CLOTHING FROM SEWING ROOMS IS DISTRIBUTED

Additional Workers to be Added to Staff Tomorrow

Garments made by the Memphis WPA sewing room workers were issued to the county commodity house today for the first time, and the garments were available to the needy residents of Memphis and vicinity through the county relief department.

There were 22 dozen garments placed in the commodity house this morning, most of them consisting of sleeping clothes.

Ten additional women will begin work at the sewing room tomorrow morning, Mrs. L. C. Smyers, project supervisor, announced this morning. This will raise the figure of women workers to 35. The 25 women now working are turning out about 100 finished products each week.

Mrs. Smyers requested that no one visit the women during working hours, as visiting hinders them in their work. She stated that the sewing plant is being run on a commercial system, with women specializing in certain types of work. Work at present is being done with only cotton goods. Women are also being instructed how to select their clothing and how to budget their finances.

"The women are learning things that will be of assistance to them after the sewing room project is closed," the supervisor stated.

TEN THOUSAND CRIPPLES

INFANTILE paralysis accounts for 27.26 per cent of all the cripples among children. Every year some 10,000 youngsters are struck down, and in epidemic years the toll of this disease increases to 40,000. Until a comparatively short time ago so little was known about the disease that the stricken ones were without hope.

It was the first President Roosevelt who first stirred public interest in cripples by inviting to the White House in 1907 the social workers' conference on dependent children. The desire for knowledge with which to conquer infantile paralysis was intensified by the sufferings of the victims of epidemics in Vermont and New York during the period of 1914-1916, when in New York City alone 6,574 surviving children required clinical treatment.

And now another President Roosevelt is taking the lead in this great fight against a scourge that can, in a few days, sweep up a child in the full bloom of health and cast him into a pit of terror and pain. Tremendous advances are being made in research, methods of treatment and preventative measures. All over the country the battle is being waged that will, it is hoped, eventually stamp out the dread disease entirely.

Tonight, on the President's birthday, more than five thousand cities and towns all over the United States, including this city, will unite in their third country-wide party. The purpose of the Birthday Ball for the President is to establish through the direct help of the citizens of the country an endowment fund, so that the Georgia Warm Springs Foundation and other agencies engaged in the fight against infantile paralysis may carry on a national crusade. Seventy per cent of the proceeds will go to the community in which they are raised; thirty per cent to the Warm Springs Foundation endowment.

And the best of it is that everyone can take part. It need not even be done in the spirit of self-sacrifice, for there is no one who will not enjoy the various activities of the Birthday Ball for the President. So come to the ball and be doubly gay, for your good time will be doubled by the satisfaction of knowing that you are doing good.

WASHINGTON—On the contention that the memory of Woodrow Wilson has been belittled may rest the fate of strong neutrality legislation at the present session of Congress.

A serious split in the Senate Munitions Committee over criticism of the acts of Wilson and other American statesmen threatens to cause collapse of the inquiry conducted for two years into the world arms traffic and World War financing.

The success which seemed so near may be snatched from Senator Gerald P. Nye, who has labored incessantly since 1934 for a stringent neutrality law. The lion's share of the credit for the inquiry goes to the North Dakota Republican, the only senator who could be persuaded to fight for investigation of the powerful munitions industry.

Not only has the committee headed by Nye uncovered convincing evidence of the need of laws to keep the country at peace, but Nye has made more than a hundred speeches over the country, pushing home the neutrality doctrine and outlining the sequence of developments that sent us into the conflict in 1917.

It seems certain that neither the administration nor Congress would have acted without the spur of a strong public sentiment. Nye did more than anyone else to provide that spur.

Although recent hearings have disclosed machinations by American statesmen who have avoided war, and Morgan firm as an industrial-financial group made war apparently Nye declares, "I have tried so hard to be objective."

He and Senator Ben Clark of Missouri have had no desire to see one.

Their idea has been they state, that the operating during the just as they would open a similar case were a neutrality law, and that he came to favor the Central Powers, helpless under the trade, traffic, and financial blockade.

The Morgan parties vast profits from as fiercely patriotic as ever. Senator Ben Missouri spent an evening, by historical hitherto secret documents, that General warfare alone plumes itself.

If Wilson and Lansing stern with England many, he showed, in warfare probably avoided.

BLACK HAND OF AUGUSTA

Mysterious Legend of Stone Pillar

of a series of articles describing strange and novel localities and various parts of the nation, uncovered and described by writers in the American Guide, a guide book of the United States, the Works Progress Administration.
Middle of the sidewalk features of the city of the American Guide, the Government's forthcoming 5-volume handbook, have verified several facts appearing to substantiate the curse. Tradition states that four persons have died for attacking the column; in fact, one man was struck by lightning and killed while attempting the column's removal and another died of illness after taking part in such an attempt.
However, the column was never a part of a slave market; but, back in slavery days, it helped to support the roof of a famous produce market. It is related that an itinerant preacher foretold the destruction of the market, which he declared would be brought about either by fire or by wind. In 1878, a cyclone tore its way through the heart of Augusta and fulfilled the prophecy. The only part of the structure which survived was the hand-marked column.
A new produce market was erected on the site of the original market, but a few feet away from the column. In the last 57 years, the column has continued to obstruct traffic and the city officials decided after the deaths of the two workmen that it could continue to obstruct traffic without further interference from them.

A few months ago, a truck driver alleged to be a trifle under the influence of strong drink ran into the column and knocked it over. No one wished to tamper with the curse and undertake to drag the stone away, so Mr. Easterling, who now owns the produce market, had it set back on its base. So far as is known, the truck driver is still enjoying good health—perhaps because he did not attack the landmark intentionally, if hoodoos are influenced by alibis.

The STRANGE CASE of JULIA CRAIG

by Nard Jones Copyright NEA 1936

BEGIN HERE TODAY

JULIA CRAIG, pretty young secretary to GEORGE WOODFORD, lawyer, is ambitious to become a night club singer. Julia shares an apartment with AMY SANDERS.

PETER KEMP, young lawyer is in love with Julia but they quarrel and Julia declares she never wants to see him again.

Woodford gives a party aboard his yacht and asks Julia to come to sing for his guests, including CINTRA LEE, dancer, MRS. JOSEPH, widow; HUGO NASH, and ROYAL NESBITT.

On board, Julia discovers the trip is to be much longer than a week-end. The yacht lands at Evergreen Island where Woodford has a lodge. Julia meets TOM PAYSON who agrees to help get her away, but he is discovered on the yacht and accused of tampering with the radio. After an angry scene he is allowed to depart.

Julia tells Woodford she is giving up her job in his office.

Now Go On With the Story

CHAPTER XIII

Dinner that night was not as difficult for Julia as she had feared after her angry words with Woodford. When Obo announced dinner and she met the others in the main cabin, Woodford was reserved but courteous. "I've beaten him," Julia told herself triumphantly—and for the first time since the yacht had left its home moorings she felt free and relieved enough to enjoy herself.

Indeed, with the assistance of a tray of Obo's potent cocktails, everyone appeared jovial. Nesbitt's arm was in a sling to relieve weight from his injured shoulder muscles, but he laughed and joked in something like his old manner. He and Cintra sat together and Julia thought she sensed a new feeling between them, as if since the "accident" they had come to some definite understanding. She saw that Mrs. Joseph sensed it, too, for occasionally in an unguarded moment the widow would cast dark glances toward the pair.

Nash seemed a bit morose and embarrassed, and Julia wondered if, perhaps, his conscience were asserting itself at last. Whenever Nesbitt addressed him, Hugo Nash appeared surprised and timid. "He hates him," Julia thought, "and now that he failed to kill him, he's afraid of him, too."

She was glad that tomorrow night she would be ashore, away from these five people with their loves and their hates and their obsessions. It occurred to Julia Craig suddenly that although her life had been poor and unexciting, it had been sane and normal—and she knew that it had been happier even than Woodford's despite his wealth and power.

"I'll see them tomorrow," she told herself, looking around the table, "and then I won't see them again unless I pass them on the street—and that won't matter. Except Cintra. Somehow I like Cintra. . . . Poor Julia! She was forgetting for the moment that lives cannot always be arranged by their owners. She was really believing that after tomorrow night these people would not matter."

She retired early that night, with the Nood Nymph's engines throbbing mightier than ever beneath the deck. Woodford had ordered full speed on, and Bakely was giving the power plant everything it would stand and a bit more.

When Julia awakened next morning and peered through the porthole above her berth she saw with delight that the scenery on the shore was more familiar to her. She knew that now they were not many hours from town, and

 Mrs. Joseph broke in.

"There's a beautiful stretch of shoreline along here and we don't want to miss it."
 When they had gone out onto the deck and Julia had an opportunity, she sought Cintra Lee. "I hope Mr. Nesbitt's shoulder wasn't growing worse."
 The dancer looked at her. "So do I, Julia. I can't understand why he didn't let me know he was getting off at Condon. But perhaps he thought of it on the spur of the moment and didn't want to wake me."
 She offered Julia cigarets and they lighted them quickly in the breeze. "You know," said Cintra, tossing the match over the rail,
 "I think I've got a job for you when we get back to town."
 "You mean . . . singing?"
 Cintra nodded. "Would you want to work for Tony Latta?"
 "I'm afraid I don't know him.
 But I'm sure I'd like to work for him."
 The Lee girl laughed. "Better not jump so fast. Tony Latta runs a gambling ship."
 "A gambling ship?" repeated Julia. "I . . . I've heard of them vaguely, but—" she hesitated.
 "There's a law against gambling in this state. The gambling ships stay offshore so as to be legally outside the state, and the customers get back and forth in water taxis. Latta has one of the biggest and he gets a wealthy class of trade."
 "But what would I do on a gambling ship?"

 "You'd sing," Cintra told her.
 "That's what you want to do,
 isn't it? Latta has a small cabaret aboard, and I happen to know he's looking for talent. You'd have a stateroom aboard."
 "I—I don't know whether I'd like that," Julia confessed.
 "Oh, you could come ashore in one of Latta's boats whenever you weren't working. And you don't have to be afraid of Tony.
 He's hard-boiled—but he knows a decent girl when he sees one, and leaves her alone. You can take my word for that." Cintra looked at her sharply. "Think you'd be interested? It's not much of an offer, but it's a start."
 Julia thought a moment. Yes, it was a start—and she no longer had a safe job. Tomorrow she would be a girl out of work, and unless she got busy she'd be living in an apartment whose rent Amy Sanders would be paying in full. She didn't care much about the idea of working on a gambling ship, but . . .
 "It's ago," she told Cintra
 quickly.
 The dancer smiled. "Good! . . .
 and I'll see that some influential people get out to Tony's ship to hear you. I know how this entertainment game works, Julia. I'll whisper it around that there's a girl out on Latta's boat who's an unknown winner. You'll get an offer in no time."
 "I—I hope you're right," said
 Julia weakly.

It was after 6 when Julia's taxi rolled to the curb before the building in which she and Amy Sanders shared an apartment. Scarcely able to wait until she could talk with her roommate, she paid
 the driver and hurried upstairs.
 She had hardly touched her key to the lock when Amy opened the door and confronted her with something like a shriek of relief.
 "Julia! . . . Julia, I've been frantic! Where on earth have you been?"
 Laughing, Julia came into the room and tossed her bag on the davenport. "I've been to Evergreen Island, if you know where that is."
 "I don't. You've had me in a turmoil. I telephoned the newspapers to see if they had any reports of private yachts going down. I even phoned the yacht club—and they told me there was no record of the movements of smaller pleasure boats, which was very comforting. I must say!
 What happened to you?"
 "Nothing," Julia told her, "except that Woodford decided to go on a hunting trip."
 Amy settled herself on the davenport. "Tell me all about it.
 Who was with you?"
 "Well . . ." Julia hesitated, deciding that it would be better not to mention Nesbitt. She had never been sure just what Amy felt toward Royal Nesbitt, despite Amy's cocky assurance that she liked him merely as a friend.

"There was Woodford, of course,
 and a widow—a Mrs. Joseph.
 Then there was a girl named Cintra Lee, and an architect—Hugo Nash."
 "Is that all?"
 Julia nodded. "That's all." She unbuttoned her jacket and the throat of her sweater beneath.
 "I'm dead tired, Amy. I'll tell you all about it in the morning. But if ever I—"
 The insistent buzzing of the telephone interrupted her. Nervously Julia took up the instrument and answered the ring.
 It was Cintra Lee. "I've just talked with Tony Latta by 'phone," she said. "He wants you to start tomorrow night. Can you make it?"
 "Why, y-yes, Cintra."
 "Good. He's expecting you." She gave Julia instructions as to how to get to Latta's gambling ship, then hurriedly said goodbye.
 "Who was that?" Amy wanted to know when Julia had replaced
 the instrument.
 "It was Cintra Lee—the girl on the boat."
 "What did she want?" asked Amy.
 "She wanted to tell me that I have a new job beginning tomorrow." Julia hesitated a moment.
 "I—I'm not working for Woodford and Brooks any more, Amy.
 I'm going to sing on a gambling ship."

Local Quintet Drops Two More

Coach Swede Roark's Memphis High School Cyclone cagers journeyed to Lakeview Tuesday night and took two shellackings at the hands of the touted Lakeview basketball team's first and second strings.

The second string game was played first, and the Lakeview forces took the locals into camp to the tune of 22 to 4. Barnett, guard, was high-point man in the first game with eight. This was the first game the Memphis second string had played together as a unit.

Although Lakeview's first team defeated the Black and Gold by a handy margin, the Lakeview fans took a beating as they were predicting Lakeview to win by 50 points.

Outcome of the second game was 37 to 15 in Lakeview's favor. The contest was close during the first half, the teams battling on about even terms. Score at the half was 10 to 7 with Lakeview having the upper hand. The Eagles "got hot" in the final stages of the game and put on a scoring spurt that left the Cyclone lagging badly.

Davis, Memphis guard, was high-point man until the final minute of play, when Hatley dropped one through the basket to pass him by one point, getting 13.

Starting lineups for the first teams:

Memphis—Gilreath and Coildress forwards; Smith, center; Davis and Malone, guards.

Lakeview—Billings and McElreath forwards; Imel, center; Stargel and Hatley, guards.

Starting lineups for the second teams:

Memphis—Foxhall and Wilson forwards; Moss, center; E. Davis and Dewlin, guards.

Lakeview—Brister and Wiley forwards; Bradley, center; Hughs

According to reports from the patrols at noon today, the local people were responding liberally to the appeal.

Cloth rags are being made out of the scrap material that cannot be used for other purposes, and the cloth cast off from that even is being used to stuff toy animals for indigent children.

The Parent-Teacher Associations of the city are aiding in the room work by donating material and equipment, and Mrs. Smyers thanked the Memphis citizens for their gift offerings.

Local fans will have a chance tonight to see the Cyclones in action when they engage Giles and Quail in a doubleheader. The locals play the Salisbury "All-Stars" in the Memphis gym.

ARREST MAN FOR N. M. OFFICERS

Sheriff Colvin yesterday morning went to the Friendship community and placed under arrest S. S. Hamilton, wanted at Clovis, New Mexico, on charges of issuing hot checks, disposal of mortgaged property and making of false statements.

Sheriff Thomas of Clovis arrived in the city about noon yesterday, took charge of the prisoner and departed for New Mexico with him on the 5:20 p. m. train.

COMMODITY COMMITTEEMEN AND SEND TWO OR MORE CARLOADS FROM YOUR COUNTY."

The Administration farm program is having tough going at this time; and the principal reason for this trouble is that farmers have not sufficiently voiced their demands for such program, Mr. Pattillo said. A display of indignation, in tremendous force, was expected as a reaction on the part of farmers against killing the AAA. When this did not materialize, certain congressmen and leaders have been misled in the belief that farmers are only mildly interested.

It is hoped, Mr. Pattillo said, that at least two carloads of farmers will attend the mass farm meeting Saturday in Waco from this county.

The truck headed towards a sharp precipice at the roadside, and both men jumped from the moving truck. The oil well casing tore loose from its mooring and scattered all over the road. Both men were injured, Thedford sustaining a bruised knee, during the melee.

The truck smashed in to a bank and stopped, and the Graham man brought Swint into Memphis in a semi-conscious condition. Swint was released from the hospital last night, and Dr. D. C. Hyder stated that his condition was not serious. The truck was uninjured.

The general public is invited to attend the pie supper tomorrow night.

Sam S. Cowan, sponsor of the school annual; and Harold Foxhall, business manager, in urging all business men and residents of Memphis and vicinity to attend the pie supper, announced that this is the only way local business men will be called on to assist in the putting over of the school annual this year.

Local business men will not be solicited for advertising in the annual, it was said.

"Everyone is invited to attend the benefit pie supper tomorrow night and have a good, old-fashioned time," Mr. Cowan said. Women are welcome to bake pies and attend the affair, he said.

Forty-two party, in the ball room of the Memphis Hotel. Tickets are fifty cents per couple.

Almost every able-bodied person in Memphis and surrounding area is expected to turn to one of the amusement features, Temple H. Deaver, general chairman of arrangements for the President's Birthday Ball, announced. The two President's Balls of the past were declared successes, but indications now are that the parties tonight will far surpass the others both in attendance and in amusement possibilities.

Music for the modern dance at the Legion Hall is to be furnished by the Rhythm Bandettes from Amarillo, an orchestra that is new to Memphis dances, but one that has gained recognition over this entire section.

A string band of musicians that play the good, old time "hoe down" music will play for the large crowd that is expected to assemble in the old post office building for the barn dance.

The bridge and "42" parties are to start at 7:30 o'clock, and "live-wire" parties are promised by the committee chairmen those who attend.

"Other than having yourself a good time," Mr. Deaver said, "you will, by attending one of the fetes, contribute to a worthy cause—the aiding of crippled children in Memphis and Hall County and the aiding of those over the nation suffering of infantile paralysis."
