Little Theater Scores Again With 2nd Presentation Of Mystery Play

The Memphis Little Theater presented its final showing of Frederick Rath's murder mystery, "The First Night" last night at the high school auditorium before the second appreciative audience.

The second showing of the play was pronounced an even better production than the first, with every member of the cast handling his or her part perfectly, without a sense of any kind.

SOLDIERS ROUT STRIKERS' MOB

National Guardsmen Throw Tear Gas Bombs Into Two Groups At Toledo

TOLEDO, May 24.—National guardsmen, who began patrolling the area around the Electric Auto Lite company plant here today after a night of rioting by strikers and sympathizers, threw tear gas bombs into the two groups of men who threatened the guard line today, routing the men.

More than a score of tear gas bombs were thrown at two groups of jeering strikers and sympathizers after the crowd refused to comply with instructions of the soldiers to keep out of the vicinity of the plant.

Fresh violence broke out today when strikers began throwing rocks at national guardsmen and guards responded with a tear gas barrage.

During the night of rioting scores suffered broken bones, lacerations and smarting eyes.

Seven hundred militiamen lifted the siege of the strikers which had held 1,500 employes virtual prisoners in the factory for 15 hours.

Damage done to the plant was estimated at $150,000.

Clyde and Bonnie Taken to Dallas

DALLAS, May 24.—Ambulances brought the bullet torn bodies of Clyde Barrow, the Southwest's No. 1 desperado, and his gun-toting, cigar-smoking moll, Bonnie Parker, back to Dallas today.

The notorious fugitives were shot by officers in ambush in central Louisiana yesterday morning.

The sheriff's office said the automobile Barrow and Parker were riding in at the time they were slain belongs to Jessie Warren of Topeka, Kansas. The car was stolen from Warren's home on April 29th.

Separate funerals will be held tomorrow for Clyde Barrow and Bonnie Parker, the families indicated.

Burial is being contemplated in different Dallas cemeteries. Clyde may be buried beside his brother, Buck, who was slain by officers in an Iowa gun fight last year.

Clyde's body bore 40 bullet holes.

COTTON SCHOOL TO HAVE TEST TOMORROW

To Make Attempt To Get Bigger School Here Next Year

Large crowds and a great deal of interest continue to feature the cotton classing school held here this week, conducted by J. W. Doremus and J. A. Albritton.

Some 30 cotton classing students are expected to take the examination tomorrow.

The school is divided into two divisions, one division for the beginners, and the other for the ginners and more experienced men in handling cotton.

A class period of the beginners is composed chiefly of grading and stapling 25 specimens of cotton lint, while the ginners grade and staple 50 specimens at each class period.

Spletstoesser, railroad clerk, was charged with murder today for the shooting of Edward Rex Waller, candidate for Texas state treasurer, in front of the post office here.

INJURED DURING FETE HELD AT SALISBURY

Ella Mae Baker Hurt While Pupil Plays With Rifle

Miss Ella Mae Baker, a school teacher at Salisbury, six miles southeast of here, was critically injured late yesterday afternoon when she was struck in the neck by a bullet from an accidentally discharged rifle, during a social gathering at the Salisbury teachers' conference.

She was rushed to a hospital here, where she is receiving medical treatment.

Slightly Improved

Early this afternoon she was reported as "slightly improved."

The gun was reported to have been in the hands of Miss Marie Rich, 17-year-old Salisbury student, at the time it was discharged. She received medical treatment this morning at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Rich, near Salisbury, and was reported in "an extremely frightened condition and suffering from a severe shock."

Girl In Room

The accident occurred shortly after 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon while an ice cream supper was in progress at the teachers' conference, honoring the girls' volleyball team, of which Miss Baker was coach and Miss Rich a member.

It was reported that seven or eight girls had gathered in one room of the teachers' conference and playing. Miss Rich was said to have picked up the gun, which was standing in a corner of the room.

Rushed to Memphis

Miss Baker walked into the room and, quoting lines from a play the girls had recently presented, said, "One, two, three, shoot." The gun was discharged, the bullet striking below the left ear and ranging upward into the back of the neck.

A number of people were in an adjoining room. As Miss Baker fell to the floor, T. O. Neely, Salisbury superintendent and brother-in-law to Miss Baker, who was nearest the door, picked her up and placed her in an automobile belonging to Miss Mary Foreman, another teacher, and brought her to the Clark and Goodall hospital here.

Gun Was Handled

It was stated that Garvis Davis and several other boys had returned from a hunting trip a short time before and left the gun at the teachers' conference. It had been handled several times before it went off, witnesses reported. Davis returned for the gun just as the accident occurred.

Miss Baker is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. J. Baker, who live one and one-half miles south of Friendship, where they moved last fall from Dallas. She has six sisters. (Continued on page 4)

MEMPHIANS SEE MANY SCENES AT CAPITOL

See Action In Senate And House—Also At Wrestling Match

We found King Stephens and family and Herschel Montgomery shortly after arriving in Washington Saturday, May 5, and they were seemingly glad to see us; and that was mutual—on the road four days without seeing any person we knew—certainly one would be glad to see old friends.

Rooms were obtained in the next block to the Stephens' at 2640 N. E. 10th Street. Herschel has a room here, and a young man from Austin, by the name of Long occupies another room. There is not a day passes that the whole Texas outfit does not get together for a grabfest or sightseeing trip.

Sunday, following our arrival in Washington Mr. and Mrs. Stephens took us for a drive over the city to give us an opportunity to see just a few of the many things that are here to see. On this drive we saw many of the government buildings from the outside, the beautiful Potomac; the famous cherry blossoms—the white blossoms were all gone, but the pink double-blossoms were in their glory—one of the most beautiful sights in the way of flowers we have ever been privileged to see. (The cherry trees are from Japan, they do not bear fruit); the White House and grounds, and dozens of other sights.

Sees Wrestling Match Monday, the writer was inducted into the proof-reading department of the government printing office where at least 200 others work, and in the building some five thousand are employed. A more detailed report of this department of the government will be given later.

Thursday night, in company with Mr. and Mrs. Stephens, we saw championship wrestlers 'fight' for honors. Prize fights are kid fights in comparison to the wrestling bouts.

Friday, being off day for Herschel and the writer at the G. P. O., we took advantage of the occasion to visit Senator Tom Connally and Congressman Marvin Jones in their offices, and later we saw both the Senate and the House in action. After investigating the many things done in Congress during the past year to relieve the depression we have decided that a monumental work has been done and that it took great men to do it. Most of the lawmakers are conscientious and much in earnest, while, of course, all that some of them want is to get the people "back home" to think they ought to be sent back here for another term.

What! No Hooley? We didn't get to see Hooley Long or DePriest, and were very much disappointed (?).

We had a close-up view of Vice-President John N. Garner in action presiding over the Senate; and of Speaker Rainey in the House. Heard one of the Texas Congressmen "pour it on" a representative from one of the New England states who wanted a relief bill so worded that only the thickly settled parts of the country would be entitled to relief,

Real 'Reds' Invade Washington

A colorful group were the Indians who descended on Washington for hearings on the Wheeler-Howard bill, which seeks to give more self-government to the native Americans. Shows here against the capitol dome background is one delegation, wearing a blend of modern clothing and tribal garb, with Chief Saluskin of the Yakimas in the splendor of full regalia.

and the wide-open spaces would have to go begging. The Texas man got him told and no mistakes.

During our short visit with Senator Connally, and Congressman Jones, we could not help but observe the lines of care wrinkling their faces due to the intensely hard work of the past year in leading their respective branches of government in passing laws that were beneficial to America. They are leaders and highly respected by their colleagues and the people who have kept in touch with their work.

Introduces New Bill President Roosevelt had a bill introduced in Congress Monday, May 14, to provide for several billion dollars relief in home construction and improvements. It was a move to alleviate distress, help employment and raise living standards, he said. This bill will likely take up two or three weeks of Congress for final disposition.

Members of Congress from the drought-stricken areas organized Monday to demand an immediate and widespread relief program. They selected nine members to cooperate with administrative agencies in meeting the immediate emergencies and to handle any legislation that may become necessary to afford future relief until the drought section can rehabilitate itself.

President Roosevelt signed the next tax bill last week, which is designed to raise 417 million in new revenue, close loopholes which in the past have been the avenues of widespread tax avoidance, and lessen the tax burden upon smaller incomes. Surtax and estate tax rates are increased, the theory being that a man who works for his living should be taxed less heavily than the man whose income is derived from incomes or inheritances. Further emphasis upon the idea of smaller taxes for persons whose income is derived from wages or salary is given in two other features of the bill.

Virginia's great heroes. When the statues of Washington and Lee were offered by Virginia 23 years ago, some northern member of Congress pooh-hoed and exclaimed that it would be treason to have a "rebel general in rebel uniform in the capitol of the United States." Senator David I. Walsh, democrat of Massachusetts, where the Yankees come from, will accept the statue on behalf of the United States government; Senator Carter Glass of Virginia will preside; Governor George C. BIG TOP by BEULAH POYNTER

...wound daily for a week, although Con insisted the injury was nothing. He was flattered by these attentions. The sting of Donna's repulsion still rankled, though he loved her with all the fervor of his Latin temperament. Con was perfectly aware of Madeline's love for him, as was every one else in the circus. He accepted it as homage due his position as the star performer of the troupe.

Now and then he invited her to dinner at a hotel or restaurant as a change from the fare in the mess tent. Madeline always made the most of these occasions, combing her hair as Donna had worn hers, dressing as nearly as possible like Donna and aping her mannerisms until the man was a trifle bewildered. He wondered why, when the two girls were so alike, he should love one and not the other.

A month went by, then six weeks. The heat became intense. Under the tent the air was heavy, almost intolerable. The poor animals, forced to stay in small quarters, suffered and snarled and roared and spit. The staterooms in the pullman cars were stifling. Electric fans merely stirred the fetid, stifling air.

Under the glare of a thousand blazing lights the performers tried to concentrate on their numbers, to forget their discomfort and put forth their best efforts, but the acts moved slowly and without pep. A grizzled bear sickened and died. Renfro tore his hair and wailed that there was a jinx on the show and they might as well close.

His wife, who had heard the same wail many times for once listened to him. First she said, "Well, why don't you stop beefing and get out of the jinx?"

"I wish to God I could! If you can tell me who it is I'll fire him quick enough."

"It's not a 'him'. It's that Madeline Gabriel."

"Oh, you've got it in for Madeline because she's alone. She's all right."

"Maybe she is, but she's a trouble-maker. Look at the way she is trailing Con! Look how she strung along Ned Trafford—"

"What?"

"I'm not a gossip, but I'm not as blind as you are and I've seen a few things. I'd be glad to see Madeline go. It's not because she's a 'single' but because she is no good."

"If I thought that, I'd fire her quick as shooting. She was darned decent about going on with the act alone and—shucks, are you sure she and Trafford—?"

"Why do you suppose he has gone to pieces the way he has? He was crazy about Madeline but he knew enough to keep his distance if she hadn't led him on. If you don't believe me, ask anyone in the show. And watch her with Con!"

Fortunately for Madeline, this conversation took place after an afternoon performance while she and Con were sitting at a table in a Chinese restaurant some distance from the lot. Madeline had received a letter that day written by Donna herself, the first letter she had written since the accident. Madeline produced it proudly and waved it before Con's eyes.

"Why the heck does she address you as Donna?" he demanded, his face darkening as it always did when the other girl's name was mentioned.

"That's a long story, darling. I'll tell you some day when I feel like confessing. Wouldn't you like to read what she has to say?"

"No. Maybe she'll write to me now."

Madeline frowned. She studied the inlaid pearl of the table before her and her quick wits began to dance. "No, Con," she said slowly, "I don't believe she will. I don't think you'll ever see Donna again."

"What makes you say that? She is coming back to the show, isn't she?"

"No, she isn't."

"You mean the injury was worse than we thought?"

"No. She—oh, Con, darling, I hate to tell you! I know how you love Donna and I know how terribly this will hurt you. But you knew you never had a chance with her, didn't you? You knew that, while she was fond of you and always liked you, she wouldn't ever think of marrying you. You'll just have to square your shoulders and—"

"Cut out the sob stuff" he broke in harshly. "Spill it!"

"She's going to be married."

"To the cousin?"

"He's my cousin, not hers. Yes, they're going to be married."

Con sat motionless, his face slowly growing whiter and whiter. His hands gripped the arms of his chair and the knuckles stood out in ridges. Then he laughed. "Well, that's that! What do we eat—chop suey or chop mein?"

"You mean you don't care?"

Madeline cried hysterically. "You really don't care?"

"No woman is going to ruin my appetite," Con answered.

But Madeline, trembling over the success of her falsehood, noticed that his food left the table untouched. She suggested that they return to the circus lot before it was really necessary to do so. She had scored a triumph, but if Con should write to Donna to confirm her statement, the situation might not be so rosy. A long walk in a shadowy lane was more conducive to sentiment than a warm Chinese restaurant.

Renfro was waiting for them at the dressing tent. "Come over here Madeline," he said. "I want to talk to you."

...The ever-present fear of receiving a two week's notice gripped the girl. She looked appealingly toward Con. "What's the matter, Chief?" the animal trainer asked. "You don't object to Madeline stepping out with me once in a while do you?"

"Not exactly. But she's the only girl alone in this show and she has to watch where she steps. I've been thinking it over. It's a responsibility—they're talking. I think you're a swell kid Madeline, but hell! I broke the rule never to have single girls in the show when I kept you on. It's too much trouble and I believe—"

"Who's been talking?" Con demanded.

"Er—everyone. You and Madeline are pretty thick. Then—"

"Why shouldn't I be?"

"Hush, Con!" Madeline interrupted with a wan smile. "If I'm not wanted I'll go. I thought when I did everything I could after poor Donna was hurt it would be appreciated, but I guess it wasn't."

He looked at her, half-startled. "That's an idea! That is an idea. I'll make you part of my act!" (To Be Continued)

Many a girl would rather be president than write.

BARROW FOLLOWS 'OUTLAW TRAIL'

CLYDE Barrow and Bonnie Parker died yesterday as they had mercilessly taken the lives of many of their victims—at the point of machine guns, without a chance to defend themselves. They died as they had lived—fast, furious, dangerous until the end.

They followed the trail of outlaws, trying to buck a systematic order that demands consideration of others' rights and property. Like so many infamous outlaws, Billy the Kid, Joaquin Muerietta, Jesse James, and others, death came suddenly.

Traveling at a speed of 80 miles an hour in a powerful automobile, they attempted to run the gauntlet of withering police fire, and at that speed they died in the front seat of their car, Bonnie with a machine gun in her lap.

Police laid in wait for weeks for them to show up at their Black Lake hideout south of Shreveport, La. Finally they ran into the trap, and died as they should have died, without a chance.

Following the trail blazed by many others, John Dillinger and "Pretty Boy" Floyd (we've heard little of him lately—perhaps he decided the woods were too thick with officers toting sawed-off shotguns and sub-machine guns) will fall before long. The police do not quit once they have taken up a trail. They have an advantage because they can add to their forces continually. They will never take Dillinger alive again. They do not want him that way. They should "shoot first and ask questions later."

Barrow was only a little more than 20 years old, 23 if our memory is not playing a trick. But that is a ripe old age in his racket. Dillinger is an older man, but he has not reached what we call middle age. He probably never will.

The slaying of Barrow brings to mind several cases that stand out in history and fables of the Southwest's bad men.

Billy the Kid is one of the most famous of this group. He was killed at the age of 21. Before then, however, he murdered 21 men—one for every year of his life—"not counting negroes and chinamen."

Billy the Kid killed his first man when he was 12 years old, deftly thrusting a pocket knife three times into the back of the victim during a saloon brawl. After that he lived by his wits and six-gun. Every minute he was a hunted man until the moment he fell before the firing of Sheriff Pat Garrett, a former friend.

Jesse James was outlawed in 1866 and it took 16 years to bring him down. He made a name for himself that has become a synonym of banditry, robbing, stealing, murdering. He was known to have killed 25 men.

James died at the hands of one of his own men. After a $10,000 price had been placed on his head, James made one mistake. While alone with one Bob Ford, he turned his back upon his companion and died a minute later. Writers have wondered at this action, for it is claimed that James knew that Ford planned to kill him.

Harry Tracy died in still another manner—by his own hand. One writer says that "Tracy cut almost exactly the same swath at the turn of the century that John Dillinger is cutting today, and there are so many parallels in their careers as almost to suggest how Dillinger may die."

Tracy was sent to a penitentiary in Oregon. With smuggled rifles he and a companion shot their way out, killing three guards and wounding half a dozen others. They stole horses and fled.

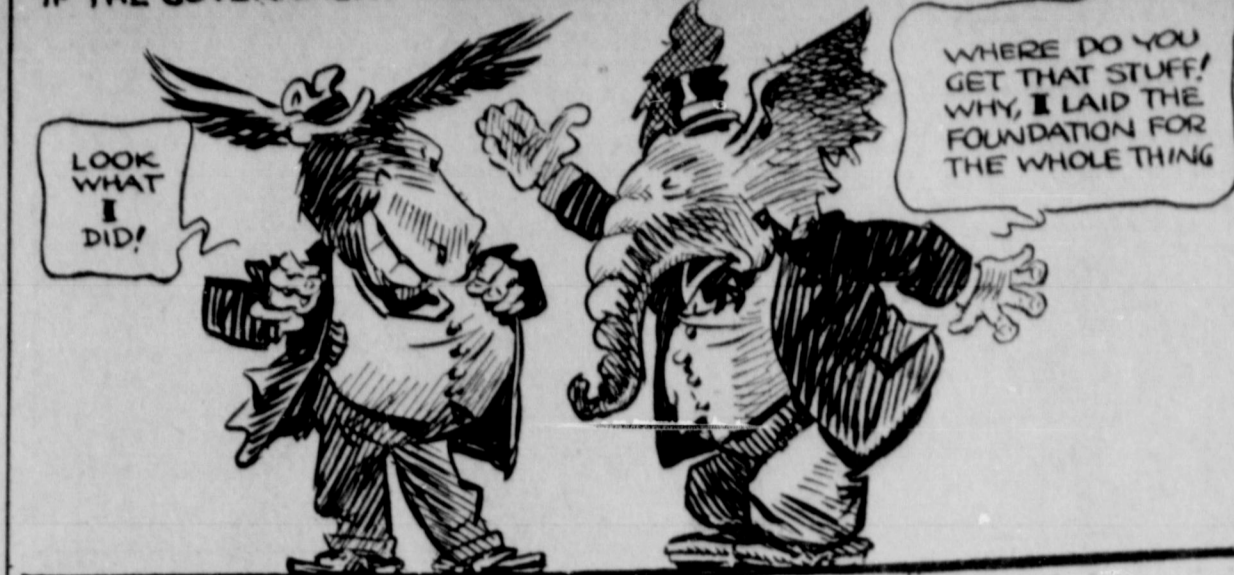

On numerous occasions he shot his way out of traps, often using kidnaped victims as body guards. On one occasion, as he came running from a house, rifle blazing, he was wounded. He stumbled into a wheat field and "with the riflemen closing in and the 'Tracy luck' played out at last, Harry Tracy's rifle ended another life—his own."

Senatorial and gubernatorial contests in this spring's primary in Pennsylvania threaten to be so close that they may have to resort to continuing the ballots instead of weighing them.—Corsicana Daily Sun.

HEALTH

BY DR MORRIS FISHBEN
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygeia, the Health Magazine

You might keep the following food suggestions handy for reference, if you are susceptible to attacks of indigestion. They come from one of the largest clinics in the United States.

"Orange juice, grapefruit (avoid the fiber in the compartments), cantaloupe and melons are inadvisable. Coffee, if desired, is allowed in moderation; it sometimes causes flatulence.

"Chocolate, cocoa or tea, one or two eggs with ham or bacon (avoid the tougher part of the bacon), white bread, toast or zwieback with butter, any smooth mush, such as farina, germea, cream of wheat, cornmeal or rolled oats (a fine oatmeal can be obtained by calling for Robinson's Scotch Groats), puffed cereals and corn flakes are allowed.

"Shredded wheat biscuits and other coarse breakfast foods are not allowed. Bran is particularly harmful. Graham bread is permitted, but not the coarser whole wheat bread.

"Suggestions for lunch and dinner: In fruit cocktails avoid the pieces of orange and pineapple. Broths, bouillon, cream soups, and chowder are allowed, also meat, fish or chicken, squab or game, excepting duck (avoid the fibrous parts and gristle).

"Veal may be tried; it is not digested well by many persons. Eat no smoked fish or pork. Crab and lobster would be better left alone. Oysters and sausage may be tried later.

"Bread and butter are allowed, and hot biscuits if they are made small so as to consist mainly of crust. Rice, potatoes, mashed, hashed brown or French fried, are allowed; and later may be added sweet potatoes, hominy, tomatoes stewed, strained and thickened with cracker or bread crumbs, well-cooked cauliflower tops with cream sauce, asparagus tips, Brussels sprouts, squash, beets, turnips, creamed spinach, Italian pastes, noodles, macaroni and spaghetti cooked soft, puree of peas, beans, lentils, lima beans or artichoke hearts.

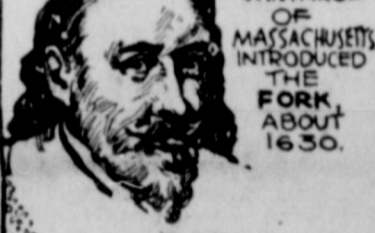

"All skins or fiber should be removed by passing the food through a ricer. Sweet corn may be used if passed through a colander. There are practically no other vegetables that can be pureed to advantage. "String beans (large tender string beans, which can be used as a vegetable or salad, can now be obtained in cans) are allowed if they are young and tender.

"No salad should be taken at first. Later you may try a little tender lettuce with apples or

GOVERNOR WINTHROP OF MASSACHUSETTS INTRODUCED THE FORK ABOUT 1630.

FIRST GAME LAW PASSED BY MASSACHUSETTS 1817.

Answers to Previous Questions
MANY eminent clergymen denounced the use of the fork, at the time of its introduction, although Governor Winthrop had followed the precedent of Queen Elizabeth in England. Other states quickly followed Massachusetts with their own game laws and the U. S. in 1909 passed an act prohibiting the transportation of birds. Skene came from Aberdeen, Scotland. Later he became deputy governor of West Jersey.

bananas, tomato jelly or boiled eggs. Mayonnaise and French dressing are allowed. Potato salad without much onion may be tried. "Suggestions for dessert are: Simple puddings, custard, ice cream, jello, plain cake and canned or stewed fruits, particularly pears and peaches. Cottage cheese is permissible; other cheeses often cause trouble. Apple, peach, apricot, custard and lemon cream pie may be tried if only the filling is eaten.

"In case of constipation, stewed fruit may be taken once or twice a day. In winter the dried, pared fruit may be used for stewing. "Prunes are probably the most laxative of fruits and if eaten every other morning will relieve average cases of constipation.

"They should be cooked slowly until they almost go to pieces. If the skins are still tough, they should be discarded.

"Apple sauce is much more palatable if made from unpared and uncored apples. The sauce is strained later. It may be mixed with a little tapioca or sago. The apples may be baked. Apples, even when cooked, often cause distress.

"Blackberries and loganberries can be stewed and strained and the sweetened juice thickened with cornstarch. This makes a delicious dish with the full flavor of the berries. Later you may try fully ripe pears and peaches.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
The Democrat's Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON, May 24.—Ten years ago Senator James Couzens, the blunt and honest Michigan millionaire who made his fortune with Henry Ford, privately offered to finance a presidential campaign for Senator William E. Borah if Borah would run.

Now Couzens has given Borah the worst plastering the great Idahoan ever received from anyone. Losing his temper, he implied that Borah was too dumb to be entitled to a vote in the Senate.

Of course you simply don't say that sort of things to another senator. Least of all do you say it to Borah.

Couzens was supporting an amendment to the industrial loans bill when Borah asserted his belief that neither amendment nor bill would help the small industries. Couzens lost his temper. "The senator apparently injects himself into a subject which he has not thoroughly analyzed," he declared hotly. "I see the senator's name blazoned in newspaper headlines as endorsing the infamous McLeod bill.

"I do not know how accurate the newspapers are in that statement, but anyone who is so lacking in judgment as to endorse the so-called McLeod bill is not entitled, in my judgement, to vote on the floor of the Senate."

Borah took it calmly, but pressed the question. Couzens, more mildly, explained.

Couzens wouldn't repeat his presidential campaign offer today, but he doesn't really feel that way about Borah. Hard work at the London conference and in the Michigan banking mess, steady grinding on tax, banking, and other difficult measures has frayed his nerves.

Some years ago, Couzens rashly remarked that senators had "too little to do." After that, leaders gave him so much to do that the work is wearing him down.

Wanted—A Cheering Name

President and Mrs. Roosevelt are the chief instigators of the plot to change the name of "Subsistence Homesteaders" to something more attractive. The present name is too suggestive of somebody down on his knees, grubbing around in a vegetable patch for enough carrots to fend off starvation.

Security Homesteaders" is to most officials the best of many new names submitted in response to a false report that a prize was being offered. But Director M. L. Wilson still hopes someone will coin an even better phrase.

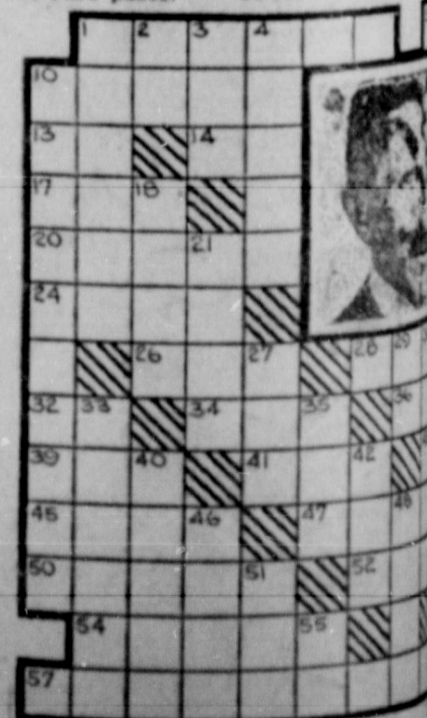

Wilson says the three big ideas of the S. H. Project are security, constructive use of leisure time, and opportunity for craftsmanship and self-expression.

AVIATOR VISITS SCENE OF HIS FIRST CRACK-UP By Associated Press. McKINNEY, May 24.—Col. Art Goebel, famous aviator, has been the guest of his friends, A. H. Eubanks and F. B. Pope, here the past few days, prior to returning to his home at Los Angeles, Calif. Col. Goebel, who won international fame as an aviator in 1927, when he won the Dole flight to Hawaii, suffered his first crack-up in McKinney while taking off from a local field three years ago. His ship crashed when a wind and rainstorm thrust it into a tree, breaking his leg and killing outright his mechanic, Lt. Riis. After his return to California, Col. Goebel will decide whether he will enter the European air races to be held soon, from London to Sidney, Australia.

New U. S. "Floating Airfield" to Carry 72 Planes

Unlike other aircraft carriers, which have been converted from colliers and cruisers, the Ranger is the first Navy craft to be designed and built expressly for carrier work. Able to carry 72 planes, 1,100 men and speed more than 29 knots an hour, the Ranger, built at a cost of $21,000,000, is shown steaming by Old Point Comfort en route to her first real "shakedown test" before being turned over to the Navy on May 26.

Fighting Reminder Of A Presidential Election In Mexico

MEXICO, D. F. May 24.—Pistol and machine gun fire and hand to hand fighting in the principal streets of the capitol Sunday morning last week served as a forceful reminder to the country that presidential elections are only a little more than six weeks away. The fighting and shooting, in which partisans of the official candidates, General Lazaro Cardenas, and of one of his four opponents, General Antonio Villarreal, were the participants, have been the only serious disorders to live an unsensational campaign in which Cardenas has made the only declarations of unusual importance. Speak in a church in a small town in the southern state of Tabasco, the candidate of the dominant national revolutionary party (P. N. R.) declared, according to the version of the party's newspaper El Nacional, that if he is elected he will do all in his power to have laws passed to prohibit the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors, and thus to wipe out completely, "the vice of alcoholism" which he said the Spaniards brought to Mexico with the conquest. Although with the support of the powerful machinery of the P. N. R. he is considered certain to be elected July 1, Cardenas for the past four months since his nomination has been carrying on a strenuous campaign throughout the central and southern part of the country.
