and fled, and never returned.

That incident, reports of which reached the ears of the slowly advancing rebels, spurred them to action. Actually, it revived the revolution which apparently had been thoroughly suppressed. They surrounded the Quinta House, killed the dozen soldiers guarding it, and sent a demand to Arredondo that the women be released or that he would be attacked. With the blood of five hundred men killed within a fortnight dripping from his hands, and living in mortal fear of assassination, Arredondo yielded, and soon evacuated the city. The influence of Spain departed with his army, and no doubt it was the courage of an outraged woman who slapped his face that resulted in the expulsion of the tyrannical invaders.

Freedom from Mexico came 23 years later, and the Quinta House became the home of John Bowen, first postmaster of the Republic of Texas in San Antonio, and the postoffice. He lived in one part of the building, and handled the mail in another part. The Quinta House, the three hundred year-old missions, towering mountains, quaint old towns and fine modern cities all will combine to attract the several million tourists who are expected to spend their vacations touring Texas next year.

GARDEN PROFITS

LOCKHART A net return of $417.40 on labor spent on her garden has been realized by Lora Vickery, garden demonstrator in a Caldwell county I-H club according to Miss Gene Thoms, home demonstration agent. Lora made a hotbed 4 by 16 feet and planted it in tomatoes, peppers, cabbages, collards, and eggplants the latter part of February. Plants were reset the last of March and the surplus ones sold for $8.25.

The cost of seed, fertilizer, spraying, cans, and canning amounted to $22.50. As $379.65 was the value of vegetables used at home and $60.25 was the value of those sold, this left Lora a net profit of $417.40.

Mrs. Maudie Pritchard of this city has received announcement of the marriage of her son, Edward Lee Pritchard now of Clovis, N. M., to Miss Marguerite Schoate of Carlsbad, N. M. The ceremony was performed in Clovis on New Year's Day.

The bride, at the time of her marriage, was employed in her father's general merchandise store in Carlsbad as bookkeeper. She graduated from the high school and was quite popular in the younger set.

The groom is the son of Mrs. Maudie Pritchard of this city and has visited his mother here at different times. He graduated from the Wellington High School with the class of 1930. For two years after that time he was employed with the Goodson Funeral Home in Wellington. He was a member of the Wellington High School orchestra, and has always been known for his music talent. For the past year he has been playing with Bob Sandusky orchestra at Carlsbad. In December he accompanied the band to Clovis.

The couple will make their home at Clovis for the present.

Mr. and Mrs. Otis Jones and daughter, Ruth, spent yesterday in Silverton on business.

John Ewen of Estelline visited his parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Ewen here yesterday.

CARROTS, some authorities tell us, are, next to onions, the most efficient blood purifiers among the vegetables, and rank next to spinach in iron content. And mothers who have a hard time getting cod-liver oil into their families will be glad to know that vitamin A is found in carrots, too. An enormous amount of carrots would have to be eaten to supply the equivalent of the vitamin A found in a tablespoon of cod-liver oil.

The most benefit is gained from the vegetable as a beautifier when eaten raw. Cooking carefully in a small amount of water minimizes loss in food value.

Don't forget that carrots make a splendid stretcher for the more expensive vegetables. Carrots and peas, creamed cauliflower in a border of buttered carrots, asparagus with carrot sticks—almost any vegetable combines artistically with the rich golden root.

Bright Plates Spur Appetites

The vegetable dinner has a definite place in winter meal planning, since it provides healthful elements in which "meat and potatoes" meals are deficient.

Children particularly need vegetables all through the year, and a vegetable plate as bright as an artist's palette with the true colors of the vegetables is sure to tempt them.

Plan to use at least two green vegetables for the sake of their color. Peas, beans, spinach, Brussels sprouts, broccoli, kale, southern dandelion greens—a trip to the market will convince you how easy it is to serve green vegetable Tomorrow's BREAKFAST: Orange juice, cereal, cream, eggs, toast, milk, coffee.

LUNCHEON: Lettuce with liver balls, red cabbage salad, cucumber, chocolate brownies, fruit.

DINNER: Cream of soup, vegetable plate, hearts, sweet pudding, custard sauce, milk, coffee.

For the golden tones of carrots and squash and sweet potatoes, eat golden benton corn as well as yellow wax beans.

Tomatoes and beets supply red touch among the fresh tables, while the red kidney beans are most effective among the canned varieties.

Glaze sweet potatoes with excellent center to build up. Here is an easy way to do them.

Glaze Sweet Potatoes

Four medium sized sweet potatoes, 3-4 cup brown sugar, teaspoon grated nutmeg, 1/2 water, 3 tablespoons butter, 1/2 cup white corn syrup.

Parboil sweet potatoes in skins for twenty minutes, long enough to be able to peel them easily. Cool and skin range in a baking pan and drizzle lightly with salt. Mix syrup of sugar, syrup and nutmeg and butter and add to potatoes. Boil in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.), basting frequently.

PIGGLY-WIGGLY MODERNIZED

Goodnight & Son Remodel Entire Store

With alterations recently made, the store goes to Piggly-Wiggly on the east side of the square, the credit for being Memphis' most modern grocery store.

Closing for a few days last week to make the alterations, W. Goodnight & Son, proprietors, have completely transformed the front and interior of the establishment into one of the most convenient and best arranged stores in this section of the state.

A new plate glass front greets the shopper before he enters the store, with large show window for the display of fruits and kindred items.

On the inside, the walls are now a lustrous green, the ceiling is white and all fixtures are black and jade green.

A new vegetable display stand has been installed, keeping the green produce under a mist spray of cool water, which keeps them fresh and in the best possible condition.

At the opening of the newly remodeled establishment last Saturday, Mr. Goodnight states that they enjoyed the largest single day's business since 1928.

CHAPTER XLVIII

Dana had entered the hospital and was making her way to the examination window. The girl looked at her curiously. It was only a momentary curiosity, for she had looked into tragic faces many times before.

"I want to see Dr. Stanley!" Dana gasped.

The girl hesitated and Dana looked impudently at her. "Please, I'm Dr. Stanley. He sent for me." "Oh, Mrs. Stanley!" The girl's face changed. "Dr. Robertson said word he was to be called when you arrived."

Dana whispered, "Please hurry." "Just a moment." The alert nurse went to a desk and picked up the receiver of a house phone.

She smiled at someone at the desk as she did so. "People in hospitals become so accustomed to suffering. Things meant life and death to other people were routine to them. Scott was hurt. He might be dying! And this girl was smiling at someone.

Dana's pleading voice reached the clerk again. "Oh, won't you hurry!"

The young woman at the phone frowned slightly. She thought, "She's hysterical. Maybe she's a mental case. Anyway, she looks like one with her wild eyes and hair flying that way."

Someone on the fifth floor was answering, and she said, "Dr. Robertson is either in 514 or 536. Please tell him Mrs. Stanley is waiting here."

She felt relieved when she saw Dr. Robertson coming, his face wearing the professional calm which might mean good news, or news that was very bad indeed.

"Right this way, Mrs. Stanley," Dr. Robertson said. He was feeling an immense surprise. He had not expected her to show up. And here she was, looking ready to collapse. She was probably the emotional kind. But even with her hair tumbled, her face white, and her eyes strained and anxious, you could see she was a beauty.

There probably hadn't been any truth in the report that she was going to marry Ronnie Moore tonight. Garbled stories got out.

Only heaven knew how.

They got off on the fourth floor. The pungent smell of ether filled the long hall. Through open doors there were glimpses of wan faces against pillows. In other rooms, relatives and friends grouped about convalescents. In another room, Dana saw a haggard woman keeping a lone watch by a bed.

Dr. Robertson had thought her to a sunporch. "I'll come back for you," he said, patting her hands reassuringly. "It won't be long now."

"Can't I see him now?" Dana asked brokenly.

He shook his head, his eyes meeting hers in surprise.

"It isn't allowed," he said. "You couldn't go to the operating room." Then Scott was in the operating room!

"Everything's going to be fine," Dr. Robertson said. "I'm betting on Scott."

He was betting on Scott! But he didn't know. No one could know until—later. Dana shuddered, and sank down in a chair.

From her position she could watch the hall, could see smiling, serene-faced nurses coming and going. How would they be smiling and serene?

Patients were wheeled out on the porch and back to their rooms. The long minutes dragged while Dana sat tensely, anguished, waiting.

A woman in front of Dana, middle-aged, gray-haired, was tapping her chair with nervous fingers. "Someone sick?" she asked.

"My husband," Dana answered. It didn't occur to her that it was strange to be calling Scott her husband.

"Is he real sick?" the woman persisted.

"I'm afraid so," Dana said. "It was an automobile accident and they had to operate." Her voice trembled.

The older woman nodded, sympathetically. "I wouldn't worry so much. He'll probably be all right. My daughter's in the maternity ward. It's her third. She always comes through beautifully, but I can't help but worry. We women are made that way. The restless tapping of her fingers continued. Marking time, Dana thought with a flash of understanding and sympathy. Men wandered off at times like these. But women stayed on, keeping anxious vigils. Marking time. Smiling, as this mother was smiling, as these nurses were smiling. Playing a courageous game.

A door opened somewhere and two nurses were coming down the hall, rolling a stretcher. As they came nearer Dana could see that the patient was a young man. A blond youth of about 18. A wave of ether drifted through the door and she closed her eyes, physically and mentally sick.

The woman who had spoken to

BOY SCOUTING TAKES ON NEW DISTRICT LIFE

District Officials Map New Program at Pampa Meeting

Boy Scouting is to take on new life as a result of a well attended meeting of the Adobe Walls Council, Monday night. Representatives from six districts met at the Council office in the city hall, Pampa, and formulated a far reaching plan of service for 1936 and the future.

C. R. Stahl, Borger, vice-president and chairman of the Finance Committee announced that the meeting had about 30 men in attendance. The finance policy for the Council was presented, discussed, and adopted. After a thorough discussion of the policy and the needs of the council, a budget of $5900.00 was agreed upon. The Districts presented their views on the underwriting of the budget and their part in it. Several representatives expressed themselves as believing that the Council has a real service to render through its Executive and Council office and feel that their communities should have an equitable share in the maintenance of the Adobe Walls Council.

Lloyd M. O'Neal, Deputy Regional Executive for Texas, Oklahoma, and New Mexico, who is assisting the Council in its program of extension, presented further plans of the Boy Scout Sustaining Club which the finance program is called. He worked out with the communities present a schedule of service to them that will enhance their Scouting both during January and the coming months of the year.

C. A. Clark, Scout Executive of the Council, will visit the several districts that share in the finances helping to carry on the Scott Program to the fullest degree in 1936.

Hence the prospects for a balanced budget in the near future seem but little brighter than a year ago. Unemployment will drop as business recovers and the necessity for huge relief programs will diminish. On the other hand, now that the country has been given a taste of free and easy money, it will be far more difficult to stop federal hand-outs than it was to start them. This year's budget deficit will be at least $3,000,000,000 and the federal debt will show a corresponding gain. Moreover, next year's red ink figures may add another $2,000,000,000 to the debt.

Hollywood's First Leap Year-ite!

Displaying a dazzling engagement ring, lovely Adrienne Marden, above, laid claim to being Hollywood's first actress to make a leap year proposal. Her fiance—a young Washington diplomat whom Adrienne refused to identify because "his career might be jeopardized"—sent her the ring after she wrote on a New Year's card: "Why wait any longer?"

GOVERNMENT BIG BANKER

We often read that, despite the tinkering with our currency, we have had no inflation as yet. In analyzing the situation do not overlook a very important fact—the tremendous increase in public credit. Federal financing (RFC, HOLC, FCA, etc.) have expanded credit to the tune of six billion dollars. Other governmental, state, and municipal indebtedness has been increased by many billions more.

Since 1933, bank deposits have had a spectacular rise. As a result, credit reserves are at an all-time peak. But in the meantime, private bank credit has been dwindling: Bankruptcies, foreclosures, and the decline in bank loans have all deflated private credit by many billions. No one knows exactly what the net result of public expansion vs private contraction of credit is, but it is surely inflationary from a basic point of view. Some inflation is absolutely necessary to lift the deflated business balloon off the ground. The danger is, however, that the balloon will become over-inflated. Uncontrolled credit expansion is not as dangerous as the violent "printing press"-money type, but the bad effects are only a question of degree!

REAL ISSUE

Probably the easiest way in which credit inflation can get out of hand is through reckless public spending. History shows the latter has always degenerated into "printing press" inflation, above the depression low. The Business today, although 9 per cent below normal, is 18 per cent above a year ago, and 60 per cent (Continued on Page 9)

with Phillips 66 Poly Gas

If your car is a cold-weather bronco, head for the Orange and Black Shield and get a tankful of the new Phillips 66 Poly Gas.

It costs nothing extra, but what a difference! You touch the starter any time, and your icy motor "snaps out of it" instantly. Warm-up is so fast that there is hardly a trace of coughing or sputtering. No bucking or stalling. Just a smooth flow of sweet power that, for a cold motor, is surprising and uncanny.

Uncanny, until you remember that the improvement in performance is the result of POLYmerization, the scientific revolution in the making of motor fuel. To high test Phillips 66, which always was a mighty good winter gas, this miracle of modern chemistry adds a rich supply of extra heat units.

So starting in freezing weather is lightning-fast. Acceleration is far more flashing. Power and mileage are both increased with minimized use of the choke. If there is any motor fuel anywhere to equal Phillips 66 Poly Gas . . . at the price . . . our Testing Laboratory hasn't found it.

Compare gasolines yourself, in your own car. Check the value and savings given by Phillips as world's largest producer of natural high test gasoline. Feel that difference in performance. Then you will know why sales of Phillips 66 Poly Gas are right now at the highest levels in the history of the company.

To The Candidates:

This is a political year, and Hall County will have a number of candidates, none of whom have any money to waste on schemes which are presented to them during political campaigns. Each political year brings forth a lot of schemes which are manufactured for the purpose of separating the candidate from his money.

In past years various types of magazines, calendars, programs and what-nots have been presented to candidates and pressure brought to bear that they contribute to these publications. These are worthless to our candidates but profitable to the promoters.

Without fear of challenge, the Memphis Daily Democrat offers to the candidates the best and most reliable means of reaching the voters of the county. The candidate must visit the voters, since he is expected to talk with each and every voter possible. But the Democrat will reach a larger percentage of voters than any type of publication.

Candidates may rest assured that their messages will be carried right into the homes of the largest percentage of voters of the county when printed in the Democrat.

During the campaign, the Democrat will keep the candidates informed as to the important dates which must be observed in filing applications for places on ballots, payment of primary fees, and other important political news.

Dana said. "That must be the boy who was hurt in a dreadful accident. They said the best man in the hospital was operating on him. One of the nurses said he was a wizard with a knife. It was his car that crashed into the young fellow's automobile, and they said he was like somebody crazy. Wouldn't let anyone else operate, although he was pretty badly shaken up himself. He—" Her voice ceased suddenly.

Dana opened her eyes and stared, dazed, up into Scott's face.

Without a word Scott lifted her in his arms, holding her close against him. Dana could feel his heart racing. Could feel her own heart, thumping wildly like something released from long imprisonment.

Her hand reached up to touch Scott's face incredulously, almost fearfully.

"I died," Dana whispered, "many times. And then I looked up and you were here by me."

"You thought I was hurt, Dana? Didn't Robertson tell you?"

"He must have explained to Nancy, but I didn't wait to hear. I thought I had lost you—" her voice broke.

Scott said gravely, "I was driving in to town like the devil, on my to you, when I met this young chap on a curve."

"You operated on him," Dana said wonderingly.

"He had to live," Scott answered grimly.

"He's all right?" Dana asked.

"He will be," Scott said.

Dana sighed suddenly with tremendous relief. She was staring at Scott. Scott who was so wonderful. Who was a wizard with a knife. Who had so much magic in his strong, skilled fingers! His face before her adoring eyes became a blur, part of a whirling panorama. She saw the amazed blue eyes of the nervous woman. Then the blue eyes were gone, too. Scott felt Dana's arms about him relax, and then she was a dead weight in his arms.

Dana opened her eyes. She was in a hospital room, in a hospital bed. Someone was holding one of her hands firmly. Dana closed her eyes again blissfully.

IT'S LEGAL IF YOU CAN GET AWAY WITH IT

Cadet Dick Van Roden, of Media, Pa., was balanced on the shoulders of Cadet Bill Bromley, of Erie, to score in a practice session at Valley Forge Military Academy.

Scott was here beside her. She wanted to be silent, letting this wonderful fact flood her whole being reassuringly, joyously.

What if it should be a dream—only a beautiful dream? She turned her head slightly and looked at Scott. He bent and kissed her gently.

"Take it easy, Mrs. S."

"I'm not dreaming," Dana said.

"You have been," Scott said, squeezing her hand. "But you are awake now. That's you and this is me."

"Not grammatical, but wonderful," Dana smiled at him. "I fainted?"

"Yes." He sat on the bed, pulling her up to a sitting position beside him, encircling her closely with his arms.

"Didn't know you liked me that much," Scott said in a low tone. "But I guess you do, you young idiot. I guess you love me as I do you—like hell."

"Like Hell," Dana laughed out suddenly. "Oh, Scott, angel, what a way to describe the heavenly state we're in!"

"Speaking of heaven," Scott grinned. "I've sent for a minister and a license. We have an awfully accommodating bunch of fellows around here."

"We're going to be married here at the hospital?"

"Just as fast as we can. So I can hurry you home with the sanction of the law and begin taking care of you."

"It will be forever and ever this time. I promise," Dana said, in a low tone.

"That goes for me too," Scott said earnestly.

"It doesn't seem fair for me to be so happy, when I've made Ronnie unhappy," Dana said thoughtfully.

"Ronnie will thank me some day when he marries a girl who is as big a fool about him as you are about me."

A nurse put her head in the door. "Dr. Stanley, that young girl in 422 has had a nervous reaction. There's nothing the matter with her, but she's frightened and insist on seeing you."

"All right," Scott said.

The door closed. Dana smiled at Scott. "Don't worry about me. I'm all right. And I'm remembering you're a doctor. I forgot it once, but I won't again."

"There's a letter at the door," Paula, Scott said, "I'll make some things the way, Dana she's married to that English fellow."

"I'm glad," Dana said. "I don't want to read her letter. I'm not interested about Paula. I don't want you to be my professional secretary."

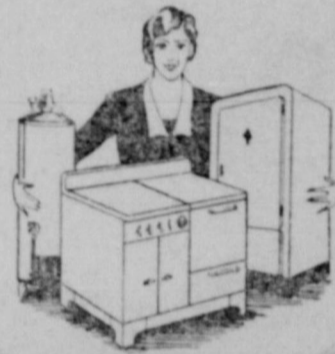

Scott stood looking at Dana. Some day he would tell Paula. He owed it to her that episode in their lives. She would tell Ronnie. That would be satisfactory, either. But he didn't want to tell her, just now.

He bent and kissed Dana. There had been a city in Scott's kiss. Love—oh, so much love had been, too, a new spect.

Industrials Win Two Games

The V-Eights lost two of the three games series in the league play at the local alleys last night to their opponents, the Industrials. The latter team ran up a new record score, bowling 2146 for the three games, to pass the previous record of 2107, made by the merchants last week.

Both teams were short-handed last night and used dummies. Davis of the V-Eights was high man, with a total for the series of 556 pins, bowling 203 and 213 in the first and third games.

Last night's defeat drops the league-leading V-Eights to third place, under both the Industrials and the Merchants.

The next game of the league series will be Monday night, when the Merchants take on the cellar champions, the Democrats.
