Senator Copeland coyly suggests that New York State has 4,500,000 acres of idle land it would like to sell to Uncle Sam.

Double—
New York insiders interpret the President's action in raising the price of domestically mined silver to 71 cents an ounce as another of those psychological rabbits—meaningless except to the silver producers.

Prophet—
Silverites also used to claim that nationalizing the metal and paying a uniform price to American mines would stop speculation. It has—in the United States. But foreign speculators have been lading in as rich and safe a grave as they've ever found.

Utility leaders aren't kidding when they say they want some sort of federal regulation bill (naturally not the Wheeler-Rayburn bill) put through.

Wall Street was sardonically amused by the stock market's failure to respond to the jacking up of silver prices. A year ago that would have started plenty of fireworks.

SHIRLEY TEMPLE ADDS YEAR ONE INCH, SEVEN POUNDS

By JOHNN COONS
HOLLYWOOD—Shirley Temple fans now get one inch and seven pounds more of their little favorite each time they see a Temple film than they did when first the curly-headed baby star made the world stand up and cheer.
For Shirley is "growing up." On April 23, which incidentally is Shakespeare's birthday, too, she will be six years old, and at Fox studio, where she is giving Will Rogers a race for top box-office honors in 1935, there will be a birthday party as there was last year when Shirley was only five and not quite so famous.
At six, the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Temple of Santa Monica can look back upon greater fame and success than many actors years ago, when the Temples let her sing and dance in short films because she seemed to enjoy singing and dancing and the movies wanted her.

Earnings: $32,000 And Up
Fox found a spot for her in "Stand Up and Cheer" and she danced and sang away with the picture. Very soon the whole film world was following the title's suggestion—for Shirley Temple. She got a raise from $150 to $1,000 a week, with about one-fourth that figure extra as compensation for her mother, who is in constant attendance. So Shirley three months from now, on completing her first year at this weekly wage, will have to her credit approximately $52,000 with interest. Her father, branch manager of a bank, is investing her earnings for her.

How much Shirley will have earned before she is "through" in pictures is uncertain. Jackie Coogan was making pictures through his twelfth year, and so is Jackie Cooper, 12 now. When Shirley was on the verge of her present fame her mother, known in Hollywood as a sensible woman, said Shirley would remain in films only as long as she enjoyed them. Today she says the same. When the time comes, Shirley will be sent to finishing school. Other than that, there are no plans for her future. The studio-parental campaign to keep Shirley "natural and unspoiled" has been successful or appearances deceive. This child who has her own star bungalow is not excited by seeing pictures of herself, and by now when she sees her name in lights she spells it out only so far as S-H-I-R before she says "Oh, that's my name" and drops the subject as if in dispointment that the sign developed into nothing more interesting. When she received the applause of all Hollywood with her academy statuette of honor recently, she accepted her mothers' explanation for the acclaim without question. "They're giving you this, Shirley," her mother said, "because you've worked hard and helped to make many people happy, just as all the people here tonight have worked hard." She gets as many as 6,000 fan letters a week, and has a doll, a dress, a book, and a flower—a gladiolus—named after her. She gets a percentage of the profits on the first three, the flower being purely honorary tribute.

Baylor University, is planning on spending Easter holidays in Houston with her father, accompanied by her daughter, Jean. For the summer she will return to Big Spring to be with her grandmother and her uncle, R. L. Price, and Mrs. Price, until fall when she will enter school at Galveston.

has paralleled by cases of corn and wheat. But the case of cotton, as any southern economist knows, is unique.

But northern legislators have never appreciated this and it may require the efforts of a united South to alter their traditional views.

Under The Dome At Austin

By GORDON R. SHEAKER

AUSTIN (UP)—A north and south fishing highway was one of the proposals before the Texas legislature this week. House members refused to make an expenditure for it. The proposed highway was not one for fishermen, but for fish.

Years before the midwest dust storms became famous, the Texas Gulf Coast had a natural fish highway closed by similar cause.

The same storm that destroyed Indianola, swept Padre Island bare of vegetation. The result was that the sand of the island was blown inland and choked the passage between the Gulf of Mexico and Laguna Madre.

Laguna Madre had been the route used by schools of fish in passing north and south. As the passage became bottled up, the water became too salty for fish. Now they detour, to the loss of gulf sportsmen and commercial fishermen.

Funds for dredging out the sand and renewing the fish highway were proposed as an amendment to the general appropriation for the Game, Fish and Oyster department. It failed to pass.

Hull Youngblood of San Antonio, one of Governor Allred's appointees on the state planning board, once told a legislature what he thought of it in such stinging terms that he was cited for contempt by a committee. He rejoined in Louisiana until the session was over. Youngblood's appointment now gives one branch of the legislature a chance to say what it may think of him.

One of the busiest places in the capitol these days is Governor James V. Allred's office. One rainy morning at press conference the governor said he planned to go to Beaumont.

"I've got to fill a campaign pledge there," he explained. The campaign pledge was to open the Texas League's baseball season. The following Saturday he was due at San Antonio, also to inaugurate the baseball season there. "And Sunday I'm due at Laredo," Governor Allred said.

"What for?" the press corps inquired.

"I've forgotten at the moment. It's an international celebration in which high officials in Mexico are participating."

Governor Allred summoned a secretary, George Clark, to tell the nature of the celebration.

"I've forgotten, governor," Secretary Clark said. "I'm writing a letter of acceptance for you."

"Maybe it's an international baseball game," suggested the press. Governor Allred was sure it wasn't. To save time he promised to dictate a memorandum on what for and why he was going to Laredo, and sent it by messenger to the press room.

A limit of $750 has been put on the expenditure of any state department for an automobile. The $750 includes the trade-in allowance on any old car, or cars, given as part payment for the new one. Daily report of the use of state-owned cars is required, giving the time in and out and the purpose of the trip.

Big Bend State Park, which the 43rd state legislature authorized with the understanding it was to cost the state $1,000, now threatens to cost $47,000. At least, claims for that amount have grown out of acquisition of the park.

The last legislature authorized creation of the park and included in it certain school lands. Now there are claims for fees of $23,000 in clearing titles and $19,000 for a plat book.

State Park Chairman D. E. Colp insists the claims are not sustainable. Meantime the state parks board has been cut off by the house with an appropriation of only $375.

The long grind of the legislative session is getting on the nerves of the members. Representative E. E. Quinn of Beaumont stood Representative R. H. Holland's booming voice as long as he could. Then he protested.

Quinn demanded that Holland be required to use his voting machine instead of deafening the house with "No!" or "Aye!"

"People in the gallery must think we are crazy," said Quinn.

Speaker Coke R. Stevenson agreed that the rules call for voting on the machine, but like the weather, nothing is done about it.

Fellow House members lose no opportunity to twit Representative A. M. Aikin Jr. of Paris about his solicitude for rural school appropriations, and his one-man economy license law has arisen since the house voted for the bill, which is still pending before the senate. The bill permits licensing of drivers who are 16 years old. Parents' consent is required for licensing a driver under 18.

The new problem is to discover what affect the licensing will have on a parent's liability for accidents caused by a minor child driving the family automobile.

Liability was limited somewhat by a state supreme court decision last week, but was by no means eliminated. In effect, the decision held that a parent is liable for injuries caused while a minor is driving a car for family purposes.

If a boy or girl takes the family car and uses it for his own pleasure or purposes papa is not liable. Just what will be considered a "family purpose" is not defined.

The court also has made other recent rulings and damage resulting from automobile accidents. Fast drivers should read the decision in a Nueces county case.

Mrs. Nick Giannukes was hurt while riding with her son-in-law, James Sifris, when the automobile turned over on a smooth road while Sifris was driving 50 or 60 miles an hour. No other cause for the accident was shown, and Sifris was held liable for his father-in-law for damages because the lawful speed limit was exceeded.

Company liability for automobiles used by employees resulted in two decisions the same day in the state supreme court. If an employee uses his own automobile to save time and better serve his employer, the employer can be held liable by the person injured.

R. E. Anderson, state tax commissioner and high-ranking member of Gov. James V. Allred's "brain trust," has little spare time these days after working on tax problems and the proposed Panhandle-Detroit gas pipe line.

He was not too busy to take time off and be married last week. With Mrs. Anderson, formerly Miss Olive Mae Rawlings of Waco, he is back after a short honeymoon trip.

Popular belief that a special session of the legislature will be called when the present one ends in May is apparent from lack of enthusiasm for legislative investigations.

The end of a session usually brings a flock of such proposals. The investigations furnish $10 a day legislative pay. The trend now is in the opposite direction. A proposal has been made to amend rules so one branch of the legislature may not start an investigation without consent of the other.

An investigation of general state affairs, particularly permanent

TEXAS TOPICS

By Raymond Brooks

Quibbling criticisms by lawyers for gas monopolies that the state pipeline project, opening a market for Texas gas owners at treble the price paid by the monopolists, giving the state four times as much revenue from the one project alone as paid by the five gas pipeline exporters from the Panhandle altogether, creating work in five states for thousands of men that it was "unconstitutional" for the state to engage in an enterprise of this sort asked the legislature in effect to take sides in favor of the monopoly and exploitation as it exists now and against this remedy. They ask the legislature to endorse the taunt of the monopolists' lawyers that they are beyond the reach of Texas taxation, engaged in the sacred business of interstate commerce and that they, and they alone, will drain the property of Texas citizens, that they shall pay two cents a thousand for the gas and sell it for 75 cents a thousand.

They ask the legislature to consider as something sinister the efforts of public-spirited officials to do something that gives the state some share in this Texas resource, that gives the treasury some relief from the failure to collect taxes on the monopoly exports, that gives work to thousands of Texans.

The legislature has worked hard to remedy known injustices in the exploitation of Texas natural gas. The monopolists went to the wrong source when they asked this legislature to protect them in a continuation of the huge profits and escape from any reasonable taxation.

Texas planning board soon will begin rounding up about $200,000,000 of desirable and needed Texas public improvements to be recommended to the federal public works and other agencies concerned with job-creating and work relief projects.

It will begin its work after dozens of desirable proposals, such as the Brazos river development, and other conservation, irrigation and power projects, have already been carried far toward final action.

The board is hedged slightly in school funds, has been held during the session. It has resulted in nothing startling. Employment if an investment expert and an attorney to check up on titles to state school land has been recommended.

Investigation of prison brutality apparently will consume only a few days. A proposal to investigate "hot air" is the one most promising for keeping legislators at work after the session ends.

Federal bureaucracy is a fearful thing, according to Karl Crowley, Fort Worth democrat who is solicitor for the post office department. Mr. Crowley is a warm advocate of old-line states rights democracy; and though he is serving as an important member of the New Deal, he looks forward to a time when all those emergency federal bureaus may be disbanded and control of local matters be restored to the local communities and the states. That was the gist of a talk he made at a dinner given in his honor in Austin by Chas. Ernest O. Thompson of the railroad commission and attended by Gov. James V. Allred—two officials who in Washington protesting against federal encroachments in the control of the business of oil production in Texas.

COVER got revenge Tuesday by beating Obie Bristol 1 up on the Munny course. Ohio took the golfing doctor by a like score in the Country Club contests Sunday.

Today is Ladies' Day at the Munny course. The Munny course feminine golfers recently organized and the association is growing at a rapid clip.

Dirt work on the two new city course greens will be completed today. The new No. 1 will have two tee boxes, Charles Akey, pro, said.

At the end of the season a Round Robin, under the Shaughnessy plan, will be played for the championship.

No special matches are planned at the Country Club this week, says President Obie Bristol.

The distance Sturdivant gets on his drives is almost unbelievable. He drove across the ditch on No. 8, and it's three hundred yards to the ditch.

Chapter 25
MABEL WEBSTER

The first carriage was already in place under the porte cochere. Mrs. Northrup and the twins were to go in that and it was time to be off.

But where were the twins? An hour before their mother had dressed and groomed and brushed them within an inch of their lives, dressing them with unspeakable punctiliousness of they-dared-undo-hair-handwork. The twins in long white sailor suits and gloves, (there had been a terrific battle over the sailor suits) were finally unearthed scowling from the pantry.

Their mother's threats must have been taken to heart for they were still incredibly immaculate, although their hair was in the usual frouzy state. Mrs. Chum flew up stairs after a brush and comb and smoothed the offending locks quickly and efficiently.

"Do you want to kiss me good-bye?" James asked her brothers.

"Why?" Nate inquired. "Aren't you coming back?" Norris chimed in.

"Aren't they terrible?" Jane appealed gaily to the sympathetic multitude, with a little gesture of mock exasperation. "Well, kissing is free in this house. Run along and for Heaven's sake try to behave."

At last everything was ready. "Now, Mother, remember you are not to cry," was Jane's final admonition.

"I won't," Mrs. Northrup promised tearfully as she went out the door.

"How about me? How about your old daddy?" asked Mr. Northrup pompously.

"But you're going with me," Jane cried gaily. "As if you'd dare, right under my awful eye."

There was a ripple of laughter at Jane's playfulness. All was joyousness and affection and tenderness; the emotion charged, it is true, with tears, but the more joyous for all that. Temporarily at least Mabel Webster and her Machiavellian chicanery were completely blotted out and forgotten. It was almost as if Jane had dreamed.

"Did you know it was prayer meeting night?" the twins spat at her, and shot through the door after their mother.

Prayer meeting night? Prayer meeting night? Father, it isn't true? It isn't possible?" Jane cried tragically.

The purple staining her father's already ruddy cheeks, the vengeful glint in his eyes that regarded the carriage which sheltered his sons answered Jane better than words.

"But surely they're not going to have prayer meeting at my wedding?" Jane wailed.

"Now, Jane, don't be an idiot," Julia Millard said quickly. "Of course they're not going to have prayer meeting until after the ceremony."

"But there's something you're keeping back, keeping from me," Julia Millard said quickly. "Of course they're not going to have prayer meeting until after the ceremony. . . a few you did not think proper to invite, may force themselves into the church. . . into the back of the church. I am certain of that. . . quite certain. You need not upset yourself. It is imperative that you should not upset yourself."

"Next load," shouted Ed Hines, the hackman, cheerfully. There was nothing that Jane could do but shoulder this latest cross and bear it. She sat in stony silence during the mile drive while Julia, who accompanied her and her father, chatted and explained.

Three carriages preceded the door that led from the church to the vestry found himself saddened almost to tears by the softly played organ music, the beauty, the fragrance.

He had just kissed his Aunt Sarah goodbye and she had choked and hurried away. Nappy stood just behind him with his coat and shiny brand new topper. Nap was to nip around and meet the wedding party as it came out, but he refused to withdraw his moral support until the last possible moment.

"Holy Mackerel, look at the crowd! Everybody in town but the halt and the blind is with us tonight," whispered Bud Howard, the best man, who had been in conference with the clergy. "It will take a posse of policemen with guns to shoot the way clear for the bridal party."

"I hope they shoots and shoots the lot of them that weren't invited leader-a year-before-last's fur coat," Nappy blazed viciously. Nappy was as one with the Northrup in accepting as sacrilege the machinations which threatened the dignity of this particular ceremony.

"That's an idea," James replied absently. He did hope that Jane wouldn't mind, that she had cheered up since that telephone talk. She had hung up on him then. He could not imagine why. He hadn't said a word that he could think of

But there was Aunt Sarah coming down the aisle on Jackson Crowell's arm. And there came the judge shuffling his political flock. The Judge walked gingerly, conscious that if he took a long breath his old dress suit would split across the back. He had bought that dress suit in London thirty years before and could not bring himself to part with it.

"There's Aunt Lou and her cohorts in the front row of the gallery," Bud pointed out. "And my sainted cats! I ask you? Am I seeing things? If that isn't Mabel Webster you can strike me dead."

"It's that she polecat big as life," Nappy put in. "Well, I will say she's got spunk. But polecats generally has."

EYES ON RECORDS AS STELLAR ATHLETES TRAIN FOR KANSAS RELAYS

Glenn Cunningham, lower right, K. U. record breaker de luxe, will be the featured runner of the 1935 Kansas relays at Lawrence when he seeks to set a new mile record. Each of the four K. U. quarter-milers shown at left will run a quarter just outside the track while Cunningham runs the entire distance. Experts figure the four will run about 125 yards more, but ought to beat Cunningham. They are, left to right, Charles Bekart, New York City; Hugh Crain, Paola, Kas.; Robert Kaiser, Paola, Kas.; and Calvin Ellis, Okmulgee, Okla. At right is Francis X. Grotzmeyer of the University of Iowa, versatile athlete who high jumps 6-2; broad jumps 23-3; flings the javelin 180 feet; does the 220 low hurdles in 24.4 and the 120 high hurdles in 13.2. CLEVELAND GETS SNOW AS BALL SEASON OPENS depression and remember the Alamo. By air, rail, motor, pony and covered wagon the Kiwanis cavalcade will follow the Lone Star to San Antonio. There they will discover a friendly oasis, a modern American city with medieval flavor and color of old Spain. The 12th annual convention of Kiwanis will be a five star convention in the Lone Star state.

It wasn't quite baseball weather on Cleveland's public square when the photographer turned up at the opening of the baseball season to record winter's parting blast in the lower Great Lakes area. That's snow you see there, stranger—not dust. (Associated Press Photo)

"Man can do a year's work in 11 months but not in 12. He needs recreation and re-creation. Plan that long deferred vacation under southern skies. Transportation and living expenses in Texas are at a new low. Savings vanish, but memories endure. As your physician I prescribe the invigorating climate, the pasteurized air and the actinic sunshine of San Antonio for you, your wife and your family.

"The progress Kiwanis has made will be a revelation to old timers and its power and prestige will be a revelation for the first time. San Antonio itself will be a revelation with its southern hospitality and its western freedom. In the shadows of palms and old missions are blended a glorious past and an ultra-modern present; there mingle the clatter of castanets, the strum of guitars and the hum of airplanes. The old Mexican quarter and the "West Point of the Air" are as poles asunder.

"To meet modern demands conferences will be grouped in youth, civic and administration halls, where there will be free intimate and friendly interchange of ideas. There we, through you, will learn how to turn creeds into deeds, hopes into habits and ideals into ideas. Kiwanis needs representation from every club and every club needs ambassadors to San Antonio.

"To catch the inspiring spirit of Kiwanis one must actually attend an international convention. World-famed speakers have been selected who pack wit and wisdom into few words. There will be no yawns or yawns in the cradle of Texas liberty.

"The great need today is the spirit of the pioneer. New social frontiers challenge Kiwanis pioneers. On ground made sacred by the conquistadores, and hallowed by Bowie, Crockett and their gallant band, let us dedicate Kiwanis to militant citizenship that is brave, bold, strong and courageous enough to face new horizons."

SCHOOL PROGRESS AS SUGGESTED BY LEGISLATION.
It is very difficult indeed to point out the definite aspects of improvement or deterioration in the various trends of human endeavor. This is particularly true in such an intangible field as education, because education implies so many lines of effort. Education includes virtually every effort that provides for the betterment of the race.

Not all laws passed by legislatures are indisputably sound, neither are they always unmistakably progressive. It is generally true, however, that legislatures pass laws in accordance with certain trends of thought as expressed in the will of the majority of the citizens.

Many of the legislatures are now in session and the more important phases of school progress upon which legislation is being pressed are listed as follows:

1. More adequate and more equitable support of the school program.
2. Larger administrative units.
3. Property tax seems to be overburdened.
4. Search for new revenues predominant.
5. State taxation gaining ground over purely local support.

Should the reader be further interested in the following editorial appearing in the current issue of the American School Board Journal will be helpful:

"While the legislative programs presented by educational bodies and executives in the several states deal with a variety of measures, they are in the main designed to provide a more adequate support for the schools. Thus, they concern themselves largely with the administration of revenue laws or the planning and discovery of new tax sources.

In line with the effort to ease the financial problems connected with the administration of the schools are the measures designed to secure larger administrative units. Such larger units usually enable a better distribution of the tax burden, an elimination of unnecessary duplication of costs, and a better control over the professional labor carried on in such units. The efforts, however, in the direction of consolidation have met with strong resistance in several states.

The subject of taxation is receiving greater attention. There is a reasonably settled conviction that the property tax is greatly overburdened. This leads to a widening of the tax base. The income tax idea has found its ardent supporters and its vigorous opponents. The sales tax, which at best considered a temporary expedient, is on the whole meeting with favor. The gasoline tax is also gaining ground. The common subterfuges, such as a tax on amusements, cigars and the like, are going into disfavor.

The trend of state legislation may be summed up, in the simple statement that it is a conflict between state and local taxation to the end that a better support of the operation of the schools may be obtained. Unquestionably, the several state legislatures will come to the rescue of the stricken school.

districts by making a larger contribution out of the state taxation fund for the support of the schools."

Aggies Battle To Leave The Cellar

COLLEGE STATION (Sp.)—Battling for their Southwest Conference lives, and weakened by injury, the Texas Aggie diamond team will play the Texas Christian Horned Frogs Friday and Saturday at Fort Worth. The Aggies and Baylor Bears are tied for the cellar with one victory each in four games, and the Frogs and University of Texas Longhorns are tied for first with three victories each in four games.

May See Game From Bench
Unless his injured ankle heals faster than expected, Bill Couser, leading Aggie hitter and shortstop from Freckenridge, probably will see the tilt from the bench. He turned his ankle while sliding in the second Baylor game the past Saturday. Either Nat Patton of Crockett, Bill Foster of Calvert, or Johnny Blalock, of Troup, probably will take his place. Couser is batting .335 to date, being the only Aggie hitting above .300.

Capt. Jake Mooty, Fort Worth, probably will get the Aggies' mound call for the first tilt, with Homer Martine, Hebronville, scheduled to work the second game. The Aggies' batting order probably will be: Patton, Blalock or Foster, ss; Travis Voelkel, 2b; Ted Jones, 1b; Bill Sodd, cf; Mike Langley, rf; Bob

The community around Lee's store is still on top of the dust, although it has been a matter of conjecture in recent weeks which was riding high—the dust of the community.

Rev. Brown delivered a much enjoyed message at the church Sunday. The pastor is in a revival meeting at Knott, from whence come good reports of his work.

April 27 a "box supper" will be held from the Lucian Wells school house. Proceeds from the affair will be used to pay for seats in the church building. If there is a balance, it will be applied to purchase of song books.

Ladies W. M. U. is still meeting each Wednesday at 2:30 p. m. and prayer meeting is held at 8 p. m. on the same day.

A few from the community were privileged to attend the Baptist Worker's conference in Coahoma Tuesday and report a profitable meeting. They visited with Mr. and Mrs. Madison, formerly of the Lees community, but who now operate a business in Coahoma.
