BLASTING FOR RAIN

BLASTING for rain and getting a sandstorm in return isn't very heartening, but Dalhart's citizens had not given up hope yesterday, ready to try again. "Tex" Thornton, noted oil well shooter and explosives expert, was doing the blasting that was intended to bring rain into the parched area at the top of the Panhandle. By some obscure reasoning, he believes that dynamite blasts attract rain clouds, calling attention to heavy rainfall in France during the war. Ad the people of the Dalhart area, willing to accept even a remote hope of obtaining moisture, put up the cash with which to back such an experiment. The first day of blasting brought only sand that whipped into the area with such force it almost ruined the party. However, it was reported that favorable rain indications were sighted and the dynamiting program was to continue. As feeble attempt as this seems to be, the southwest is watching this experiment with great interest. If it should, in some unknown manner, have the desired results, there'll be a detonation all over the southwest that would rival the war. This is a "noble experiment," almost certain to fail, but one that has attracted wide notice and interest because it concerns something so vital to the people of the area.

MASTERS OF SCIENCE

FAR up in the jungles of the Amazon there is one of the most romantic railroads in the world; a railroad, according to grim legends, whose construction cost one human life for every tie in its track. This railroad is a silent testimonial to the power of the human race to triumph over the most amazing natural obstacles. Built to carry Bolivian rubber around the rapids in the Madeira and Mamore rivers, it runs through fever-infested jungles from eastern Bolivia to the town of Porto Velho, in Brazil. Ocean steamers can dock here, more than a thousand miles from the mouth of the Amazon; the railroad was built to give Bolivia something resembling a seaport. Its construction took years of time, thousands of lives, and millions of dollars. The engineering obstacles were many; the region was more unhealthy than Panama in its worst days, what with yellow fever, tropical malaria, and other maladies. That the road could be built at all was a remarkable evidence of mankind's ability to cope with nature at her most hostile. But although men can defeat nature, they can't beat their own blindnesses. What jungle and microbe could not do, human folly has done. This railroad has triumphed over natural obstacles only to succumb to the depression. Writing in the current issue of Harper's magazine, Earl Hanson tells how this railroad has fallen on evil days. "The rubber business is on the rocks," he writes. "The railroad doesn't pay expenses. Two trains a month are now run each way. Budgets are pinched alarmingly on the maintenance and replacement side. Let the process go on and the road will eventually be abandoned. Towns full of white men will be left stranded, and Indianization, now already going on, will be speeded up. Everything is dying and slipping back to the jungle." And right there, in miniature, you have a telling picture of what is wrong with the world today. As far as nature is concerned, we have won our age-old fight. We can build practically anything we can imagine; we can whip the jungle at its worst, take ocean ships to the middle of South America, and connect them with a railroad in a spot where even to build a footpath would have seemed absolutely impossible a generation ago. But we can't seem to find a way to make things work after we get them built. Our technical progress—great enough to make the desert blossom like the rose any time we choose—is at the mercy of our inability to master the economics of modern society. We have conquered practically everything except our own stupidity. The one thing that keeps us from making a garden spot of the whole world is the simple fact that we are standing in our own way. The decline of this dearly-bought South American railroad is a perfect example.

HEALTH

BY DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygea, the Health Magazine
Your golf depends on the state of your mind and the condition of your body, any expert will tell you. I know of no game which demands more self-confidence than does golf, and yet some of our greatest egoists are poor golfers. That's because their egoism makes them want to excel and they are under severe tension before they start. Premature tension means failure in any athletic sport. A clergyman, who was a golfing fanatic, once consulted a great mental specialist because he was always under tension, relieved himself of a lot of bad language, and wanted to be freed of his difficult situation. The doctor asked him if he was happily married. Presumably his domestic situation and his repressions at home carried over into the tension on the golf course. That may be the explanation for a good many golf widows. The doctor advised him to give it up. "Give up what?" asked the

The PEN that DEFIED the SWORD
The pen proved its superiority over the sword when the great Spanish author, Vicente Blasco Ibañez, wielded it in defiance of the monarchy and with such vehemence that it inspired his countrymen to rebel. A voluntary exile, refusing to return to Spain until the king was dethroned, he spent his wealth and literary skill to accomplish that end. Unfortunately, he died in 1928, three years before a republic was proclaimed. The republic, however, remembered him by issuing a stamp in his honor the first year of its existence. golfers. Since the mechanism should be automatic, some amateurs play more badly after a few lessons because they put their minds on the mechanism. In such cases, both kinds of suggestion are very useful. Since many people are very easily subject to suggestion, they find themselves unable to do their best when playing against players who work the power of suggestion on them. For instance, merely calling attention to a bunker will cause some players to shoot right into the bunker or to slice hundreds of yards out of the way. The water hazards are in themselves a constant suggestion to the player of wrong temperament. A real understanding of the golfers' psychology was expressed by the famous specialist, Argyll-Robertson, after whom a certain reaction of the pupils of the eyes is named. He said "When looking for a lost ball, always go to the spot where you think it is, then walk twenty yards back and you will find it. BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
Washington Correspondent
WASHINGTON, May 5.—The private lives of government clerks have just become one of those teapot-tempet issues which politicians so frequently make into big headlines for the local newspapers. There's a section of badly ridled but still extant Economy Act which provides that married persons with husbands or wives in the federal civil service must be fired first whenever personnel reductions are necessary. Witnesses protesting this clause testified before the House civil service committee that it had the effect of causing young folks on the federal payroll to live together without benefit of clergy. One of the witnesses was President E. Claude Babeck of the A. F. of L.'s American Federation of Government Employees. Sexual morality of government clerks is by no means one of Mr. Babeck's major concerns. He just thought it was a point of argument against the "married persons clause" which would appeal to a southern congressman or two who might actually be worried about the morals of this town. Later he insisted he knew of nine such cases of unmarried life, but he didn't suggest that he had ever qualified himself as a genuine viewer-with-alarm by suggesting to these young people that they mend the error of their ways. Author Is Outraged Then, just as if he, too, lay awake nights thinking about such problems, Congressman Cochran of Missouri dashed into print with the assertion that Babeck had "insulted every single man and woman in the government service" and urged the Babeck be fired or, possibly, tarred and feathered. Owls Set for Fourth-Place Battle in Red River Loop

SHAMROCK NINE WILL INVADE SUNDAY

Outcome of Tilt To Decide Important League Place

Although prevented from training by peculiar weather conditions, more adapted for football than baseball—if it is fit for any kind of sports at all—the Memphis Owls are ready to start the second round drive for a leading position in the Western Division of the Red River Valley League.

Shamrock invades Fair Park Stadium Sunday afternoon for the first clash of lower division clubs, after the three trailing outfits had their fling at the loop leaguers.

The battle here Sunday probably will decide the present holder of fourth place in the loop, since Hollis, Okla., the other losing club is to contest Childress, one of the leaders.

Right-Handers To Work

The battle will get underway at 3:30 o'clock. Either Buck Whitfield or Clifford Stewart will start on the mound for the local nine. The big right-handers will be expected to stop the Shamrock sluggers with a few hits, giving the Owl batsmen a chance to make the most of their own slugging power, which thus far has done little good, since every game played has turned into a hitting spree, with the opposing club getting the best of it by slight margins.

Although efforts are still being made to bring better and bigger ball players here, the Owls probably will go against the Irish crew with practically the same line-up used against Tadeuch, to whom the locals dropped a 10-0 decision two weeks ago, since no announcement of additional players has been secured from local club officials.

Need More Work

However, it is believed that this group can easily carry the load and keep pace with the remainder of the loop if they can get underway without preliminary errors and slumps. After getting a late start this season, the team has been accorded little opportunity for training and working together.

However poor their showing might be at first, the outfit is expected, with proper drills, to develop into one of the leading clubs in the circuit. There is no particular reason why this cannot be done, but first, the team must have an opportunity to straighten itself out.

Fans have a habit of abandoning a losing club that continually gets crossed up, but if the Owls can break loose with the type of baseball the members surely are capable of playing, then the team should have little trouble increasing its popularity.

This is the last of two articles on Max Baer as he prepares to pitch camp for his battle with James J. Braddock on June 13, the first of three planned for the outdoor season.

BY HARRY GRAYSON
Sports Editor, NEA Service

Max Baer declares that he is going to get a life-size picture of Joe Louis, and place it at the foot of his bed.

"I'm going to cover it carefully, and rearrange the drapes each night upon retiring," smiles Baer. It is Baer's way of saying that he would dislike to have anything disastrous happen to Louis before he can administer the trouble himself. It is a bout with the young Detroit Negro that would bring the heavyweight champion important money.

Anell Hoffman, manager of Baer, has an idea that Louis will knock out Primo Carnera at the Yankee Stadium on June 25, and see Baer in the fall, although John Roxborough and Julian Black, handlers of the newest Black Menace, assert that their charge will not be sent against the Californian until next year.

Baer does not share Hoffman's confidence in Louis' ability to reel Carnera, although he suspects that the Venetian Leviathan isn't what he was before he was floored 11 times by Max Adelbert last June.

"While he stoned Ray Immel, little he tell me that Carnera didn't look so good," explains Baer, "and I don't understand their taking him to Albany to train. Maybe they don't want anybody to see him."

More Susceptible to Swings Than Punches
Baer has an unusual explanation as to why Carnera may beat

they are in dose."

What does Baer think of Louis, the former Golden Glover who skyrocketed to the first flight in nine months with 16 knockouts in 19 trips as a professional?

"Louis cat hit, which gives him a large percentage right off the bat," replies Baer, "but the headaches must be lugged to him before we can get any of a fair appraisal. I'm wondering how he will react when I grit my teeth and say, 'Come on, black boy, let's fight!'"

Although he is booked to box James J. Braddock in New York on June 13, Baer speaks of Louis first, which gives you an idea of the relative importance an interest in his initial title defense and the Carnera-Louis shindig.

It is going to be difficult for Baer's handlers to make him take the Braddock bout, forced upon him by the New York Boxing Commission, much more seriously than he has viewed exhibitions in which he was smacked around no little by Eddie Simms and another one or two.

Ball players knock that old axiom, "They never come back," into an Immelman turn, and then some.

Waite Hoyt appeared through after making half the round of the American League. The one-time Schoolboy reformed, however, got a new line of stuff, and became the most reliable Pirate pitcher just season, after being denied the privilege of starting a game until June. He was honored with the opening assignment this spring.

Jack Rothrock tried his luck in both infield and outfield. It was believed that the southern Californian was finished when he broke his leg with the Red Sox. The White Sox gave up on him.

Relegated to the American Association, Rothrock came back to play every inning of the 1934 schedule with the Cardinals and to be an important factor in what perhaps was the most spectacular stretch drive in the history of the game.

Leo Durocher, an All-America out with the Yankees and Reds, is captain, shortstop, and a timely hitter for the Red Birds.

Mark Koenig was unloaded by the Yankees when his eyes went bad. Koenig turned to pitching, but was booted to the Mission Coasters by the Tigers. The San Franciscan returned to bat the Cubs into the 1932 World Series.

Shunted to the then National League dumping ground, Cincinnati, and swapped to the Giants as a Handy Andy, Koenig is making the most of Hughie Critz's sore finger with a batting mark of .394. They may have to blast to get him out of the lineup.

Koenig Shuffled Back From Buffalo

Len Koenig was labeled a hust as a Giant after the late John McGraw paid Indianapolis $75,000 for his contract. Shuffled off to Buffalo, the ball hawk of Raraboo took his place among the foremost flychasers as a Dodger in 1934.

William Watson Clark's arm failed with his health as a Dodger. Headed for the minors when Bill Terry was convinced that the southpaw could be of no service to the Giants, Casey Stengel picked him up for $4000 on a forlorn hope. The Louisianian is now showing his 1932 form with his old club. He won 20 engagements that year.

Wesley Ferrell was himself so positive that his arm was gone that he tried the outfield. Now he speaks of winning 30 games for the Red Sox.

Four other important members of the Boston Americans might be listed as comebacks.

Mose Grove's outlook is much brighter than it was a year ago. Max Bishop's stomach ailment has disappeared. Ed Barrow, real boss of the Yankees, kicks himself in the pants every time he sees, reads or thinks about Bill Werber. Pittsburgh got rid of Joe Cronin, and Kansas City was ready to when Joe Engel picked him up for Washington for a negligible amount.

Ray Pepper was released from the Cardinal chain gang after failing to make the hill in two or three attempts. The Alabamian just fell short of the 300 notch with the Browns in 1934.

Fay Thomas was a disappointment in three previous trips to the majors. The old Southern Californian tackle won 28 and lost only 4 games for Los Angeles last season, and errors and a streak of wildness in the ninth deprived him of a

No. 2—PRIMO CARNERA

this order: Max Schmeling, Carnera, Louis and Braddock.

Walter Rothenberg, the German promoter, cables that he shortly will sail for New York to complete arrangements for the posting of a $300,000 guarantee for which Hoffman announces that Baer will give Schmeling a whack at his old crown in Rome in August.

Hoffman plans an exhibition tour that will take Baer around the world starting this fall, and the rounds with small gloves, he requires considerable work and hardening. His hands are bothering him for the first time.

Baer opens training with a black eye. The bulb was decorated by Simms' thumb in Cleveland the other night. That wasn't all Simms did to the champion, either.

Some day Baer is going to stick out his classic chin in the general direction of the wrong fellow. It will be extremely advisable for him to keep it tucked in when he gets in there with Braddock, the honest stevedore.

CAPTAIN EASY

ROY CRANE

SOLDIER OF FORTUNE

REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.

PIPPY'S NOSTRILS ARE CLOSED WITH COTTON. HE IS SPREAD-EAGLED TO THE GROUND, AND RAZOR-SHARP SPLINTERS OF BAMBOO ARE PLACED SO THAT HE CANNOT TURN HIS HEAD.

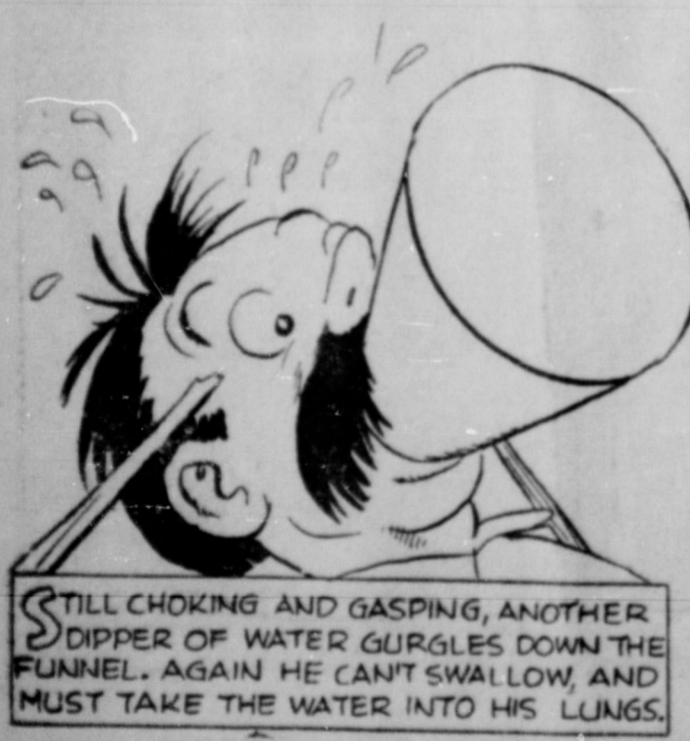

AT REGULAR INTERVALS, WATER IS POURED INTO THE FUNNEL, AND EACH TIME PIPPY SWALLOWS IT.

HALF AN HOUR LATER, THO, HIS CONFIDENCE IS GONE. HE'S ALARMED! HE'S SWALLOWED NEARLY TWO GALLONS OF WATER, AND CAN HOLD NO MORE.

FOR THE LIFE OF HIM, HE CAN'T SWALLOW ANOTHER DROP. HE GASPS FOR AIR, AND BY DOING SO, INHALES THE WATER.

AGAIN AND AGAIN THIS HAPPENS. POOR PIPPY IS DESPERATE! TERRIFIED! SLOWLY BUT SURELY HE IS DROWNING. THE AGONY IS HORRIBLE.

SUDDENLY, EASY'S BOOMING VOICE RINGS OUT.

THIS CURIOUS WORLD

The PANGOLIN

OR SCALY ANT-EATER, IS TO BE FOUND IN BOTH AFRICA AND ASIA. THIS PREHISTORIC-LOOKING CREATURE IS A TRUE MAMMAL, ALTHOUGH THE ARMOR OF THICK SCALES GIVES IT A DECIDEDLY REPTILIAN APPEARANCE.

ANTS & TERMITES
MAKE UP THE BULK OF THE PANGOLIN'S FOOD SUPPLY. EVEN THE SAVAGE DRIVER ANTS, FROM WHICH AN ELEPHANT WILL FLEE, ARE EATEN BY THIS STRANGE ANIMAL.

WHEN DANGER APPROACHES, THE PANGOLIN ROLLS ITSELF INTO A BALL, IN WHICH POSITION NO PORTION OF THE BODY IS LEFT UNPROTECTED BY THE HORNY, OVERLAPPING SCALES.

ITS LONG TONGUE IS COVERED WITH A STICKY SUBSTANCE, WHICH PICKS UP ANY ANT IT TOUCHES.

AT THE RIGHT WE SEE THE PANGOLIN'S METHOD OF DESCENDING TREES IN A HURRY! IT SIMPLY ROLLS INTO A BALL, AND DROPS ... DEPENDING ON THE SPRINGY, ELASTIC SCALES TO BREAK THE FALL.

THE ANIMAL CAN DELIVER A BLOW WITH ITS SHARP-EDGED TAIL, THAT IS SUFFICIENT TO CAUSE A DAMAGING AND PAINFUL WOUND.

LET ME SEE! THERE'S THE BASEMENT TO CLEAN, A FAUCET TO FIX, SOME RUGS TO BEAT, AND EGAD! STRANGE, BUT I'M NOT IN THE MOOD FOR ANY OF THOSE TASKS. BUT, THE GOOD WIFE WILL PUT ME TO WORK AT SOMETHING AS SOON AS SHE RETURNS FROM THE STORE. THAT'S CERTAIN.

IF I MUST TOIL, I'LL PICK MY TASK. IF I REMEMBER CORRECTLY, THERE ARE SOME PACKETS OF SEEDS IN THE GARAGE. IT MAY BE A BIT LATE, BUT WITH MY LUCK - OH, WELL, NOTHING VENTURED, NOTHING GAINED.

BY JOVE, I'LL ENTER THE CONTEST FOR THE PRETTIEST YARD IN THE CITY.

EGAD! I RECALL TO THIS DAY, THE WONDERFUL SCENT FROM THE SWEET PEAS MY GRANDFATHER USED TO RAISE.

MARY, MARY, QUITE CONTRARY, HOW DOES YOUR GARDEN GROW BY JOVE, MARY MUST HAVE BEEN A GOOD GARDENER, TOO! THERE! THE JOB IS FINISHED.

OH, MY YES, WE ALWAYS TAKE A LOT OF INTEREST IN OUR GARDEN. COME ALONG AND SEE HOW WELL IT'S LAID OUT.

I'D LOVE TO.

NOW, THIS BED IS PLANTED WITH SNAPDRAGONS.

YOU MEAN POPPIES, M'DEAR.

I SAID SNAPDRAGONS!

PARDON ME BUT THAT BED CONTAINS MARIGOLDS.

AND, IN THIS BED, WE HAVE SCABIOSA.

SAY! I GUESS I KNOW WHAT THESE BEDS CONTAIN. DON'T TRY TO SHOW OFF! I PLANTED EVERY BED IN THIS YARD, MYSELF, WITHOUT ANY HELP FROM YOU. NOW, GO ON ABOUT YOUR BUSINESS.

OH, WELL, I SEE NO SENSE IN TELLING HER THAT I, TOO, PLANTED FLOWERS IN ALL THOSE GARDENS.

BUT, I THINK IT MIGHT BE A GOOD IDEA IF I AM AWAY ON A TRIP, ABOUT THE TIME THE FLOWERS START COMING UP.
