Man Is Robbed by Bandit Near Hulver

Special to The Democrat
MEMPHIS, Sept. 5.—E. H. Estelline, traveling representative of the Estelline-Turkey high-hauling company, was held up by a machine-gun bandit near Hulver late yesterday.

Estelline at first refused to stop, but when he was ordered to do so, he complied. The bandit, who was wearing a dark coat and a hat, approached Estelline's automobile with a drawn six-shooter.

Estelline, who was carrying $25 in cash, the robber ordered him to get out of the car. Estelline, who was driving west of Hulver as he drove by, he said. The car was in a considerable disrepair before he was ordered to stop.

The sheriff's department at Hulver was notified, but a short investigation failed to uncover any leads.

HITLER IN DARE TO DEFY NAZI POWER

Socialist Revolution Is Ended; To Build New Nation

By Associated Press
NURNBERG, Germany, Sept. 5.—Adolph Hitler, dictator of Germany, declared today: "The national socialist revolution is ended. It has fulfilled all my hopes."

The statement was made at the annual convention of the Nazi party, which he founded.

Hitler said the revolutions which took on a permanent character resulted in anarchy and chaos and merely served the purposes of greedy politicians, and evolution had to come to bring about better conditions.

"For this purpose," he said, "Nazi leadership possesses all power. Who dare deny the national socialist movement is absolute power in and with the revolution ended."

He declared there was no better fitted body than the present Nazi party for leadership for the building up of the nation.

Night Football Is Assured; Order Lighting Equipment

Memphis will have a lighted football field this fall.

This was assured yesterday when the Junior Chamber of Commerce made a final drive for its quota of $800.

Although that figure was missed by some $50, the lighting equipment was ordered, and delivery is expected within seven or eight days.

Field Not Chosen
Very soon thereafter the flood lights will be burning as the Cyclone takes part in its first night practice.

Another roundup was being made today, and the full quota was expected to be reached before night.

All work on securing the lights, however, is not completed. A definite location of the gridiron has not been made, since the athletic council has several locations in mind.

Best Equipment
The lighting equipment ordered is said to be the best for this purpose. The flood lights will be placed at the top of eight 60-foot poles along the sides of the field. There will be four huge reflectors on each pole. The entire lighting apparatus will have 48,000 watts.

The poles are to arrive in Childress with a shipment by the West Texas Utilities company, making it necessary to pay freight on this part of the equipment only from that city.

Temperature in the air-conditioned cars is regulated by automatic control so that the temperature remains at about 70 degrees at all times.

By Associated Press
BORGER, Sept. 5.—Borger's fourth violent death in less than two weeks occurred in a local hospital this afternoon when death claimed Lloyd J. Duncan, who was wounded by a stray bullet in the gunfight in the post office Friday afternoon.

Duncan was 45 years old and married. He was tank farm boss for Magnolia Petroleum company, having come here several years ago when the city was young.

Duncan was taking his mail from a post office box when the gun battle started that ended in the death of A. P. "Ace" Borger, founder of this city.

While Borger and his assailant scuffled, the shots were discharged from the guns carried by the two men. Seven of them were shot into Borger's body, two hit the post office wall, and one struck Duncan. The fight was all within 12 feet of him.

The bullet that took Duncan's life lodged in the groin and peritonitis developed. His condition had been critical since Sunday.

By Associated Press
FULTON, Ill., Sept. 5.—Five persons were slain yesterday by the murderous shotgun of Fred Blink, 45, Fulton truck operator, before a police bullet brought him down, his gun still smoking, near the approach of the Mississippi River. At a hospital in nearby Clinton, Ia., Blink told authorities he had killed two more victims.

KEEP FEED IN HOME TERRITORY
WORKING together toward a common end, with the same purpose of mind and considering the well-being of all, farmers in the Memphis Area can "get by" this winter as far as feeding their stock is concerned. This is the opinion of authorities on conditions within the area.

The most important factor in the problem of stock feeding this winter will be whether all the feed raised here will be kept in the territory. There is virtually enough feed in this area to take care of the needs of stock, but if half of it is sold through regular marketing channels, then many farmers will be faced with a shortage.

It seems reasonable, therefore, to make definite plans to keep feed raised in the Memphis Area in the Memphis Area. Instead of selling to regular markets, the raisers who have a surplus should sell to their neighbors who failed to raise as much as they need.

There is to be a considerable amount of maize and hegari especially in Hall county. Of course, some feed is going to have to be brought in, but the shortage is not nearly so threatening as it will be if half of the crop is shipped away.

It is plainly seen where a program of "every man for himself" will land us. A feed selling at a certain market price will take almost twice as much to be shipped in. In other words, if a system of buying from our neighbors is not followed, we shall be shipping feed out at one price and bringing the same feed right back at almost double the first price.

Directly in connection with this, C. N. Shepardson, head of the dairy husbandry department at Texas A & M college, urges that not one bit of feed be wasted this winter. He states that fields that have been half taken over by weeds may produce good hay, the whole product of the field being bundled together. Although this is not the best feed in the world, he said, it can be used in a pinch and may prove to be the salvation of much farm stock.

By working together and saving every ton of feed-stuff available for our own and our neighbor's use, we can almost come out even on the feeding problem this winter. But that is the only way we can do so.

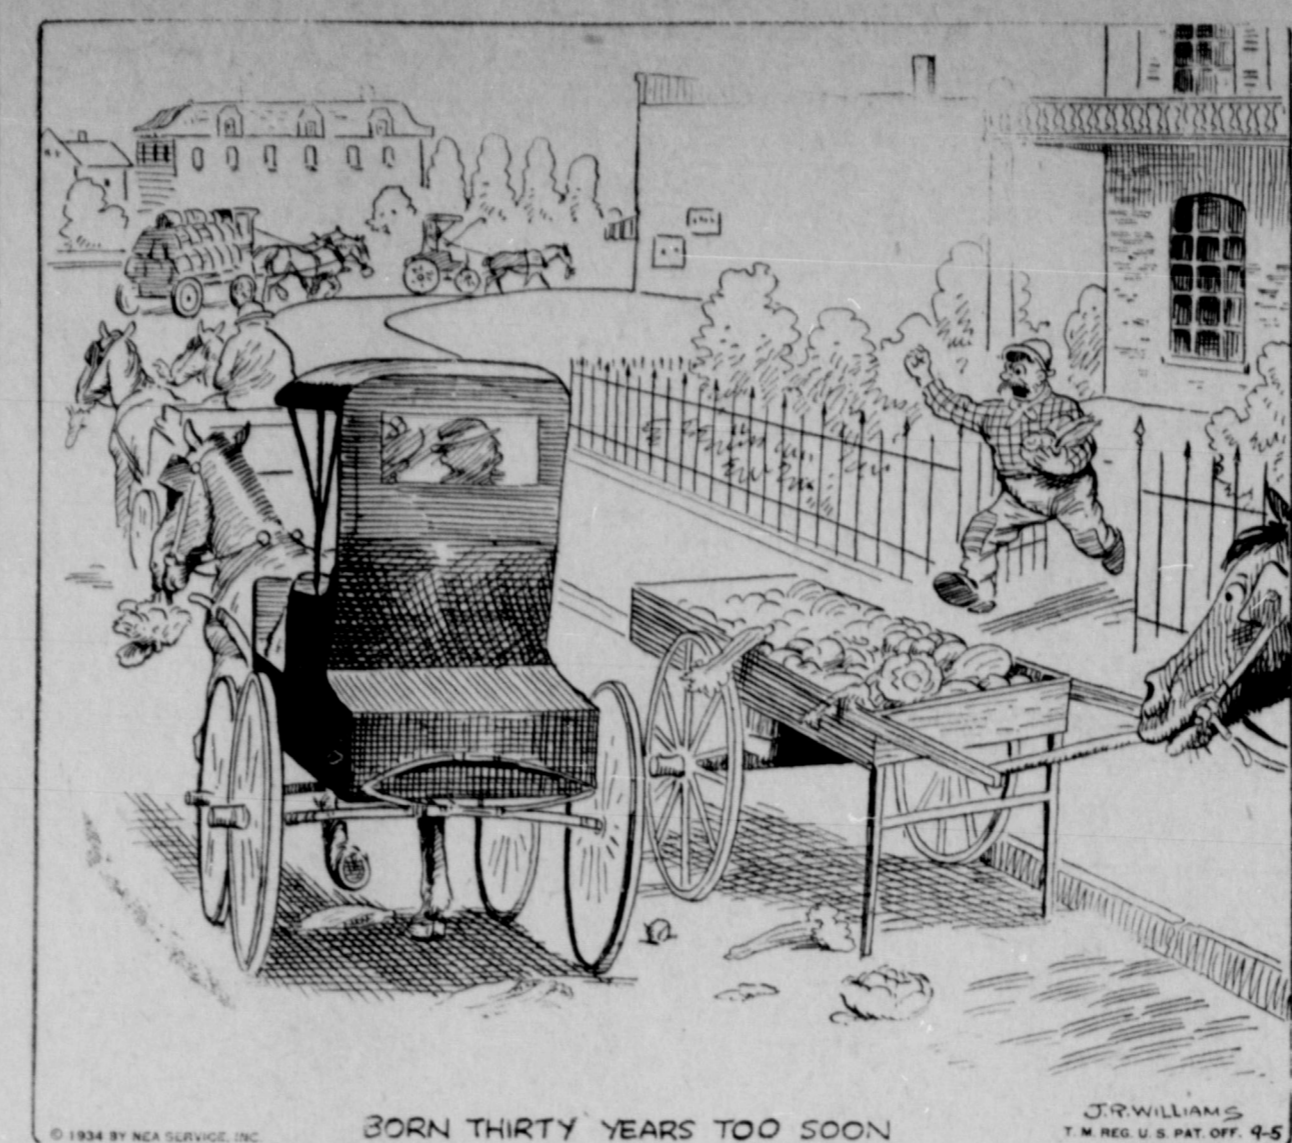

Mr. and Mrs. Ike Bryan and son, Ike, Jr., returned to their home in Dallas yesterday after a visit here with relatives. Miss Grace Ogden accompanied them home for a visit.
Miss Hazel Deaney left yesterday for Houston where she will be in the home demonstration department for the United Gas company.
Mrs. Mattie Goodman and grandson, Loren Watson, who have been visiting relatives here for the past two months, left this morning for Sudan where they will be guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. K. Milam until Sunday, leaving from there for their home at Huntington Beach, Calif. Mrs. Dick Watson and Miss Maud Milam took them to Sudan.

BEACH CLUB GIRL

by MABEL McELLOTT

BEGIN HERE TODAY
SYLVIA RIVERS rules the younger set of Larchneck, fashionable New York suburb. She dislikes BOOTS RAEBURN, whose family has little money.
One night at the Yacht Club Boots is put in an embarrassing situation by HARDYWHITMORE, one of Sylvia's guests, who had been drinking. Sylvia maliciously contrives to force Boots' resignation from the Juniors. Humiliated, Boots withdraws from the crowd. She goes about with RUSS LUND, the swimming instructor. Russ falls in love with her and announces he's going away. He begs Boots to elope with him and she asks for time to think it over.
Mrs. Raeburn returns from a visit and Boots dreads having her mother hear about her resignation from the club. Out for a morning walk, Boots meets DENIS FENWAY, a young author, and they have a long talk. Russ sees them together and is jealous.
NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER XVI
Boots faced the young man squarely, a small, erect, defiant figure with her white skirts whipping back from her rounded figure, her dark eyes blazing with a sudden question.
"I don't know what you're talking about," she told Russ Lund slowly. "I—and Denis Fenway? Why, I couldn't sleep. I just came out for a breath of air—I happened to run into him. This," Boots averred, "is only the second time I have ever spoken to him."
"You seemed to have a lot to say to each other," Russ accused. He had been running. He had caught up to her just where the path dipped away from the water. Hatless, his brown hair blown every way by the rising morning wind, he faced himself of a hill-ock just above her.
"Oh, that!" A sudden revulsion of feeling swept over the girl. It was absurd—this whole situation. Had she really been lying awake most of the night, turning over in her mind the possibility of marrying this square-shouldered young man with the unsmiling dark eyes? She must have been mad.
"Let me pass," she said coldly. "I've got to get home. They don't know where I am."
A screen of trees hid this particular spot from the main road. Russ took two great steps and his hands were on her shoulders.
"Let me go!" she commanded. "You're hurting me!"
"So that's the way it is," growled her captor. "You've been only stringing me, two-timing me with this lu-de-da fellow from the big city."
"Oh, how can you be so silly?" Pettishly she said it, striving to shake herself free. "I've told you—you can believe it or not, just as you like—that I barely know him."
Russ released her. "He's rich," he pursued grimly. "He's probably got a swell line. No wonder you like him better. You've probably been laughing at me for the hick I am."
"How can you say that?" she demanded indignantly. But it was true that in the few moments she had talked to Denis the contrast between the two men had flashed upon her—one so easy and suave and polished, so lightly sure of himself, the other big and male and adoring. Yet it was Russ who had made her pulses beat faster.

FLAPPER FANNY SAYS

Whenever a girl gets bored with life, you can bet she spends most evenings alone.

"Oh, Boots has a beautiful time," Lois said with enthusiasm. "This is such a friendly little town, so many affairs going on all the time, and she has always been popular. She'll marry of course; one hopes she will marry money."
"And that," Denis mused, "will be the end."
"How can you say that?" Lois demanded, shocked. "She'll have a lovely time; probably a little car, a nice house, some children. Just like all the other girls."
"But in the meantime," Denis said pleasantly, interrogatively, "just what does she do with herself?"
"Oh, you make me very angry some times, Denis," announced his cousin crisply, rising. "Jack, talk some sense to him, won't you? If everybody were like you," she said hotly, "there just would not be any world."
Denis laughed and young Dr. Hart, sugaring his third cup of coffee, smiled indulgently. Lois and Denis Fenway had practically grown up together and quarreled passionately and intermittently as people of the same blood often do, but there was no real rancor in their altercations. Although, as Lois said to herself, since Denis came back from Europe this time he was too sophisticated and bored for words. Of course it was only a pose. Anyone could tell that and yet it irritated her at times, worried her, too. Wasn't Denis ever going to choose some nice girl for himself and settle down as other people did? He couldn't go on like this, barging around the world, forever. Girls found him intensely attractive. The telephone had rung incessantly every since he had been in the house. And yet, with lazy good nature, he seemed to ignore them all.
"There wouldn't be any babies for Jack to bring, that's what you mean," Denis said, laughing again at her unsmiling face. But under his laughter and badinage he was remembering the white, strained face of the girl he had talked to that morning. What was troubling her? Surely no light village romance with one of these callow boys who were always tumbling in or out of battered cars hereabout?
There was something definitely appealing about the child. A fragrance, intangible and hovered about her. The her slim, sunburned hair grass beside him that clenching and unclenching had stirred him oddly, eyes, so limpid, so appealing, been lifted to him for the doctor would come of away.

The telephone rang instant later to say that Manning had another at her daughter wanted to the doctor would come of away.
"Oh, darling, and you tired! I hoped you could a little rest," Lois lamented followed him out into the night his coat lapel, and reflected that it was rather to see Lois and Jack so. They were fond of each other, no mistake. He'd come to be cynical about marriage, the whole. The people he had in Paris, a jolly, casual, galot, with the morals of to...well, they hadn't streng his faith in the old and hor institution.

Dozen Memphis Golfers To Enter Clarendon Invitation Tournament

Baseball Scores And Standings

Table with Texas League and American League results and standings. Columns include Club, W, L, Pct.

A dozen Memphis golfers are expected to take part in the annual Clarendon Invitation tournament Sunday and Monday.

Allowed to qualify on their home course, the leading shot-makers of the Memphis Country Club will shoot first rounds here.

Two—Dr. L. M. Hicks and R. S. Greene, qualified yesterday with both expected to land in the first flight. Dr. Hicks toured the 18 holes in 72 strokes; Greene turned in a 73.

Other leading golfers of the local club who likely will take part in the event are Reginald Greenhaw, Frank Foxhall, Thomas Hampton, O. B. Smith, Ed Foxhall, Carl Harrison and perhaps others.

Prizes will be given to the winners and runners-up of each flight and each consolation.

With the top players of each club entered, play is fast, even in the third and fourth flights.

Stamps Required For Hunting Waterfowl

"Buy a stamp before you shoot," says J. Henry Read, acting postmaster, in stating that every hunter of migratory waterfowl, over 16 years of age, is now required to have in his possession a migratory-bird hunting stamp.

This is the requirement of an act of congress approved by the President becoming effective June 16, and designed to aid the program for restoration of migratory waterfowl by the purchase of suitable breeding, feeding and resting areas.

The migratory-bird hunting stamps have just been received here, Mr. Read stated, and are now on sale at the United States post office here.

The stamps are to be sold at $1 each, the proceeds to be used in the important program of waterfowl restoration.

Stamps are to go on sale annually. They expire on June 30. They must be affixed to the state hunting license, or, if no state license is required, to a certificate furnished by the postmaster, Mr. Read said.

Hunting waterfowl without a stamp is unlawful, and it is punishable by a fine of not more than $500, or by imprisonment for not more than six months, or by both fine and imprisonment.

Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Stephenson and son, Don, of Childress, visited their parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Stephenson, here yesterday.

Five Are Killed

The known dead besides Hamilton were: Harry Menje, Fulton. Mrs. Tim H. Corrick, Jr., Des Moines, Ia.

A Mrs. Walters of Fulton. An unidentified man about 70 years old.

In Welter of Blood The bodies of four victims were found in a welter of blood in the John Hamilton farm house a mile north of here.

Whether Blink pursued Hamilton from the farm to the bridge approach, a mile away, could not be learned.

Patrolman Kustes, who had been in Clinton, across the river from here, was returning home when he heard the sound of Blink's automatic shotgun and saw Hamilton fall to the middle of the paving of the bridge approach.

Turns Gun On Self He stopped his car and from behind it opened fire with his pistol. Blink, at the same time, turned the gun on himself, wounding himself in the face.

One of Kustes' bullets found its mark and Blink fell to the pavement. An oil station attendant, C. Wiersma, witnessed Hamilton's slaying and Blink's capture.

The victims at the farm were apparently shot to death as they cowered against the wall of the homestead.

Night Football

comes at a time when the Cyclone apparently is to be the finest club that Coach "Chesty" Walker has produced here. The combination of these factors is expected to give Memphis its biggest football season in several years.

The trend toward night football, which began as an experiment a few years ago, has spread throughout the country. At first the practice was taken up by colleges, but it rapidly widened until it included many Class A and Class B high schools.
