NUMBER 18.

COMMISSIONERS' COURT RECINDS WARRANT ORDER; CALLS ELECTION

Voters Will Be Given Opportunity to Authorize Bond Issue. If Bonds Fail to Carry Warrants Will Be Issued.

At a meeting of the Commissioners' Court held Tuesday the action of the court ordering an issue of $150,000 in county warrants to build a new court house was rescinded and the court on its own motion called a bond election for Saturday December 2 to determine whether or not an issue of $150,000, more or less, in bonds shall be authorized.

The order of the court has not yet been entered upon the minutes of the court, but information regarding the action of the court was given the Democrat reporter by Judge McIntosh.

The proposed bonds will run from one to thirty years and will draw 5 1/2 per cent interest. The court has a contract with H. C. Burt & Company, of Houston, to take the bonds, if voted, at par and accrued interest and a premium of $400; the buyers to pay all costs of advertising election, preparing papers and printing bonds.

Other firms bidding on the bonds were: Simpson & Company, of Dallas; and Arlitt & Company, of Austin; whose bids were less than that accepted.

In case the bonds are not authorized, Burt & Company contract to take warrants running one to twenty years and bearing 6 per cent interest at 97.85, or at par with interest at the rate of 6 1/4 per cent, as the court may decide. Bids of the other two firms upon 6 per cent warrants were 97.1 and 97.279, respectively.

Plans for the new building have not been completed and the exact cost, of course, is not known. In addition to the cost of building the cost of seating and other furnishings will have to be ascertained.

Any further information of public interest that may be obtainable will be given next week.

GEORGE PEDDY

CHAIRMAN WRIGHT RESIGNS FROM DEMOCRATIC COMMITTEE

Says Evidence Developed At Corsicana Forces Conclusion That Mayfield Should Not Go to Senate.

"I herewith tender to you my resignation for the following reasons:

"I approve the decision of the Supreme Court of Texas in answering the certified questions of the Court of Appeals at Dallas. They could do no less. But while this is true, a constitutional court in the State under the rules of law and evidence governing the trial of fact cases, did develop the evidence as to the Hon. Earle B. Mayfield's compliance with the laws of his State. Twelve questions, either by direction of the court or by the voluntary finding of the jury, were against Mr. Mayfield. I have been too long in the practice of law, I think, not to understand the probative force of evidence. I think that each of the twelve conclusions were amply justified by the evidence. Believing so, the mere fact that an officer of the State did not join in the quo warranto proceedings at Corsicana can not change my conclusions that under the laws of Texas Mr. Mayfield should not go to the United States Senate. I think your committee and that faction of the Democratic party that believe, as the great majority of your committee does believe, should have control of the executive committee. I do not believe that the United States Senate, in view of the trial at Corsicana, will seat Mr. Mayfield. I do not believe that they ought to seat him. I can not vote for Earle B. Mayfield for United States Senator. I am my own conscience keeper and must be governed thereby.

"With best good wishes personally for each member of the committee, and trusting that two years hence, when another State Democratic con-

SECRETARY OF STATE CERTIFIES MAYFIELD'S NAME FOR BALLOT

Staples Acts Hurdly on Advice of Attorney General Ordering Name on Ballot.

Austin, Texas, Oct. 28.—Without waiting for advices from the Dallas Court of Civil Appeals, but upon the advice of the Attorney General, given at 11:10 o'clock this morning, Secretary of State Staples before noon had sent telegrams to every County Judge in Texas certifying the name of Earle B. Mayfield as the nominee of the Democratic party for the position of United States Senator.

The advice of the Attorney General was given in writing and only after there had been a long conference by the Attorney General with his corps of assistants. The written advice to the Secretary of State had the postscript: "This opinion has been considered in conference of the members of the Attorney General's department and approved, and is now ordered recorded."

As soon as the opinion was received by the Secretary of State, there was much haste to send out the telegrams. A number of friends of Mr. Mayfield were in the capitol interested in the proceedings. The telegrams were filed without the Secretary of State being served with process by wire from any other court restraining him from certifying Mr. Mayfield's name.

Rube Canada of Parnell, was in town Thursday. Mr. Canada says that hogs will be scarce in this section; that stock hogs are being sold off because of the short feed crop.

At the convention meets we will have neither Klan Democrats nor independent Democrats, but just straight old Democrats as of yore, I am, yours, most respectfully.

AMERICAN LEGION ANNOUNCES PROGRAM FOR ARMISTICE DAY

All Hall County Ex-Service Men Expected and Urged to Attend; World-War Veterans Everywhere Cordially Invited.

Armistice Day will be celebrated at Memphis by a special program under the direction of the Charles Simmons Post of the American Legion.

All ex-service men in Hall county are expected and urged to attend and lend their assistance to the local post in making the celebration a success.

Many attractions and amusements will be here in connection with the three days Rodeo, under the auspices of the local post, and there will not be a dull moment for any visitor. The Rodeo opens on Thursday, November 9, and continues through Armistice Day. This Rodeo, which will be the real thing, has been widely advertised and large crowds are expected each day, but Saturday, November 11, is to be peculiarly ex-soldier's day and it is hoped that all the home boys and many visitors will be present.

The grand parade for Armistice Day will be ready to march at 10:30 a. m. and will proceed to the Hall County Fair grounds in the following order:

Order of Parade
Colors,
Memphis C. of C. Band,
Ex-Service men in uniform,
Ex-Confederates and G. A. R.,
Legion Auxiliary and U. D. C.,
Boy Scouts,
School Children,
Decorated cars and floats,
Rodeo cowboys and cowgirls.
A premium of five dollars will be paid for the best decorated car or truck in the parade.

A premium of two and one-half dollars will be paid for the best clown stunt in connection with the parade.

The Legion is very desirous that a large number of clubs and business firms enter cars and trucks in the parade contest.

It is presumed that all business houses will close from 11 a. m. until 2 o'clock p. m., as is the custom throughout the country. In this connection the Legion requests that housewives get their orders in early so that delivery can be made.

At 12 m. a one minute tribute will be paid to all deceased service men. Everyone facing the west in silent attention.

A real army-chow line will feed you on this day for the small sum of fifty cents. The net proceeds go to the Legion.

There will be a regular guard mount at 1 o'clock.

Roy Mays will entertain you the rest of the day with his wild horses and steers.

It has been noticed in previous parades that due respect is not paid to the American flag. It is expected that all civilians not in uniform remove their hats and place them on their left breast until the flag has passed. Men in uniform will stand at attention and salute.

The Legion is very anxious that this celebration be a success and we earnestly solicit the co-operation of all Memphis and Hall county people.

SUPREME COURT STAYS CORSICANA COURT INJUNCTION

Holds Court Without Jurisdiction Because Action Is Brought By Private Individuals.

Austin, Texas, Oct. 27.—The Texas Supreme Court answered, at 7 o'clock tonight, that the parties bringing suit against Earle B. Mayfield to keep his name off the general election ticket were not the proper parties. The motion for order to stay the Corsicana injunction was granted. The court held that the Thirteenth District Court of Navarro County was without jurisdiction to hear the injunction suit and that Sec. 9 of the anti-corruption law was not violative of the constitution.

Only two of the certified questions were discussed in the opinion delivered tonight, as the others hinged on the disposition of the controlling issues as presented in these two questions. These two questions were as follows:

"1. Were the appellees (King et al.) possessed of the legal capacity and have they the right to institute and maintain this suit under section 9 of chapter 88 of the acts of the Thirty-Sixth Legislature.

"2. If so, is the said section 9, in so authorizing and empowering said appellees to bring and maintain this suit in their own names or in the name of the State in violation of section 21, article 5, and section 22, article 4 of the Constitution of Texas."

It is distinctly stated in the opinion that "the answers to these questions do not in any sense bear upon the merits of the fact issues raised in appellee's pleadings, but only upon their right to bring and maintain the suit in their individual capacities, or in behalf of the State."

The court explicitly holds that it is not passing on the guilt or innocence of Mr. Mayfield in the charges that he violated the anti-corruption act in the alleged expenditure of more than the maximum campaign expense of $10,000.

POTTER HOSPITAL PLANS APPROVED

Austin, October 28.—The State Board of Health today approved the plans for the new Potter County Hospital to be built at Amarillo. Plans were presented by Guy A. Carrlander, architect, of Amarillo, in behalf of Judge Ray C. Johnson and the Commissioners' Court of Potter County.

This building was made possible through a bond issue of Potter County of $260,000. About $130,000 will be put in the building proper, the balance being used for equipment, separate nurses' home, driveway, site and landscape work.

FAMOUS COWBOYS AND COWGIRLS ARRIVING FOR MEMPHIS LEGION RODEO

Bugger Red Rogers To Be Official Judge of Contests. $2,000 in Prizes To Be Awarded.

Memphis presents the scene of a real cow-town with the many cowboys that are here to attend the American Legion Cowboy Round-Up to be held next Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Bugger Red Rogers is to be one of the official judges of the contests, the other two are to be selected later. Bugger says, "They will have to go wild to win here and they will sure have to 'win to get the money."

Among the riders are Curley Griffith and wife and son. The Griffiths are trick riders. Curley Griffith is winner of trick riding at Tex Austin's championship contest at Chicago last year. Young Griffith, only 11 years of age, is the youngest and one of the best trick riders in the rodeo world. Some of the lady riders who will take part in the different events are: Mrs. Griffith of Oklahoma, Ruth Wheat of Idaho, Lois McAnally of Texas and Reathel Rea of Colorado.

Around $2,000 in prizes will be awarded in the different contests. These contests include most every Western sport.

Considerable interest is being shown in developments through court proceedings in the senatorial race and street arguments are occasionally heard. Since the primary very little interest has been indicated locally in this race until the past few days.

SUPREME COURT DENIES ORDER TO HALT INJUNCTION GRANTED BY BLACKMON

Attorney General Denied Leave to File Writ of Mandamus to Stop Blackmon Injunction.

Austin, Oct. 30.—A petition for leave to file a writ of mandamus, filed in the Supreme Court tonight by Attorney General Keeling was overruled by the court at 8:45 tonight. The petition sought to restrain District Judge A. M. Blackmon of the Seventy-seventh District Court from proceeding with the injunction suit filed Saturday, seeking to prevent county election officials from printing the name of Earle B. Mayfield on the official ballot.

The application for leave to file petition was filed by Attorney General Keeling tonight but the nature of the proceedings was not made known until the court rendered its decision.

Secretary of State S. L. Staples this morning wired county officials to withhold printing of ballots as long as possible.

LATEST COURT CAPERS IN SENATORIAL RACE

Dallas Court of Appeals Voids Blackmon Injunction. Corsicana Injunction Still in Force.

Amid the bewildering maze of court decisions governing or attempting to govern the placing of Mayfield's name upon the election ticket the following seems to be the result up to Wednesday morning.

The court of Civil Appeals at Dallas held the Blackmon injunction forbidding the name of Mayfield upon the ticket and directed him to abstain from enjoining any defendants in this cause until final disposition of the case by the Dallas court.

Lawyers on both sides say that Mayfield is still barred from the ticket.

It is said the Navarro County injunction is still in effect and will be until the Court of Civil Appeals here disposed of a motion for a rehearing of that case filed by anti-Mayfield factions late Saturday night.

JUDGE BLACKMON GRANTS INJUNCTION AGAINST MAYFIELD

Restrains Election Officers From Distributing Ballots Bearing Mayfield's Name.

Corsicana, Texas, Oct. 28.—District Judge A. M. Blackmon of Freestone County, residing at Fairfield, at 5:30 o'clock this afternoon granted an injunction against Secretary of State Staples and all members of county boards from certifying the name of Earle B. Mayfield as a candidate for the United States Senate.

The injunction further restrained all election officers from sending out ballots carrying the name of Mr. Mayfield.

The petition for the injunction was filed by Richard Mays and W. W. Nelms, attorneys for plaintiffs in the recent hearing at Corsicana, and County Attorney L. E. Eubanks of Limestone County.

With the name of Mr. Eubanks on the petition, the ruling of the Supreme Court that the State must be a party in the suit, is complied with. The petition was signed by W. W. Nelms, Richard Mays and Luther Nickels.

Use The Home Paper

By Phebe K. Warner

Most folks seem to think all the Home Paper is for is to read. That done, it is time to tear it up, use it for wrapping paper, put it on the pantry shelves or use it for kindling. All of which are very good ways to use the back numbers. Why, if we were to keep all the back numbers of any good county paper, in less than a year we would have collected a real library containing several good stories, the cream of the political and religious news of the year, a record of the world's greatest events, and a real diary of the local doings of the entire county. But most of us are not willing to give the Home Paper room for even one short week. As a rule the life of the Home Paper is about two nights and one day. This is one reason it is the most sought publication in all this Nation. For about the time some member of the family thinks of something they wanted to save it's gone.

For this reason we are going to suggest that everybody who takes their Home Paper put up a little line behind a door somewhere and file them away for at least a month. You would be surprised how many times you would refer to its columns. And should you keep them for a whole year your home would become a real bureau of information and that pile of papers the community's encyclopedia. Then, too, if you were to see all at one time what you have received for $1.50 or whatever the price of your home paper may be for a year, you'd never again kick on the price. Instead you might be happy to pay for it in advance. If the paper alone that you receive by taking your home paper one year were laid down in your home without a letter or line on it, just the plain, blank paper would be worth its cost for conveniences around the home. But it is not this week's paper nor last week's paper that is the most interesting. It is next week's paper, the paper of the future, we are looking forward to all the time. Have you discovered the secret of interesting yourself in your home paper? If you have not, send something to it next week yourself, then count your pulse when you see the wrapper. It is not the news that thrills you most. It is the sight of what you sent. That's what makes the home paper mean something to you. To read something you already knew about yourself or your family or your farm or your school; that's worth the price of the paper for a whole year to you.

But there is still a better way to get your money back that you pay for the home paper. And this is just as true of the farmer as the business man of the town. And that is to advertise. Why does the merchant advertise? To let the country folks as well as the town folks know what he has for sale. To get rid of what he has on hand so he can get the cash to buy something else. Why should the farmer and his family advertise? For the self same reason. To let the town folks and their neighbors know what they have that they would like to sell for cash or trade for something they need worse. The home paper should be the farmer's commercial clearing house. It should be the universal counter over which the people exchange commodities. The possibilities of rural advertising have scarcely been touched. Not even the art of rural advertising has been either studied or taught. When the farm boy goes to town he sees the most artistic cigarette advertisements all over the town, on sign boards as big as the side of a barn. But what of the boy's fine pigs in the pen? What of his sister's registered chickens? Who knows about the butter and eggs; the cream and the milk on his father's farm? Does anybody know about the beans and tomatoes, or the big pumpkins that are going to waste in his mother's garden? And oh, there are so many things the mother and children and the house needs, if they only had the money that is going to waste. But no one reads their advertisement. But almost every week they answer the call of the city advertisers in their home paper or elsewhere and away goes the little cash they have to some foreign city—to get something they have never seen—because it is cheap! One of the richest advertising fields in America is the rural field and it should be cultivated and the crop harvested by the home paper. Isn't it queer that the cities will take advantage of every big tree by the side of the road—the board fences that bound the fields of grain, the bridge banisters, the rocks, if they happen to be near a road, and even the barns and hen houses of the farmer to advertise their wares, but never a word is said about what is in the barn or hen house or the field.

Mother, if you have chickens or turkeys to sell, advertise them. May be some of your neighbors would find it out and buy them before somebody steals them. The thieves know who have good chickens, and where to get them. But no one else does. Son, if you have a bushel of peanuts or pop corn to spare—advertise it. Somebody wants it.

POINTERS ON HOME MILLINERY

Mrs. Dora Russell Barnes, Clothing Specialist, Extension Service, A. and M. College of Texas.

The cool days remind us that fall is here and that all nature is putting on her new dress.

We begin to pull out our left-over garments and take an inventory of our wardrobe. When it comes to hats, we find that our old ones are good and new ones very expensive so by doing a little cleaning, reshaping and retrimming we soon have a hat which will give us more service. The following will give us a few suggestions for renovating our hats.

To Clean Felt Hats: Get a piece of number 0 sandpaper and sandpaper the hat until all spots and stains are removed. Begin at the center of top of crown and sandpaper in same direction all way around. The top of crown and the side of crown, finally around the brim. Sandpaper the under brim in the same way. Have a small block of wood about four inches long, two inches wide and one inch thick, cover it with velvet about the color of the hat to be cleaned. Rub the velvet covered block over a hot flat iron then over a piece of paraffin. The heat in the velvet will melt the paraffin and cause it to adhere to the pile of the velvet. Then rub the block over the felt exactly as you did the sandpaper, going in the same direction all the time. Rub hot velvet covered block over paraffin as often as needed.

This operation smoothes down all particles and gives a bright finish to felt.

To Clean Hatters Plush: Brush hat well then melt a little cocoa butter and apply with a soft rag. Begin at the center of the top of the crown and rub in the same direction all the time following the nap. This will give a bright finish to the hat.

To Clean White Felt Hats: Cover crown and brim with ordinary yellow corn meal and rub in with a brush having stiff bristles, or a pad made by wadding up a piece of white crinoline. Clean under brim the same way.

To Dye Quills: Save all pretty turkey, goose or chicken quills. Trim them the shape desired then color them with any hat dye as colorite, shoe polish as dyanshine or Japanese Lacquer. After dyeing the quills, they may be touched up if so desired with a little gold or silver paint.

To Dye Feathers: Ostrich feathers may be dyed by using tube paint and gasoline. Have enough gasoline to cover feathers well, add enough tube paint to make desired color. Be sure that all of the paint is dissolved. Dip feather in solution and draw lightly between fingers, then shake feather in air until dry.

If the feather is of a light shade, it is well to roll it lightly in clean corn starch. The starch gives a dressing to the feather.

Dry Tinting: Beaver hats, felt hats and heavy laces may be tinted without the use of a liquid. Use a dry corn starch. Mix paint and French chalk or corn starch the desired color and rub on article to be tinted. Lace may be creamed by putting a little yellow ochre with lace in a paper bag and shaking well.

The Izaak Walton League has inaugurated in Chicago a monthly periodical, supported by contributions from scores of Izaak Walton chapters. No one connected with the publication receives pay and a half-dozen famous novelists are contributors. It is devoted to the preservation of angling, hunting and other outdoor sports.

The American embassy, at Buenos Aires, is to be moved from over the old mattress shop, which quarters it has occupied for years, and will be installed in the new headquarters consisting of an entire house comparing favorably with the embassies and legations of eight other nations.

Germany is now a country of extremes. There are those who nearly starve and there are others living in luxury. The German government has now decreed that high taxes shall be paid by those who partake of the revelries in the Berlin restaurants. The revenues proceeding from this tax will be turned over to the committee for the feeding of the needy.

A road, a quarter of a mile long laid down in the shape of a race track at Pittsburg, California, is constructed of 13 sections, each section of a different type of concrete pavement. Forty motor trucks travel continuously over its surface. The problem is to find out which type will last the longest. It is hoped that the information obtained will more than offset the cost of the experiment.

Lenin is reported to have said, "Our Communists are often mighty fine theorists, but they are no good as far as practical labor is concerned. Our worst enemy nowadays is the Communist-orator, who is put in high positions. We must do away with agitators and propagandists,

Severe Indigestion

"I had very severe attacks of indigestion," writes Mr. M. H. Wade, a farmer, of R. F. D. 1, Weir, Miss. "I would suffer for months at a time. All I dared eat was a little bread and butter... consequently I suffered from weakness. I would try to eat, then the terrible suffering in my stomach! I took medicines, but did not get any better. The druggist recommended

Negro Killing at Tell

Sheriff Jim Crane received a telephone message Monday afternoon to go to the Perry farm, near Tell, as there had been a negro killing at a cotton pickers' shanty on the farm. Sheriff Crane left at once with Deputy Dunk Barkley.

The dead negro was known as Arthur Gray, 35, but his correct name is Arthur Bray. He was a gaint, standing about 6 feet and 5 inches, and was a yellow negro. L. C. Lewis, also colored, did the killing. Lewis gives his age as 40 years. He used a single barrel shotgun, within very short range. The load of shot struck Bray in the breast, tearing a hole as large as a man's fist.

It is said that a crowd of negroes had been at Lewis' shanty since Sunday night and that they had been gambling. Lewis claims that Bray won $150 from him. What caused the shooting is not known as the witnesses are all negroes and none tell the same story.—Childress Index.

Pittsburg, Kan., October 28.—The constitutional convention of the Kansas coal miners union today adopted a section of the new constitution which bars members of the United Miners of America, District No. 14, from joining the Ku Klux Klan. The section also bars miners' union members from membership in the I. W. W., "one big union" and several similar organizations of radicals.

HURLING OF BOTTLE AND FIRE FEATURES KLAN PROCESSION AT VERNON

Vernon, Texas, Oct. 27.—During a parade of about 450 klansmen on Main street last night a bottle, hurled by a member of the crowd, struck a mounted leader on the head, inflicting a flesh wound. The bottle is said to have contained carbon bisulphide. The parade was not interrupted, but later a number of klansmen made a search for the assailant. Second Year Home Economics
The girls of the 2nd year home economics class were quite upset and embarrassed last Tuesday morning when a number of Clarendon "pups" quietly slipped in at the door of the domestic science laboratory. The girls had never before had the pleasure of feeding pups and as these were extraordinary "pups" the girls were especially anxious to detain them, so the lesson of "Fried Oysters" was hastily changed to a candy lesson. The girls insisted that the "pups" sit on the stools and watch but the naughty things would not mind. They were soon beating eggs, lighting stoves and buttering plates, totally disregarding all rules of sanitation. When the candy was done, the "pups" refused to partake of it, as they thought the girls were doping them. However, they seemed to enjoy the home economics lesson, but to their chagrin and dismay the pups departed before the last and best act was staged, that of "dish-washing."

Greatest Mother Summons Her Children

An allegorical concept of the Red Cross in a new and striking poster for its Annual Red Cross Roll Call. Spread out before the heroic size figure is the outline of the United States with a Red Cross superimposed upon it while around its borders are sketched scenes depicting the chief activities of the Red Cross today—service to disabled veterans of the World War, disaster relief and promotion of the public health. The poster is the work of Lawrence Wilbur, a New York artist and will be displayed throughout the country during the enrollment of the Red Cross membership for 1923.

RED CROSS HEALS WOUNDS OF WAR

25,000 Disabled Ex-Service Men in Hospitals After Four Years of Peace.

CHAPTERS' FIELD OF SERVICE

Every Veteran Needing Help Gets Individual Attention of Sympathetic Workers.

When on November 11 the world halts to observe the fourth anniversary of Armistice Day, and the American Red Cross inaugurates its Annual Roll Call for the enrollment of the 1923 membership, the people of the United States may well pause to think of the unparalleled contribution to the cause of peace made by our Army and Navy in the World War. The glory of it is a common tradition; but the wounds of war remain. They are not healed in a day, in a year, nor in four years. And on Armistice Day there will be under treatment in Government hospitals over 25,000 ex-service men, broken physically by wounds, exposure, nervous strain and exhaustion incident to their service in the war.

The Government without stint is undertaking to furnish these disabled men with the compensation and medical care to which they are entitled, yet their especial care is a duty of the Red Cross. Why? Because the Government cannot handle the cases of ex-service men individually; it must handle these men in bulk under a standardized policy. The Government has neither the authority, the funds or the equipment for working out the problem of the individual man. There is where the American Red Cross finds its greatest field for service, aiding through its very active Chapters in reaching the disabled man with immediate practical help, assisting his family while his claim is emerging from the process of adjustment, furnishing articles of comfort, funds to tide over the difficult periods, the friendly touch of personal encouragement, helpful recreation and worry-dispelling amusement. It is the warm hand of sympathy and understanding which the American Red Cross extends to the majority of these disabled ex-service men, some of them friendless in the whirl of life, thousands of them with wives and children dependent upon them, and hundreds of them frequently helpless in the face of grim necessity.

2,679 Chapters Aiding Veterans

In this work, upon whose accomplishment the American Red Cross is urging a record-breaking enrollment in the Roll Call which opens on Armistice Day and closes with Thanksgiving Day, 2,679 Chapters in all parts of the country are engaged. This is 350 more than were working for ex-service men last year when approximately $10,000,000 was expended by the National Organization and the Chapters working together in harmonious unity.

For the current fiscal year National Headquarters appropriated $3,000,000.00, an increase of $365,500.84 over the amount spent for the work among ex-service men in the year ended June 30 last. Since it is estimated that the Chapters will expend close to $7,000,000 from their own funds, the grand total of Red Cross expenditures for this single year is expected again to reach the $10,000,000 mark by June 30, 1923.

Hospital and District Office Work

During the fiscal year a total of over 1,000 persons, paid and volunteer, has been engaged in Red Cross duty in hospitals or district offices of the U. S. Veterans' Bureau. An average of 8,000 new cases requires definite and particular attention each month. The demand for Chapter-made articles for hospital patients is constant.

During last year Service Claims and Information Service at National Headquarters handled 37,200 compensation and insurance claims, 24,500 allotment and allowance cases, and 9,700 miscellaneous claims. Since February, 1919, it has disposed of 64,174 allotment checks payable to veterans which the Post Office Department reported undeliverable.

The Chapter is the unit of the Red Cross organization which is accessible to every disabled veteran or his family. Between July 1, 1921, and June 30, 1922, the Chapters had reported 1,965,979 instances of service to ex-service men and their dependents, at a cost estimated from reports now at hand of more than $3,340,000.

The basis of this far-reaching work of the Red Cross is the individual needs of the disabled veteran to the end that he may obtain in his rights under the law, that his especial wants may be immediately supplied, that his own and his family's situation may be remedied happy and cheerful, and that their outlook for the future may visualize incentives for independent and fruitful effort.

Red Cross Water First Aid Makes Life-Saving Gain

More than 325 Chapters engaged in life saving or water first aid last year with the result that the American Red Cross Life Saving Corps has set a new high mark for enrollment and the number of qualified life savers developed. The influence of "learn to swim week" in many localities is reducing the water fatalities through instruction and the wider dissemination of resuscitation methods demonstrated by the Red Cross representatives. Excellent work has been done in teaching a large part of the American population how to take care of itself in the water. Growing appreciation for this Red Cross Life-Saving Service is shown by the compulsory instruction adopted in many cities for members of the police and fire departments in the prone pressure method of resuscitation.

$1,441,486 A YEAR'S DISASTER RELIEF COST

Red Cross Aided 145,000 Victims in United States—Losses Total $30,000,000.

Seventy-two disasters, with hundreds reported killed and injured, and more than 145,000 either homeless or requiring assistance, called for emergency relief measures and the expenditure of $1,441,486.36 by the American Red Cross during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, according to a statement based on the forthcoming annual report of the Red Cross. The greatest toll of life was taken by hurricane and tornado, while the overflowing of rivers, the breaking of dams and torrential rains drove the greatest number of people from their homes. The property loss was estimated at more than $30,000,000.

The year's disasters reported included twenty-six floods, nineteen tornadoes, fifteen fires, four epidemics, two theatre collapses, two bridge collapses (one an alrship), and a railway collision and a drought. Of the floods in the United States that at San Antonio, Texas, caused the greatest property loss, $6,000,000 and the high mark of fatalities, 100, while the flood in the vicinity of Vicksburg and Natchez, Miss., forced $1,000 persons from their homes.

A National Calamity

In the Red Cross disaster relief records there will probably remain for many years one calamity which touched nearly every state with a sense of horror and of loss. This was the distressing collapse of the roof of the Knickerbocker Theatre in Washington, D. C., resulting in ninety-six deaths and 125 persons injured. Situated in the center of the beautiful Northwest residential section, this motion picture theatre was patronized by many persons of prominence both in the official and civil life of the National Capital, whose family and personal connections radiated out over the entire country. The horror was intensified by a terrific snowstorm which, though it retarded, did not block Red Cross relief.

Airship Crash Finds Aid at Hand

The crash and destruction of the U. S. Army's large airship Roma in Virginia last February with the loss of 34 officers and men and 11 injured was the first disaster of its kind to call for Red Cross relief in this country. The suddenness of the accident tested the preparedness of the organization and of the Chapter at Hampton, Va., but the response was immediate and relief furnished the survivors, also funds for the expenses of relatives of the dead, who came from long distances to claim their own.

In the year's overseas record for aid rendered by the Red Cross are two fires in the Philippines, one in Manila, which destroyed 1,700 homes, with a loss of $1,500,000 and 5,000 persons made homeless, the other at Tondo, which drove 3,000 from their dwellings. In medical relief that was quick and effective the smallpox epidemic in San Domingo, which had a total of 22,000 cases with 225 deaths in a single day, tested the readiness of the Red Cross for action, and the same can be said of the San Domingo hurricane, which killed 12 persons and reduced the homes of 182 persons to wreckage. A flood in San Salvador, with a death toll of 50 and 2,000 refugees, was also effectively handled by the local Chapter of the American Red Cross.

Relief Machinery Perfected

The year has seen the further perfection of disaster relief administrative measures in every field of American Red Cross activity, and that the work may be carried on to still greater accomplishments the American Red Cross is appealing for widespread renewal of membership during the annual Roll Call, to be conducted this year from Armistice Day (November 11) to, and including, Thanksgiving Day (November 30).

Red Cross Roll Call Heard World Around

The Annual Roll Call of the American Red Cross for registration of the membership for 1923 will begin on Armistice Day, November 11, and close on Thanksgiving Day, November 30. The ground work for this stupendous task of re-enrolling the membership throughout the world has been laid in a plan for the first complete and comprehensive system of registration of the Red Cross membership in all its 8,300 active Chapters at home and abroad.

An important feature of the round-the-world Roll Call campaign will be a universal effort to re-enlist the service of war-time Red Cross workers in the peace program by their participation in the Roll Call. In this way the vast army of volunteers will once more affiliate with the work of the Red Cross in its manifold phases. Cooperation also has been assured by Government and private maritime interests in a deep-sea Roll Call that is designed to reach every member or potential member in every part of the world who may be on a voyage or temporarily in any port.

Thousands of Chapters will adopt the home canvass plan of enrollment which originated in Pittsburgh, where last year it resulted in a membership increase of 50 per cent. All records in this year's campaign will be kept on standard size cards to be filed by each Chapter for future use.

"You mean that Durand—" "I'm not namin' names," the officer interrupted doggedly. "I'm tellin' yuh somethin' for your good. Take it or leave it."

"Thanks, I'll leave it. This is a free country, and no man livin' can drive me away," answered Clay promptly. "Ouch, I'm sore. Give me a lift, sergeant."

They helped the cow puncher to his feet. He took a limping step or two. Every move was torture to his outraged flesh.

"Can you get me a taxi? That is, if you're sure you don't want me in your calaboose," the range-rider said, leaning against the wall.

"We'll let yuh go this time." "Much obliged—to Mr. Jerry Durand. Tell him for me that maybe I'll meet up with him again some time—and hand him my thanks personal for this first-class wallopin'."

brused, bleeding face there beamed again the smile indomitable, the grin still gay and winning. Physically he had been badly beaten, but in spirit he was still the man on horseback.

Presently he eased himself into a taxi as comfortably as he could. "Home, James," he said jauntily.

"Where?" asked the driver. "The nearest hospital," explained Clay. "I'm goin' to let the doctors worry over me for a while. Much obliged to both of you gentlemen. I always did like the Irish. Friend Jerry is an exception."

The officers watched the cab disappear. The sergeant spoke the comment that was in the mind of them both.

"He's the best single-barreled sport that I ever met in this man's town. Not a whimper out of the guy and him mauled to a pulp. Game as they come. Did yuh see that spark of the divvie in his eye, and him not fit to crawl into the cab? Strong, Tim. No report on this rough-house, mind yuh."

"Sure, Mike."

CHAPTER VI

Beatrice Up Stage.

If you vision Clay as a man of battles and violent death, you don't see him as he saw himself. He was a peaceful citizen from the law-abiding West. It was not until he had been flung into the whirlpool of New York that violent and melodramatic mishaps befell this innocent.

This was the version of himself that he conceived to be true and the one he tried to interpret to Bee Whitford when he emerged from the hospital after two days of seclusion and presented himself before her.

It was characteristic of Beatrice that when she looked at his battered face she asked no questions and made no exclamations. After the first startled glance one might have thought from her expression that he habitually wore one black eye, one swollen lip, one cauliflower ear, and a strip of gauze across his cheek.

The dark-lashed eyes lifted from him to take on a business-like directness. She rang for the man.

"Have the runabout brought round at once, Stevens. I'll drive myself," she gave orders.

With the light case that looked slick on strong she swept the car into the park. Neither she nor Clay talked. Both of them knew that an explanation of his appearance was due her and in the meantime neither cared to fence with small talk.

She drew up to look at some pond lilies, and they talked about them for a moment, after which her direct eyes questioned him frankly.

He painted with a light brush the picture of his adventures into Bohemia. The details he filled in whimsically. In the picturesque paraphrase of the West. Up stage on his canvas was the figure of the poet in velvetness. That Son of the Stars he did full justice. Jerry Durand and Kitty Mason were accessories sketched casually.

"I gather that Mr. Lindsay of Arizona was among those present," Beatrice said, smiling.

"I was givin' the dance," he agreed, and his gray eyes met hers.

Since she was a woman, one phase of his story needed expansion for Miss Whitford. She made her comment carelessly while she adjusted the mileage on the speedometer.

"Queer you happened to meet some one you know down there. You said you knew the girl, didn't you?"

"We were on the same train out of Denver. I got acquainted with her."

Miss Whitford asked no more questions. But Clay could not quite let the matter stand so. He wanted her to justify him in her mind for what he had done. Before he knew it he had told her the story of Kitty Mason and Durand. "I couldn't let 'im hypnotize that little girl from the country, could I?" he asked. "I suppose not." Her whole face began to bubble with laughter in the way he liked so well. "But you'll be a busy knight errant if you undertake to right the wrongs of every girl you meet in New York. Don't you think it possible that you rescued her out of a job?"

"But You'll Be a Busy Knight Errant If You Undertake to Right the Wrongs of Every Girl You Meet in New York."

The young man nodded his head ruefully. "That's exactly what I did. After all her trouble gettin' one I've thrown her out again. I'm a sure-enough fat-head."

"You've been down to find out?" she asked with a sidelong tilt of her quick eyes.

"Yes. I went down this mornin' with Tim Muldoon. He's a policeman I met down there. Miss Kitty hasn't been seen since that night. We went out to the Pirate's Den, the purple pup, Grace Godwin's Garret, and all the places where she used to sell cigarettes. None of them have seen anything of her."

"So that really your championship hasn't been so great a help to her after all, has it?"

"No." "And I suppose it ruined the business of the man that owns the Sea Siren."

"I don't reckon so. I've settled for the furniture. And Muldoon says when it gets goin' again the Sea Siren will do a big business on account of the fracas. It's Kitty I'm worried about."

"I wouldn't worry about her if I were you. She'll land on her feet," the girl said lightly.

Her voice had not lost its sweet cadence, but Clay sensed in it something that was almost a touch of cool contempt. He felt vaguely that he must have blundered in describing Kitty. Evidently Miss Whitford did not see her quite as she was.

The young woman pressed the starter button. "We must be going home. I have an engagement to go riding with Mr. Bromfield."

The man beside the girl kept his smile working and concealed the little stab of jealousy that diked him. Colin Whitford had confided to Lindsay that his daughter was practically engaged to Clarendon Bromfield and that he did not like the man. The range-rider did not like him either, but he tried loyally to kill his distrust of the clubman. If Beatrice loved him there must be good in the fellow. Clay meant to be a good loser anyhow.

There had been moments when the range-rider's heart had quickened with a wild, insurgent hope. One of these had been on a morning when they were riding in the park, knee to knee, in the dawn of a new clean world. It had come to him with a sudden clamor of the blood that in the eternal rightness of things such mornings ought to be theirs till the youth in them was quenched in sober age. He had looked into the eyes of this slim young Diana, and he had throbbled to the certainty that she too in that moment of tangled glances knew a sweet confusion of the blood. In her cheeks there had been a quick flame of flying color. Their talk had fallen from them, and they had ridden in a shy, exquisite silence from which she had escaped by putting her horse to a canter.

But in the sober sense of sanity Clay knew that this wonderful thing was not going to happen to him. He was not going to be given her happiness to hold in the hollow of his hand. Bee Whitford was a modern young woman, practical-minded, with a proper sense of the values that the world esteems. Clarendon Bromfield was a catch even in New York. He was rich, of a good family, assured social position, good-looking, and manifestly in love with her. Like gravitate to like the land over.

Bromfield, too, had no doubt that Bee meant to marry him. He was in love with her as far as he could be with anybody except himself. He wanted her—the youth, the buoyant life, the gay, glad comradeship of her—and he had always been lucky in getting what he desired. That was the use of having been born with a silver spoon in his mouth.

But though Clarendon Bromfield had no doubt of the issue of his suit, the friendship of Beatrice for this fellow from Arizona stabbed his vanity.

It hurt his class pride and his personal self-esteem that she should take pleasure in the man's society. Bee never had been well-broken to harness. He set his thin lips tight and resolved that he would stand no nonsense of this sort after they were married. If she wanted to flirt it would have to be with some one in their own set.

Beatrice could not understand herself. She knew that she was behaving rather indiscreetly, though she did not fathom the cause of the restlessness that drove her to Clay Lindsay. The truth is that she was longing for an escape from the empty life she was leading, had been seeking one for years without knowing it. Surely this round of social frivolities, the chatter of these silly women and smug tailor-made men, could not be all there was to life. She must have been made for something better than that.

And when she was with Clay she knew she had been. He gave her a vision of life through eyes that had known open, wide spaces, clean, wholesome, and sun-kissed. He stood on his own feet and did his own thinking. Simply, with both hands, he took hold of problems and examined them, stripped of all trimmings. The man was elemental, but he was keen and broad-gauged. It amazed her one day to learn that he had read William James and understood his philosophy much better than she did.

There was in her mind no intention whatever of letting herself do anything so foolish as to marry him. But there were moments when the thought of it had a dreadful fascination for her. She did not invite such thoughts to remain with her.

For she meant to accept Clarendon Bromfield in her own good time and make her social position in New York absolutely secure. She had been in the fringes too long not to appreciate a chance to get into the social Holy of Holies.

A bow-legged little man in a cheap, wrinkled suit with a silk kerchief knotted loosely round his neck stopped in front of a window where a girl was selling stamps.

"I wanna see the postmaster." "Corridy'right. Takel'vatorthir'door-left," she said, just as though it were two words.

At that the freckled-face little fellow opened wider his skin-milk eyes and his weak mouth. "Come again, ma'am, please."

"Corridy'right. Takel'vatorthir'door-left," she repeated. "Next."

The inquirer knew as much as he did before, but he lacked the courage to ask for an English translation. He shuffled away from the window and wandered helplessly, swept up by the tide of hurrying people that flowed continuously into the building and ebbed out of it. From this he was tossed into a backwater that brought him to another window.

"I wanna see the postmaster of this burg," he announced again with a plaintive whine.

"What about?" asked the man back of the grating.

"Important business, amigo. Where's he at?"

The man directed him to a door upon which was printed the legend, "Superintendent of Complaints."

"Well, sir! What can I do for you?" the man behind the big desk snapped.

"I wanna see the postmaster." "What about?" "I got important business with him."

"Who are you?" "Me, I'm Johnnie Green of the B-in-A-Box ranch. I just drapped in from Arizona and I wanna see the postmaster."

"Suppose you tell your troubles to me." Johnnie changed his weight to the other foot. "No, suh, I follow to see the postmaster himself personal."

"He's busy," explained the official. (To Be Continued Next Week)

Discussions in the Mayfield case in Corsicana have brought out much evidence of a damaging character against Mr. Mayfield and this is going to cause many votes to go against the gentleman on November 7th. Thousands of men and women have been convinced that the Ku Klux candidate has committed perjury and that he swore falsely in making out his report of campaign expenses. His membership in the Klan has been established by his own statement, for the first time, and that will cost him other thousands of votes, for they will not believe that story about resigning prior to entering the race.—Childress Post.

Perhaps you have supposed (and what the newspapers have not said justifies your having supposed that) the 5-5-3 Naval treaty, the much boasted result of the Washington Limitations of Armament Conference is being carried out in all its provisions by the supposed signatories of the compact. "This treaty," says Mr. Elihu Root, "dispelled the cloud of war, re-established mutual confidence and kindly feeling...relieved the tax-burdened world of great burdens, and added another substantial contribution by America to the peace of the world."

Just so. But there's a scarcity of facts here that's comparable with the scarcity of coal in poor folks' bins.

Of course, the facts of the matter are that neither France nor Italy has signed the treaty, which leaves it inoperative; and that Great Britain and Japan have accepted the compact "in principle" only. Our Secretary of the Navy, Edwin Denby, announces that such being the case this country, of course, cannot observe the conditions and that our carrying out of the stipulations of the treaty necessarily are postponed. And that's the end of that attempt to end war.

And so when you are told by some political spell-binder that you have been relieved of immense tax burdens through the consummation of this treaty, just recite the facts to him. He probably will be as surprised to learn them as possibly you are now.—The Dearborn Independent.

It's all very fine talk about supporting the home town newspaper, and feel a thrill of pride in ones advertising displayed therein, but it requires many hard cold dollars to keep it adequately supported. And a funny thing about advertising, instead of "keeping up the newspaper"

PEDDY SPEAKS TO LARGE AUDIENCE AT CHILDRESS

Says Speaker is Orator of Unusual Ability. Sincerity Impresses His Hearers.

When the Hon. George Pedy arose to begin his scheduled address to Childress voters Saturday night, he was greeted by one of the largest audiences ever assembled at the La Grande Theatre. So far as could be observed, every seat was taken, many stood in the aisles, and the doorways were filled, while many stood on the walks about the doors. Manager Phipps said there must have been near 800 in the house and it is said that hundreds turned away when they saw the crowded condition, so the Dallas News correspondent was probably not far wrong when he reported the attendance at more than 1,000.

As Mr. Pedy passed around to the stage he was greeted by a hearty hand clapping and when he appeared on the stage there was another generous greeting, showing that the audience was already heartily in sympathy with him. Judge M. J. Hathaway introduced Mr. Pedy in a very short talk, during which he made reference to some of the late developments in the Mayfield legal proceedings. On the stage with the speaker were some half dozen well known Democrats. On calling the house to order, Judge Hathaway requested Rev. Geo. A. Curlee to offer a word of prayer, which was done in a becoming manner.

Once upon the floor, the speaker lost no time in getting down to the business of the engagement. He rehearsed the occasion and the manner of his nomination and the many epithets the Mayfield people are saying about him, such as bolter, welcher and bitter-ender. Confessing himself bitter of the latter, he justified it by saying that, regardless of political lines or names, he would always be found working for the safety and perpetuity of his country and that when it came to such an extremity as now faces the people of Texas and the nation he was willing to be called a bitter-ender.

Throughout his splendid address, Mr. Pedy stressed the point that Mr. Mayfield is not the nominee by the free and untrammelled voice of the Texas Democracy but that his nomination was first made behind locked doors and under oath by a secret organization, each member of which was solemnly bound by oath to support the action of the main body.

He related particularly how the five titans of the Ku Klux Klan met in Austin with Mr. Mayfield for the purpose of choosing which of three klansmen candidates they should select for their concentrated vote. Here a disagreement arose and it was decided to submit the question to a vote of the klansmen of the state, despite the insistence of Mr. Mayfield, who wished the five titans to make a decision at once, feeling sure he would receive the nomination.

From Austin the matter was carried to Dallas and from there ballots sent out all over the state to the several klans, the final conclusion being that a decision was reached that every klansman in Texas should support Mr. Mayfield. Thus Mr. Pedy claims that Mayfield was made certain of the nomination long before the first primary election and he argues that because of this oathbound, secret nomination, by which the will of the Texas Democracy was thwarted and rendered of no effect, the voters of Texas are not morally bound to vote for the so-called nominee in the November election. He says the people may safely and wisely disregard what he calls the democracy of the mob and vote for a nominee who was selected in the broad light of day with the doors wide open.

On the subject of bolting the nomination of the party, Mr. Pedy asserted that similar action had been taken on different occasions by such illustrious citizens as Woodrow Wilson, Theodore Roosevelt, Gov. Hogg, and even Mayfield himself, that there are times for bolting and this is one of them.

Discussing Mayfield's membership in the Klan, Pedy said that all thru the two long campaigns it had been found impossible to get an expression from the gentleman and that to the best of his ability he had kept the secret until last Saturday. On that day, on the witness stand in the district court at Corsicana, Mayfield had been compelled to answer the momentous question. He stated that he had been a member of the Austin Klan but had resigned in the latter part of last January before announcing for the U. S. Senate. In this same connection Mr. Mayfield stated that he had visited several Klan meetings in different parts of the state, one of which was in Dallas. On Monday it was sworn by a klansman in the same court that Mayfield had visited the Dallas Klan three times, making speeches each time.

Out side of the items mentioned above, Mr. Pedy's Childress speech was quite similar to those delivered at other points. All who heard him agree that he is an orator of unusual power. He speaks with perfect ease at all times, his words and phrases are well chosen and his delivery is easy and yet powerful. His transparent sincerity and fairness in all he says appeals strongly to all the people. Without bitterness at any time, he yet finds a way to send in many sledge hammer blows against the vulnerable defenses of his opposition.

From all evidences, the Childress audience was almost 100 per cent for Pedy. Very few klansmen appeared on the scene, seemingly. The order was perfect and so far as was noted all were delighted with the speech and the speaker. They listened with rapt attention for almost two hours and were at all times generous with their applause.

The speaker closed by an appeal to all voters to carefully think over the matter and do their voting with their conscience as their guide, and that such had always been the rule, he would not ask anyone more. He wants their votes but does not want any voter to vote for him whose conscience indicates should do otherwise.—Childress Post.
