PHILLIPS COMPANY ABANDONS OIL TEST NEAR PARNELL

Work Speeds on U. S. Dams Following Ruling of Court

Builders of a dozen great government dams all over the country took heart at the decision of the supreme court that the government may transmit and sell power generated incidentally to the building of such dams for navigation or defense. In the Tennessee Valley, workmen flung themselves with renewed energy into the completion of Wheeler Dam, shown above in a new photo. While not directly affected by the court decision, Wheeler Dam harnesses the Tennessee directly at the head of Wilson Dam's Lake. It will create another vast reservoir and add another 86 miles to the navigability of the river. Incidental to this, it eventually will generate surplus power which may be sold legally, the highest court now has decided.

PULLING CASING AT DEEP TEST NEAR PARNELL

Company's Plans for Further Work on Lease Not Known

Definite reports from the Hughes No. 1 oil test of the Phillips Petroleum Company, near Parnell, this morning bore out predictions yesterday that the well was to be abandoned as a dry hole.

In an effort to salvage as much of the casing as possible, a shot of nitroglycerine was exploded in the well at a depth of approximately 3500 feet yesterday, to blow the casing in two and allow it to be pulled. There are 3000 feet of 13-inch and 6000 feet of 9-inch casing in the hole.

It is understood that, under the company's contract with the Hughes estate, if they are to hold the leases on the 40,000 acre tract, two more wells must be drilled. No statement, however, could be had from the company officials as to whether the additional tests would be made, or the leases allowed to expire.

It is estimated that the oil test (Continued on Page 8)

Magazine Editor of Opinion Governor Overlooked Issues

 Fuldusler commented that in a re-

 these four points.

HOLD TERRACING DEMONSTRATION

County Agricultural Agent R. E. L. Pattillo is conducting a terracing demonstration in the Baylor community this afternoon teaching farmers of that section how to run terrace lines.
 Terracing demonstrations have already been held in the Newlin, Eli and Brice communities. The Brice demonstration, on the Boyd T. Dickson farm, was the most successful, with over 40 farmers attending and learning how to terrace.

ORGANIZE FARM AGRICULTURAL ASSOCIATIONS

Believed Community Organizations to Be Required

A series of meetings has been scheduled to be held this week and next over the county at the various communities for the purpose of organizing community agriculture associations.
 The meeting dates were set Saturday afternoon when the county agricultural council met in the office of the county farm agent.
 The community agriculture associations will stand in readiness to assist with this year's governmental farm program. Although the farm bill has not been worked out—it is now going the congressional channels—it is thought that community associations will be required, and the county agent and county council are making preparations to put the program into effect here as soon as it is announced.  Due to the postponement of several civil cases set for this week, no cases are being tried in court today.

Flood Waters Deep in Several States

By Associated Press
 DALLAS, Feb. 25.—Flood waters are taking a heavy toll of property damage in several parts of the nation, and drove hundreds of families from their homes, particularly in California, where 6 to 10 feet of flood water inundated thousands of acres of fertile farm lands.
 Near Sacramento, California, swollen rivers drove five hundred people from their homes, as the muddy flood swirled over the country side, in some places ten feet deep.
 Guards are being maintained in the states of Illinois, Pennsylvania, Nebraska and Iowa, against ice jams which might send rivers out of their banks, to do untold damage.

ENLARGE SEWER SYSTEM AT CAMP

In order to effect better sewage disposal at the Memphis Civilian Conservation Corps camp, it has become necessary to enlarge the disposal system; and a crew of CCC workmen were engaged on the sewage project this morning.
 Nine hundred and fifty feet of new laterals are to be laid of conduit pipe, which will care for the increased load; and it is thought that this system will permanently take care of the situation.
 The pipe is furnished by the city, and the work is being done by the camp men.

Peace Must Precede Disarmament

THE hopeful soul who expected the naval disarmament conference in London to bring about some real naval disarmament might as well begin now to look for the place to pay off.

This conference apparently is going to set all the powers involved to building new batches of light cruisers and 35,000-ton battleships. Like most of its predecessors, it will result in more naval construction rather than less. It sets up a few new rules for the builders but it does not restrain them.

All this ought to help us understand that we have been kidding ourselves right from the start about this naval disarmament business.

We have been kidding ourselves chiefly because we have put the card several rods in front of the horse.

Nations don't pay the freight on big navies out of pure cursedness or a simple fondness for the looks of warships. They build navies because they figure navies may some day come in handy. To bring about disarmament, it is necessary to remove the things from which big navies spring.

IN other words, it is foolish to try to cut down navies until the countries that are building them can be convinced they won't have to use them in the near future. And to date that is the one thing that hasn't been tried.

For instance: the clash of national interests in China which goes under the general name of "the Far Eastern problem" is what keeps Japan, America, and—to a certain extent—England from reducing their navies. Does anyone suppose that these three powers will disarm until a satisfactory solution to that problem has been reached?

For another instance: the European situation is heading directly toward war. Since it is the European naval powers are going to keep their fleets in shape, adding to them to the extent that strategic requirements make necessary and budget allowances make possible.

Could the Archangel Gabriel himself persuade Italy, France, Germany, and England to disarm until a peaceful solution of the whole European tangle was in sight?

SO far almost nothing has been done to iron out either of these exceedingly complicated and distressing snarls. Until something is done, naval disarmament conferences are useless.

What is left for us in America, then? Are we absolutely helpless, doomed to go on building until the dam finally breaks?

Perhaps—and perhaps not. There is one course we never yet have followed: the adoption, in time of peace, of a carefully thought out neutrality program which would enable us to stay at peace while others fight. It might pay us to consider that possibility very carefully.

Behind the Scenes in Washington

By RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON.—Whether the U. S. Supreme Court hands down a favorable or an unfavorable decision on the constitutionality of the Tennessee Valley Authority case, the government's experiment in the valley, on which about $110,000,000 will have been spent by midsummer, will go down in history as the most extensive effort to improve living conditions ever seen in the world.

Its activities spread over 40,000 square miles of the Tennessee Valley, in which 2,000,000 people live. All this area, all these people are affected. About 15,000 are now at work on its various projects.

Here are the main things TVA is doing:
1—It is building four great dams. Norris Dam, near Knoxville, Tenn., will be finished this summer. Wheeler Dam has been under way for more than two years. Pickwick Landing Dam is one year along. A dam at Gunterville, Ala., is just being begun.

With Wilson Dam, built during the World War to make nitrogen which the government needed for explosives, these barriers are the forerunners of a series of dams which will control the whole river.

2—With surplus power from Wilson Dam, the TVA is already providing the power needed to build Norris Dam, and is supplying power to small towns and rural areas in 21 counties of Alabama, Mississippi, and Tennessee. Soon it will be serving nearly 15,000 consumers in 36 counties.

3—When the huge reservoir begins to fill behind Norris Dam, a start will be made in controlling disastrous floods which sweep the Tennessee Valley every spring and summer. Navigation of the Tennessee river becomes a definite prospect for the future.

4—Two huge plants were built at Wilson Dam during the war to make nitrogen. One is closed and unused. The other is being turned to experiments in creating and making phosphatic fertilizers. It is judged more necessary than the other projects.

5—One of the greatest surveys of land use ever undertaken has been made, and as a result, the best use of all land in the basin is known. Farmers have been persuaded to terrace their land against erosion, plant grass and trees. More than 3,000,000 have already been planted.

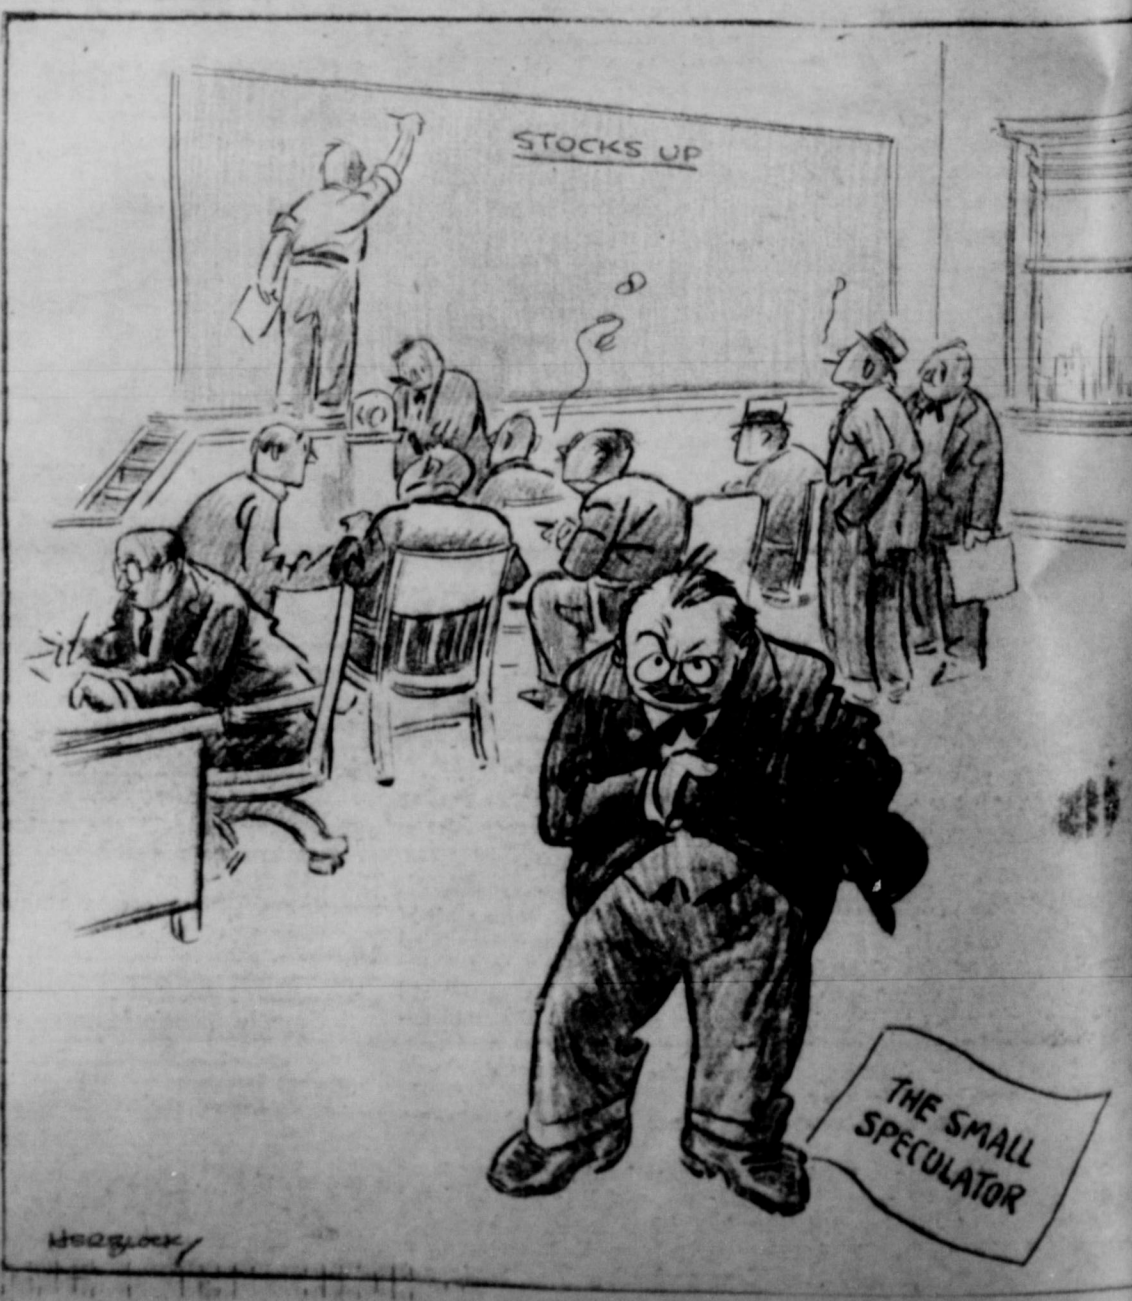

6—To encourage greater use of electricity on farms and in homes, the Electric Home Farm Authority was begun. It finances sales of electrical equipment to people living in the TVA area, or to others served by companies whose rates meet TVA approval.

7—Towns built at Norris and Wheeler Dams for the workmen on the projects will be permanent, and should eventually be the way to establishment of rural communities where small factories started, and employes may get the best features of city and rural life.

8—Valuable experiments have been made in ceramic, electrical firing of native hard clays to make fine white dishes now almost all imported. Co-operatives have been fostered among the valley residents, and forward steps taken in labor organization and relationships.

CRUISE TO NOWHERE

BEGIN HERE TODAY

JANE WESTON feels her dreams have come true when she is out on a three weeks' ocean cruise, accepted in payment for the salary due her when the magazine for which she worked as a typist suspended publication. On board the ship, she meets the handsome DIRK STROM, expert ski jumper, as penniless as Jane. The trip was a gift to him from the parents of a child whose life was saved.

Dirk introduces Jane to his friend, SNOWSHOES, a detective. Others on board are: NORA LANE, famous actress and owner of the Kokinor diamond; the wealthy, eccentric MADAME BREMUS; DUTCH LENZ and ANNIE JACKSON, blackmailers; TINO ROSSI, opera singer; BEN MARTIN and LINDA AYRES, floor show entertainers. Jane confides to Dirk that she merely a typist out of a job and he tells her that he is not the playboy she has thought him. A misunderstanding arises when Dirk confesses to having dreamed of meeting more glamorous companions. Dirk hears Nora Lane complain to the purser about noises in her stateroom. Dirk agrees to change staterooms with her. Jane meets Tino Rossi and is attracted by his attentions.

GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER X

At the tea dance in the Venetian on the ship's passengers saw the handsome young man with the actress, Nora Lane.

They wondered how he had met the actress, and some of them made guesses that he was going to be her third husband, now that her second marriage had gone on the rocks. It was exciting for the onlookers. Miss Lane laughed for their exclusive enjoyment, it seemed. She was one of them. Dancing close to her, they could have touched her!

But they saw that she laughed with a distinct retraction of her lips. Her eyes were undeniably sad.

"Tell me," she said to Dirk, "are you a bridegroom who was left at the altar?" Her voice was sympathetic. "I have been so terribly afraid that you were. It would hurt your kind so cruelly."

Dirk flushed. "You know my kind," he smiled. "I quite probably would be left at the altar. But why do you ask that?"

"You had the best suite on board—mine now, thanks to you. Wasn't there a woman who charged her mind? Please tell me. The thought of a boy like you facing such cruelty has distressed me—terribly! That is my failing. I absorb too many people's distress."

Dirk said, "No, I haven't been jilted. I'm afraid I don't fall that hard."

Nora Lane gave his shoulder a fond pat, and a thrill passed through the watchful crowd again. "You are a charming boy," she said.

She lifted a hand and made a gay gesture. But it seemed as though the gaiety which had been in her face slipped off as a mask. A silence overcame them. They danced, each looking ahead, with his own thoughts.

Dirk experienced a little self-conscious pride. Everyone pointed them out in the saloon. He knew they were saying, "There is Nora Lane, the actress. I wonder who it is with her?"

He wished he'd meet Jane Weston now. He'd like to show her.

Nora Lane asked then, "What do you do? Do you work at something or are you still just—living?"

She was so careful not to hurt anyone's feelings that she worded her questions like bright lines from a play. He told her he was only a ski jumper, and then she smiled.

"I once saw those incredible fellows jumping at St. Moritz—sailing through the air like giant birds," she said. "I talked to a little Swiss in the stands. He was only 16. I asked to feel his arms to see if jumpers had any nerves and I think he fell in love with me on the spot. It was a very trying affair. I had to leave St. Moritz with my husband—"

Suddenly the actress turned her head and said in surprise, "Who is that pretty girl staring at us?"

Dirk looked about. He saw the broad-shouldered opera star and, over the man's shoulder, caught a glimpse of reddish hair and an up-tilted nose. It was Jane Weston. She was dancing with the opera singer.

A moment more and her eyes met Dirk's. Each smiled with a vague, whimsical expression of regret. Then they stiffened. That one look they exchanged was enough. It was youth's challenge to youth. Jane flung up her head, almost with bravado, and Dirk smiled coolly in return.

Later when they met in the foyer Dirk bowed formally and Jane smiled prettily. She and the baritone were going out on deck to watch the sun set. Dirk let his eyes follow them, a little resentfully.

He turned to Nora Lane. "Let's go see the sun set," he suggested. "We can go up on the hurricane deck and there'll be nobody to stare at us—"

Miss Lane smiled "I was hoping you'd ask me. I've been lonely on this cruise." Her face was tired again. She looked about her furtively, as though afraid of something.

"But I'll go with you," she finished, and Dirk knew what her fears were. He was sorry for her.

Jane stood with Tino Rossi at the ship's stern and watched the sun set on glorious tropic seas. The blood-red fire in the west sent its parting rays into waves that were almost green. The phosphorescent coloring of the water was fantastic, unreal. There were marine plants and coral sprays, indicating the presence of islands and reefs nearby.

"Late tonight," Jane said, "we'll be in the Bahamas. I asked the petty officer, that lovely brute in the white and gold graid—"

"Darling," Tino said, "When you speak of other men I am mad with jealousy."

"Idiot!" Jane said agreeably. "You've known me less than 24 hours. But you do say the loveliest things."

Tino bowed from the waist. "Knowing you 24 hours makes more than a day. That is a million years."

"My best curtsy, Mr. Rossi!"

Inwardly Jane was pleased. It had been really flattering to have the famous singer murmur pleasant things to her all afternoon. She had lunched with him, promenaded the deck and watched the deck games until it was time to go on to the tea dance. She asked about his career and he asked her nothing about herself.

"You are so divinely you," he had said. "That's all a man should ask of you."

That speech had made Jane think of Dirk Strom. Dirk must not have seen her for what she was. He had been harboring an illusion about her, an illusion which he cherished more than he had her.

But Jane was pleased by the looks that followed her and Tino about the deck. She had hoped fervently to meet Dirk—with the glamorous Tino, attentive, at her side. She'd show Dirk.

She had been surprised and a little disconcerted to see him with the actress, Nora Lane, but she didn't care now. She felt she had everything she had hoped for and dreamed for on this cruise.

Jane turned to see a man with a camera facing them. It was Mannie Jackson, the sleek, pasty-faced individual who had followed her and Dirk the first day on shipboard. She still distrusted him but when he asked to take a photograph of her with the baritone she gave her assent.

"Go ahead, shoot!" she said gaily. Tino straightened his tie and put his arm around her in the conventional pose for shipboard romance.

"Will that make a better picture?" he asked.

"That's the stuff. A snappy pose," Mannie returned.

Jane was laughing when she saw Dirk and Nora Lane walking toward the spot where she stood. The actress was looking out to sea and did not notice them at the amusing game of striking poses for an amateur cameraman.

Tino said, low, "There's Nora Lane. Don't you know the young man with her? I would like very much to know Miss Lane. Professional reasons, of course."

LITERALLY thousands of sandwiches I make in a year, what with picnics and late suppers, so I learn all the tricks I can.

Good sandwich bread should be at least twelve hours old and some sandwich makers prefer it twice that age. The texture should be fine and spongy rather than coarse-grained and crumbly. The crusts should be trimmed off, at least the crispy brown edge, which is saved and dried for crumbs and puddings.

If you want a very thin sandwich, it's better to buy a regular sandwich bread and spread the slices before cutting.

One secret of successful sandwich making is in creaming the butter. Put into a bowl and beat until creamy, exactly as one does for cake. Then it will spread evenly and easily with no danger of pulling and tearing the bread.

The good sandwich maker is generous with her filling. Open sandwiches should be treated most generously with enough topping to give individuality.

Don't Repeat Flavors

When sandwiches are used as an accompaniment for salad, take care not to repeat flavors. If cheese is used in the salad, do not serve a cheese sandwich. The filling should provide contrast.

Fancy sandwich breads, such as nut and raisin breads, call for simple fillings. Often they merely are buttered. Occasionally cream cheese is used.

A piquant filling for brown bread is made by combining equal parts of grated pineapple and cream cheese.

Cucumber sandwiches are delicious with fish salads. These sandwiches can be made in two ways. The first method is to pare cucumber and cut in thin slices. Let stand in French dressing to which 1 teaspoon minced chives or one drop of onion juice has been added. Drain and put between thin slices of buttered bread. These

BREAKFAST Grape juice, cereal, cream, poached eggs on graham toast, milk, coffee
LUNCHEON Open olive and nut sandwiches, orange shortcake, milk, tea.
DINNER Baked calves' hearts, mashed turnips, baked beets, stuffed prune salad, blueberry (canned) pudding, milk coffee sandwiches must be served as soon as made, but they are the smartest sandwich on the list.

The second method is to pare and chop cucumber and combine with mayonnaise to make of spreading consistency. A little grated horseradish or minced onion can be added.

Equal parts of strained honey and creamed butter beaten until thick make an excellent filling for tea sandwiches. Honey mixed with cream cheese and finely chopped salted almonds is another good filling.

For cocoanut filling, mix 1 cup grated cocoanut with 1-4 cup chopped nut meats, 3 tablespoons thick cream, 1-2 teaspoon salt and 2 tablespoons orange juice

Mix Marmalade and Cheese

Orange marmalade combined with cream cheese, minced pecans and cream to make moist is an unusual and delicious filling, too.

For almond sandwiches, combine celery and shredded salted almond, and add mayonnaise to make it of spreading consistency.

A simple and savory filling is made by combining equal quantities of minced green olives, minced canned pimientos and finely chopped nuts with enough mayonnaise to make moist.

Pimola sandwiches are a general favorite. For these, cut pimento stuffed olives in thin slices and arrange on a slice of buttered bread. Spread thinly with mayonnaise and cover with the second slice of buttered bread.

HARRY GRAYSON'S SPORTCAST

YORK—Lou Brouillard's qualification in the fourth of his second edition with Thil in Paris brings to a completely Big Jim Farwell the whining cry of this country in 1930, when it seemed to kill the then still break-busting business.

A series of unsatisfactory culminated in Max Schmeling producing a brand-new way of fighting the heavyweight champion—sitting down.

Nothing had to be done, and then chairman of the New commission, wiped out fouls by decreeing that there any such thing.

Participants were required to so themselves that it would be able for them to be injured all over straying out of bounds. A sympathy a warrior floored a punch was to get from the was a count. The offender lose the round.

Amendment was widely criticized but meanwhile Foul Proof bobbed up with the protection gave him his nickname, his armor, Taylor, a little, a man, defied a roomful of heavyweights to incapacitate with blows below the belt.

Y about one in 100 fighters were hurt badly enough to an evening.

A guilty party usually was run a poor second and seeking a out.

There were more fights in the golden days and more fighting in questionable hands. The safeguarded gamblers. Bets off in the event that there a foul, and fouls frequently deliberate when the sure boys' choices were taking bookings.

Its success in New York quickly led to the no-foul rule being adopted in most other important American cauliflower centers.

It really was amazing how the lads kept their pins when properly protected and when they knew that the best they could get by remaining in the resin was the worst of it.

Georges Carpentier says that Brouillard did not foul Thil. Carpentier should know. The Old Orchid Man was an expert on fouls.

THERE were phony foul endings before Tom Sharkey, fairly knocked out by Bob Fitzsimmons in San Francisco, Dec. 2, 1896, fell to the canvas holding his hands over his groin.

In a letter to Joe Humphreys shortly before he died, Joe Gans confessed that he was not struck low by Battling Nelson in their historic meeting at Goldfield, after which headlines screamed, "Gans Wins on Brutal Foul."

Sharkey and Gans at least were hit. In more recent years, Jack Delaney wasn't in the strange case of the phantom foul allegedly committed by a bewildered Paulino Uzcudun.

Phillip Suffering Scott succeeded in having himself fouled to the threshold of the heavyweight championship. The Englishman cried wolf so often that Referee Lou Magnolia refused to come to his rescue when Jack Sharkey fouled him repeatedly in Miami.

This Sharkey also was a fair hand at fouling and being fouled, by the way.

Fouls in America are now confined to baseball parks, however, and you would think that the rest of the world would take a tumble.

100 YEARS AGO TODAY

February 25, 1836

To give a picture of just what was happening to Travis and his brave handful of troops at the Alamo, we give below an entry from the diary of Colonel Almonte, of the Mexican army, under date of February 25, 1836:

Thursday, 25th. The firing from our batteries was commenced early. The General in Chief, with the battalion de Cazadores, crossed the river and posted themselves in the Alamo, that is to say, in the houses near the fort. A new fortification was commenced by us near the house of M'Mullen. In the random firing, the enemy wounded four of the Cazadores de Matamores battalion, and two of the battalion of Jiminas and killed one corporal and a soldier of the battalion of Matamores. Our fire ceased in the afternoon. In the night two batteries were erected by us on the other side of the river, in the Alameda of the Alamo; the battalion of Matamores was also posted there, and the cavalry was posted on the hills to the east of the enemy, and in the road from Gonzales at the Casa Mata Antigua. At half-past eleven at night we retired. The enemy in the night burnt the straw and wooden houses in their vicinity, but did not attempt to set fire with their guns to those in the rear. A strong wind commenced at nine o'clock.

Thus, as the Mexicans drew tighter and tighter around the heroic little band of defenders, the hour steadily approached which would make the ill-fated Alamo the shrine of Texas liberty. Death was near, but Travis and his men felt that their deaths would not be in vain.

Max King and Wylie Stuart were visitors in Pampa Sunday.

Dirk's eyes were on her. "Why shouldn't we all be friends?" Tino urged.

Nora Lane turned from the sea and saw Mannie Jackson approaching her with his camera. She breathed a sound of dismay, and flung up one hand as he snapped the camera.

Dirk's eyes swept the bridge above and caught the stolid features of Dutch Lenz. Dutch's lips moved and Mannie Jackson seemed to receive the message below. It was as if Dutch had said, "Okay, Mannie!"

Dirk responded to trained reflexes, as a man will slap off an annoying insect. His left hand flew out and caught Mannie Jackson's collar. With his right he delivered a solid blow that shot the man into a crumpled heap.

Dirk picked up the camera, cracked it like a stick over his knee, and threw it overboard. Then he turned to Nora Lane, hurrying her away down the deck.

She said incoherently, "That man—I'm sure it's he. Notorious—he's been indicted for extortion threats—blackmail. Please forgive me—I'm a fool—to go to pieces like that—"

At the door of her suite Dirk looked at her and saw a woman harassed, haunted by the untoward events that had enmeshed her life. She was the wife of a man who had made her private life unbearable, a public figure who did not seek her endless notoriety. Dirk had retained, neatly and precisely closeted in his mind, a tabloid description of Nora Lane's flight from the Hudson river estate in the early hours of a rain-swept morning.

"I must go now," she said. "I mustn't bother you again."

"It's no bother to me," Dirk said, "to crack a man like that one. I'm sorry if I lost my head, but when I saw you didn't want him to take that picture I just reached out and let him have one. Breaking up that camera was just my temper!"

"You have been very kind," she said and, with a reassuring smile, was gone.

At dinner talk about the incident buzzed. Dirk saw curious looks directed at him. He was sorry to have caused so much commotion.

Everyone stayed late at their tables, waiting for the actress to appear but she did not come. Nor did Mannie Jackson or Dutch Lenz.

Toward 9 Ken Martin, the crooner, came to Dirk's table. "The ship's cabaret, or gala, is tonight," he said. "We like to have the passengers entertain. We were counting on Miss Lane to make it a real Broadway show. I hope this thing that happened won't interfere. She's such a grand trouper. All the celebrities are going to attend—Tino Rossi, that girl with him, Jane Weston—"

Dirk looked around at Jane. Well, if that was the sort of glory she wanted, she had it now.

"I'll ask Miss Lane," he said. "Though I don't know whether it'll do any good. She was very annoyed."

He got up to go and Jane, watching him vault up the stairs, knew what his errand was. She turned to Tino with a forced smile.

Exemption Allowed State Employees

The compensation of officers and employees of a State or any political subdivision thereof, if the services of such officers or employees are rendered in connection with activities which constitute the discharge of an essential governmental function, as distinguished from a proprietary function, is exempt from Federal income tax. The compensation of such officers and employees is subject to Federal income tax if their services were rendered in connection with the exercise of a proprietary function. For example, the compensation of the governor of a State, the mayor of a city, councilmen, board of alderman, public-school teachers, firemen, and policemen is not subject to Federal income tax. Compensation received by employees of a municipally owned water-works or street railway or electric light plant is subject to Federal income tax, as such activities are proprietary rather than governmental in character.

Fees for special services to a State are taxable, as, for example, compensation paid architects and builders for planning and erecting a State capitol or other State or municipal building. An officer or an employee of a State, for the purpose of the income-tax law, is one whose services are continuous and not occasional or temporary.

1936 CYCLONE TAKES TO GRID IN SCRIMMAGE

Green Team Showing Up Well in Early Spring Workouts

Taking advantage of the good weather conditions, Coach Chesty Walker and his next year's grid aspirants, now coming out for spring football practice, have been indulging in some "rough and tough" tactics.

Last Friday afternoon, the first day in a month or two which the thermometer had not hovered near the zero mark, the Cyclone mentor gave the inexperienced men their first taste of High school football and sent them through a short but stiff scrimmage session.

Unfamiliar with their individual assignments, and showing their "greenness," the men nevertheless showed up well enough to convince the railbirds that next year's grid machine will be as good as that of the past season.

Two of the first-stringers, Benjie Estes and Denny Sanders, were absent from the workout; and Bud McAbee, last year's captain, and Buck Gillenwater filled in at their positions. Only three lettermen, Estes, center; Malone, end, and Walker, halfback, are returning from last year's eleven. And to augment them only three squad men will return—Peter Gilreath, half; James Evans, end, and John Harris, tackle.

Of the newcomers, Talmage Pounds, A. J. Clark, Denny Sanders and Billie Pope Hall are most promising. Clark, guard, has been especially outstanding, despite his small frame. Others who have showed promise in the practice sessions are Zeb Moore, Paul Dodson, Chester Wattenberger and Blackie Montgomery.

Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Howard and daughter, Phyllis, returned yesterday from the Howard Ranch where they spent the week-end with Mr. Howard's mother, Mrs. M. T. Howard and with Mr. and Mrs. Lesley Calhoun.
