100 Leave Jobs Aluminum Strike

By Associated Press
PITTSBURGH, Aug. 11.—A strike, sanctioned by the American Federation of Labor, today shut down the major plants of the Aluminum Company of America in three states.

Reports from the strike centers indicated about 12,000 of the company's estimated 15,000 workers quit their tasks.

Peaceful picketing got underway at the company's huge plants in the Pittsburgh district and at factories in Alcoa, Tenn., and at Massena, N. Y.

Employees at Edgewater, N. J., Bridgeport, Conn., and Badin, N. C., remained on their jobs.

Meanwhile, both sides expressed a willingness to conciliate to end the walkout, which became effective at midnight after weeks of fruitless efforts of the leaders of the Aluminum Workers' Council and company officials to reach an agreement on union demands.

So They Called Out The Cops To Protect The Militia

Here is a pictured variation of that sterling old gag, "Hey, officer, call a cop," with New Orleans policemen standing guard so Communists and Jobless won't "harm" the state militia. Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley, at War with Senator Huey P. Long and Governor O. K. Allen, because troops seized the city voter registration office, sank this cruel barb in his foes. Arming his police with gas grenades, tear gas guns, and revolvers, he rushed them to the scene of a demonstration near the registry office. Militiamen, highly chagrined, look from the windows at their "protectors."

TWO KILLED, SIX ARE INJURED AS CONVICTS TRY TO BREAK PRISON

By Associated Press
BATON ROUGE, Aug. 11.—Two convicts were shot to death today when 13 prisoners attempted to escape the Louisiana state prison at Angola.

Prison Manager R. L. Himes reported the prisoners killed were Raymond Candier and Bill Bryant, long timers.

Six of the escaping convicts were wounded and caught. The other five surrendered later.

Himes described the break as a concentrated and apparently prearranged dash for liberty by a detail of the "red cap" gang of incorrigibles working the garden at camp "E."

The plan presumably was for the 13 convicts to scatter in all directions at a given signal in the hope that some would get away.

Two of the wounded convicts were not expected to live. They were Michael Antakly and Gerald Kramer.

By Associated Press
PADUCAH, Ky., Aug. 11.—Chief of Detectives Kelly Franklin announced late today that a man arrested here had been identified as Alvin Karpis, alias R. E. Hamilton, long sought for his alleged part in the kidnaping last January of Edward G. Bremer of St. Paul.

Karpis was arrested early today as he slept under a tree on the outskirts of the city. Detectives seized a pistol lying beside him, Franklin said, as the sleeping man awoke and reached for the weapon.

Police refused to disclose Karpis' identity until after a study of fingerprints.

When police arrived at the scene where the man was found after it had been reported a dead man was in the field, Karpis asked: "Are you cops?" and consented to be searched when they told him "Yes."

He let his captors take him to jail without trying to resist.

SOPHIE KERR'S SUPERB LOVE STORY "STAY OUT OF MY LIFE!"

By Sophie Kerr

JANE TERRY comes to New York determined to show her home town and especially AMY JACKSON that she can make a success of her life. Amy had been her best friend until HOWARD JACKSON broke the engagement Jane had forced upon him and married Amy. In New York Jane obtains a position in a real estate office and soon is making a large income.

She has an affair with ROGER THORPE who is married but tires of him. When he offers to bear the expense of their child she contemptuously dismisses him. She confides in Amy, realizing she is her only friend. Jane insists on giving her daughter away and Amy takes the child, promising never to reveal its parentage. The baby is named NANCY.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXXV "There's nothing I can do about it," thought Amy. "I needn't have tried to be facetious with her. Facetiousness is always dangerous, but she was giving herself such airs, and pretending to pity me! If she'd really pitied me I wouldn't have cared, but she only wanted to make me uncomfortable and envious, watching her spread her feathers. Maybe I ought to have been thankful she didn't want Nancy, and treated her nicely, no matter how she carried on. But for her to gibe again about Howard—and to fly off the handle—and scream at me! Oh, it's no use—all that kind and dear and friendly between us is gone. It went when I took Nancy. Something happened to both of us then that can't be patched up. There's no use our ever going through the motion of our old friendship."

But as she walked slowly along she began to forget Jane's spasms of anger, to forget Jane herself. The charmed circle of her world drew in about her. She was safe there with Howard, and their son.

But it was otherwise with Jane. As she stormed away from Amy, her anger blew higher. She knew she had made a show of herself and that she'd been set down and laughed at. There was the worst sitting, that she hadn't impressed Amy or shaken her poise. "She's simply has no sense!" Jane silently screamed. "To try to pretend she's happy and contented under such conditions! She has nothing—nothing! That grubby house! And the most awful clothes! Not even a maid! Her hands were a sight—I don't see how she can touch the piano." She was almost home when caution stopped her. "I can't go in and talk to Aunt Rosa yet, she'd know I didn't go very far. What a dump this town is! I believe I'll go down to the telegraph office and wire Andrews to send for me to come back tomorrow."

As she went on she brought her anger under control, but she could not lose or reduce it. Rather it mounted, became more vindictive. If it had occurred to her then that Amy was afraid she might claim

Nancy she would have done it, regardless of consequences. But she was so far from thinking of the child or wanting her, that she didn't even see her as a weapon to strike Amy vitally. Instead she felt she was defenseless against Amy, and all of the grudges she had more or less forgotten came back to her with overwhelming power. Amy had stolen her love and for some unfathomable reason had kept his love. Amy had achieved nothing, had amounted to nothing, while she, Jane, had won money and distinction by her own ability and talent, and yet Amy could be happy and unenvious and treat Jane's superiority with mockery. It all made Jane want, quite frankly, to reduce Amy to dust and contrition and apology, to see peace and serenity beaten from her face, beaten out of her life.

Nevertheless, she managed to sit calmly before Miss Rosa's sharp eyes, which watched her as they talked across Miss Rosa's lavish dinner table, though there was a malice in her comments—hadn't Mrs. Lowe aged frightfully!—and wasn't Mrs. Jackson a funny old thing, trying so hard to be sprightly!—and that little Moseland creature certainly was an odd thought!—and as for poor Amy she was really pathetic! Jane did not mention Nancy, nor did Miss Rosa. And presently Jane dismissed them all with, "It's all rather saddening to come back and see how people have changed and how little they have!"

"Well, Marburg's a small place. You can't expect it to be like a metropolis," said Miss Rosa, taking another hot cream biscuit. "Life is different here. It runs more slowly."

"It doesn't run, it creeps—that is, when it moves at all." Jane was tired of talking about these people. "And I do hope that slowpoke, Trainor, will be ready with his accounts tomorrow morning, for I ought to get back as soon as I can."

"But you've only just come!" exclaimed Miss Rosa, dismayed. "Why don't you sell this house," asked Jane. "Get rid of all this prehistoric junk you call furniture and travel about and enjoy yourself for a while? Then take a smart modern apartment in New York near me and go about to the theaters and opera."

"But I couldn't travel, even if I wanted to, with this war going on. I certainly don't want to go to China. I don't like traveling. Uncomfortable, exhausting, costs like fury, too. You don't understand, Jane—I don't want to change. Things are changing too fast for me anyway. When I come into my house and see the chairs and tables and pictures that belonged to my grandfather and great-grandfather I think the Lord t'ehre's still one place time hasn't altered. My friends are here. My way of life is settled in a deep groove, and I enjoy it that way."

"Well, it would kill me if I had to look at the same old furniture and the same old faces all the time. I'm going to do my apartment over in this new Viennese style before long, and I change servants every month or two just to see new people."

"That," said Miss Rosa with dignity, "is your affair. You're young and restless. I am old and fat. I like my case. I'd a darned sight rather be happy mentally than uncomfortable physically. In other words, I'm an old snail in a shell that fits me. But"—ingratiatingly—"I do admire your spirit and energy, Jane, and success. And I still wish you'd spare me an extra day or two, if you can manage it and don't find it too much of a bore."

The compliments pleased Jane. "I'll say this for you, Aunt Rosa, you're one of the few people in Marburg who has any idea of what I've done." Then she remembered Amy, and frowned. "But I don't believe I can stay, though I might for another day if I'm not sent for." She thought: "Andrews'll have my wire in the morning and will understand."

In her office her confidence in herself would be restored. There she was supreme. No one around her who would not obey, submit, acquiesce, admire. Her approval of Miss Rosa showed itself in an unusual attention: "Shall I take you out to the movies tonight, or shall we have a game of rummy?" she asked agreeably.

Her aunt beamed: "Listen, Jane, there's a two handed bridge that was described in the paper the other day and I've been crazy to try it. Let's see how it goes, and if we don't like it we can have some rummy any time than look at those silly movies. The way they kiss turns my stomach upside down."

Over in the old Booth house Amy was putting Nancy to bed, with Mary helping. The little girl, bathed and brushed and sleepy, was pulling on her nightgown. "Mother," she said, dreamily, "I yuv parties. Let's have a party evvy day."

"We'll have as many as we can," promised Amy hugging her. "You were a very good girl at this party, baby. Love your mother?"

"Yuv my mother, yuv my mother, yuv parties, yuv cookies, yuv grammommies, yuv mother," murmured Nancy, climbing into bed, "Yuv everything."

Amy leaned to tuck her in and kiss her. "Goodnight, lamb!" she said. "You're going over and visit grammommy and granpoppy for a while before long. Wou'd that be fun?"

Nancy was too far gone in sleep to know. "Mother wants to take her when the new baby comes along," Amy said to Mary. "It's better for her to be out of the house until the fuss is over and we get into order again. Don't you think so?"

The two women were picking up socks and day clothes, straightening the room. "I can manage, if you'd rather she'd stay. Your mother will want to be over here most of the time, I imagine," said Mary.

"But Nancy's fine with Father. He says she's a much brighter child than I was; Even old Lillian likes her and that's a tribute, believe me. She's such a crank. She'll be better off over there. If I had much pain—and she heard me, well, I don't think a baby like Nancy ought to be thing like that." "Are you afraid asked Mary.

"Yes, I'm scared the doctor says I everything's so n and anyway, Man hours pain and child of my own Howard says of are in a plane a watch everything ful as you can, be the air and if bound to be sm too. But there is any smash."

"The room was "I'm going down Mary. "I suppose write to Howard, him a message for "All right. What Terry I want to taste in choosing it stronger. Tastefully Appointed Table Is Simply Set Simplicity is the keynote of beautifully appointed dinner tables. The wise hostess uses an attractive centerpiece and then adds nothing more in the way of decoration. Her handsome linen has ample opportunity to show itself. For instance, a sterling silver bowl filled with white lilies, and four matching candlesticks form the centerpiece of this dinner table. The design on the glassware matches the pattern on the white damask cloth.

If the situation puzzlin' and prospects awful grim
If perplexities keep pressin' till hope is nearly gone
Just bristle up and grit your teeth and keep on keepin. on.

There ain't no use in broodin' in these pessimistic ways

Loafers Take Third Game of Softball Title Series

DOWN BAPTISTS TO GAIN 2-1 MARGIN

Fine Teamwork Outstanding During 4-2 Victory

Staying out in front all the way in the third championship game, the Loafers Friday showed much power in overcoming the Baptists, 4 to 2, in a close contest.

The array presented by the Loafers was one of outstanding strength and ability. Several substitutes were kept on the sidelines because of the splendid play and co-operation of the team on the field.

Baptists Lead Once

The Baptists were ahead once in the game, that being in the third. The Loafers erased this one-run lead at the earliest opportunity, scoring twice in the fourth.

This one-run lead was held for the rest of the way, adding one to it in the last. A would-be rally by the home team in the last frame was promptly squelched by the splendid fielders.

Two men hit doubles, Melear for the winners and Brewer two for the victims.

Fourth Game Monday

Landis led the batting for his club, while Bud McAbee was the outstanding fielder.

The fourth game in the series will be played tomorrow afternoon. A victory for the Loafers would end the series. A Baptist win would force the competition into the last of the five.

Clyde Littlefield Keeps Up Study Of Football, But Not To Make Predictions, He Says Here

"How is The Democrat?" This was the question asked by Clyde Littlefield, track coach of Texas university, who arrived in Memphis Friday afternoon with his wife and son for a visit with Mrs. Littlefield's sister, Mrs. T. T. Harrison, and family.

Littlefield stopped here on his way to Austin after attending the Texas Tech coaching school just completed at Lubbock.

For the past three years, Littlefield has given instructions at the school; however, this year he was one of the many coaches to attend classes.

Littlefield and his family will remain in Memphis for a few days. On being questioned about the Southwestern conference and Texas' chances of winning the football crown this year, the former Longhorn football mentor was non-committal.

"I'm keeping my mouth shut on football for the present," Littlefield stated. "I am relaxing and waiting to see what my successor as football coach will do." Littlefield said that he was still deeply interested in football and was studying the game, but that he was devoting most of his thoughts to putting forth a championship track team at state next year.

At present, Littlefield is cross-country coach, track coach and manager of the football team, the same position he held before being elevated several years ago to the mentorship of the grid squad. The nationally known coach, who has produced such grid stars as Ernie Koy, Harrison Stafford, Dexter Shelley, Bohn Hilliard and many others, is beginning his 15th consecutive year of coaching at Texas university.

Before going to State, he coached for four years at Greenville, losing only one football encounter over the entire period.

Coach Littlefield inquired about Hubert Dennis, former Memphis Cyclone and T. C. U. football star. Dennis, for three years a triple-threat back for the Texas Christians Horned Frogs, dealt Littlefield's football aggregations no little bit of trouble in Southwest Conference play. Dennis is spending the summer in Memphis, before returning to Rockdale to resume his coaching activities in the high school there.

NEW YORK, Aug. 11.—Unless Fred Perry turns professional, the Davis Cup is quite likely to remain in England long enough to round out a ten-year stay on the other side.

Seventh American Expedition failed, with Sidney B. Wood and Frank Shields unable to score in even one singles scrap.

And when the time comes for the British to pass the trophy along, Germany, and not the United States, may be the recipient.

Indeed, the Teutons, who have made rapid strides in tennis, might have been the challengers this year had not Nazi trouble cost them the services of Daniel Penn, almost as good as the 24-year-old Baron Gottfried von Cramm, whom William T. Tilden rates next to Perry among the amateurs.

In taking two sets before wrenching his side, Wood demonstrated that he had it in him to repel Perry. With a better break in the luck, the once precious darling of the Seabright courts may click in 1935, but the other singles player must be developed. He may eventually be found among Gene Mako of Los Angeles, the intercollegiate champion; E. Ramey Donovan, a contribution from would have a better selection than Shields.

It might be well for the American Davis Cup committee to take into consideration how a player's game fits that of the British stars.

For example, Shields likely would blast Grant off the court in an elimination, yet the Atlanta player's game is much more adapted to that of Austin, the stylish, than that of the towering chap who carried the Yankee standards.

Since the Europeans learned the art of taking a terrific service, their conquerors have had to have flawless command of the ball. Shields can't beat tennis best with wild rushes to the net. Shields is mechanical—stilted and cramped. He is a one or two stroke player, with a weak backhand and faulty ground strokes.

Perry Clicked When He Quit Clowning

Grant, on the other hand, has an all-court game. Against Austin, the man the Americans stood the best chance of defeating, Bitsy could have been relied upon to stick in there, and get the ball back. And that is what it takes to

THE DEMOCRAT'S SUNDAY PAGE FOR FARMERS

Conducted By James A. Jackson, Hall County Agricultural Agent

5,000 Cows Are Offered Government

With over 5,000 head of cattle already offered to the government in the emergency purchasing program under way in Hall county it is expected that the cattle buying organization will be very busy for over two months.

The more distressed cattle will be the first to be inspected and bought by the government appraiser. Those cattle in districts where stock water is very short or completely exhausted and the cattle are suffering for water are first on the list of distressed districts.

Many cattle of good breeding will have to be disposed of by their owners because of lack of feed and water; however in many instances arrangements are being made to trade these valuable cattle to persons more fortunately situated with regard to feed and water and so not lose entirely the constructive effect of years of care and good breeding.

Producers in the hardest hit districts are keeping their best cows, especially their best young cows as foundation stock to build back their herds after the drouth is over. Other producers in districts not so severely affected plan to cull their herds an droid them of cows who are boarders or are suspected of being diseased.

Makes 'Linen' Suit From 8-Ounce Duck

PANHANDLE, Aug. 11.—From duck made by a Texas cotton mill and used to wrap bales of eight ounce duck for making cotton picking sacks, Mrs. R. A. Thompson, wardrobe demonstrator for the White Deer home demonstration club, made an attractive suit that is well tailored and resembles linen crash, according to Bessie L. Sikke, home demonstration agent. The suit cost her 15 cents—five cents for thread and 10 cents for tape to bind the seams.

An interesting blouse made of four sheer sugar sacks which were tied and dyed brown cost her 20 cents for dye and thread. Thus a total of 35 cents was her expenditure for the three piece outfit.

Mrs. George Carter of Clarendon is here spending the week-end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Clark.

FARMERS SIGN 236,183 COTTON CONTRACTS

4,282,723 Bales Are Affected In Texas By Contracts

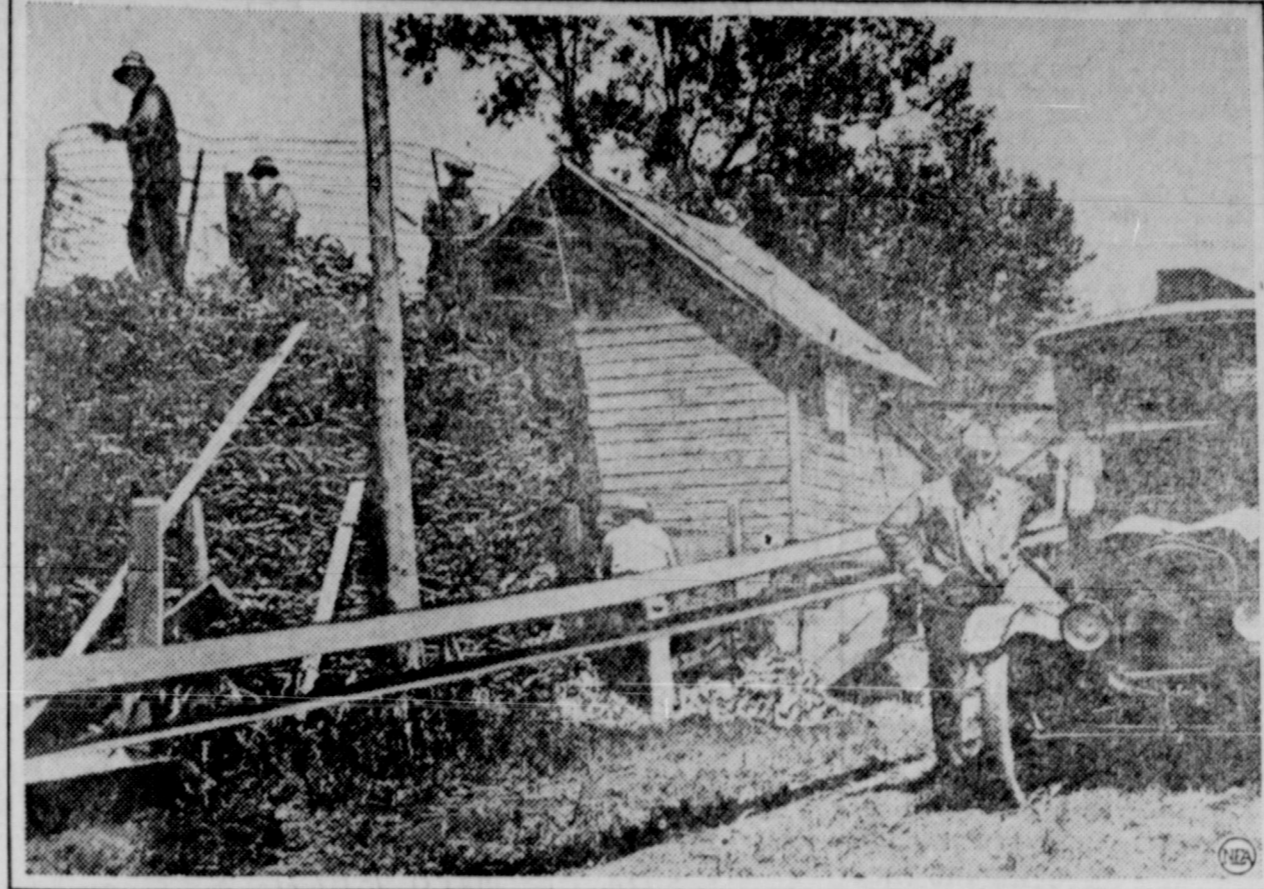

COLLEGE STATION, Aug. 11.—Reporting that contracts from every cotton county in Texas have been approved and certified to Washington the State Cotton Board of Review presented this week the final figures in the cotton acreage reduction campaign.

A summary of the certificates of the 223 cotton counties shows a grand total of 236,183 contracts affecting 4,282,723 bales of 478 pounds net weight; 14,126,746 adjusted base acres, and 5,322,368 rented acres. The contracts show that 37.7% of the base acres were rented to the Government. The total rental payments amount to $26,777,280 and the parity payment of one cent per pound will amount to $8,153,513. In most cases the checks for the first rental payment have been received by the farmers. The second rental payment will be made in early fall after the land has been measured and the compliance certificates sent to Washington. The parity payments will be made in December.

In connection with these final figures it is of interest to note that Texas has about one-fourth of the cotton counties and one-fourth of the contracts in the United States, representing nearly one-third of the lint, and over one-third of the cotton acreage.

It is generally conceded, board members declare, that the acreage reduction campaign saved the cotton farmers from again having to sacrifice their cotton at low prices because another crop in the face of large world carry-over, together with lack of demand, could only have meant disastrous prices. Furthermore, it is pointed out that the benefits and parity payments take the place of crop insurance for the many farmers who will make little or no cotton due to the drouth, while the rented acres will supply additional feed for livestock on farms wherever the drouth did not completely destroy the crops.

Farmers Rush to Sell Corn as Drouth Boosts Price

Midwest farmers who have repaid their government loans now are unsealing their cribs and selling their corn at the new higher prices, coming as result of the widespread drouth damage. Here is a scene on a farm near Rockwell City, Ia., ear corn being fed into the sheller, a truck standing by to haul away the shelled grain pouring into it.

FARMERS STILL ARE WITHOUT EXEMPTION

Deadline Past But Few Applications To Be Accepted

With the deadline passed on the date for signing of applications for exemption certificates under the Bankhead Cotton Control bill there are still a few producers who have not signed their applications.

These persons may be able to get their applications accepted provided they call at the county agent's office here immediately and sign their papers.

It will be impossible for any person who has not made application to gin any cotton without paying the tax or buying exemption certificates from another party. This applies even to farms which are covered by a cotton reduction contract.

Mrs. Lonnie R. Jones returned to her home at Altus, Okla., yesterday afternoon after a visit here with her sister, Miss Oneita Hollis, and old friends.

253 Chickens Show Net Profit Of $242

ALBANY, Aug. 11.—From a flock of 253 Leghorn chickens, J. F. Strickland of Shackelford county made a net profit of $242.02 in seven months, according to the report of D. F. Eaton, farm demonstration agent.

The total amount of money taken in was $459.68, and Mr. Strickland deducted $217.66 for housing and feeding, which left a profit of almost one dollar per bird net from the sale of eggs and culled hens.

Correct Watering Assures Survival Of Summer Shrubs

SAN BENITO, Aug. 11.—Shrubs in the yard of Mrs. Renus Snaveley, yard improvement demonstrator for the Combes home demonstration club in Cameron county, are insured survival through the summer by correct methods of watering and cultivation, according to Dorothy Porter, home demonstration agent for that county.

The work is done by Mr. Snaveley who digs a shallow basin around each shrub and waters plentifully—adding water until it soaks in very, very slowly. The soil is then raked back around the plant, and when a crust forms it is broken by shallow cultivation. This method of watering causes the roots to strike down, so that if a longer period must elapse between waterings the plant does not suffer. Surface cultivation helps to retain the moisture for a greater length of time.

Mrs. J. W. Reese returned to her home at Hedley Friday after a visit here with her sister, Mrs. J. A. Whaley.

MENARD, Aug. 11.—A. J. McWilliams, 4-H club boy of Menard county, has been selected as one of the 15 outstanding 4-H calf feeders of the state by a committee composed of A and M college specialists who went over the complete records sent to the college for boys' club work during 1932-33. One hundred outstanding club boys were picked by the committee, the baby beef division being awarded 15 places from the entire state.

Del Wells and M. L. Alexander, community committeemen, have started measuring the square cotton fields here to see whether or not the farmers are complying with their 1934 cotton acreage reduction contracts. The terraced fields will be measured when proper equipment is received.

The Methodist revival is progressing nicely. Large crowds are attending and much interest is being shown.

THE SMALL CITY ...
A Pacemaker of Progress

More and more the signs point to the greater importance of the small and medium-sized community.

We are proud of the part electric power is playing in laying the groundwork for this greater progress and prosperity.

Gone is the day when the larger metropolitan centers had a monopoly of power supply, the first essential of industrial growth and development.

Widespread networks of transmission lines have given the smaller communities the same high-grade electric service as the larger cities have.

On this firm basis, industries are increasingly recognizing the advantages of location in small communities.

This trend will react most favorably to West Texas, the "Land of Opportunity"—efficiently, dependably and inexpensively served by the West Texas Utilities Company.

Do you know that your increased use of Electric Service is billed on a surprisingly low rate schedule . . . and adds only a small amount to your total bill?

GET COTTON EXEMPTION CERTIFICATES

SEVERAL farmers in Hall county have sat calmly by and let the deadline for signing applications for cotton exemption certificates pass without making any attempt to obtain their own safeguards against 50 percent taxation on their cotton.

Just what anyone has in mind who has done this we are unable to comprehend. The certificates apply to farms covered by cotton reduction contracts as well as those that were never entered under any agreement.

This is no matter to be taken lightly. There is no way to avoid the tax unless exemptions are produced. This is not an agreement with the government that can be overlooked. It is a law!

Because it is known that a number of farmers in the county who are raising cotton have not made application for certificates, County Agricultural Agent James A. Jackson has announced the applications will be received "immediately" although the deadline is passed.

However, the applications will be sent away soon to be okayed. After they are gone, the matter will be entirely out of the hands of local authorities. If the applications are not made before that time, it will just be too bad for a certain group when they start marketing cotton this fall.

The farmer without certificates will find he must pay the 50 percent tax on every bale of cotton or he must purchase certificates from someone else who failed to equal his tax-free allowance. Either method will be entirely too expensive to incur when it is so unnecessary.

We suggested to Mr. Jackson that perhaps those who had not made these applications were farmers who resided a long distance from town and had no means of communication nor received a newspaper and, therefore, did not know that the applications must be made at once.

He killed that excuse. He stated that the list included a number of farmers near Memphis and some who are among the most progressive in the county. Then, it must be neglect that has caused them to put off this important business.

CRIME TODAY EASIER TO WEAR DOWN

DURING the last year or so the nation's fight against crime has taken on an entirely new aspect; or, to be more exact, it has resumed an old one. Organized society's war on the underworld has passed a turning point, and that point is best exemplified by the bloody career and death of John Dillinger.

For more than a decade the underworld in every large city was a commercial undertaking. It bought and sold commodities like any other business group. It muscled its way into legitimate business enterprises and perverted them to its own uses.

Its big gangs—the Capone mob in Chicago, the purple gang in Detroit, Egan's Rats in St. Louis, the Diamond outfit in New York—were made up of business men.

The business was anti-social, to be sure, and it was attended by a terrific amount of violence; but it was business, nevertheless, and the big criminal got his money by buying and selling, rather than by direct action in the old-time manner.

If you examine the picture now, you will see that this condition has changed. Our public enemies these days are in the tradition of Jesse James rather than Al Capone. They are highwaymen, of the immemorial stamp, and not masters of commerce. Dillinger, Machine Gun Kelly, Baby Face Nelson, Clyde Barrow—these men had their allies and their confederates, but they were essentially individualists. They went out and took what they wanted by strong-arm methods, just as did the 17th century highwayman of England.

They defied the police; the Capones and the Diamonds, all too often, corrupted and co-operated with the police.

This means that gangsterism today is far less of a menace than it was half a dozen years ago. To be sure, the utmost vigilance still is necessary. The work that has been done so well in the last 18 months must continue until highway robbery becomes a relatively rare crime. But the worst is over.

We are no longer nourishing a world within a world, in our big cities. The gangster is no longer a high-powered business man whose contacts and influence reach far up through the social fabric. He is what the old-time outlaw was—a lone desperado whose days are inevitably numbered.

The tide of crime has begun to ebb at last.

HEALTH

BY DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygeia, the Health Magazine

Pneumonia still is one of the most serious of the diseases that afflict human beings. Course of the disease usually is so rapid that the prospects of recovery are always grave.

It is now generally known that this disease is caused by infection with a germ which occurs in several special types.

Number of deaths from pneumonia varies with the country, social environment, age, general physical condition of those affected, and many similar factors. As an example of the seriousness of pneumonia, the death rates vary from 50 per cent in personal practice, to 12 per cent for the general population.

Death rate in the practice of a famous consulting physician would naturally be very high, because such men are always called in the most serious cases. Mortality from pneumonia in Bellevue hospital in New York, which takes care of the poor areas of the city, is reported around 35 per cent.

Death rates in this disease are much higher in the very young and in the very old than they are in middle age. The mortality rate of pneumonia in persons 70 years old is around 70 per cent.

It is also well established that alcoholism, overweight, diabetes, kidney disease, and recent surgical operations are likely to influence unfavorably in cases of pneumonia.

When a person is sick with pneumonia, certain symptoms are indications of a serious condition. Blueness of the skin, low blood pressure and suddenly falling temperature, with a rapid pulse and rapid breathing, are very bad signs. A moist tongue, ability to sleep, and to take food are good signs.

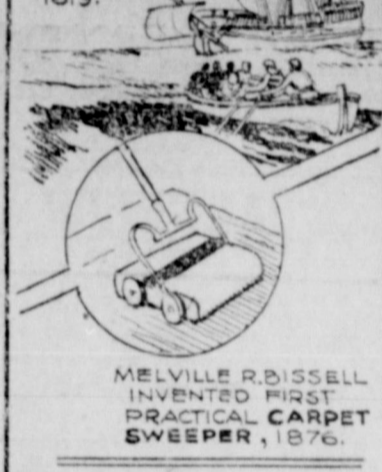

One of the most serious complications in pneumonia is a collection of infectious material in the chest cavity between the lung and the chest wall. This interferes greatly with breathing, produces considerable pain, and may result in general infection.

The doctor determines the presence of such infection by the use of X-ray and also by inserting a needle into the chest wall, to permit the infectious material to pass through the needle and thus indicate its presence. Lean persons have a better chance of recovery from pneumonia than stout ones. Temper-

Answers to Previous Questions A DUTCH man-of-war brought the slaves to Jamestown and sold 20 to the planter colonists. Although the idea of a carpet sweeper had been introduced earlier, no practical sweeper was ready until Bissell devised the "broom action" principle. In 1753 at the age of 34, Miss Colden had described 400 plants according to the Linnaean method, using English terms.

ate people are more likely to recover than the intemperate.

Although the disease tends to run a rather definite limited course, the competent doctor who can watch the symptoms, aiding the heart when occasion arises, relieving the strain on the blood vessels, supporting the breathing and controlling the sleep and comfort of the patient, may mean all the difference between life and death.

Furthermore, in this disease, perhaps more than in any other, good nursing is of utmost importance.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

BY RODNEY DUTCHER The Democrat's Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Aug. 11.—A job for giants—reform and regulation of telephones, telegraph, and broadcasting—has been taken over by the new Federal Communications Commission.

The most sensational part of its immediate duties will be investigation of the $5,000,000,000 telephone monopoly, prior to recommendations to Congress for a regulating system expected to reduce telephone rates.

The two chief phases of FCC's present task are:

1. To administer the regulatory powers over the communications industries formerly held by the Federal Radio Commission, Interstate Commerce Commission, State Department and Postoffice Department.

2. To study the industries and recommend regulatory and coordinating legislation to Congress by Feb. 1, FCC will administer such laws when they are passed.

The second phase is so huge that for the next few months the commission will be primarily a board of inquiry. There are no geniuses on the commission and its results will be achieved by plenty of hard work. Its first job will be to educate itself.

Chairman Sykes Fair and Firm

The old Federal Radio Commission, whose duties and staff FCC absorbed, smelled violently of politics and seemed a paradise for lobbyists. The new commission's broadcasting division should be watched carefully.

Eugene Octave Sykes, member of the old FRC since 1927, is chairman. He is a fair, judiciously minded Mississippian who never made any enemies—even among the lobbyists who, headed by Bob Jackson and Arthur Mullen, had many FRC cases. He knows a lot about radio.

The "strong man" on FCC probably will be Paul A. Walker, who as chairman of the Oklahoma Public Utilities Commission forced drastic reduction in electricity, gas and cotton gin rates and ably enforced the state oil pro-rata law.

He heads FCC's telephone division and is grimly set on complete investigation and strict regulation for the American Telephone & Telegraph Company.

Here, There And Everywhere

by DOROTHY B. ROBBINS

Q—What is wrong with the latest advertisement of a celebrated cigarette company?

A—Lack of timidity.

We have the young man and young lady going buggy riding, but how posed and self assured the young lady is and you might say the buggy is parked, from the way the reins are fastened in the dashboard. Young ladies of that period didn't sit in parked buggies—they kept going, and the chaperones were not far ahead. A young man of that period who suggested smoking a cigarette would have received a cold shoulder and no thanks at all. The picture is a burlesque with only the clothes and equipment correct. Another thing. Such a self assured young man should wear a real mustache, not a large dot on the upper lip—mustaches were mustaches then!

Perhaps I should be telling the cigarette makers how wrong their picture is. You have seen it, Miss of 1934, and gotten a wrong idea of your grandmother's day. Advertisements are educational and periods presented by them should be historically correct.

"If wishes were horses beggars would ride," is an old and familiar quotation, but a little magazine I know adds—"But most of us have to earn our horses." And earning puts anybody out of the beggar class—probably the earning dulls somewhat the wishing habit. Employment is a great queller for wishing, one-half our wishing is often from lack of employment. Just the brain working to a pair of idle hands. Personally, I have no objection to a beggar wishing himself a horse, especially this hot weather when there are long distances to cover between towns, but I know the principle is bad if the beggar is inclined to dishonesty for a beggar on horseback could accomplish four times as much, besides, if he knew how to wish a horse for himself he might wish other beggars on horseback. It is easy to see that earning our horses makes them really good ones.

Are people more "cranky" in a prolonged spell of heat or cold? Does one kind of weather incessantly wear away one's resistance? Dr. J. O. McReynolds of Dallas says:

Political Announcements

(The Democrat is authorized to announce the candidates of the following, subject to the action of the Democratic primary Aug. 25:

- For Sheriff: LINDSEY HILL J. N. (JOE) COLVIN For Assessor and Collector of Taxes: J. HOLT BOWNS JESSE JENKINS For County Superintendent: JOE ALLEN BALLARD Miss Vera (Tops) Gilreath For Commissioner Precinct No. 1: C. H. (Clay) MESSER W. M. (Billy) WALKER For Commissioner Precinct No. 2: A. R. McMASTER (Re-election) GROVER T. MOSS

"In the summertime people give over easily to their feelings. A person can say, 'I'm so hot' so many times that he'll soon be boiling and won't know why. But he could be out of humor just as well and still be freezing."

Dr. McReynolds thinks we try to work too many activities during the summer season. He admits there is a relation between the "activity of the human nervous system and the extremes of temperature and other climatic features. But it is the monotony of continued weather conditions that finally disturb the mental equilibrium."

"The great remedy," he says, "consists in establishing and maintaining the proper regulation of hours and character of work, and recreation, of food, drink and clothing and of all the other things that have a bearing on our physical condition."

Dr. McReynolds speaks of the people of the tropics as mild and even tempered people and those are growing some temperamental. It would hardly be considered mild to list the activities of the first zones under consideration. And the arctic people, never struck me as a very temperamental lot! My ideas have been gained from pictures, however, and arctic means Eskimo to me at one part of the world and Little America at the other, also a-n—prefixed. I don't doubt Admiral Byrd's men are growing some temperamental but the real inhabitants of those far reaches have no excessive amount of the quality. Since I think of it I feel mistaken—though the penguins and seals are a phlegmatic lot, those icebergs are temperamental, indeed, for there's really no knowing when the most material occupants of that region will be moving on. While icebergs are not breathing beings they are inhabitants—a floating population you'll admit.
