New Air Freak Will Aim at Sub-Strato Conquest

A new candidate for air conquest honors, a plane of novel design with which its builders hope to attain high speed and safety in sub-stratosphere flying, is the Crusader, shown above in Miami, Fla., ready for its trans-continental test hop. The craft has no fuselage, but has two outrigger cylinders extending from each of its two motors to the rear rudder rack. Its designer, Thomas M. Shelton, declares it capable of perfect flying with only one motor running, an important safety factor. The plane, as it stands, is not equipped for sub-stratosphere flying, but its builders say only a few minor alterations are necessary.

The Weather

WEST TEXAS: Partly cloudy tonight and a Saturday; colder in the east central portion tonight.

Locally we have another day of sunshine. The temperature at 8:00 a.m. was 45, which climbed to 67 by noon. Sky clear.

Perl Springer pick up a roll of five-dollar bills yesterday morning and reluctantly hand them over to the owner—Jas. Williams, who had suffered a convulsion.

Henry Boyd Newman, soda sleet at Meacham's, say "Excuse me a minute, please" when going out to the curb to wait on a customer.

Dr. J. A. Odom griping about someone calling down town for him. "I wish I could come to town just once and stay as long as I want to," Doc said.

Edward Bourland asking to have his name put in the "We Saw" column again.

Tom Harrison guiding a blind man across Main street. And we'll bet Tom isn't even a Boy Scout.

Guthrie Bennett complaining about Jennie Crabb walking into the bank and screaming at the top of her voice. It scares him out of his sleep, Gutz says.

A compensation man out at the Precinct 1 WPA project site yesterday afternoon asking a million questions to about half of the workers. It developed that a laborer had smashed a finger, and the man from Lubbock was investigating the accident. From the info made over the incident we thought the project foreman had been murdered.

Mrs. W. C. Blankenship greet H. B. Bennett on the street yesterday with "Hello, Lightning."

Dr. D. C. Hyder and Frank Foxhall, Jr., say they have a wonderful opening for a fertilizer factory in this city. Information on the subject may be had from either of these gentlemen. They explained the matter at length to us, and we believe the gentlemen have something to offer to the right parties.

Mrs. T. T. Harrison inquiring the other night at the meeting of the central committee for the President's Ball if a ticket to the bridge or forty-two party would entitle one to visit the dance as a spectator.

The publisher reluctantly returning what he thought was a Christmas present from one of the local stores. He purchased several of a certain article as Christmas gifts for lady members of the Democrat staff when he sent for them, the merchant said: "Here, take one for Mr. Middleton," which the messenger did. Then on the first, Russell received a bill for all of them including the "one for Mr. Middleton."

The We Saw editor lose a bet yesterday. Three High School ladies were standing in front of the Democrat window, where their pedal extremities did not show, and he said to the sports editor, "I'll bet at least one of the three has boots on." As it turned out, it was the first time we've seen as many as three school girls in one bunch without at least one pair of boots.

Reginal Greenhaw learning the express business. He picked a great day to start—when the snow was on the ground two inches deep.

Mrs. Zeb Moore still bragging about the Christmas present she got off the Thursday Night Bridge-Club Christmas tree.

Clarence Billington telling Mrs. Ara Foust that he felt bad about her getting married. Clarence said he's always figured he might be the lucky man.

KEEP YOUR HEAD UP AND GRIN

NEEDLESS to say, agricultural interests of the south and west are decidedly in the dumps since the adverse decision of the Supreme Court on the A.A.A. set-up, but in this section of the country we feel that there is, after all, no cause for alarm.

During the past few years, when in this section drought has been piled upon depression, the A. A. A. has no doubt been a life-saver for the agricultural interests. Now, however, the drought is a thing of the past and the depression is on its way out.

Hall County has the best season in the ground for next year's crops of any for the past five years, and next year's crops in Hall County are going to be something to brag about.

Hall County and Hall County farmers got along splendidly before the A.A.A. was ever thought of—and they will get along long after the A.A.A. is just a memory.

Just like everything else, the fall of the A.A.A. has two sides to it. It will cut off the fat checks which have been coming to the farmers for assistance during the hard times, but, at the same time, it will remove the restrictions as to production, and will enable the farmer who uses his head to utilize his productive acres to the best advantage.

After all is said and done, the prosperity of the farmers of Hall County or any other county will be dependent upon the manner in which they take advantage of the natural resources which are theirs.

The farmer who produces on his place the meats, poultry and dairy products he uses on his table, with a surplus for the market, and feeds his live stock with products of his own acres, will come out at the end of the year with a profit shown on his ledger. Some years he will make more than others, but when he "lives at home," his "money crop" will always be "velvet."

The main thing just now, as we see it, is to keep a stiff upper lip and hit the ball. Just forget the depression, the drought and the defunct A.A.A. and devote your time to using the productive acres nature has given you to the best advantage . . . and soon you can look back and smile at the alarm with which you viewed the downfall of the A.A.A.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON.—I have to live in Washington and appreciate the candor of William E. Borah for a can presidential nomination.

Stories about "the er" are of but mild alongside the general as to whether now is a "new Borah."

For the capital the Idaho statesman to the classic and reference made to ex-Senator Jim Reeb when he called Borah "Beginner."

In other words, speak of Borah around are sure to be told that er finishes anything, plenty of chapter and that.

But it's something when Borah allows to be used in the primaries and Borah was fore in any such station as he is today.

First, it is conceded political observers have got more votes than the Republicans might the election were tomorrow.

Second, the fate of might well be in Borah were he to consider party in case neither nor its candidate should factory to him.

Through the count name is one to count all times and right a large hunk of sent Republicans to liber party.

It is also possible him fading right out ture and having out at all on the political 1936.

Uncertainty here what the Republicans been both demonstrated as a result entry.

Touring around among senators the writer found several Borah a fairly good which may be significant of the fact that Washington had been this was more radical than the East would accept.

But most of the Borah as a strong party that his nomination either the overthrow O. P.'s titular boss national committee, a victim among party Borah is virtually the of beating Roosevelt distinct understanding Borah and the party's leaders.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

BY MARY E. DAGUE
NEA Service Staff Writer

THE other day at a luncheon the hostess served popovers filled with creamed lobster and every woman there begged for the recipe. Probably because it was a relief to get away from the stereotyped patty shell.

Popovers make good substitutes for cream puff shells, too. You fill them with fruit mixed with whipped cream or with the usual English cream filling and serve with coffee.

Popovers
One cup milk, 2 eggs, 1 cup flour, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 1 tablespoon melted butter.

Sift flour into mixing bowl. Add eggs and milk and salt and beat with a Dover beater for five minutes. Add melted butter and beat about a minute longer. Put 2 tablespoons batter in each custard cup and bake forty minutes in a hot oven (400 degrees F.)

Perhaps the luncheon menu my hostess served will appeal to your guests, too, so here it is.

Creamed lobster in popovers, fresh vegetable salad in lettuce cups, tiny whole wheat rolls, olives and pickles, paradise cream, coffee.

Paradise Cream
One tablespoon granulated gelatin, 1 cup cold milk, 1-2 cup powdered sugar, 1 cup blanched almonds, 1 cup candied cherries, 1 dozen marshmallows, 1 pint whipping cream, few grains salt, 1-2 teaspoon vanilla.

Heat 1-4 cup milk and add marshmallows. Let stand while mixing pudding. Soften gelatin in remaining cold milk. Stir over hot water until dissolved. Add to marshmallows with sugar, nuts

Tomorrow's Menu

BREAKFAST: Oranges, cereal, cream, rice waffles with syrup, milk, coffee.

LUNCHEON: Popovers filled with creamed lobster, tomato salad, apple ginger pudding, milk, tea.

DINNER: Rabbit and bacon pie, creamed Jerusalem artichokes, escarole and cucumber salad, date pudding, milk, coffee.

coarsely chopped, cherries cut in quarters, salt, vanilla and cream whipped until firm. Turn into a mold and let stand in refrigerator for twenty-four hours. Unmold and serve with a garnish of whipped cream and whole cherries.

Creamed Lobster
Two cups lobster meat, 3 tablespoons butter, 2 tablespoons flour, 1 cup milk, 1-2 cup cream, 1 teaspoon salt, 1-8 teaspoon pepper, 2 tablespoons sherry, yolks 2 eggs.

Melt butter without discoloring and stir in flour. Cook and stir until bubbly and gradually add milk and cream, salt and pepper. Cook and stir until boiling. Beat egg yolks with sherry and add with lobster meat to sauce. Cook until thick and hot, stirring all the time, but do not let boil again. Serve in popover shells with a sprig of parsley topping each.

Wedges of tomato, cubes of cucumber, thin slices of radishes, wide slices of celery and an occasional paper-thin slice of onion combine to make a refreshing salad for a January luncheon. Serve with a well seasoned French dressing.

With All My Love

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Against the wishes of her grandmother, aristocratic MRS. WILLIARD CAMERON, DANA WESTBROOK marries DR. SCOTT STANLEY, struggling young physician.

Before her marriage, RONALD MOORE had been in love with her. NANCY, Dana's half-sister, loves RONALD, but hides her feeling behind a disdainful attitude.

Both Mrs. Cameron and Paula Long, who has loved Scott for years, hope the marriage will not last.

PAULA LONG'S infatuation for Scott finally arouses Dana's jealousy. After a misunderstanding, she returns to her grandmother's home. Mrs. Cameron uses her influence to make the separation permanent, and the break between the young couple widens.

Scott believes Dana left him because she was tired of being poor. He becomes a partner of the city's most successful physician, DR. OSBORNE.

Dr. Osborne is called when Dana's grandmother becomes ill. Scott goes in the other doctor's place. After he leaves Dana hears a low whistle from the garden and she rushes there, expecting to find Scott.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXI

The beach was illuminated by a winter moon. The path where Dana and Scott had danced two summers before was a broad white ribbon in the moon's cold light. But there was no one at all in the garden. No hatless, blond man with a teasing light in his eyes and an impudent grin.

Gaunt trees, shorn of their leaves, rustled eerily in the wind, and strange, dark shadows moved about her. Dana walked slowly toward the house.

In the doorway stood Aunt Ellen. "Dana! What could you be thinking of—coming to the garden on a November night. I couldn't imagine what had happened when you rushed down the stairs. So I followed you, and then I couldn't believe my eyes. You mustn't do this again. You might have pneumonia!"

"It is cold out here," Dana answered in a lifeless voice. "No, I won't come again."

"After all, when you came to the garden, there was nothing. Perhaps a mocking bird in the tree had imitated that whistle so clearly. A mocking bird."

Aunt Ellen looked tired and discouraged. Dana slipped her arm around her aunt. "After supper you'd better tuck yourself into bed. This has been a stiff day for you."

"Well, everything's all right now," Aunt Ellen said. "Now that Agatha's going to pull through."

Dana was remembering something. Grandmother was going to get well, if she would diet and keep quiet a few days. But Dana would stick to it. Grandmother had said it was best for her to marry Ronnie. Grandmother was right, of course.

Aunt Ellen had thought that Scott would come around and plead for forgiveness on his knees. That was the way men did in the eighties and nineties. But Grandmother was wiser. She knew that in these days a past love is quickly forgotten.

Dana dressed carefully that evening, touching up her lips to extra brightness. She wore a dress Ronnie particularly liked—a dress of sky-blue, made on slim lines with a youthful collar and big sleeves. The girl in the blue dress, in the mirror, had bitter eyes and her red lips had a mocking curve. All the touching up in the world could not hide that.

Ronnie was waiting downstairs. When Dana appeared, he would notice the blue dress. Ronnie was going to be one of those husbands who noticed clothes. Scott got only an effect, missing details entirely. Ronnie would notice, too, the subtle change in her tonight. He would not know that everything she had done had been planned. That the invitation in her eyes was as deliberate as her previous efforts to discourage him had been.

"Dana," said Ronnie, as they sped swiftly along in the crisp night air, "I went away last summer because I wanted you to miss me. I stayed away hoping you would miss me so much that you'd never want me to leave you again. Child's stuff. But that was the way it was with me. That's the way it is now. I guess one place is as good as another to tell you. I want you. Will you marry me?"

"Nice of you to want me, Ronnie," Dana said in a husky little voice.

"Dana, say yes."

Dana smiled, and nodded her head. Ronnie stopped the car. "Make it soon," he pleaded. "I've been so lonely. I want you so much! There isn't any use in waiting, is there?"

"Soon," Dana laughed. "That's the way I always make my marriages."

Even in the gloom, she could see the shocked expression on Ronnie's face. "Ronnie," she whispered, "you'll have to be patient with me."

Ronnie answered ardently. "All I want is the chance. I promise you're never going to be unhappy again." He took her in his arms.

One magic word: 'Engaged' and a miracle had been performed. It was as though the fairy godmother of forgotten houses had touched the Cameron home. And lo! the old place throbbed with vitality.

Dana had waited until her grandmother was well, and then one day had broken the news.

"We won't tell anyone," she said. "We're planning to go off one night soon, drive to Lakeville and be married. I couldn't bear any publicity. And Ronnie doesn't want it, either. Afterward we will go on a honeymoon. Take a cruise—that's what Ronnie wants."

Lines of care were lifted from Mrs. Cameron's face. Aunt Ellen had tried to smile, Dana saw, but couldn't manage it. Sentimental old dear!

Sarah's black face shone with excitement. Nothing could happen in the home without Sarah knowing about it.

"Not a word of this, Sarah," Mrs. Cameron warned through long habit. Miss Dana and Mr. Ronnie don't want anyone to know until after they are married."

"Yes, Ole Mis! Nobody could drag it out of me."

"There'll be lots to do. Get some cleaners in here tomorrow. I wish there was time to have draperies taken down and cleaned. Have Jake get in that garden and rake up all those leaves. We'll have the kitchen painted with some of that quick drying stuff they use now."

Dana listened, a faint smile on her face. The news of her plans to marry Scott two years ago had been received so differently. She mustn't think of that now. She must mark off those two years. From now on, it must be as though they had never happened.

"Have you told Nancy?" Mrs. Cameron turned her beaming face toward Dana.

"Not yet."

"She's up stairs in her room."

"I'll go up," Dana said.

Nancy had washed her hair and was sitting before the fire, letting it dry in a Gypsyish tangle. With the waving locks about her thin face, Nancy looked really pretty. Her eyes were charming under her straight, level brows. And she had a pretty mouth.

It was hard to tell Nancy, though Dana didn't know why. "Nancy," she said quickly, "Ronnie and I are going to be married."

That was the way, no preliminaries.

Nancy's face changed. All the softness was gone. And it was white and queer looking. Her dark eyes blazed.

"Ronnie." "Yes," said Dana bewildered. "You're going to marry Ronnie?"

"Nancy, you're not pleased?" "Pleased!" Nancy was laughing suddenly, hysterically.

So Ronnie had been right that day. Nancy did hate him. Dana spoke stiffly. "I'm sorry you feel that way about Ronnie. It's hard to understand how you could dislike him when he's so fine and when he likes you so much, too."

Nancy's long lashes swept her cheeks a moment as she lowered her eyes. "I imagine you're going to tell me you're in love with Ronnie, Dana," she said in a low voice. "Well, you can spare the words. But I suppose it doesn't matter. Nobody knows the meaning of the word nowadays."

"I'm terribly fond of Ronnie," Dana said in a low voice. "I'm through with the kind of love you mean. I hope I'll never love like that again."

"And what about Ronnie?" "What difference does it make?" Dana said slowly. "Lots of marriages are one-sided."

Nancy said, "I think you are terrible. And I'm afraid I can't wish you happiness. I'm pretty certain you won't be happy."

Her level, scornful voice followed Dana to the door. "You won't need happiness with Ronnie's money."

"I will be happy with Ronnie," Dana told herself wildly. "Happiness is peace of mind and not a fierce hunger. It's having beautiful clothes and a magnificent home and a yacht and high powered cars that stretch from Magnolia to Elm street. It's sitting on a throne with everybody envying you and catering to you."

She was weeping her heart out. Because in spite of the brave words, Nancy was right.

Jan. 11 — Texas search he found the relatives of a man who had long ago done his share for Texas. Once a grave were found, however, his task was far from done. The consent of every one of the closest living relatives had to be obtained. If some of the grandchildren were still living, their word was law. If, however, there were no grandchildren, and great grandchildren could be found by the score, their consent had to be unanimous before the body could be move from its old place.

Months passed, and Mr. Kemp found more and more graves and willing relatives. When the Legislature convened he asked for an appropriation for the reburial of the bodies in the State Cemetery.

Hoping to Sweep Seattle Election

After a fashion, Stephen I. Cullan is a machine politician for, when not campaigning for the Seattle, Wash., mayoralty, he's a machinery dealer. Cullan is pictured in the get-up that attracts crowds to his curbside campaign. He has promised that the police department will be the first one he'll help up.

His petition was granted, and today the work goes forward faster than ever. Mr. Kemp, who is now chairman of the Texas Historical Commission, has had much of his personal work removed, but still he remains to direct the project. Thurlow Weed of Austin, who is under contract to the State and is taking active control of handling the bodies can tell stirring stories of the difficulties encountered in trying to give honor to Texas's dead.

"Before we even begin trying to get the consent of the living relatives to remove a body, first, we have to find the grave," he says. "It is no simple matter finding some of them either. Sometimes the men have been buried on the banks of streams, and the water has eaten back and carried the bones away one by one.

"Sometimes the graves are out in open pastures, plowed fields, or even in the middle of dense thickets without so much as a headstone. Often only the slightest dent in the ground is the only commemoration of some of Texas's most glamorous characters.

"Texas's only secretary of navy is the most striking example of this kind. Way out on Caddo Lake lies a lonely grave, marked that grave, yet few, even in that section of the woods, know where his grave is."

That secretary of the Texas Navy was Albert Carter. He, like by a sunken spot at the foot of a tall tree. One of the greatest of the Republic of Texas lies in (Continued on Page 7)

From all over the United States neglected graves are giving up their precious contents to Texas. Mr. Weed tells of an experience he had getting Peter Bell, a champion of the Republic, from over a thousand miles away. The grave was found in a little North Carolina town, Littleton. He had the consent of all the relatives, but when was ready to start digging, the mayor of the town announced that he was not going to tolerate such foolishness. Mr. Weed rounded up a bunch of grave-diggers and set them to work after he had told the mayor that he was coming over to talk.

Mr. Weed went to see the mayor, who again said that he was not going to have his cemetery dug up, and proceeded to give argument. Finally Mr. Weed carefully explained that everything was progressing according to law and order, and that besides, the grave was already being opened and the ancient Texan almost ready to go. He, in fact, had to threaten the mayor with calling the United States marshal before said mayor was convinced.

From as far as Washington, D. C., came one of the great, James Pinckney Henderson. One was found in a Houston cemetery that had been filled over with dirt by the city. A hole had to be drilled down almost twenty feet before the grave was found.

In spite of all these handicaps in finding and getting Texas's heroes, the greatest difficulty of all is getting the consent of the relatives, Mr. Weed said. Months of correspondence and persuasion are usually necessary before actual work can be begun.

Gradually those old heroes of the Republic of Texas are gathering in the State Cemetery at the Capitol. Once again they are being massed, but Texas is having to fight for them. She is fighting for them, because they fought for her, and she wants them.

Estelline Wins Again

Special to The Democrat ESTELLINE, Jan. 10. — The Estelline Bear Cubs won another cage battle Tuesday night by defeating the Paducah Dragons 34 to 28. Playing without the services of two star regulars, Stout and Townsend, the Cubs managed to hold a margin over the Dragons the entire game.

Davis and Adams, two substitutes, showed much playing ability and proved themselves capable of holding down the two vacant positions. Clifton, flashy forward, led the Cubs by scoring 10 points. He was followed closely by Leatherwood and Edmondson. The Cubs have improved in offense, defense and passing. They have a good chance of developing into a championship team.

The Cubs have entered a tournament at Carey Friday and Saturday. Their first game is to be tonight.

BAN TESTS

BEAUMONT, Jan. 10.—County commissioners, upon request of property owners, have passed an order banning seismograph oil tests on county roads. Property owners appeared before the commissioners and charged that oil exploration crews had left huge holes in some of the roads by dynamite tests.

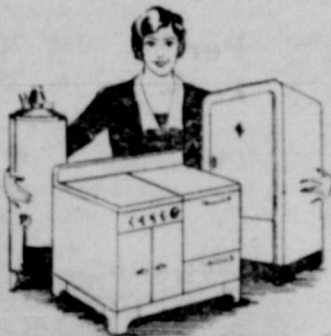

REQUEST BOND ISSUE

VERNON, Jan. 10.—A motion requesting the city commission to call a $5,000 bond issue was unanimously passed at a mass meeting in this city. The money would be used, together with WPA funds, in a recreational project for young people at City Lake Park, and the construction of a gymnasium and meeting place in the city.

PLAN DAIRY SHOW

PLAINVIEW, Jan. 10.—Plans for the Panhandle-Plains Dairy Show in this city in April were completed at a meeting of directors day before yesterday, according to announcement of H. E. Hales, of Amarillo, president of the sponsoring association. Indications are that the 1936 shows will be one of the greatest in the history of the event.

BABSON'S INDUSTRIAL REVIEW

SON PARK, Florida, Jan. 10.—A few days ago a prominent Japanese social leader, Dr. Kawago, landed at San Francisco to lecture in America. For months, under the auspices of the Federal Council of Economic Education, he will tell us about the Cooperative Movement which he founded and which is spreading in Japan.

CURIOUS OLD MOVEMENT

The cooperative movement now is receiving a flareup of publicity, it is estimated. For years it has been a minor factor in the economic life of Great Britain and the United States. Defined simply, cooperative societies are non-political organizations of consumers organized for the purpose of securing lower prices. They compete with private enterprise on an equal basis in regard to taxation and other ways.

One of these societies was organized by a group of poor weavers in Rochdale, England back in 1844. This far-sighted group of three basic principles on the entire movement has been built: (1) one member, one vote; (2) minimum interest on loans; (3) refunds on purchases.

In the humble beginning of the Rochdale store, the cooperatives have grown by leaps and bounds. Today there are 100,000 members in over 40 countries. Great Britain alone, half the population are members. Employees of the cooperatives receive good wages. Membership and capital are growing rapidly.

The latest annual report for the important English cooperatives shows 10 to 15 per cent increase in these items. Prices are 10 or lower, than in private stores, and yet a rebate of 5 and 7 1/2 per cent is given on all purchases. Furthermore, shareholders of the English cooperatives receive 3 1/2 to 4 per cent on the par value of their stock.

Sweden has also been fruitful ground for the growth of the cooperative movement because of the excellent industrial background of the country. The cooperative societies have become very influential and have been in a large measure responsible for the high standard of living in Sweden, Norway and Denmark.

In Great Britain and Scandinavia the "co-ops" have become strong enough to form "wholesales." Furthermore, in cases where prices remained at unfair levels in relation to production, the societies have built their own factories to successfully break up monopolies and trusts.

As my western readers know, consumer cooperatives are not new in the United States. Our own movement dates from 1845, but it has not gained strength here that it has abroad. This is probably due to the fact that the possibilities for profit in this new country have been greater than in the Old World and the necessity for close budget control has not been so pressing.

Nevertheless, we now have probably 10,000 cooperative societies, both large and small. The most fertile field has been in the rural areas where farmers have organized to buy feed, seed, fertilizer, and insurance advantageously. Recently the rumblings of consumer resentment in North America have been growing louder and louder.

CRUSADING SPIRIT

I firmly believe that there is dynamite in this consumer situation. We are witnessing today the prairie-fire spread of something for-nothing Townsendism from coast to coast. If a quick scheme of this type can gain such a following; imagine the power behind a consumer movement backed by elements which are fundamentally sound. In Japan, Dr. Kagawa has based his movement on the high religious note of cooperation among mankind. He has accomplished miracles.

America, always ready for something new, might likewise base this movement on a religious background and build it into a real crusade. It would be a potent influence upon our standards of living and it would become a tremendous factor in our retailing, wholesaling, and producing systems.

In many ways we would have been better off in this country if consumer pressure had been stronger since the turn of the century. In the last fifty years tremendous progress has been made in the development of technical machinery. Costs of producing goods have tumbled. One machine has taken the place of fifty workers.

Yet the benefits of this mass production system have not been passed along to consumers in terms of lower prices. Purchasing power determines the volume of business and there is only a certain amount of buying power at all times. If prices remain static, purchasing power will likewise remain stationary. If prices are lower, buying power increases and business continues to grow.

INSURANCE AGAINST CONSUMER CRUSADE

An official of a pharmaceutical company recently told me that the bottle in which his preparation was sold cost his company more than the product itself. The bottle costs less than two cents and yet the product retails for fifty cents! Personally, I feel that this sort of price policy was one of the major causes of the depression.

In forcing price reductions in situations such as this, consumer organizations perform a vital service for the nation. But at the same time, they would also raise havoc with sound merchants, manufacturers, property owners, investors, and bankers. If business men wish to prevent such unnecessary turmoil, they must immediately take the initiative and set their price house in order.

As an example of one gigantic business which has solved its price problems, study the utility industry. Power companies, with their huge overhead, were faced with a far greater problem than the average manufacturer and merchant. Through daring and ingenious rate-making policies, however, they have succeeded in boosting both their gross and net revenues in the face of rising costs.

Hence, my advice to everyone who sells goods is: Examine prices closely. Even if costs are increasing, make no mark-ups unless failure to do so means bankruptcy. Instead, cut prices as insurance against the necessity of a consumer crusade here!

Business, as registered by the Babsonchart, now stands at 9 per cent below normal and 10 per cent above a year ago!

Editor's Note—This space is open to all readers of The Democrat for the purpose of expressing their opinions on any and all subjects. All signed letters will be printed here upon request, so long as they carry clean, unbelated material. The following should be considered as the opinion of the writer, in no manner reflecting on the editorial policies of this newspaper.

Memphis, Texas
January 9, 1936

Mr. Earl C. Johnson,
Editor, Memphis Democrat,
Memphis, Texas.

Dear Mr. Johnson:

Because I possess a newspaperman's intense intolerance for deliberate misrepresentation, and in behalf of the enrollee members of the Civilian Conservation Corps, stationed at Memphis who present the "holier than thou" attitude of many of the Technical service, I am taking this means of correcting certain erroneous impressions left by the reported interviews of E. McBride, acting project superintendent of the SCS office here.

In your columns a few days ago, you quoted Mr. McBride as claiming to be the host to a group of boys from the vocational educational classes of the Memphis high school. Actually, the boys visited the CCC (not the SCS) camp as the guests of Captain Oscar P. Houston, who is in command. This fact will be verified by Mr. Carlton, who made arrangements with Captain Houston for the visit.

In another article in the same issue Mr. McBride further overstepped the bounds of propriety, if nothing else, when he outlined an ambitious program of work which in his interview he obligated and committed his service to complete. In the issue of yesterday he referred to the CCC enrollees as "soil conservation laborers." The men resent that most emphatically.

According to McBride's printed remarks, they are now committed to a certain program which considering the number of men available and other restrictions, seems well nigh impossible. I would like to call attention to the fact that it is strictly against Governmental policy to promise anything definite. While acting as publicity man for the SCS office, prior to the coming of McBride, I was forever cautioned against that error.

No one can say that the Civilian Conservation Corps will be engaged on any specific work a week from today. The soil conservation service, a minor division of the Department of Agriculture, does NOT exercise any jurisdiction over the CCC, and Mr. McBride is not the Camp Superintendent but the Project Superintendent. His authority begins when the CCC men are turned over to him in the morning and ends when the days work is completed. The Army IS NOT merely running a boarding house for a group of civilian politicians. The life of a project is entirely dependent on the final decision of the War Department, whose officers can pass on the various phases of any proposed work. ANY PROJECT can be abandoned by the War Department at any time, if in the opinion of the Army Officers in charge it is either impracticable or contrary to the best interests or the health of the men.

The SCS, unlike the CCC, is strictly a minor division of the Department of Agriculture and was created purely for political expediency. The location of this camp at Memphis was purely political. Its personnel is definitely and indelibly marked with the crimson of politics, both local and national demand, rather than political superintendence, is not here today because his attempt to conduct his planned work on a basis of natural demand, rather than political.

The CCC, a military administered organization, is engaged in literally hundreds of different kinds of work concerned with the public welfare. The Memphis Camp is composed of World War Veterans, whose aggregate qualifications cover almost every field of endeavor. They are in no sense of the word "SCS Laborers."

Incidentally, the CCC is the only one of the Administration's alphabetical agencies which has not been pointed at by the ugly finger of suspicion of graft. Naturally the politicians of every stripe devote considerable energy to belittling it because under ARMY ADMINISTRATION, it is free of their meddling.

There is an old saying, that the non-commissioned officers are the backbone of the Army. That is even truer in the CCC. They are the mainstay of the CCC. The enrollees and Enrollee Leaders immaculate and high booted soldier-aping technical foremen wouldn't have their jobs in the first place if they didn't know the right persons, and they couldn't hold those jobs were it not for the Enrollee Foremen and assistant Foremen who handle the men. Enrollee foremen got their appointments AFTER proving their ability.

It might be well to add here that the members of the CCC are GOVERNMENT EMPLOYEES, just as any postal employee, and that the CCC is not a charitable bread line as the technical service so often pretends.

I am well aware that the FACTS in this letter will be called heresy by Mr. McBride, and that in all likelihood, every trick known will probably be used to make me eat this letter. Personally I don't give a tinker's damn, if the saying of these things helps clarify the atmosphere and gets for CCC enrollees a better understanding of their functions and duties.

OFFICIAL BIRD CENTENNIAL IS ROAD RUNNER

Picturesque Bird is Selected by Texas Centennial Heads

DALLAS, Texas, Jan. 10—The Chapparral Cock or Road Runner, the only bird which is known to kill rattlesnakes, has been selected as official bird of the Texas Centennial Exposition. Announcement of this was made by General Manager William A. Webb today.

The Texas Legislature last summer debated the question of supplanting the Mockingbird as the feathered representative of the Lone Star state with the sturdy Road Runner but no final vote was taken on the matter. The Exposition adopted the idea and pictures, statuary and murals glorifying the Road Runner will feature the $15,000,000 show which opens here next June.

The Road Runner's Spanish name is Paisano, which means "fellow countryman." Mexican residents of the Southwest regard the presence of this bird near their habitations as a harbinger of good luck.

"The Road Runner is the most picturesque bird known to the Texas landscape," says Manager W. A. Webb. "It is typical of the Texas pioneer, being wholly ind-vidual in habits and characteristics, valiant, swift, cheerful comradely. He is the friend man and the foe of man's enemy, the rattlesnake. This is celebrated in Southwest song, story and history and fitting that the first great western World's Fair should recognize his admirable attributes.

The Road Runner is common throughout the Southwest states. The name comes from the bird's habit of speeding along country roads ahead of approaching vehicles. That the Chapparral Cock is the sworn enemy of rattlesnakes is acknowledged by reputable ornithologists. The attacks and kills rattlesnakes wherever and whenever they appear. The speed of a Road Runner is proverbial in the west and they are almost impossible to capture. Legends here have grown around the bird from the border states of New Mexico to the Texas Panhandle.

Lady Tock Cardui During Middle

Women who are entering middle life will be interested in the experience of Mrs. L. C. McDuff of Paragould, Ark., who writes: "I cannot say anything good about Cardui. I think it a grand medicine. I took it during change of life. I was weak, so nervous I could hardly go. I just dragged around. I had fainting spells and would give down. My back and joints hurt. I knew I had to take something to give me strength. I got of Cardui. I took about 12 bottles. It gave me relief and strength. I am now 60 years old and can do a pretty good work in the house and garden. Thousands of women testify to the benefits of Cardui. If it does not benefit you, consult a physician."

The GREAT DITCH COMES OF AGE

TWENTY ONE years ago, the Panama Canal was formally opened to traffic. In the time that it took this immense "ditch" to come of age, more than 82,000 ships have passed through it, and tolls of more than $251,000,000 have been collected.

In 1879, Ferdinand de Lesseps, the man who built the Suez Canal, tried to make a cut through the Isthmus of Panama. But half of his 87,000 laborers fell ill with tropical fever and other diseases, and the project had to be left unfinished.

The United States took a hand soon after the war with Spain, when it required two months for the battleship Oregon to travel 14,000 miles from the Pacific to the Atlantic. Through the marvelous sanitary work of Col. William C. Gorzes and the engineering skill of Col. George W. Goethals, the canal was completed within 16 years. It cost $400,000,000.

A picture of the thin strip of land which the Panama Canal crosses appears on stamps of Colombia and the Republic of Panama, issued for the Canal Zone. One is shown here.

Tonight at the local alleys, the High School league team will play the Outlaws, due to the fact that the Filling Station team not being ready for competition yet.

League directors are arranging to start the regular schedule again next week, and in future when a team fails to be ready for play when scheduled, the game will be forfeited to their opponents.

They are also considering the admission of two more teams to the league, making it a ten team set-up, instead of eight.

The game tonight should be a good one, and the public is urged to attend.

Mr. Smith reports that the Memphis association made loans to the farmers and stockmen of Hall, Donley, Childress, Hardeman, Cottle, Foard, Motley, Collingsworth and a part of Briscoe counties.

Wheat for Re-election

We are authorized to announce W. L. Wheat as a candidate for re-election as Justice of the Peace in Precinct No. 1, subject to the Democratic Primaries in July.

Mr. Wheat, who is now serving his first term in the office, needs no introduction to the old-timers in the precinct, having been a resident of Memphis since 1891, and having been a Texan for twenty years preceeding that.

During his term in the office, Mr. Wheat has conducted the affairs of the office in a manner which reflect credit upon him, and he stands for re-election upon that record.

The office of Justice of the Peace is an important cog in the machinery of county law enforcement, and Mr. Wheat states that he feels the experience he has gained in his first term will make him an even better officer than in the past.

We recommend the candidacy of Mr. Wheat to the voters of the precinct when they go to the polls and cast their votes in the coming primary.
