Defendant Acts As His Own Attorney Lambkin Is Given Suspended Sentence

Pleads Own Case Auto Theft Charge

Refusing the court's offer to provide an attorney, H. Hayes is defending himself in District Court today, in the case of the State of Texas vs. H. Hayes, alias H. N. McIntire, charged with auto theft.

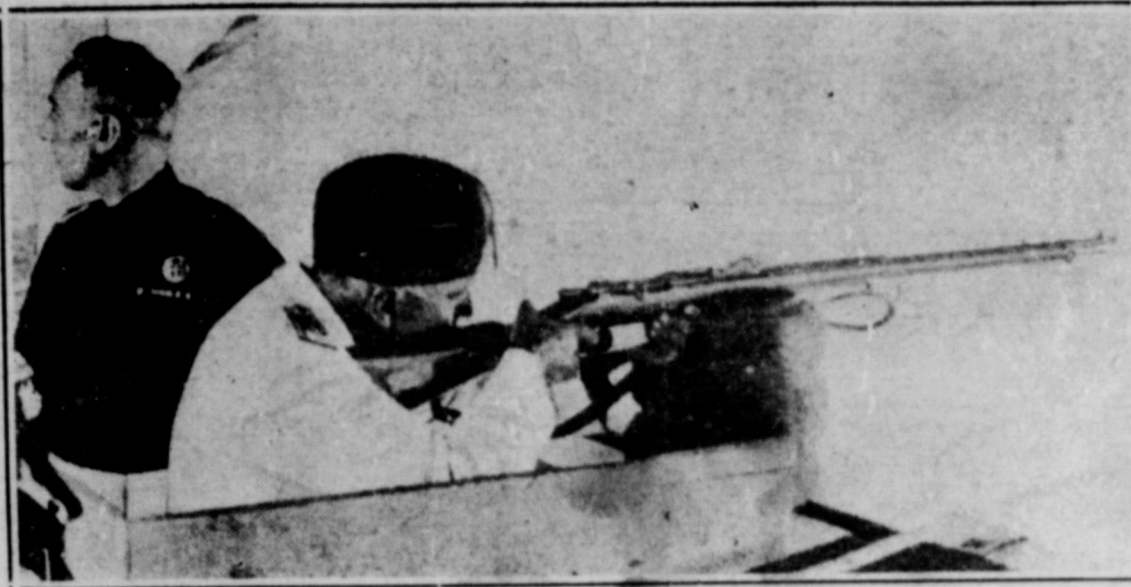

Hayes is charged with having taken a 1934 Ford pickup truck from the Foxhall Motor Company last August, under the pretense of buying it, and driving it to Austin, where he was later apprehended.

The case will probably go to the jury some time this afternoon.

In the case of the State of Texas vs. John Lambkin, charged with cattle theft, which was tried yesterday, the jury this morning returned a verdict of guilty, and assessed his punishment at four years in the penitentiary, with the sentence suspended.

Following the completion of the Hayes trial, the court will recess for the week end, taking up the docket again Monday.

Mussolini Demonstrates He's Big Shot

The versatile Italian dictator demonstrated his skill with a rifle when he fired the first round at the international military rifle championship in Rome. Premier Mussolini is pictured in the firing pit, drawing a fine bead on the distant target to set an example of accuracy for his force awaiting the zero hour on the Ethiopian borders.

Canning Plant Forced to Adopt Toll System Plan

Lack of Funds Causes Change

The Memphis Government canning kitchen was thrown in confusion yesterday morning when an order was issued from the District Relief Office in Plainview, cutting off the relief aid to the kitchen here. This resulted in the kitchen being temporarily forced to close down.

The action was brought about because of lack of relief funds. However, H. C. Driscoll, District Relief Representative from Plainview, was in Memphis yesterday afternoon, and arrangements were made whereby the Memphis canning kitchen could be re-opened under a toll basis. The re-opening of the kitchen was brought about largely by James A. Jackson, county agricultural agent, according to Mrs. C. A. Williams, head of the local canning plant.

Under the toll basis that will continue until relief funds are received, the county relief agency will receive 40 percent of the canned goods the producer will receive 40 percent, and the canning force will receive 20 percent.

The closing order yesterday found the kitchen running at full speed and turning out more canned produce each day than ever before. The plant opened yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock and ran this morning until 4 o'clock without shutting down, and work now is in full swing.

FOUR SCHOOLS IN COUNTY CLOSE

Recessed to Enable Students to Help Pick Cotton

Four Hall County schools, and possibly one or two others, closed their doors yesterday afternoon and recessed for a month or more, in order that the school children may assist in gathering the cotton crops.

The schools to close were Webster, Leslie, Deep Lake and Fairview. Webster will re-open on November 4, while the other three will open again in about a month. The adjournment for cotton picking season will not affect the rural schools' eight-month school term.

OUR GUESTS
 THE Democrat this afternoon hopes to be host to hundreds of our readers, for today is Open House at the Democrat office.

We are proud of our new paper size and shape, and of our modern press it is being printed on, and we want all of our friends and readers to inspect this new equipment.

We also want the public to get acquainted with our new publisher, and he wants to get acquainted with you.

For more than a year now, the Democrat has been your guest for six days of each week, and today we are reversing the situation.

OUR BOW
 THE Democrat this afternoon makes its bow as a Saturday afternoon paper, instead of Sunday morning.

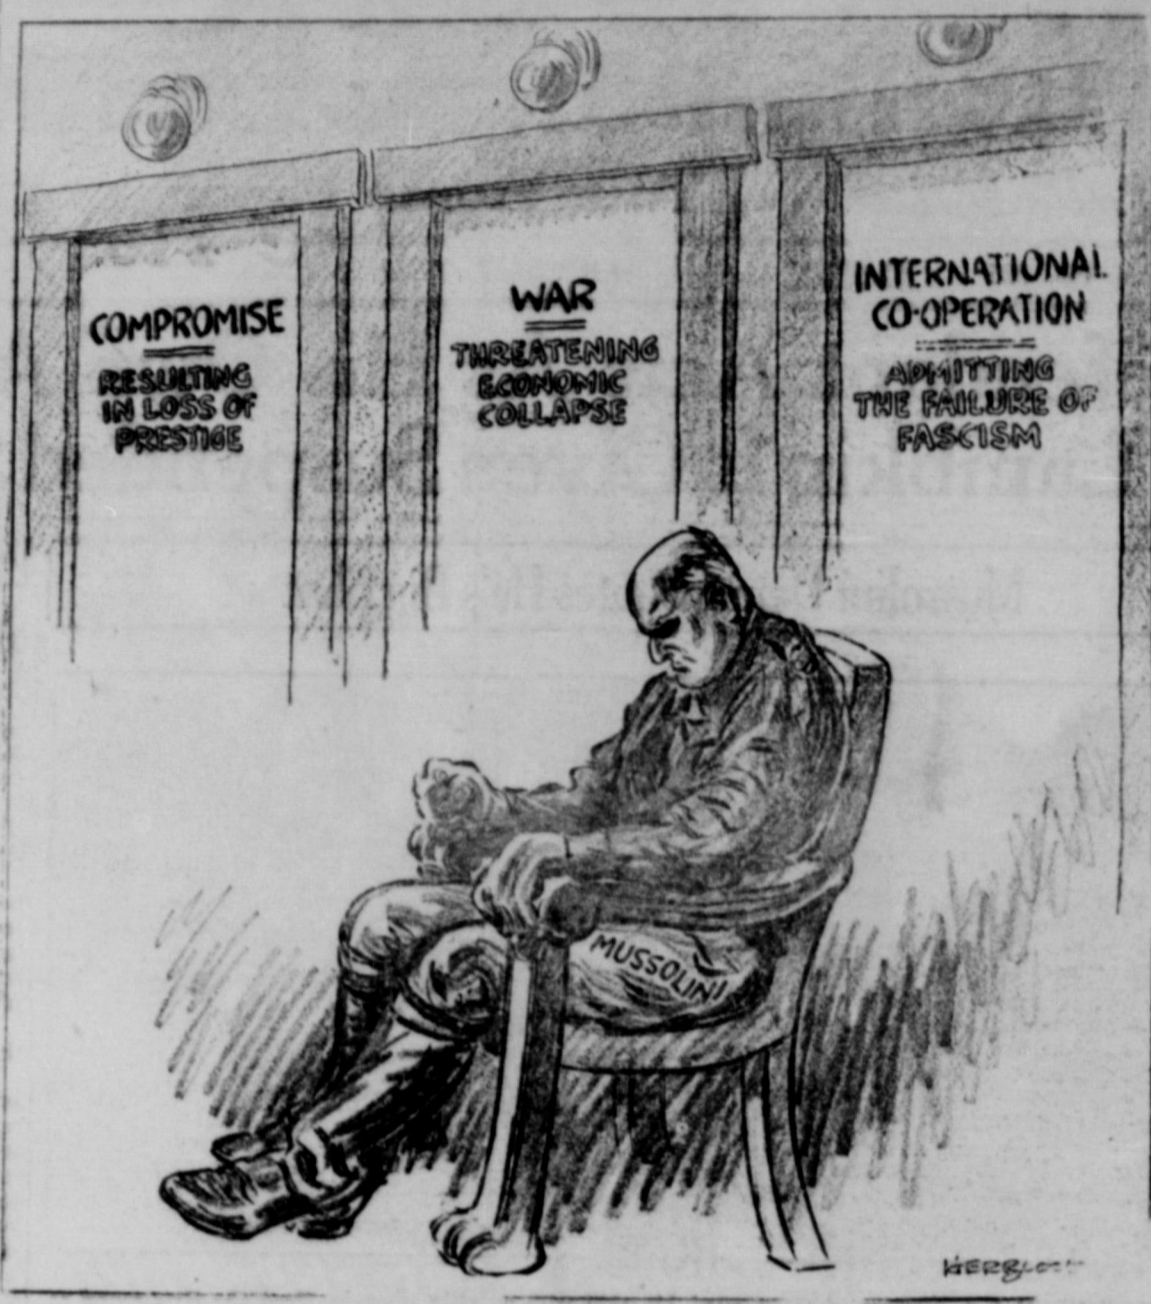

The familiar visitor which has called on you each Sunday morning will now come to you on Saturday afternoons, and we believe that, when you realize the circumstances surrounding the change, you will heartily approve of it.

In order to issue a paper on Sunday morning, the staff of the Democrat has had to work all day Saturday and far into the Sunday.

early morning hours on Sunday, instead of a day of rest, one which accounted for very little relaxation for the staff, precluded their participation in Sunday morning church services, unless they did without a lot of sleep, and brought them back on the job Monday morning jaded and tired.

Under the new plan, every member of the staff

The BLUE DOOR

Rachel Mack © 1935 NEA Service Inc.

BEGIN HERE TODAY
RUTH WOODSON, pretty, high-spirited girl of 19, in search of work, seeks refuge from a storm in an old stone house with a blue door in the little town of Worthville. The queer old caretaker, BERTHA GIBBS, also known as PENNY, mistakes Ruth for ELAINE CHALMERS, whose grandfather built the house. Ruth falls in love with JOHN McNEILL, the young man next door, and resolves to stay on a while, posing as Elaine.

Elaine Chalmers, at Graycastle College, vows in a sorority meeting to win the love of her childhood hero, John McNeill. She plans to go to Worthville. John receives a letter from her and realizes that the girl in the old Hunter house is a fake. He loves her and decides to tell her so. He is called out of town and leaves a note of explanation for Ruth, but old Bertha does not deliver it. Ruth thinks John has gone away in disgust. She is sleepless and goes to the library to get a book. There she finds a suicide note, half-written. She follows the writer to the third floor and discovers him to be DUNCAN HUNTER, Elaine's uncle, who has been unjustly held in an insane asylum. Ruth persuades him to live and to prove his sanity legally.

Elaine arrives and hears from Bertha that there is a girl in the house, using her name.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXVI
 Upstairs, in the room which had been hers for eight days, Ruth Woodson was getting ready to leave. She was debating a question of ethics with herself. Could she conscientiously take away with her the clothes Penny had turned over to her?

"No, I can't," was her first decision. "They really belong to those women of St. Stephen's Church who held the rummage sale. To take them would be like stealing from the church itself."

Then common sense overrode ethics. "I need them to keep me warm and decent. To save myself from pneumonia and help me to get a job. If St. Stephen's Guild had them to sell they'd turn around and use the money to help some 'needy and worthy girl' exactly like me. So why all the fuss? . . . Yes, I'll take a few of them. Not the evening clothes, of course. Nor the navy blue satin, though I'd give my head for that one. Just the knit dresses and the suit and a couple of felt hats. I'll take an extra pair of shoes, too, besides the oxfords on my feet. Those are the things I need."

The thin sunshine of the early morning had disappeared and the day promised to be damp and exceedingly raw. Thankful for the warmth of the fur-trimmed sport suit, Ruth put it on. She pulled a felt hat jauntily over her left eye.

"Now I think I'll carry a couple of books, so I'll look like a college girl beating a ride." Once, when riding with John McNeill, she had seen girls asking for rides to and from the little college which lay 20 miles away. No one had seemed to think less of them for their boyish independence.

As she had no suitcase, Ruth used a heavy cardboard suit box from Bertha's storeroom. It exactly held the extra clothes. She tied it with a stout string. And then there was nothing left to do but gather up her box, her purse, and the two books which she had selected as appropriate.

"They'll be Duncan Hunter's gift to me," she thought, "for saving his life!" She knew that he was still sleeping. "My strangest adventure of all," she decided, thinking of last night.

But there was yet another adventure in store for Ruth Woodson before she should pass through the blue door into the world again. As she descended the last step of the stairway and stood cautiously listening to Penny's heavy footfall in the kitchen, a girl came through the dining room door and confronted her. The stranger was as graceful as a tiger and wore a brown tweed suit, a loose fur at her neck and a small brown hat. She had gold-brown hair and dark eyes. Her features were breath-takingly perfect.

Ruth noticed all this. She also noticed that the girl had been eating her breakfast. She carried a toasted roll in her hand. It must be Elaine Chalmers, of course. Ruth said, "Good morning!"

Elaine said, "Oh. Leaving us so soon?"

Ruth thought, in panic, "Why did this have to happen to me?" She looked at Elaine Chalmers pleadingly. She thought, "If only she'll let me go and not badger me!"

It was too much to ask, of course. Fate never had let her off easily. Elaine said, "You've been using my name, I hear. Like it?"

BEHIND THE SCENE

IN WASHINGTON

BY WILLIS THORNTON
 NEA Service Staff Correspondent
 WASHINGTON, Sept. 28.—The Social Security bill, rather a pitiful little affair now, the organization from the great oak of the social security program is expected to be about 25 borrowed employees in borrowed quarters—that can be seen today of an organization that is expected to employ 10,000 people administering benefits that touch more than 14,000 Americans.

Because the bill which has provided funds was referred to death as Congress in its last session, nobody can regularly hired by the Social Security Board. A dozen employees have been borrowed from NRA, and another from Edwin Witte's commission on social security which framed the plan.

Unless the board's appeal to the director of the budget for under the emergency relief equal to a month's administrative expense, is granted, it's doubtful if even the salaries of Commissioners Winant, Altmyer, Miles can be paid until Congress meets next winter and appropriates some money.

Of course, they're going anyway.

The mail already is flooded with stacks of it. Most of it boils to two questions: "How do I get my job?" and "When do I get my pension?"

The borrowed staff is not large enough yet even to answer the simple answer that must be given to all such inquiries: to the class, "We haven't anything to use for money yet," and a second, "Nothing doing for at least two years."

Plenty of the application jobs come sponsored by congressmen who were there the night the appropriation was busted to death, and who know better.

The mailman dumps a big pile of mail on a bare table. It is into the file that is beginning to spring up, forerunner of a system that aims in 1937 to begin a complete personal account every employe in the United States—no less—establishing age and keeping his work contribution record for "old-age" insurance benefits after 1942.

The Social Security Board, which has only just held its meeting, is being given the whole floor of the new Labor department building formerly occupied by the old National Board.

It will probably have 500 employes the first year, will build up from that to 10,000 it eventually will administer the gigantic program.

The money the government spends all over the country is surprising extent. Go down to local postoffice on a government pay day and look at the order line. It's three times as long as it used to be a few years ago.

Government employes are getting money back home to relatives who need it worse than they do, or to the families they have started to bring to Washington because of the high cost of living here, or because their jobs are too temporary.

Ruth with cool detachment, remarked, "I gave Penny a start when I arrived this morning. No wonder."

"No wonder!" Ruth said. For a moment she was away by the drama of the day. She wished she might have seen Bertha's face when it happened.

Elaine said, "It seems to me of you to leave when our John McNeill is in Washington. She watched Ruth's face hoping to discover how she felt.

menting her. Not yet! It was more than a personal thing. It was a class conflict—the poor girl against the rich, fighting a duel of wits and self-control.
 Ruth said, "They were your clothes once. All of them. But you gave them to St. Stephen's Guild. I'm indebted to the church, I believe. One doesn't mind that so much."
 Elaine remarked, "You're terribly clever, aren't you? Or should we be frank and say you're terribly tricky. Have you always lived by cheating and lying?"
 Ruth answered, "You can say those things to me, of course. There's nobody to stop you."
 "Perhaps John McNeill would if he were here?"
 "No," replied Ruth with a shake of her head. "I think he'd agree with you."
 "So he's found you out!" Elaine remarked thoughtfully. It was something sh'd been wanting to know. "And he's the sort of man to be disgusted by a crooked play."

 "Yes," admitted Ruth. "Disgusted. Not that it matters now."
 "No?" Elaine retored. "You mean you're lost interest?"
 "I'll never lose interest in him," Ruth said clearly. "I'll never forget him. And I don't think he'll ever forget me."

Guests were: Conly Ward, Mrs. C. D. Denny, Mrs. Lee Bell, Mrs. Forrest Power, Mrs. S. S. Montgomery, Mrs. Elizabeth Johnston Pauline Ross, and Ewel Noel. Buster Helm and Dr. McNeely. Gifts were sent by Mrs. Ira Foster, Miss Mary Noel and H. J. Gore, who were not present.

The program with Miss Ross at the piano was as follows: Ewel Noel and Mrs. Maynard Drake sang, "At Dawning" and Buster Helm sang, "I Love You Truly." Then Miss Ross played Lohengrin's Wedding March while Ewel Noel paid a tribute to Alice Ruth in the form of a mock wedding from the choir; Mrs. Ward paid a tribute as her Sunday School teacher and Mrs. L. D. Pierce a tribute, representing the Trinity Guild, at which time the gifts were presented.

While the gifts were being opened Miss Ross played softly Mendelessohn's Wedding March. After the social hour Mrs. Pierce presented the honoree, Miss McClaren, a hand painted bell shape book which contained a wish written by each guest.

Notwithstanding its smiles and sunshine, life often is a thing of hazards, limitations and handicaps. But for every hazard, limitation and handicap there are compensations, believe it or not, the "divinity that shapes our ends" has seen to that. Sunday's morning sermon, "The Compensation of Life," will point the finger of thought at this fact. There will be good music. The service begins at 11 a. m.

"Jesus and the Crowds," is to be the subject of the evening address—at 7:30. Crowds have a habit of doing strange, inconsistent, inhuman things. Today's crowds are very much like yesterday's crowds in this respect. Jesus encountered crowds whose actions we of today bitterly condemn. But were Jesus to mix with the crowds today, would they be any different?

We invite you to Sunday school next Sunday—at 9:45 a. m. The Senior Christian Endeavor will meet at 6:30 p. m.

WHEELER BEATS MUSTANGS 2-6

Half Rally Is Responsible for Victory

High Cyclone that was the scrapping school Mustangs, as the crowd of their feet and moved to keep warm.

Deason in the Capt. Bud McAbee, and Fred Sanders, the Cyclone, after a slow start, disheartened that has marked teams of the past and Wheeler team off its feet half to pull the fire.

When Powers fumbled to punt and the Mustangs clicked on and scored a touchdown ever losing possession.

First touchdown came seconds of the first one carried the ball Wheeler five yard stalled there. Wheeler to Deason, safety, for 35 yard strip.

The little Memphis flash took the ball on the run and side-stepped and fought his way through the entire Wheeler team for 35 yards and a touchdown.

Foard, big 180-pound Mustang fullback, was probably the star of the game. He plunged, punted, passed and circled end to lead his mates in a stubborn fight.

The Memphis Gold Medal Band and a fair representation of Memphians, swathed in overcoats and blankets, viewed the game.

Wheeler kicked to Memphis on the 15 yard line, and Walker returned it to the 20. Ferrell hit left guard for four yards. Powers picked up one yard at right guard and Deason plugged through the line to make it a first down. Powers, on two tries at the line, netted five yards, and Deason streaked through center for four. Grimes received a 15-yard penalty for roughing. Powers dived through right tackle for seven yards. Powers, on an attempted punt, fumbled the ball and Wheeler recovered on the Memphis 25.

Weeks passed, but it was knocked down. Foard went through the Memphis line to the 18 yard strip and a first down. McAbee threw Foard for on gain. Penelton fumbled and was thrown for a loss of one yard. Penelton skidded his own right end for 19 yards and a touchdown. The try for point failed.

Walker returned the Wheeler kick-off to the Memphis 35. Deason hit left guard for three yards. Deason picked up another yard, and the ball played back and fourth between the two teams in mid-field for the remainder of the quarter. Bourland and McAbee led the defense and swept the Mustangs back for losses on several occasions.

Late in the second quarter, Adeock faked and ran around left end for a first down on the Wheeler 30. Powers passed to Walker on the 20 for another first down. Wheeler was penalized 15 yards to place the ball in a scoring position, but on the next play Crump was thrown for a seven-yard loss. Deason and Powers plunged to the five, but the ball went over on downs. Deason took Foard's kick and streaked 35 yards to score standing up. The try for point failed.

The second half opened with Powers and Deason lugging the ball for short gains through the Wheeler line. Powers got off a poor punt to his own 40, and a Wheeler pass was good to the Memphis 15. After being thrown for losses twice, Wheeler again passed, this time to the 14. Sanders and Bourland smothered Cain and Pace to take the ball on downs and break up the scoring threat.

Late in the fourth quarter, Powers passed to Walker for a first down on Memphis' 30. Deason hit left guard for 7 yards. A pass failed, and then Powers shot to Davis which was good to their 40. Deason again cracked left guard for eight yards, and Powers heaved one to Walker on the Wheeler 20. Deason took it to the 20. Memphis drew an off-sides penalty, but Deason took a short bullet pass and virtually fought his way to the eight yard line. Powers rammed right tackle to the four yard line. Deason picked up a yard, and Powers smashed through center for a touchdown as the Memphis crowd howled itself hoarse and swarmed onto the field. Sanders' kick for point was no good.

The starting line-up: Memphis — McAbee, center; Swift and Bourland, guards; Grimes and Sanders, tackles; Scott and Davis, ends; Ferrell and Walker, halfbacks; Deason, fullback; Powers, quarter.

Wheeler — Deering, center; Connor and Sherwood, guards; Nukerk and Tilman, tackles; Whitner and A. Weeks, ends; Ford, fullback; Penelton and Tate, halfbacks; and C. Weeks, quarter.

Recalling Simpler Days of Our Ancestors

Days of simpler, sterner life, when pioneer farmers broke with oxen the virgin turf of a new land without benefit of AAA, are recalled by this scene depicting a team of oxen being used by the Mershon Association in its celebration of the 200th anniversary of the arrival of that family in America. Thomas C. Hill, of Lawrenceville, N. J., is behind the plow, symbol of the fruitfulness of the good American earth.

COTTON TRADE OF SPAIN

From now on, when I think of Spain, I can picture in my mind an area of approximately 190,000 square miles of rolling scenic country, populated by 29,000,000 active, ambitious, pleasure loving, artistic people. To me it is no longer the land of "manana", (do it tomorrow) or the home of a people who dream of regaining lost possessions, but the place where people realize work is the secret of success. It was a pleasure to note the enthusiasm displayed on the faces of men who told of the modern machines and conveniences being introduced into Spanish life. It makes little difference to them whether these things come from abroad or are manufactured in their own factories just so long as they are to make conditions in their country better. Naturally bull fights, fiestas, pa'otas, etc., are still important events in the life of all the natives. Such national events are a part of their life. They have their hours for work (8:00 a. m. to 1:00 p. m. and 4:00 to 8:00 p. m.), sleep (1:00 a. m. to 7:00 a. m.) and (2:00 to 4:00 p. m.) play and (9:00 p. m. to 1:00 a. m.) and even if the hours do not agree with ours, I cannot say they are wrong.

of new life. She is not one of the leading countries from the standpoint of either consumption or production, but for the number of her people she is one of our good consumers. Imports enter thru' ports on both the Atlantic Ocean and Mediterranean Sea. Barcelona, with a population of approximately one million, is the main cotton port. This modern city is built around a fine deep water harbor. Within its land trade territory are most of Spain's cotton mills. There is being operated in this country, at present, some 2,070,000 spindles. Most of the mills are small, located in the mountain villages where labor is plentiful, and water power available. These natural advantages coupled with her new spirit is bound to make this country a more important factor in the cotton trade.

For textile mill workers the normal schedule of hours calls for two shifts of eight hours per day for six days per week. Just now this means the workers in these mills are putting in from two to three times the number of hours per week as American and English workers. This is the only country in the world where I have seen the last four years, said the laborer seemed satisfied with its hours and pay. Since the overthrow of the monarchy on October 6, 1934, regulations have been passed in the interest of the textile workers, mill owners and cotton growers. The government requires all industry to give labor one week off each year with full pay. This vacation coupled with that good old Spanish custom of frequent holidays really makes the laborer's life worth living. To compensate the spinner for all the goods he exports and to encourage the grower to produce more, a tax of ninety seven hundredths of a cent per pound or approximately $5.00 per bale, has been imposed on all cotton imported. With an annual consumption of approximately 400,000 bales this tax should within a very short time make cotton growing a very profitable business to the Spanish farmer. This year he is getting better than 18c per pound for his crop. The price he is getting, is a way gives him the laugh on us for originating the idea of raising the price of farm products by use of special taxes. Is he talking advantage of his opportunity? Yes. To show what is taking place in the area adaptable to this crop one only has to look at the rapid increase in production. In 1933-34 Spain produced 4,200 bales, but in 1934-35 this amount increased to 9,482 bales. An increased acreage has been planted for the 1934-35 crop, but it is too early to make any forecast on yields at present. Practically all of that grown now is in the province of Seville, but efforts are being made to develop an area in Cordoba. It is not likely Spain will ever produce very much cotton, but the more she does produce, the less she will import.

The ocean freight rate to ship American cotton to Barcelona is 36 points per hundred or $1.80 per bale. After the arrival of cotton in Spain the cost involved in discharging from ship, receiving, weighing, and load on carts, transport to warehouse, placing in storage, tax for improvement of Spanish cotton, harbor tax, custom tax, stamps, etc. amount to approximately $7.10 per bale when shipped in lots of 100 bales. The two heaviest charges to be paid on landing are the improvement tax and custom tax, these two amounting to fully 85 per cent of all the port charges. After cotton is weighed on discharging it is moved from the docks to storage by use of an electric car, which carries ten high density or twenty round bales at a time. Excellent storage facilities are provided to take care of all shipments. The atmosphere of the warehouses is kept damp enough to allow the cotton to gain back what weight it has lost in shipping. Spanish spinners are careful buyers, making their purchases by bale. To make a purchase the spinners visit the warehouses on the bay what they want, have it and handle their own transportation to their mills. Spanish desire American middling middling cotton from fifteen to one inch staple, what they made may be medium count yarns for a variety of calicoes, hams, etc. It was the pleasure to visit a 4,000-spindle the Rifa Spinning Company the outskirts of Barcelona company of Mr. Rafael E. mill has found in quite to make a speciality of special design yarns. Of only a few of the mills specialities but no where be found a more varied cloth than one sees in Spain.

By Associated Press
MIAMI Sept. 28.—The Jacksonville eather bureau said this morning that the tropical hurricane which swept across Cuba would probably pass near Miami late today or early tonight.

Relief workers and others clearing the wreckage from the Labor Day hurricane, which killed over 400 on the Florida keys, were hastily evacuated.

The hurricane cut a 150 mile wide path through Cuba, leaving behind it crippled communication lines which veiled the fate of Metanzas, Santa Cara and Camaguey provinces.

In Florida the storm brought apprehension from Key West to West Palm Beach.

Vocational Work Estelline School

Special to The Democrat
The new Vocational Agriculture Department in the Estelline High school has created considerable interest in school and community. Walter Labay has been at work since August 1, in an effort to reach as many people as possible so that he will have a full program.

To date there are 41 boys in the agriculture classes who have been working on farm surveys. These surveys are of the farms on which they live. The purpose of these surveys is to get the individual boys to see where the present methods can be improved upon.

Twice each month night classes are held and the attendance has been good. Farmers are coming to these meetings and getting useful information. The subjects discussed are real live farm problems, and are discussed in a way that all in attendance are benefited.

Within the past two weeks two trips have been made to the Spur Experiment station by Mr. Labay and 14 farmers of the Estelline community. As a result of these trips, there are now two trench silos under construction.

Bruce Bryant left this morning for Austin after a visit here with his brother, S. A. Bryant, and attending district court.
