Judge A. S. Moss and Sam J. Hamilton were appointed by the county commissioners court as presiding judges of the beer election. Judge Moss will preside over box No. 13, and Mr. Hamilton will have charge of box No. 1.

Jim Webster, J. F. Forkner and David Fitzgerald were appointed by the commissioners court as assistant judges to aid Judge Moss. W. P. Watts, H. A. McCanne and W. B. Funk were designated by the court as assistant judges to Mr. Hamilton.

In addition to the judges, four clerks will be used at each box. The clerks are yet unnamed.

WHY MOTHERS GET GRAY.

DONNA of the BIG TOP by BEULAH POYNTER

BEGIN HERE TODAY

When Donna is injured by a fall from the trapeze Madeline arranges for her to be taken to GRANDFATHER SIDDAL'S farm to recuperate. To please her partner Donna pretends to be Madeline. She falls in love with BILL SIDDAL, Madeline's cousin, and though she is ashamed of deceiving Bill and Grandfather she is afraid to tell the truth.

Meanwhile Madeline, who has married CON DAVID, the animal trainer, is killed. Con knows of Donna's deception and decides to blackmail her. He comes to the nearby town and Donna agrees to meet him. She departs, telling Bill she is going to a neighbor's.

Bill grows anxious because she is gone so long. He finds an anonymous letter written by Mrs. Planter telling him that Donna has gone to meet Con. He has just finished reading the letter when Donna arrives.

Donna keeps her appointment with Con and he threatens to cause trouble for her. She reaches home just as Bill has finished reading the anonymous letter. Donna tells him she was at the neighbors'. He knows she was not.

CHAPTER XLIII

Con's surprise was genuine. "An anonymous letter?" he repeated. "I don't understand."

"Perhaps you will when you read it." Bill tossed the letter on the table. His eyes did not leave the other's face as he read the message. Then Bill asked, "What about it?"

"Well—what about it?"

"Did my wife meet you yesterday?"

Con drew a cigaret from his pocket and held a lighted match to it. "You haven't questioned her?" he asked.

"I said I came to you. Did she meet you?"

"Yes."

"Why?"

"If I were you I'd ask her."

"I'm not asking for advice but information. Why did she meet you?"

"Because I sent word for her to."

"What right have you to ask my wife to meet you secretly?"

"As good a right as you have to demand an explanation from me."

"That's no answer."

"It's all you'll get—now."

Bill's fists clenched. He felt an almost irresistible impulse to smash his fist into the handsome, mocking face before him. "I don't know the code your kind lives by," he said thickly, "but the day Madeline left the circus she was through with you and your standards. She's my wife now. She'll live according to my principles and they don't include relations with other men."

"Yeah?"

"If you value your skin you'll pack up and leave this town on the first train."

"And if I don't?"

"I'll find some means to see that you do."

"Strong arm stuff, eh? Better consult Madeline before you do anything she wouldn't like."

"Why, damn you!" Bill lunged forward but Con dodged the blow. He laughed and the laugh was like a whip lash in Bill's face—a confirmation of all the doubts that had been gnawing at his heart since the night before.

"If you don't want a dirty scandal that you'll be sorry for, you'd better keep your temper," the animal trainer snarled. "And that's no idle threat! I know she's played you for a sucker and that you're innocent of the whole mess, but if you get nasty I can, too. I've kept my mouth shut but if you rile me, by God I'll drag her into court and let the devil pay the bill!"

His words staggered Bill. They were utterly incomprehensible. A scandal—yes, that would wreck his life and Madeline's. But what was this threat about court?

"You think you married a pure little ice maiden," Con went on relentlessly, his anger mounting at the scorn he read in the other's face. "So honest that—"

Bill's hand caught the neck of Con's robe. He shook the animal trainer until his teeth rattled.

"That will do," he repeated, surprised at the sudden onslaught, Con stumbled back against the wall, knocking over the suitcase bench on which rested an open face. "So honest that—"

valise. The contents, including a rolled document tied with blue ribbon, tumbled to the floor.

Black eyes narrowed to mere slits. Con's lips became a crimson gash in a pasty white face. "Ask her who Madeline Siddal married in Louisville before 2000 witnesses," he gasped explosively. "Ask her about the ceremony in the 'big top.' Ask her the name of the man who stood up with her!"

Revulsion swept over Bill. For a second the other man's insinuations passed unheeded. Then slowly it dawned upon him that Con had said something of vital importance, something that shook the whole structure of his marriage.

"What do you mean?" he stammered.

Con flung back his head, laughing tauntingly. "Madeline Siddal married me! Get that? She married me in the arena—"

"That's a lie!"

"Is it! Ask her! Ask your lily-white bride. She can't deny it. That's why she came when I sent for her!" He stooped and snatched up the rolled paper, flipped off the ribbon and dangled the certificate before Bill's eyes. "See the names? Madeline Siddal and Conrad David?"

Bill gave a strangled cry, flung open the door and dashed down the hall. He swayed like a drunken man. He had been prepared for anything but this. The enormity of it sent him a bit insane. At the foot of the stairs he hesitated, weighing the advisability of returning and choking the life out of the animal trainer or going back to the farm and killing his wife.

His wife—but she wasn't his wife! She was the wife of that yellow-faced scoundrel who had known she had married another illegally and done nothing about it. The woman he had loved and trusted was a cheat, a bigamist. But for that damned paper he would never have believed it!

He did not see the gaunt figure at the end of the passage who stood watching him with voracious eyes and a smirking smile. When she called his name he turned automatically, without knowing that he did so.

"Bill Siddal! It's me—Miss Planter. You seen him?"

"What?"

"You seen that circus feller?"

"What do you know about him?"

"Everything. I sent you the letter. Did you get it? I was afraid to sign my name, but now that you know about him, I don't care. I reckon everybody will be knowing now. Such things can't be kept hid. I was trying to save you. If you're a-follower her yesterday mebbe you caud a-stopped talk."

He stared at her dully. It is doubtful if he heard anything she said. He was thinking of other things: his wife in a littleingham dress, sleeves rolled to the shoulder and her bare arms plunged into a flour bin; her first attempt to bake a cake; Madeline bending over Grandfather's bed her fingers soothing the snowy hair back from an aching temple. Madeline feeding the chickens, the wind blowing through her copper curls, her cheeks flushed, her eyes sparkling.

He saw her as she had looked the first day he wheeled her out to the garden in the chair. And he saw her in the vine-covered church, her eyes lowered, her face so earnest, her mouth so sweetly tremulous as she whispered "Yes," to the question, "Do you take this man to be your husband?"

All the time she had had a husband. Bill passed a shaking hand over his forehead. It was moist with perspiration.

"I knowed it a long time ago," continued the harsh, old voice.

HOW BIG A LUBRICATING JOB A QUART OF OIL DO?

HERE is a record of motor protection and low consumption that conclusively proves how big a lubricating job a quart of oil can do. Six strictly stock cars, with one fill—five quarts only—of six different, nationally advertised motor oils were run to "destruction" at the Indianapolis Speedway under AAA Supervision. Under exactly similar conditions the cars were operated until their motors failed. Here is the result: Oil No. 4 went 1713.2 miles; Oil No. 6 went 1764.4 miles; Oil No. 5 finished 1815.9 miles; Oil No. 1 completed 2266.8 miles. Oil No. 3 totalled 3318.8 miles. Oil No. 2, New and Improved Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil, piled up the amazing total of 4729 miles! That was 3000 miles farther than the first oil to go out, and 1400 miles farther than the last oil to fail.

Such demonstrated superior qualities of greater film strength, ability to withstand increased heat, resistance to dilution—such proved performance should guide your future oil purchases. Be safe—look for the Red Triangle Sign.

Here are the representatives of the contest board of the American Automobile Association who supervised every detail of the test and attested to the records made.

Methodists Drop Contest To Christians In Close Softball

Strongest Outfield Promised By Owl Club For Today's Encounter

The Memphis Owl baseball club will have its strongest outfield at work this afternoon when they clash with the Lefors Col-Tex Gas-oilners at Fair Park. The game has been called for 3:30 o'clock.

With the return of Jack Lindsey who will take his old position at third, and with Stewart again in the outfield, the far positions should be protected today better than ever before this season.

Today's game will be no set-up for either crew. The visitors come with a string of victories to their credit, including the Pampa Road-runners, who have scored one in this season over the local line.

In addition to his re-inforced outfield, Manager Jack Boone has announced that today's batteries for the Owls will consist of Buck Whitfield and young Simms. Such a combination will add further to the strength of the local line-up.

Admission to the game will be 25 cents.

Games For Tomorrow May Cause Mix-Up Junior Circles

The indomitable Caddies have three games to play tomorrow in the Junior softball loop. One of them is a game that was postponed from Wednesday.

The league will play four games in all tomorrow. Only two were scheduled, but another postponement caused the total to rise to four. Two of the games are being played in the morning, and two in the afternoon. All the games will be played on the West Ward diamond.

Following is the complete schedule for tomorrow, which, when played, will have left no games behind in schedule:

- 9:30—Musicians vs. Caddies.
- 10:30—Caddies vs. Loafers.
- 5:30—Young Baptists vs. Caddies.
- 6:30—Young Baptists vs. Musicians.

This arrangement is being made in order that each team will be able to play at the time most advantageous, and that as little confusion as possible will arise. The home team is listed last in each case.

WEEK OF PLAY IN SOFTBALL TO CLOSE

Methodists, Baptists Will Close Week This Afternoon

This afternoon in the Sunday School Softball League, the week will be ended with a game between the Methodists and the Baptists. The Methodists are hosts. The game will be played at about 6:30. It has possibilities of being a real game, so far as competition is concerned. A win for the Baptists would push them one half of a game ahead of the Presbyterians, with whom they are tied for the lead.

A Methodist victory would remove the club from the cellar and give them a thin chance to win the championship.

If the Methodists are unlucky enough to lose, it will mean that they will drop a half game behind the Christians.

It has been observed of late that not nearly so large crowds are gathering for the games now as the first games attracted. The public is urged to come out and see these contests. They are really snappy affairs, when played by snappy fielders and batters, and are generally tight enough to be interesting to all.

Memphis Barbers Are Victors Over Local Mechanics

The Memphis Barbers downed the local Mechanics yesterday afternoon at Fair Park Field at 6 o'clock in a closely contested baseball game.

There was some dispute as to the final score, but it was finally agreed by most of the players that the score was 8 and 6 in favor of the Barbers.

Paul Blevins and Lloyd Byars did the mound duties for the Barbers. Ross Springs hurled for the Mechanics.

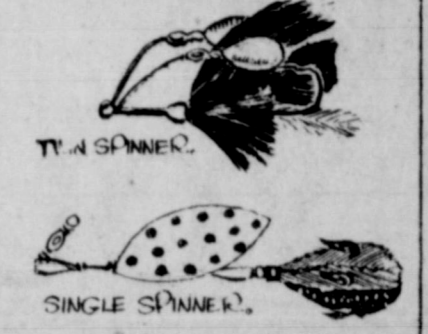

The Barbers are slated to play a game with the local "fats", a team that has been attracting much attention in this section of late. The game will be played some time next week.

SPINNERS BEST GENERAL BAIT IN TAKING BASS BY JIMMY DONAHUE
NEA Service Sports Writer

We often have been asked what is the best all-round artificial bait casting lure for bass. While this question is a bit difficult to answer, we select the spinner as the universal lure.

This lure, combining a flashing piece of moving metal, and made in conjunction with zucqtails and feather combinations, has all the appeal of the ideal artificial. After all, a bass must be attracted to a lure before he'll show any interest. The flashing blade does this. Then, it must always resemble something to eat. The trailing bucktail or feather unit does this trick.

Most plugs combine these features. They generally are equipped with metal mouthpieces or revolving blades that flash in the water, thereby attracting the fish. Their resemblance to minnows or a mouse furnishes food appeal.

Most spinners are fish takers. They come with one or two blades, in twin spinner style riding on each side of a bucktail, in June bug type, or ahead of a single hook lure to which pork rind is attached.

Pork rind is an excellent added attraction to a spinner. Its sinuous motion in the water is tanta-

One death in every three in New York, says a report, is due to lack of medical care. The doctors will have to explain the other two.

Were the first two runs, scored by Turkey, in the celebration day game here Tuesday, between that team and the Memphis Owls, earned or unearned? And was Clifford Stewart's fly over the right field fence in the third inning of that game "suspiciously like a home run," as stated by this paper?

In other words, was Turkey's team, and Umpire H. G. Blalock of Turkey criticized and misrepresented unjustly?

This is the basis of a letter of disapproval received late yesterday afternoon by the sports department of The Democrat.

The letter was written and signed by Mr. Blalock, who states that Turkey was misrepresented, and that Blalock himself was criticized without cause.

Mr. Blalock writes that the first two runs, scored in the second inning, were earned, in this wise: two men got on base by clean hits (Which was admitted by the sports writer). Then the next man up that inning tripped, scoring the two.

This triple is what The Democrat writer did not admit. The batter in question was Van Meter. The Democrat writer says that Van Meter singled to right field, where Clarence McBride miscued it, allowing the men to score, and

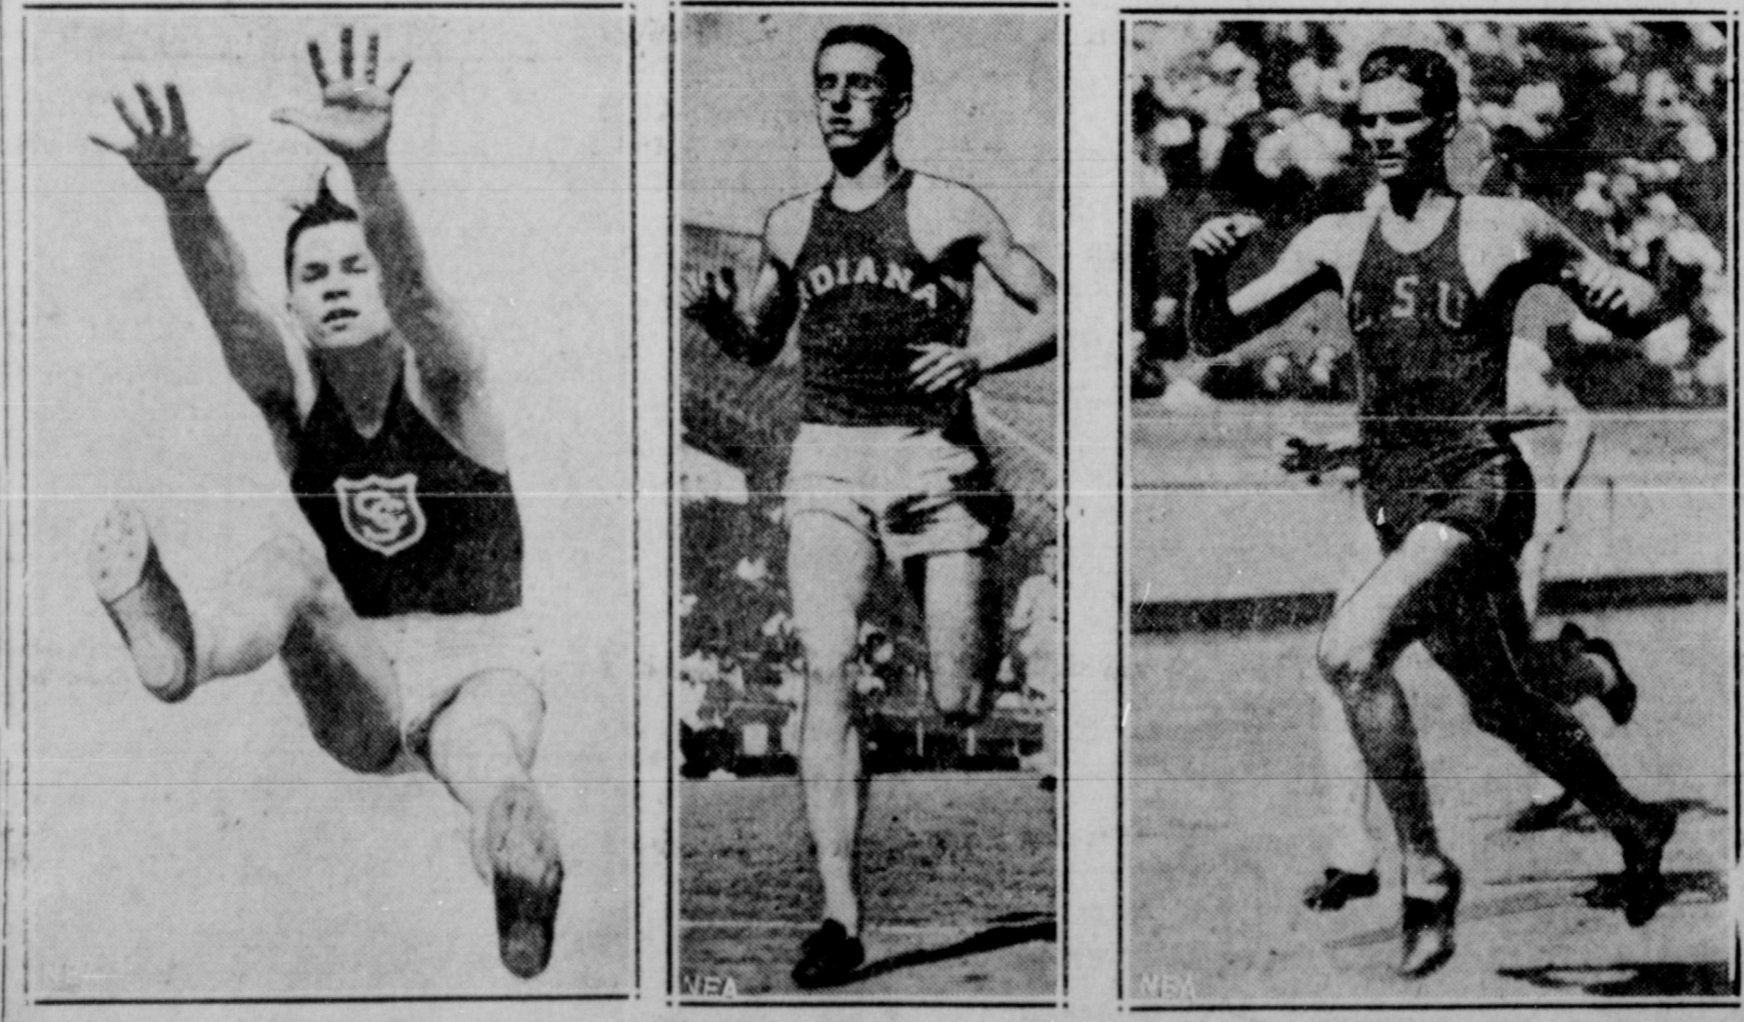

Umpire Of Memphis-Turkey Contest States Views On Democrat Write-Up

Concerning Blalock's calling of the Stewart fly, The Democrat stated that it looked "suspiciously like a home run." Now, there are a number of fans who will back this up. However, it will be noticed that the umpire was not attacked for his decision. He was justified in calling it as he saw it. The Democrat scribe saw it as a four-base hit, landing in fair territory beyond the fence.

The sports writer admitted, in a reply to Mr. Blalock, that he was in error at least in part, and assured him that he did not wish ill feeling to arise because of the incident. The Democrat, and the city of Memphis, join the writer in extending to the Turkey lads an invitation to play with the Owls, either here or there, at any time that can be arranged, and in assuring them fair treatment.

That beer will continue to be bootlegged in Memphis just as long as people continue to buy it and encourage bootleggers in their unlawful practice.

That it is logical and right to divert the revenue from illegal sources into legal channels, thereby benefitting the treasuries of the city, county, state and nation.

That since beer is now being sold in one part of the county as well as all around us, it behooves Memphis to protect its own interests and vote FOR the sale of 3.2 beer.

If this argument sounds reasonable to you, and if you join us in our belief that tomorrow's election will decide a matter of good business rather than a moral issue, then we urge you to go to the polls and join us in voting for the sale of 3.2 beer in Memphis.

NOTICE TO PUBLIC

Any erroneous reflection upon the character, standing or reputation of any person, firm or corporation, which may appear in the columns of this paper, will be gladly corrected upon due notice of same being given to the editor personally at the office at 617 Main Street, Memphis, Texas.

DON'T FORGET TO VOTE

MATTERS of public concern should always have our closest attention. Tomorrow Memphis will decide whether the sale of 3.2 beer will be permitted or denied within its corporate limits.

It is the plain duty of every voter to exercise his franchise at this election. To ignore this obligation means only to encourage an already too prevalent inclination to "let George do it" in matters pertaining to government and civic welfare. Lack of interest in small things concerning our social welfare will soon grow to include a dormant attitude in matters of grave importance—a situation that has been known to shake the very foundation of many a nation.

Vote your convictions, but by all means—VOTE.

BELATED CREDIT

IN a recent editorial headed "Credit Where Credit Is Due" The Democrat called the attention of its readers to the important part J. Henry Read, J. A. Whaley, S. T. Harrison and other members of the cotton reduction committee played in increasing Hall County's cotton production allowable from 27,000 bales to 31,556 bales.

One man who worked side by side with the three aforementioned was overlooked. He is Hall County's enterprising agricultural agent, James A. Jackson. Mr. Jackson entered the fray with sleeves rolled high and a grim determination that refused to accept defeat. None of his duties as a government employee, or a county employee for that matter, required the concerted action that he employed. Nevertheless, he devoted untold hours of his time to the problem and made trips to College Station and Austin in his own car and at his own expense in order that the interests of the county might best be served.

The Democrat apologizes not so much to Mr. Jackson, who is a modest, unassuming scholar and a gentleman, as it does to its readers for failure to turn the spotlight on a faithful servant who should share the honors in this fine piece of work.

FOR FAILURE OF A TRUST

A FEDERAL court jury in New York has convicted Joseph W. Harriman of misapplication of funds and other misdeeds in connection with the failure of the Harriman National Bank and Trust Co. The verdict simply confirms the widespread public belief that one of the factors leading up to our late lamented banking crisis was the personal failure of some of the bankers as individuals.

To be sure, it would be exceedingly unjust to blame the whole banking debacle on shortcomings such as those of which Mr. Harriman stands convicted. There was a vast number of contributory causes, and many bankers of complete probity saw their banks collapse through no fault of their own.

Nevertheless, it remains true that the era culminating in the banking holiday of 1933 was marked by many instances in which bankers forgot their duty to their depositors and to the public at large. The Harriman verdict is a reminder that in at least some of these cases the bankers can be held accountable.

Someone wrote once: "I have lived a long time, and have had a great many troubles, most of which never happened." All is not well with us, by any means, but a comparison of things as they are with things as they were about the time Franklin D. Roosevelt moved into the White House ought to make us realize that we are, in truth, "on our way" to better times.—The Childress News.

It is a significant sign that executives in all lines of industry are continually stressing the need for stimulating home-building, as well as other types of construction. Nothing would do more to speed recovery. "Build ourselves into prosperity" is a nexcelent slogan to remember.—Quana Tribune Chief.

If it were not for all the industrial quarrels between employers and employees the present industrial and economic improvement could be counted on as permanent. But strikes and lockouts are to be feared because they may upset most of the good work that has been accomplished through the Roosevelt leadership and the patriotic response and wholehearted cooperation given the President by the public. The country is getting better and better every day, in every way.—The Tulia Herald.

MUST BE TOO BUSY TO LOOK AT THE CALENDAR

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
The Democrat's Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON, June 29.—The assistant secretaryship of agriculture left vacant by Dr. Tugwell looked good to a couple of fellows.

Both are uncomfortable in their present surroundings—Dr. M. L. Wilson, director of the subsistence homestead program, and Assistant Secretary of War Harry Woodring.

Wilson who will get the job, is under Secretary of the Interior Ickes. And Ickes gets on Wilson's nerves. Two able, honest men, they haven't really ever quarreled. But Wilson will be a lot happier when he gets back with his old friends at AAA.

Woodring former governor of Kansas, never could get along with the generals here. He didn't take them as seriously as they expect to be taken by their civilian superiors and perhaps affronted some of them.

Certain members of the general staff helped develop the material purchases scandal which brought a grand jury's investigation, when things looked bad for Woodring. Nothing happened to Woodring at the grand jury's hands. He then cleared himself before an investigating House committee and turned the tables by naming Brig. Gen. Benny Foulois, chief of Air Corps, to the mast.

The Committee, which had expected to "get" Woodring, was rather surprised to find itself unanimously charging Foulois with dishonesty, and demanding his dismissal.

Just the same, Woodring knew the generals were after him and he yearned to get away. He made a strong bid for Tugwell's old job losing out partly because Secretary Wallace isn't adding any politicians to his staff.

Original Brain Truster
Wilson, one of the original brain trusters, and father of the domestic allotment plan, helped start the AAA program. He has had plenty of "dirt farming" experience and worked closely for years with farmer leaders. He will strengthen the already strong AAA A set-up.

He took charge of the Subsistence Homesteads Division last year and proved himself no great shakes as an organizer, but a whiz of a subsistence homestead expert. He homesteaded once in Montana, himself.

A pure scientist, he nevertheless showed himself a genius at handling homesteaders. He differed strongly with Ickes when the latter sought to organize the homesteads as straight federal projects.

Wilson wanted local corporations, as more likely to draw local support. Mrs. Roosevelt backed him, but Ickes overruled them.

HEALTH

BY DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN

Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygeia, the Health Magazine
Your eye is the most delicate organ in your body. Therefore, it requires more attention than any other part of the body.

In most of us, the eyes change as we grow older. Yet far too many people fail to consider the changes that take place in the eyes, because these changes are so gradual we are not aware of them.

To determine just how much attention American people give to their sight, investigators for the United States Public Health Service looked into the records of almost 9000 families in 130 cities of 18 states for one year.

The figures show quite definitely that we do not have our eyes examined as often as we should. Up to 50 years of age more women than men have defective vision. Along about middle life the eye begins to lose its ability to see perfectly, and these changes begin earlier among women than among men.

It has been found that the height of the family income bears some relationship to the amount of care given the eyes. Naturally, persons with larger incomes pay more attention to their sight than do those with small incomes, which is probably one of nature's little jokes, since the persons with small incomes need good sight more than do those with larger incomes.

Moreover, those in professional business, or clerical occupations pay more attention to their sight than do laborers.

For years the medical profession has been urging physical examination at least once a year for every person who wants to find defects of the body at the earliest possible moment, and in this way to give them some sort of control.

The figures show that those persons who have regular physical examinations are also intelligent about their eyes, since a far greater number of this class had a good examination of their vision once each year.

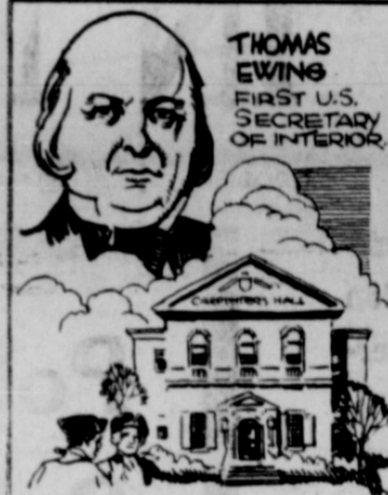

As an indication of how badly a considerable number of people need proper attention to their sight, the fact was established that 80 per cent of those who had examinations of the eyes found that they needed glasses.

You should have your eyes examined properly at least once each year, particularly after mid-
