Affiliation Awarded On Year's Work; To Seek More Units

LAKEVIEW, April 12.—The Lakeview High School has received 15 1/2 affiliated credits, according to an announcement made by Bryan Dickson, deputy state superintendent of public instruction, after two visits here during the school year. Credit was granted in the following units: English, three units; history, two; mathematics, three; home economics, one; science, three; civics, one-half; commercial law, one-half; typing, one-half; Spanish, two. Other credits pending are: Texas history, one-half; home economics, one; economics, one-half, and vocations, one-half. The accrediting of the local schools assures graduates entrance into any Texas university. At the time Lakeview was chosen as one of the four central high schools of Hall County, the school did not offer any accredited work. Last spring the board of education made plans toward improving the standard of the work offered by the school system. Only those teachers who could meet the new state requirements for the securing of affiliation were elected this year. Because it is necessary to secure two units in English before other work is inspected, much stress was placed upon this department; however, other subjects were not neglected. The teachers and pupils spent many hours trying to meet all of the requirements. On his two visits here, Mr. Dickson inspected the work carefully. Next year, the school plans to apply for additional credits in order that the pupils may have more choice in the selection of the subjects they wish to pursue.

About 50 Seeking School Head Post Here; Board Meets

Between 40 and 60 applications for the position as superintendent of Memphis schools have been received by officials of the new board. Trustees in meeting last night decided that applications for teaching position would not be considered until after the selection of a superintendent. No announcement was made in regard to the selection of a superintendent.

BEGIN HERE TODAY MILLICENT GRAVES, secretary to GEORGE DRIMGOLD, finds her employer in his office dead. Millicent has a notebook in which Drimgold had begun to dictate a confession. In panic she rushes away, registers at a hotel under an assumed name. JARVIS HAPP, a stranger, offers to help her. He sends her to a beauty shop where she is transformed into a brunette, then takes her home, introducing her as his secretary. She meets the Happ's son, NORMAN, his stepson, ROBERT CAISE, and MRS. HAPP.

orthodox type of questions. "What do you mean by the orthodox type of questions?" He laughed and said, "The kind I seldom ask. What do you think of Vera Duchene?" "Yes, I think I do." "There's nothing in common between you and Miss Duchene, is there?" "Nothing whatever." "Then, looking at the problem from an impartial standpoint, it would appear that either Miss Duchene was trying to hide the dress in order to shield you, or because she had discovered some piece of information which was damaging and wanted to use it as a club over you. Naturally, if she disclosed her information, it ceased to be something she could use as a club. How's that for a guess?"

She did not answer him, but he laughed and said, "You really don't need to answer. I can read the answer in your face. Now then, suppose you tell me what it was that Vera Duchene was trying to force you to do." "You're having such success answering your own questions," Millicent said, smiling, "that I don't see there's anything for me to say." "I would prefer to have you tell me." "Why?" "I don't know." "Just a feeling that you don't want to snitch on some other person?" "I can fight my own battles," she said saavagely. He shook his head slowly. "No," he said, "you can't. I think you've been trying to fight too many of your own battles already. I think you've tried to keep your own counsel, and I don't think you've had enough confidence in the police. Suppose you tell me your story now from the beginning." She clamped her lips and shook her head. "You won't?" "No." "Why not?"

There is a knock at the door and a voice says, "It's Sergeant Mahoney." NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXIV Millicent hesitated only long enough to push the pieces of paper under the corner of the carpet. Then she got to her feet and crossed to the door. She opened it and said, "Come in, Sergeant Mahoney." A man of perhaps 34 or 35 years of age, with sympathetic brown eyes, bushy black eyebrows, a well-formed, smiling mouth, high cheekbones, broad shoulders and slender waist, bowed with just that degree of politeness which indicated that his call was official, that he was aware of the amenities of the situation, but that his primary purpose was to uncover a murderer. "You're Millicent Graves?" "Yes." "You knew Harry Felding, the dead man?" "I had seen him, that was all." He shot the next question at her with the impact of a blow. "Who killed him?" "I'm sure," she said, "I couldn't tell you." "Know anything about what was happening here last night?" "I'm afraid I can't tell you very much." He crossed to a chair, smiled at her, and said, "Mind if I sit down?" "Not in the least." "Care if I smoke?" "Not at all." "Will you join me?" "No, thank you." "Don't smoke?" "Sometimes, but not now." He sat, watching her for a few moments with a quizzical expression on his face. He lit a cigaret and the blue smoke seeped from his nostrils, curling upward so that his eyes seemed to stare intently at her from a blue haze. "I can see," he said, "that you're all primed to answer the

Abson Says Coalition Government Is Our Salvation

EVERY ENDS REFORM MOVEMENT

Administration Has Sight of Its Objective

...ing momentum. In spite of the President's happy smile, his legislative program is not going so well. For the first time in three sessions, Congress refuses to rubber stamp legislative measures. The tremendous and unwieldy democratic majority has finally begun to get out of hand. Senators and Congressmen are being flooded with letters from their constituents violently protesting against further reform legislation at this time. The truth of the matter is that the whole nation is sick of reform and wants recovery. The New Deal has come to a fork in the road and must decide which path it will not take.

Congress has now been in session for more than three months and has not yet given the country its opinion on the following all-important measures: (1) Continuation of the NRA, (2) extension of the AAA, and (3) regulation of transportation companies. Congress must pass upon these three urgent questions before it can adjourn. Yet the Administration forces Congress to mix in with consideration of the above vital issues such radical measures as inflation, payment of the bonus, creation of a new banking system, destruction of public utilities, and a nation-wide program of social pensions. I believe in reforms and I urged them in 1929; but we have had enough of them now for a while. We can carry anything too far.

Guilt of Class Baiting

My chief criticism of the Administration is the fact that it has set in motion dangerous and even suicidal forces. It has undermined people's morale; it has taught politicians to spend recklessly; it has encouraged workers to strike; it has destroyed confidence in thrift and all investments; it has upheld the doctrine of producing less and wasting more. Worst of all, it has made the worker believe that his interests are different from the interests of his employer. The split-up of our nation into any type of separate groups is socially wicked and economically wrong. Everyone is a wage earner and everyone is a capitalist and the interest of one is the interest of the other.

The country is today fertile soil for the seeds of discontent sown by radicals and demagogues. In 1932, the "Forgotten Man" put his faith in the New Deal. Three years later, with the relief rolls choked, with the cost of food rising daily, and with business still 21 per cent below normal, this same "Forgotten Man" is wondering who, besides the politicians, have benefited from the New Deal. I only have to point to the huge volume of mail which Huey Long receives daily and to the millions who signed the Townsend petitions to bear out my point that the "Forgotten Man" is looking for a new leader. And remember, our modern demagogues have the powerful weapon of the radio by which they can reach millions of listeners at once—a situation which never before existed.

Coalition Saved England

The plain fact is that statesmanship has collapsed today as did the banking system in 1932 and 1933. The same cut-throat methods are now being used by politicians as were used by Wall Street in the 20's. The plain truth is that the farmers, the unemployed, the veterans, organized labor, and state officials are asking the Federal Treasury "for a ride." Both Republicans and Democrats are making cowardly and unpatriotic speeches. The Democrats have completely forgotten Thomas Jefferson, while the Republicans have turned from rugged individualism to rugged collectivism. But we need not resort to Fascism to clean up the mess.

The simplest and quickest way to save ourselves is for the conservatives of both major parties to form a coalition government. President Roosevelt could be the candidate on such a coalition ticket with a Republican, such as Knox, for vice-president and with a conservative cabinet agreed upon in advance. If this plan is not workable, then the Republican party should nominate a conservative Democrat such as Senator Glass or former budget-director Douglas for President. This would unite conservative Democrats with Republicans until the present mess is cleaned up. The first major move of this party should be immediate steps toward balancing the budget and curtailment of useless and evil public spending! (Copyright—1935 Publishers Financial Bureau)

...We have sold our farm business for a mess of pottage or one or two or three years of benefit favors.

—Senator George of Georgia.

They ought not to try to call themselves the Democratic party. The Roosevelt administration should be properly named the St. Vitus dance party.—Huey Long.

THE WOMAN'S CORNER

Queens Have Ruled Nations Capably but U. S. Has Scarcity of Executive Timber

By HELEN WELLSHEIMER

To say that a woman could not make a successful President of the United States is to make a ridiculous, absurd, ungrounded assertion. How do we know until she has tried it?

Women have ruled nations and done it well. Take Queen Elizabeth, for instance. There isn't a masculine name on the list of British kings better known than that of the daughter of Henry VIII. When she wanted a head to tumble off, she gave orders as crisply as ever a gentleman did. Victoria was a revered and honored queen, and the Dutch people are not objecting to Wilhelmina.

Back in Israel, when the Judges were lacking in wisdom, Deborah and herself appointed to the judicial office and laid down the law successfully when her masculine confederates failed. Jael was wicked, but she had power.

The matriarchies, where women were rulers and men were little more than chattels, never lacked for organization. Oh, yes, it is quite probable that a woman, rightly trained and completely interested in her nation's problems, could send successful messages to the United States Senate.

However, those who plead for a woman in the White House forget that the average woman has not been brought up with the house on Pennsylvania Avenue as her goal. Only small boys have been told that Lincoln went from a log cabin to the Presidency.

Nor do women, by their very nature, grow up emphasizing an accumulation of knowledge and a wide and varied interest in national and international diplomacy. In brief, few women naturally enter avenues which lead into the inauguration parade. Those who evince a strong interest in statesmanship usually do it in addition to some greater interest, and annex it as an appendage.

Therefore, the group which would furnish feminine presidential timber is narrowed. Among those potential candidates—and there is no doubt that there are women who would rule with vigor and dignity and grace—there is sure to be a sacrifice of certain feminine interests to the general problems. In that sense a woman is completely feminine, would not be a successful applicant. No, we must consider women presidential candidates not as women, but as human beings. The average woman is so involved with her own circle of problems that her scope is too limited for national, let alone international, interests.

Women personalize, as a rule. Men do not. Women judge a problem and its outcome as it relates to their own lives. Men are able to examine it, irrelative of any association.

Perhaps it is this difference in character which has built up the theory that women would put the country in a dither.

Chivalry and courtesy still demand that a man should not arrange a duel—even a political one—with a lady. She should be protected. Since the structure of society has placed men in the majority of public offices, a woman in the White House would be at a disadvantage. Men might hesitate to fight fairly for their own views when she was on the other side.

Yes, there are barriers, dozens of them, to be broken down before somebody's wife or daughter signs her name as the chief executive of the United States. But to say that there isn't a woman who can do this—to say that a woman hasn't every right to dominate if she is capable—is as impracticable as it is untrue.

Glorifying Yourself

By ALICIA HART

NEA Service Staff Writer

New cosmetics for spring have a natural, healthy look about them. Designed with the school-girl complexion idea in mind, they serve to enhance rather than to distort the beauty you already have.

Pinkish or reddish rouge is better than the yellow and orange tones. Choose one that harmonizes with the color your cheeks become after you have pinched them or after you have been exercising violently. Then learn to apply it correctly.

After you have cleaned your face and smoothed on a foundation lotion, brush your forefinger lightly across a bit of cleansing cream, dip it in the cream rouge and, beginning about a quarter of an inch from your nose, make one streak outward along the cheek-bone. Go back to the starting dot and make another streak downward. In other words form a triangle without a base. Then, blending carefully, fill in the triangle, leaving no rough edges and no blotches.

The powder that you use in the next step in makeup also should match perfectly the natural tone of your complexion. If you are one who has pinkish lights in your skin, don't choose a "rachel" powder. If you have olive skin, get a powder that carries out the attractive yellowish effect.

Use a clean piece of cotton each time you powder. The old-fashioned powder puff is convenient, of course, but unless you wash it every day, it just isn't sanitary. Powder too generously. Wait until rouge and foundation lotion have absorbed the excess and then brush off with the surplus. Finish with lipstick. It, too, should harmonize with your natural coloring.

Actress Dares Gang to Strike

A gleaming revolver, bolstered for a quick draw, rests on the hip of Barbara Leonard, film actress, as she goes about Hollywood, a challenge to gangsters who bound her in her bathtub and scratched a "last warning" on her back, after once being machine-gunned and beaten by Puller and U. S. agents are on the trail of the thug.

Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Webster left this morning for Fort Worth to see Helen Hayes in "Mary of Scotland," who appears in person. They will go from there to Denton to visit their daughter, Mrs. J. Emory Barton.

CHURCH ANNOUNCEMENTS

- FIRST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH
Dr. John Angus MacMillan, Minister
"So Many Voices" will be the title of the morning sermon—a sermon dealing with the din of voices beating constantly upon the eardrums of our souls. What shall we do with these voices? Which of them shall we heed and which disregard? There will be good music. "Dreams That Lure Us Godward" is to be the subject of the vesper address—at 5 o'clock. There will be an antiphonal feature to this service that should appeal to all taking part in it. Drop in and share in its joy and blessing.

- WANT ATHEISTS ON JURIES
By Editor Frank
PARIS, April 12.—A bill aimed at enabling atheists to become members of a jury, has been submitted to the Chamber of Deputies by Camille Planche, Moulin Socialist. The measure provides that the tradition oath, attested by the name of God, is not necessary in the case of non-believers. Instead, they must swear on their word of honor.

STORY OF EASTER

Jesus' sadness as He quitted Jerusalem after taking final leave of the Temple. His disciples followed Him out of the city and of the Mount of Olives. At the summit, He turned for a moment at the beautiful city, and prophesied that at some future time there would not remain a stone upon a stone of the great temple. His disciples asked: "When shall these things be?" For our Lord pictured the end of the world. As the awful judgment draws near, He prophesied, there will be signs and portents, roaring of the sea and waves, earthquakes and pestilence. Preceded by His Angels who would summon all the people, the Son of Man, with power and majesty, will descend from the clouds of Heaven and separate the "sheep" from the goats. To the former, the King will say: "Come, ye blessed of my Father, possess ye the Kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." To the latter: "Depart from Me, ye cursed, for I tell you, ye shall have your portion of the fire which was prepared for the devil and his angels."

Sanhedrists plot for Jesus' destruction.

Actress Becomes 'Marked' Woman

HOLLYWOOD, April 12.—Sally Blane, attractive wampus baby screen star, was a marked woman today.

She drove around in her automobile with a glaring sticker bearing the words: "Traffic Violator," fixed to the windshield.

Not only that, but Miss Blane was ordered to carry the "brand" for 15 days when she pleaded guilty in municipal court to driving 42 miles an hour and chose that punishment rather than a $10 fine.

Safety Talks Are Made Before 500 School Students

Frank Haggart, safety engineer of Amarillo, and Carl G. Clift, Potter County school superintendent, spoke to more than 500 Hall County rural school students this week-end on the subject of safety among school children.

"The Great American Gamble—Carelessness," was the general theme of talks made by Mr. Haggart at Eli, Leslie, Brice, Pleasant Valley, Plaska and Newlin schools.

"National survey records show that 36,000 persons were killed last year through careless and inefficient driving. More than 1,800,000 were injured. Approximately 90 per cent of automobile accidents could be avoided, and school children should learn not to take chances," he told parents, teachers and students in the meetings.

Disclose Plot To Disrupt Cleveland Electric Service

CLEVELAND, Apr. 12.—An apparent attempt to disrupt light and power service to the greater Cleveland area by dynamiting high steel towers carrying 132,000 volt transmission lines, was disclosed today by officials of the Cleveland Electric Illumination Company.

An explosion toppled over a tower last night but failed to halt electrical service because of an automatic safety device.

300,000 Enrollment In CCC Is Promised

WASHINGTON, Apr. 12.—Enrollment of 300,000 men in Civilian Conservation Corps within 60 days was promised today by Robert Fechner, CCC director.

After a conference with President Roosevelt on this phase of the four billion dollar work relief program, Fechner went over with the President his recommendation for 1,500 new camps.

Early presidential approval of the plan is in prospect.

THE CRY FOR CITY TAXES

ACCORDING to a survey made of many Texas cities, the expenditures on the part of municipalities have arisen during the past few years, while the volume of revenue has concurrently diminished.

J. T. Barton of the University of Texas Bureau of Municipal Research, finds that the average amount of total per capita receipts during the past three years were $30.67 in 1931-32, $27.41 for 1932-33, and $26.40 during 1933-34. He argues that a new revenue system for cities be worked out, possibly shared by the state in the form of grants-in-aid, direct grants, development of new sources of municipal revenue, assumption of local functions by the State government or State-administered municipally-shared taxes.

Opposition to grants of any nature and State assumption of local functions has already been exhibited. There is little opportunity to throw open to city governments new sources of revenue because most of them have already been exploited.

Instead of working out additional plans for revenue, finding new things to tax and adding extra loads to the already taxed field, as is the universal custom today, it seems to us that it would be time much better spent if the so-called experts would devote their time to finding ways and means by which all governmental bodies could reduce expenditures to a level with revenue. We are taught from childhood, if we receive proper training, that in order to be happy, get along in this world and retain self respect we must learn to live at all times within our means. Yet on every hand we have examples of governments, city, county, state and national, spending greater sums every month than they could possibly hope to receive. Could not the same principle that the rule the individual be applied to governments? In fact, is it not necessary that this principle be applied if the administrations are to survive?

ONE-PARAGRAPH NOTE FREES CRIMINAL

IN his illuminating book, "Ten Thousand Public Enemies," Courtney Ryley Cooper reveals that a group of business men from a certain city visited a Department of Justice official not long ago and told him that they had raised a large fund to finance a vigilance committee in their town to drive out the crooks. They wanted the official to advise them how to go about it.

His advice was short and to the point. "Go back and chase out your crooked lawyers and politicians," he said, "and your crime problem won't bother you any more."

It has been said so often that modern crime is tied up with political and legal corruption that it hardly seems necessary to repeat it. But once in a while the day's news provides an admirable illustration.

The Ohio parole board recently authorized a parole for a young man who was serving a one-to-ten-year term for criminal assault on a widow, whom he beat almost to death. He had served only 10 months.

The judge who sentenced him—who called his crime "about as vicious a thing as ever came to this court's attention"—opposed the parole; so did the prosecutor who tried his case.

The woman he beat up is still suffering from her injuries, a year after the crime was committed. How come the parole, then? Well, a state senator who is also a lawyer wrote a brief, one-paragraph letter to the parole board, urging that the parole be granted. The senator says he knows little about the case, except that he has a vague notion that an injustice was done. He does not know the convict personally.

Where did he get his information on the case? Oh, he got it from a police prosecutor in the city where the crime was committed—an underling in the administration of justice who gained some notoriety when the assault took place by refusing to issue a felony warrant for the assaulter's arrest.

You needn't read the outline of this case more than once to see that there is something exceedingly peculiar about it; and it is worth thinking about, because it is typical of the way in which subterranean political influences can be brought to bear in favor of criminals.

Here we have a man sent up for a peculiarly vicious kind of crime; a man who very obviously deserves to be kept behind the bars for a long, long time.

He gets out after serving a scant 10 months, because somehow, somewhere, somebody behind the scenes pulled a few wires for him.

Is Government Business Any Worse Than This?

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

Liberals Put the Heat on F. R.'s Secretary McIntyre... Influence Held Bad for President... New Dealers Don't Like the Company he Pals With.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—Fires are burning under Marvin H. McIntyre—the most important man in the White House, next to President Roosevelt.

Liberals of the administration seem almost unanimously convinced that McIntyre, the secretary who sits outside Roosevelt's office and makes his appointments, is a major factor in the recent decline of the president's prestige and effectiveness, which they attribute chiefly to acceptance of too much "bad advice."

Consequently, they think about the best thing that could happen to the New Deal would be the disappearance of McIntyre from the White House scene. And they're working toward that end.

Controlling the flow of visitors, telephone calls, telegrams, and mail into Roosevelt's inner office, McIntyre holds a unique strategic position. There are few outstanding liberals without some private complaint of inability to reach the president, of interruptions in case they do get in, or of mysterious leaks to their opponents after supposedly confidential White House visits.

McIntyre's influence extends throughout Washington. There are few administrative offices where a word from a White House secretary doesn't carry weight.

"Butterfly" of Capital
When the sagacious Louis Howe was in better health and in a position to transmit viewpoints and suggestions to Roosevelt, McIntyre wasn't such a problem to the progressives. But as Howe became increasingly ill and unable to function, the undercurrent of resentment against "Mac" grew.

He is a gay, genial soul who loves the social life opened to him by his rise to prominence. A friendly writer in a current magazine reports accurately that he is "out every night, flitting from party to party, besought by every lobbyist, contact man, political lawyer, and glory-seeker in town."

Therein, according to the liberals, lies the explanation why in general only persons of a certain type can "get to" Roosevelt. McIntyre's friends include members of the Farley-Hurja political spoils group, senators of the conservative Pat Harrison-Joe Robinson-Jimmy Byrnes clique—with whom he golfs at the fashionable Burning Tree club—admirals and "big navy" propagandists, lobbyists of various types—building, electrical, Wall Street, and other—and wealth administration boys.

Although the effect of secretary's contacts—sneaky or unconscious—usually been visible only in the Senate, a committee recently had an incident which at least indicated the type of influence McIntyre is able to wield.

Confidential memoranda Arthur P. Homer, described as a "fixer" de luxe friend of Roosevelt, had approached Christian Joy Peoples of the navy's rejection of the (Mc.) Iron Works bid for destroyers.

F. R. Pooh-Poohs It
Peoples, according to the approved plan which had 10 persons serving in the White House, McIntyre recorded, and promised to send the telegrams to Roosevelt according to testimony, expected to yield a profit of more than $1,000,000.

Roosevelt was asked at a press conference under oath to laugh it off and supposed "Mac" made a dozen promises like that day. But he didn't accept them.

McIntyre did publicity for the navy during the war in Roosevelt in his 1920 presidential campaign. Later he resented newswriter company until Joe Kennedy, now of Securities Exchange Commission, reorganized one of the "left" "Mac" out.

Then he joined the campaign organization. Always been popular with people here, for his chief is a sunny smile, a warm disposition, and loyalty to friends.

The undercover fight now involves him in an episode of the never-ending battle between liberals and conservatives. Transfer of McIntyre he a major concession "left."

HEALTH

BY DR. MORRIS FISHBAIN
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygeia, the Health Magazine

Primary interest in the Dionne quintuplets is held by doctors and welfare workers. Certainly, specialists in feeding and rearing of infants are going to learn a great deal from these babies.

Already they have learned much concerning the factors necessary to rear premature children to successful life. It is well known that the mortality among premature babies is excessive in spite of the best possible care.

Mortality among twins and triplets in premature births is enormous. Survival of these babies is characterized as phenomenal.

A premature baby is not developed sufficiently in its nervous system to provide for the automatic regulation of its breathing or of its body temperature. Its feeding and digestive powers are very feeble. Furthermore, the premature baby is likely to succumb to any one of a number of infections to which it is easily exposed. Successful rearing of the quintuplets depended on the provision of the right kind of air, the maintenance of proper body temperature, the feeding of a sufficient quantity of properly collected and preserved human milk, and extraordinary vigilance in preventing development of infections.

What has been accomplished for these babies may well be a lesson to parents throughout the world as to the type of care necessary to be given every infant so that he may have the best possible opportunity for health and successful growth.

While the quintuplets appear to be identical, it will, of course, require extended scientific study to determine whether any two of them are identical or whether all five are identical.

If it should turn out that some are identical and the others fraternal, that is, that several came from one egg cell and the others from individual egg cells, the studies will furnish most extraordinary information.

No doubt, as these infants grow, they will be subjected to serious study not only of their physical characteristics, such as their sizes and measurements and thumb prints or other physical formations of their bodies, but also of their mental development.

Will one learn faster than the others? Will one develop musical talents and the others ability to paint or to dance?

They are going to have a life that is to be lived in a glass house, with all the world studying through special lenses.

I think another war would mean the collapse of the American standard; our standard of living would sink; our whole moral attitude would change.

—Bernard Baruch.
If the Republican party has the courage to turn to the humanity of Lincoln, and away from the property-minded leadership which has dominated it most of the time for 20 years, we can save America.
—William Allen White.

TRADITION as old as earliest Biblical history permeates the famous Mosque of Omar in Palestine. More properly called "The Dome of the Rock," this structure was built in 691 A. D. over what is believed to be the rock where Abraham had intended to sacrifice his son, Isaac.

According to Moslem tradition, it is the rock from which Mohammed ascended to Heaven, and Muhammad medusa point to the imprint of his feet on the rock as proof.

Night Play Makes Debut in Commercial Softball Loop

JUNIOR C OF C TO SPONSOR LEAGUE

Eight - Club Circuit Proposed; Start Next Month

Night softball will make its debut in Memphis this season—probably starting sometime next month.

A Commercial Softball League is to be sponsored here by the Junior Chamber of Commerce. Business firms or groups of firms are expected to piece clubs in the loop.

Play will be held at Fair Park Stadium, already converted into a baseball field, where three of the powerful floodlights will be used.

In taking over the sponsoring of the popular sport here, the Jaycee organization appointed Jack Boone, Carl Harrison and Kennon Hillier as a committee to work out details of the league.

Eight Clubs Desired
The loop probably will consist of four Memphis teams and clubs from Estelline, Turkey, Lakeview and Hulver. If eight clubs are entered, the league probably will have three games each week.

The four local clubs will be sponsored by such groups as the hardwaremen, grocerymen, drug stores or individual establishments, as banks, compress and perhaps a single hardware or drug firm. Those interested in entering a club are urged to give the matter quick consideration and to get in touch with one member of the committee.

Faster Game
Although plans probably will call for the opening of the season sometime next month, after weather becomes warm enough for night play, members of the committee stated that the organization must be complete before play is started.

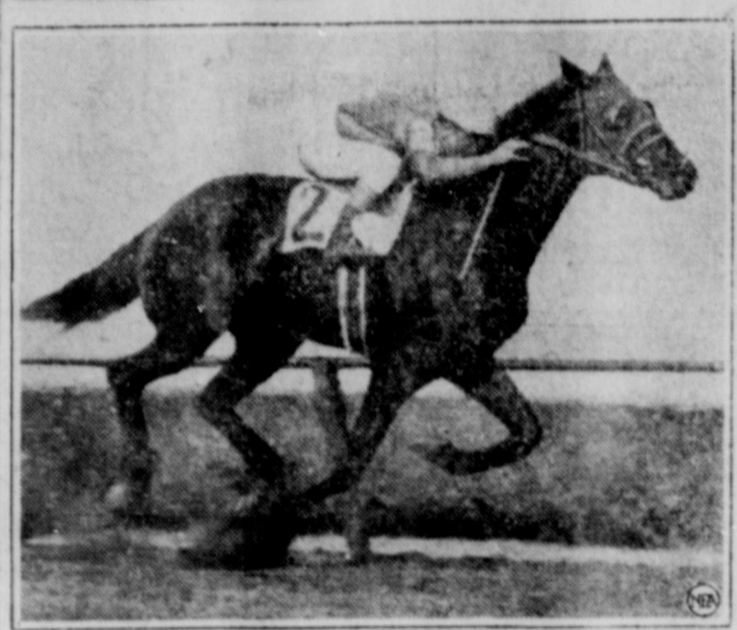

A smooth-seamed ball was adopted, which will make the game faster and harder than that played by the church loop last year, through which the sport gained widespread popularity here. A special ball for night play will be used. This will force all players to use gloves, whereas only the catcher required one last year. Bats, balls etc., will be furnished by the league.

In addition to regular play, the loop probably will offer a prize list, the details of which are yet to be worked out.

Mr. and Mrs. Harley Cudd and sons, Joe Pat and Kenneth Don, and C. L. Caviness left last night for Gravelly, Ark., in response to a message that Mrs. Cudd's mother, Mrs. J. P. Biggs, was seriously ill and not expected to live, and that Mr. Caviness' brother, Bob Caviness was very ill.

DOPING the DERBY

Roman Soldier

By MAX RIDDLE (NEA Service Turf Writer)
Those who follow the Kentucky Derby future book odds will discover that prices on Elwood Sassenmeier's Roman Soldier recently have shown an increase. One reason is that the horse failed to take better than third in the Florida Derby; another is that he still has the rather difficult task of winning the Texas Derby ahead of him.

Roman Soldier was a good 2-year-old. He demonstrated first-class form during the recent Florida meeting.

A son of the imported Cohort, the horse inherits sprinting ability, but his distance characteristics are uncertain.

Starting 12 times last year, he won five races, finished second in four, and third in one.

It was not until the Hialeah Inaugural that he won a stake event.

Roman Soldier finished last in the Hialeah Stakes after being jammed out of contention, and then defeated a good field in an allowance race at a mile.

His Bahama allidrap was a corker. He carried 126 pounds and defeated 11 crack animals, giving away as much as 18 pounds.

Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Rapp, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Marcum, Mrs. Perry Hill, and Mrs. Bailey were Memphis visitors from Estelline yesterday.

Mrs. Roy Fultz returned from Wellington yesterday where she had been since Tuesday with her daughter, Mrs. Scotty Sigler.

G by Harry GRAYSON

LEXINGTON, Ky., April 12.—She cooks a toothsome soufflé. She hangs a living room drape with perfect taste. She reads a best seller regularly. She keeps a gorgeous flower garden.

But it is none of these things that makes Daisy Proctor, of Lexington, an outstanding woman. After all, most women are expert in household accomplishments.

Miss Proctor attends to them in her spare time, when she is not occupied with her manifold duties as general manager of Joseph E. Widener's beautiful 1297-acre Bluegrass estate, Elmendorf. Here were produced Chance Sun, winner of the Futurity and 4-1 favorite in the Kentucky Derby; Peace Chance, which took the Belmont Stakes; and other famous thoroughbreds.

As far as can be determined, Miss Proctor is the only woman in the world with such duties. More and more women were becoming identified with racing, until it no longer is appropriate to speak of it as the sport of kings.

Woman Holds Reins
Every person, animal and piece of equipment on the entire Widener establishment is under Miss Proctor's personal supervision. Twice a day the year round she rides over the farm, seeing that the 52 men employed there are at their posts and that the 125 horses are receiving proper attention.

In addition to outlining all the work and superintending the care of the many valuable horses, Miss Proctor watches over a dairy herd, a bird sanctuary, pheasants that roam the spacious fields, greenhouses, and specially planted trees. During her spare moments, she manages to see that five homes, including the one Widener occupies when here, are kept up.

Miss Proctor still finds time to be active in the Altrusa club, which is her pet hobby. She served as governor of the Altrusa district including Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama, and Mississippi, and is past president of the organization at Lexington. She also is vice-president of the Lexington Humane Society and a member of the Lexington Rose and Garden clubs.

Miss Proctor has only two iron-bound rules on the Widener property. Violation of either means dismissal. The first is that no one shall strike a horse for any reason. The second is that no one shall drink intoxicating liquors while at work.

"What the employees do in their homes or off the farm in their business," says Miss Proctor, "but what they do on the farm is mine."

Taught by Madden
Miss Proctor came into her position quite by accident, yet through the same efficiency that enabled her to make such a success of it. While in the employ of a Lexington hotel office as secretary in 1910, she began to write business correspondence for the late John E. Madden, whose reputation as a breeder of running horses was world wide.

Correspondence became so heavy that Madden made a permanent place for Miss Proctor. Called to New York for several weeks, he placed his entire farm in her charge.

"All I knew about a farm was what little I observed as a child growing up on one," recalls Miss Proctor. "I knew absolutely nothing about thoroughbreds."

Later, Madden was away for months at a time, but routine at his famous Hamburg Place never was interrupted with Miss Proctor in command. She directed the feeding of 150 men, the care of 300 horses, and 2800 acres of land.

Madden farmed more extensively than does Widener. Miss Proctor supervised the harvesting of great crops of bluegrass seed, and directed the care of all the cattle and sheep on the place.

When Madden died in 1929, Widener immediately sought Miss Proctor, who as Madden's manager sold her present employer the land she now oversees.

Miss Proctor often has been asked why in these early days she kept at such an unusual occupa-

PENN RELAYS WILL ATTRACT U. S.'S GREATEST ATHLETES

PHILADELPHIA, April 12.—The 1935 Penn Relay carnival bids well to attract one of the greatest gatherings of famed athletes ever assembled to match their speed and skill on track and field.

Acceptances of invitations thus far include 60 colleges, 46 preparator schools, 25 junior high schools and 13 parochial schools. Many more are expected before April 6, final day for entries. The relays are scheduled for April 27 and 28.

University of Pennsylvania officials are awaiting definite word from Ben Eastman, Pacific Coast star, who has been invited to perform in a special race. Should the former Stanford star accept, he will compete in either a quarter or half mile event. His probable opponents include Glenn Hardin, of Louisiana State; Ivan Fuqua and Charley Hornbostel, of Indiana; Glenn Cunningham, premier word's miler, and Elton Brown, of the Kansas A. C.

Army and Navy will renew their long-standing athletic duels. That became known when both academies accepted invitations to compete in the Relays.

Service Teams
The future Army generals will participate in six of the Relay events, with individuals likely to compete in a number of the special events. Navy is expected to nominate its athletes before the entry deadline.

For the Army, Church—a middle distance runner—will compete in four events. They are the Class B mile, the quarter and half and the distance medley relays.

Miss Proctor doubts that her great-grandfather ever purchased one like Chance Sun.

Although the players are rounded out into full agreement of their inability to power parley with Hitler's dragoon in an appeal of Nations, declaration.

Added to the list of are Tunnell, third sacker, Meter, outfielder, from two hardhitting players of fine records in this pair will be added to the pitcher Steve Thompson, Joe Marcum.

The opening game will be at 3:30 o'clock on Tuesday at Pavers Park. It will be a week before the opening of the home.

The Children's club is among the topnotch of the Western Division, having won three or four titles, one that turned into a title, by almost 40 points. But even Children's admits that position didn't even look like a base.

Manager Jack Boone will be in the field for the opening game.

Steward and Whitfield are in the field for the opening game.
