ANCHORS AWEIGH, ME LADS!

It was a great holiday that President Roosevelt anticipated, if his broad smile here was any criterion. He's shown waving goodbye to the crowd gathered alongside his yacht as he left New Haven harbor for a cruise in Long Island sound, then to attend the Harvard-Yale regatta at New London, Conn. Back of him, the First Lady and a companion join in the cheery farewell.

LOSE TRAIL OF LUBBOCK JAIL BREAKERS

Four Armed Men Sought Near Big Spring

By Associated Press
BIG SPRING, June 25.—The trail of four armed men who escaped from the Lubbock County jail yesterday and released two men held hostages near Big Spring, apparently vanished this sector today. Officers scoured the northeast part of Howard County during the night, but failed to find any clues. The desperadoes released their captives eight miles northeast of Big Spring, then sped eastward.

Sheriff Jess Slaughter received a call from the Lubbock sheriff, indicating that the search was along the New Mexico state line.

Walter S. Posey, vice-president of the First National bank of Lubbock, one of the hostages, said that Ed Stanton, convicted slayer, prevented the other desperadoes from releasing him and Campbell Elkins in the sparsely settled Borden county.

"We ain't going to do you that way," Posey quoted Stanton as saying.

BRANSON, Mo., June 24.—Sixty state and federal officers, machine guns ready for action, raided the Ozark Hills ranch of Clyde Higgs today in a fruitless search for John Dillinger, escaped Indiana desperado, and Charles (Pretty Boy) Floyd, Southwestern outlaw.

The peace officers acted upon information that two men, identified by the informant as Dillinger and Floyd, had arrived in an ambulance at the ranch Friday night. One of the men was reported seriously wounded.

It's a moment of triumph for this pair of New Dealers and their smiles show it, as Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace signs the commission which makes Rexford G. Commission's Plan Of Boosting Wheat Prices Threatened

By Associated Press
LONDON, June 25.—Argentina's refusal to curb wheat exports or accept any scheme to decrease production, today forced an indefinite postponement of the regular session of the International Wheat Commission, scheduled to open here Wednesday.

Members said the life of the Commission, organized last August with the hope of boosting wheat prices throughout the world, was threatened.

Argentina's defense was that an agreement was drawn up before it was known that Argentina would have a bumper crop and pressure of private traders forced the government's hands.

Free Features Await Memphis Visitors Tomorrow

Plans for the mammoth Hall county 44th anniversary celebration were being completed today and the stage is set for the largest celebration of this kind ever to be held in this section.

Meetings have been held all day by the Junior and Senior Chambers of Commerce as last minute details were worked out.

Preparations have been made to take care of the thousands that are expected to gather here tomorrow for the commemoration of the founding of the county and for the old settlers' reunion.

The old settlers' reunion is to be a feature of the celebration, and a number of "old-timers" from all over the county and neighboring territory are expected to assemble and take part in the formation of an old settlers' organization.

Glenn A. Truax and the Memphis Black and Gold band promise an abundance of music throughout the day, as band concerts will be given in the morning and in the afternoon.

A number of "old fiddlers" have also been invited to join in the music-making.

The day of festivity officially begins at 9 o'clock with the registration of old settlers at the Carnegie library park. The registration will continue until noon.

Basket lunches will be spread at the library park at noon. At 1 o'clock in the afternoon the old settlers of the county will form an old settlers' organization.

The Ritz and Palace theaters offer free performances from 2 o'clock until 6 o'clock. Tickets for these shows are to be obtained from a booth located on the north side of the square, beginning at 1 o'clock.

At 4 o'clock a baseball game between the Memphis Ows and the Turkey Turks, the two strongest teams in the county, will be staged. The day's program will be closed at 7 o'clock when "Bunny" Dryden again performs on both the high and low wire downtown.

"Old Settler" On Same Place Entire Life

Charles A. Williams, who lives one and one-half miles southeast of Salisbury, is another "old settler" who has announced his intentions of attending the Hall county anniversary celebration here tomorrow.

Mr. Williams, although not so old as some, is a real "old-timer" of Hall county.

He was born on the farm where he now lives four months before the county was organized. With the exception of a short stay in Memphis, when he attended school, and a short time in Iowa, Mr. Williams has spent his entire life where he now lives.

Mr. Williams will take part in the formation of an old settlers organization here tomorrow.

BORN THIRTY YEARS TOO SOON

DONNA of the BIG TOP by BEULAH POYNTER

BEGIN HERE TODAY

When Donna is injured by a fall from the trapeze Madeline arranges for her to be taken to GRANDFATHER SIDDAL's farm to recuperate. To please her partner Donna pretends to be Madeline. She falls in love with BILL SIDDAL, Madeline's cousin, and though she is ashamed of deceiving Bill and Grandfather she is afraid to tell the truth.

Meanwhile Madeline, who has married CON DAVID, the animal trainer, is killed. Con knows of Donna's deception and decides to blackmail her. He comes to the nearby town and Donna agrees to meet him. She departs, telling Bill she is going to a neighbor's.

Bill grows anxious because she is gone so long. He finds an anonymous letter written by Mrs. Planter telling him that Donna has gone to meet Con. He has just finished reading the letter when Donna arrives.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXXIX

"I was startled," Donna had said to Con. "It's so dark and I didn't see you." Her voice shook a little.

Con offered his hand but she ignored it. Then he laughed. "Let me look at you," he said. "It's been months and months since I've seen you. Seems like years. Yes, you're as lovely as ever. Even this light doesn't disguise that."

"What is it you want, Con?" the girl asked hurriedly. "I haven't much time and I'm not anxious to drive on a country road in this kind of weather."

"You should have let me come to you."

"You know I couldn't do that."

"Why not? Aren't we old friends? Didn't I marry your partner?"

"Yes, I know but—my husband doesn't know that. I mean about Madeline. You see—"

"So the masquerade is still going on, eh?"

"You didn't think I knew anything about that did you? You haven't told him the truth yet?"

"No," miserably.

"Afraid he'd kick you out if he learned you weren't the girl he thought?"

"Of course not! Only you see, Grandfather—Madeline's grandfather is totally blind. That first time I went to the farm when Madeline and I—when I visited him pretending to be her—made him so happy I didn't have the heart to tell him I wasn't his granddaughter that she didn't care enough for him to spend a week-end with him. Then, after the accident—didn't Madeline tell you how she sent for her cousin and told him it was Madeline who was ill?"

"Yes, she told me."

"At first I didn't know I was supposed to be she. I mean in the hospital I didn't know it. Then when I thought of how long it would be before I was well and how lovely it was on the farm I couldn't resist the temptation. I intended to tell them the truth, but somehow I couldn't. And—she stared straight ahead at the rows of tombstones, now murky gray in the dusk. "I had fallen in love with Bill."

Con laughed incredulously. "That I can't swallow. I can understand your liking the farm in the summer and the rest of it, but don't tell me you married this yokel because you're in love with him?"

"He isn't a yokel," Donna said indignantly. "Bill Siddal is better educated than you are, Con David. He may not be as sophisticated, nor have seen as much of the world but he's the finest man I ever knew except Grandfather. I love him! I loved him the first day he came to the circus—"

"Yes, you did. You married him because I married Madeline."

"What-at? You don't honestly believe that?"

"No, I don't. I wish I did. But I know this, Donna—whether you are in love with him or not you're afraid of him and I wouldn't give the snap of my finger for a love that's afraid. He may be fine and honorable and he probably married you because he was in love with you—God knows I can understand that—but his love isn't big enough to forgive what you've done and you know it. You're in mortal terror for fear he'll suspect you aren't the girl he believes you to be. Isn't that so?"

"Yes," she whispered. Then she added, "But it isn't altogether Bill. It's Grandfather. The shock might kill him in his weakened condition."

"He doesn't know about Madeline's death?"

"No."

Con whistled under his breath. "Pretty soft for you—her dying."

"What do you mean?"

"You know what I mean. Maybe she told me the truth and maybe she didn't, but from all I gathered the old man is pretty well fixed."

"The farm is valuable."

"And there are no heirs but this precious Bill and Madeline. Madeline was the nearest kin and due to inherit all the old man possesses. Now she's dead and you're supposed to be she. What are you going to do about it when the old man dies?"

"I hadn't thought—not since she died."

"I'll bet you haven't! With him hanging to life by the skin of his teeth and a will made out giving everything to his granddaughter."

"That doesn't matter now," she said slowly. "While Madeline lived I knew that some day I would have to admit the fraud but now Bill would inherit the farm. He's the only living relative."

"And that, my dear, is what I am here to prevent."

"Prevent?"

"Exactly. Madeline was my wife. If a valuable piece of property had belonged to her at the time of her death it would naturally be mine now. I've no intention of standing by and seeing this man you've married come into the estate that should be mine."

"I don't see how you can help it," Donna said in a tight voice. "Since Madeline is dead and Grandfather isn't—and the farm means a lot to Bill. It wouldn't mean anything to you."

"That's all you know about it. It costs me plenty to house my cats. If I owned a farm I could turn it into headquarters for them."

"All that lovely fertile land! I wouldn't let you."

"No? You're not in position to keep me from doing anything?"

"Yes, I am. I know there's a will leaving everything to Madeline. It was drawn up after her grandfather had his stroke. I could induce him to make another and leave everything to Bill."

"But you won't."

FLAPPER FANNY SAYS

People who are strapped usually find themselves in a jam.

"I certainly will."

"Oh, no you won't. You've no proof that Madeline concocted the scheme that you and she put over. I know you have not been foolish enough—or is it clever enough—to keep her letters. Maybe your husband might overlook the fraud and maybe the old man might be generous and see something decent in your attempt to pass yourself off as his granddaughter, but the law wouldn't."

"The law?"

"Yes, the law. I don't suppose you are aware you've committed a felony in pretending to be another person in order to inherit that person's fortune?"

"But I didn't do it for the fortune! You know I didn't. If you read any of the letters I wrote Madeline you know that I always assured her that I would do something—I didn't know exactly how or what—to see that she got what was coming to her."

"It isn't what I know or believe," Con said slowly. "Unless you have copies of those letters, were written. If I take the matter to court I can get plenty of witnesses to prove that you are Donna Gabriel, that you married under an assumed name, that the death of the girl you impersonated was known by you, yet you kept the knowledge a secret from her relatives and—"

"Oh!" Donna gasped.

"It wouldn't sound pretty would it? You'd have a hard time convincing anyone that the farm and whatever else the old man may have wasn't the reason for your deception. To obtain money under false pretenses is a criminal offense, my dear."

"You cad!" she said hoarsely.

"You unspeakable cad."

"Rather a harsh term for a man who is only seeking what is rightfully his. I'm being on the level with you, laying my cards on the table. Under other circumstances I would have gone right to old Mr. Siddal and told him the truth. But it happens I'm fond of you."

"Fond!" she sneered.

"That's a mild word. I love you."

"Don't."

"Surely that's not news to you. Marrying Madeline didn't change my feelings toward you. I've always been crazy about you. I still am and—"

"I won't listen to anything so vile," she cried. "I couldn't see you before I married Bill and I certainly have less use for you now that I'm married. Now I'm going."

"Just a minute!" He caught her wrist. "I like your spirit, Donna. That was a rotten thing to say and I didn't get you here to make love to you. I wanted to—"

"Shush!" she said suddenly, apprehensively. "There's someone over there."

The crackling of a twig reached them as the eavesdropper in an attempt to hear more clearly, moved closer and for a second was outlined against the trees.

Panic gripped Donna's heart. "Let me go," she jerked. "This will get me into terrible trouble."

Parents Must Be Firm in R Jealousy and Rivalry in C

By OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

"What shall I do about my two children aged three and five?" writes a mother.

"They used to quarrel so much about toys, the younger one as a baby took Teddy's things and kept him in a constant roar, so I began to buy two alike of everything.

"I always dress them alike, too, and they get the same food now.

"So there would not be any fussing, I got them bowls and plates and cups alike, also. When I divide apples or cookies or candy I see that they are the same size, or I give them an equal number of pieces. It has saved me a lot of worry, and I was told it was a good plan.

The Jealous Brother

"But now I have a problem. Teddy is jealous. If I take Jackie anywhere without his brother he carries on dreadfully. Jackie isn't that way. He never pays any attention if I take Teddy out and leave him at home.

"The other day a friend came in and brought Jackie a good coat that her boy had outgrown. It was a beautiful little plaid raglan and he looked adorable in it. I was so glad to get it because I could not afford new coats for them this spring.

"But Teddy needed one and I had seen an advertisement of bargains, so I hid Jackie's coat and went down to get the other so there wouldn't be any trouble.

"Don't be nervous. Nothing we said could have been heard. You've a car, haven't you? Come on. Let's get in it. I've only said half what I intended."

"I looked everywhere but there were no plaid raglans or any coat that looked the least bit like Jackie's. So I decided to get a blue coat for Teddy and took it home.

Envious and Angry

"But when Teddy saw his brother's coat he tore off his own and ran out. 'I won't wear that old thing,' he screamed.

"Later I said, 'If I give you the other coat, will you take it?' just to try him. And he said, 'Yes,' and squeezed into it. Then it was Jackie's turn to roar. 'That's my coat. You take it right off.'

"I had to put both coats away. I don't know what to do. Will you tell me? And why does the book say to give children things alike so they won't quarrel?"

My answer is that the advice given in books about similar toys is good for a certain period of time, that is, when babies are too young to understand. It saves the tempers of older brothers and sisters and a mother's nerves.

But the continuance of such a practice will lead to the very trouble you are having.

Children have to learn quite early that brothers and sisters are entitled at times to favors they may not have, and vice versa.

Stubbornness a Defense

However, I detect a streak of real jealousy in Teddy, Jackie's stubbornness ing from it. In case of trated by the do is to be another scene produced, I Then I would him and say much talking and no coax I should be division or pense favors and make the will never older, either (COPYRIGHT, 1934)

POWER is generated by energy and the will "to do."

Have you ever seen a heavy cart stuck fast in a rut of mud? The jaded horse unable to move it another inch because of drooping spirit and lack of interest.

A dozen onlookers—some merely waiting to see what is going to happen—others giving advice and direction. But none of these will start the cart moving.

Then from the crowd step out three or four "doers." They put their shoulders to the wheel lending both effort and example until others follow them. The thing begins to move—gains momentum as all things do when once out of a rut.

And so, also, is it with civic progress—community movements, local enterprise—when "doers put their shoulders to the wheel."

Burks and McElreath Crowned Champs of City Net Tournament

CHAMP DOWNS TOP SEEDED DUO JOHNSEY FOR SINGLES

Burks Retains Title Yesterday Winning Straight Sets

Running true to form, Alfred Burks, seeded No. 1 and defending champion, copped the singles crown in the Memphis city tennis tournament on the Memphis Tennis club court here yesterday afternoon in straight sets.

Burks defeated Irvin Johnsey, seeded No. 2 in the tourney, yesterday for the city championship crown, winning the championship match with the count of 6-3, 6-3, 6-4.

The players were more evenly matched than the score indicated. However, Burks, although showing a lack of practice, had a slight edge on Johnsey in serving and in placements. Both players used the chop stroke to advantage and showed a weakness in driving.

A strong east wind hampered playing considerably. Johnsey got off to a good start when he took the initial game with a love game on Burk's servicing and added to the lead with an easy game victory on his serve.

Burks picked up and won the next two games easily, one being won on love points. The next was a love game won by Johnsey, and Burks took the next four straight games to clinch the set.

In the second set Johnsey again jumped into the lead with an easy victory on his serve. However, Burks took his serve with a love game and then out-played Johnsey to cop the next.

Johnsey copped the fourth and 7th games and put up a stubborn fight to lose the set at 6-3.

For the rest period, Johnsey came back strong to win the first four games of the third set. However, Burks rallied and with accurate placements ran out the set without another loss. Burks won the match as Johnsey double faulted on set and match point.

FUN A-FISHIN'

STEELHEAD TROUT TOUGH SCRAPER IN WEST

Steelhead trout, the fish Zane Grey made famous, needs little advertising.

His genealogy still a moot question among ichthyologists, the steelhead generally is accepted as the father of the rainbow trout. That is, steelhead, once landlocked, turns rainbow trout within the second generation.

Entering coastal streams enroute to spawning grounds from the Pacific ocean, the steelhead is a terrific battler and a tackle smasher.

In size he runs from a half-pound to 25 pounds, striking a general average of from six to 14 pounds depending on where taken.

When the steelhead first enters fresh water from the Pacific he is a brilliant silvery color with a blue-black line running down the back. After a short time away from the ocean, however, he assumes rainbow coloring.

In the famous Rogue and Umpqua river of Oregon he rises readily to a fly, farther north in Oregon salmon eggs and spinners most frequently are used as lures. The Klamath river in northern California also affords fine fly casting for steelhead.

The fly fishermen uses a nine to 10-foot regulation trout rod with a lot of "backbone," 30 yards of "C" taper line and at least 50 yards of linen "backing."

A wary fish, it is generally necessary to lay out at least 80 feet of line on the cast before the steelhead will rise. His first rush, reel screaming, generally takes out 150 feet before his rush is stopped.

TOP SEEDED DUO WINS WITHOUT SET LOSS

Harrison and Baldwin Victims Of Champs In Final Match

Alfred Burks and Eugene McElreath, the top seeded pair in the Memphis championship tournament, won in straight set victories over the team of Rabb Harrison and Russell Baldwin to win the doubles championship of the city without having lost a set during the tourney.

The match was a clean sweep of honors for Burks, who also won the singles championship.

Both teams played ragged tennis, with Burks and McElreath having better results than Harrison and Baldwin in driving at the base lines.

Burks and Baldwin stood out on the net, while McElreath and Harrison did most of the driving.

The score of the games was 8-6, 7-5, 6-4.

The games were for the most part long duceed affairs with each player usually winning his serve.

However, McElreath lost the sixth game of the first match by serving seven doubles.

A number of spectacular plays featured the match.

Harrison and Baldwin fought their ways into the finals of the tournament by surprise victories over Kenneth Oren and Kennon Hillyer and over Jack Norman and "Chesty" Walker.

Play in the city tournament was not completed yesterday as was scheduled. Play in the singles and doubles consolation divisions will continue this week.

MEMPHIS FATS CLASH WITH ESTELLINE

"No Sissy Softball For Us" Declare Local Fats

The "fats" of Memphis journey to Estelline this afternoon for a heavy tilt with the Estelline "fats" in a regulation baseball game.

"None of this sissy playground ball for us," say the local fat men, as they leave town in quest of competition.

With Ted Hanna, star local pitcher, still ailing from a sore arm, it is doubtful as to who the starting pitcher will be for Memphis. Bill Gaither will likely get the call, with Hanna being held in reserve if needed.

Angus Huckaby will likely complete the Memphis battery.

The game is called at 6 o'clock this afternoon, at Estelline. A number of Memphis baseball enthusiasts plan to attend.

Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen, U. S. minister to Denmark, has won a third share in a large Ceylon tea company, thus making her eligible for a bigger diplomatic post.

Democracy is possible only to highly educated people. —Newton D. Baker, former secretary of war.

By HARRY GRAYSON

Ol' Hiram Conibear's reputation was based principally on his Washington shells beating mediocre California crews year after year. Conibear's record at Poughkeepsie was not out of the ordinary. His Huskies finished second to Syracuse in 1913 and were fifth the following year.

Conibear was a splendid teacher in his life, but a few years back, when Washington products were drafted by institutions in the east, midwest and California, there was talk of the former professional runner and trainer having revolutionized the sport. The Conibear system and stroke suddenly became the correct one.

Conibear was a splendid teacher, regardless of where authorities rank him. He taught the two most successful of current mentors—Ky Ebright, of California, and Ed Leader, of Yale. Rusty Callow, of Pennsylvania, also was his pupil, and it was Callow who turned out Al Ulbrickson, the present Washington coach.

"Rowing systems are greatly overstressed, as football systems must be," said Ebright, the courteous little man whose Golden Bears qualified for and captured the last two Olympic championships, thrice scored at Poughkeepsie, and who have broken even with Washington since he reported at Berkeley in 1924.

"It's the Men in the Boat. Any style that wins is a fine one," replied Ebright. "We always were a stroke higher than the sturdy Washington men on the Hudson last Saturday, yet our boys grinned all the way down while fighting the crew that beat them by a deck on Lake Washington in April. Our stroke had a little more laybacks than the one we employed two years ago, but more reach.

"I told my boys to row their own race for two and a half miles, then look around and row accordingly. They certainly stuck in there during that last mile and a half. The race was a replica of our battle with Columbia in 1928. It was the changing of four from our second to our first boat that did the trick."

There were five sophomores in the California crew, two of them 19 years old and three 20. Speaking of length in the water, Dick Burnley, 19-year-old, six foot five inch, 165-pound stroke, was so long that he had to cut down his blade so it wouldn't be too tough for him. Burnley is not particularly strong, but he has the knack.

"After all, it's the men in the boat, and not the system or stroke that counts the most," concluded Ebright.

"Give me a boatload of Burnleys and I'll be a great coach forever."

Softball Leaders Clash Today In Crucial Game

The first place Presbyterians and the second-place Baptists tangle this afternoon in a crucial senior loop softball game on the West Ward diamond. The Presbyterians are the host team.

The Methodists and Christians clash Thursday, with the Methodists the visitors.

To close the week of play, the Methodists entertain the Baptists Friday.

Last Friday's game, the Presbyterians against the Methodists, will probably be played Tuesday, July 3. It was postponed until that date because of the Hall county celebration here tomorrow.

New Lake Michigan is supposed to have turned up a sea monster. The Chicago World's Fair needed something like that, now that Sally Rand and her fans are gone.

Owls Meet Turkey Tomorrow in Free

As one of the outstanding features of Hall County's Anniversary celebration tomorrow, the Memphis Owls and Turkey Turks will clash at Fair park at 4 o'clock.

The county's two most powerful baseball clubs meet tomorrow for the second time this season, with the Turks seeking vengeance for a defeat recently. Word comes from the Turk headquarters that they have strengthened their team considerably, and promise the local crew a tough battle, according to Horrace Leggett, manager.

No admission charges will be made, and hundreds of fans who will be attending the celebration are expected to see the tilt.

Following Sunday's victory at Tullia, the Owls have arranged a line-up that will give the Turks a battle for their money. The probable line-up will place Stewart in the box with Simms catching. Moore, Hale and Boone will probably play first, second and third, with Dennis at short stop. J. Marcum at center, McBride at right field and L. Marcum in the left field.

Following tomorrow's game, the Owls have a game matched for Friday with Lefors to be played in Memphis. The Lefors Col-Tex Gasoliners have won over the Pampa Roadrunners and the powerful Phillips 66 team of Borger. Jake Leggett, former Memphis catcher will be behind the plate for Lefors.

Pitching his year yesterday, Stewart was credited for smashing a ball crew at Tullia, and the only five hits, two, and the nine hits, seven.

Stewart was for the day, and credit for smashing a run in the eighth. Times to bat, Steamer, one who tied up two and when Stewart was homer with one bringing in the win.

Any erroneous reflection upon the character, standing or reputation of any person, firm or corporation, which may appear in the columns of this paper, will be gladly corrected upon due notice of same being given to the editor personally at the office of 617 Main Street, Memphis, Texas.

LET'S BE ON OUR BEST BEHAVIOR

MEMPHIS will have a wonderful opportunity tomorrow to exhibit its hospitality and cordiality when people from all over the trade territory flock to the county seat to help celebrate Hall County's 44th Anniversary.

Surely this is a time when all of us should be on our best behavior.

Salespeople, store managers and everyone interested in the business life of Memphis should welcome this opportunity for friendly contact with their customers and potential customers. A spirit of good cheer and fellowship should pervade the air tomorrow. Our visitors must be made to feel welcome beyond the shadow of a doubt; we must impress upon them that we consider it a privilege to show our appreciation of their support.

This is our big chance to show the people in this trade territory that their business is really appreciated. Let's not fall down on the job. Let's "do it up" in style.

ONE YEAR OF THE PWA SHOWS MUCH DONE

THE nation's greatest effort to create employment through a giant program of public works is now just one year old.

A report on what has been accomplished has just been written by Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes, as public works administrator. It is an admirable report in its candor.

Ickes says frankly that the PWA "has won in many sectors, and lost in others. It has made errors, corrected its mistakes, and doubtless will make more errors, to be corrected in their turn. . . . But it is a wheel-horse in the recovery team . . . and it is pulling its weight."

Much criticism has come to the PWA, centered on two points: First, that it was slow in getting under way, and that increased employment was not quickly felt; second, that many cities which needed PWA money most were denied it. So it is good that Ickes now sums up what has been accomplished.

The whole $3,300,000 was allotted by Jan. 1, 1934. More than a billion dollars of the fund has actually been paid in cash. Some 16,000 construction projects have been provided for, most of them now under way.

How many men have been given work? Ickes is careful not to say, because he feels that any estimate on this basis would be misleading. You might say, for instance, that two million men had received employment. But if they all worked one week and then were laid off, that wouldn't be much work after all.

So Ickes makes his estimate of hours of work provided. There were "1,418,000,000 hours of honest work at honest wages on direct construction site employment only to men who otherwise would have passed those hours in the ranks of the idle."

That means 177,250,000 eight-hour days, or 29,541,666 weeks' work. Or it means 20 weeks' work for nearly a million and a half men. Almost as much again is assured in coming months from allotments already made, and it is further estimated that two hours of indirect work is provided in producing the materials for these jobs for every hour actually put in them directly.

So the PWA administration has provided a vast amount of work, and in the heavy and construction industries chiefly, where it was most needed. In the main, the huge fund seems to have been spent for projects of value to the public, and without administrative scandal.

Secretary Ickes is to be congratulated on making a frank, straightforward report on his handling of the huge sum of public money to which he refers as "a public trust."

President Cleveland became famous for his principle that "public office is a public trust." Harold Ickes will gain immortal fame if he can establish a like regard for public money.

HEALTH

BY DR. MORRIS FISHBEN
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygeia, the Health Magazine
Of all the worms which inhabit the human intestine the pinworm is most annoying to the greatest number of people. You might also have heard it called the seat worm and thread worm.
It is a whitish, round worm, usually found in the lower part of the bowels, but occasionally even getting into the stomach and the mouth. The female worm lays immense numbers of eggs in the lower part of the bowel which, when they mature, are passed out of the body.
Often, however, these worms will actually crawl out and get into neighboring openings. Sometimes a person is infected with these worms from contaminated food, water and on other occasions from others who have been infected and not properly cleaned.
One of the chief symptoms of infestation of this type of worm is itching, which naturally is worse at night. Because of the itching, sleep is disturbed and there is extreme irritability. Occasionally also there is pain.
The irritation caused by the worms results in scratching, with the possibility of secondary infection.

It is easy to determine the presence of these worms by looking at the opening of the bowel. Of course, the physician can make certain of his diagnosis by examining the secretions under the microscope.
One of the most important steps in getting rid of this type of worm is to be scrupulously clean. In addition, doctors prescribe medicine which is useful in paralyzing the worms or destroying them so that they are passed out of the body. It is customary to give cathartics which will wash out the intestine and occasionally also to use enemata of pure water which will help to eliminate the worms.
Unless the source of infestation can be found, it is advisable to use only food and drink which have been thoroughly cooked. When the source is found, it can be eliminated.
In order to prevent reinfestation in children, their nails should be kept short and clean. The necessary remedies can be applied by the use of the enema. An Italian doctor has found that the use of enemas of solutions of castile soap continued for from one to three week will help to relieve the condition in many instances.

Pinworms, once thoroughly established within the human body, become exceedingly annoying and may be removed only with the greatest of difficulty. Any parent who suspects the existence of this condition in a child should see to it that a thorough investigation is made and that treatment is continued until the physician can say with certainty that the worms are no longer present in the bowel.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
The Democrat's Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON, June 25.—The inside history of the Brain Trust would be one of the most fascinating yarns ever written.

But no one is likely to tell it. Those who could do the job are involved in too many confidences, jealousies, double-crosses, intrigues, and personal vanities.

Most brain trusters have proved more valuable than most politicians. Many are here at personal sacrifice because of a yen for public service. But any idea that they all operate harmoniously and hold common beliefs without friction is as absurd as if applied to any conglomerate group of men in positions of influence.

They have been putting on as pretty a performance of backstage strategy, backdoor propaganda, and squabbling among themselves as any group of politicians ever gathered here.

Justice Brandeis or Prof. Felix Frankfurter could tell you a lot about it, since most brain trusters pay them obeisance and many take their troubles to them. But they won't.

The hand of Prof. Raymond A. Moley can sometimes be seen if you watch sharply enough. Moley still has a close stand-in with Roosevelt, pals with some members of the "trust" he once headed, and edits a magazine in which he can say what he likes.

Although he primarily blames Secretary Hull, his old titular boss, for his departure from the Washington scene, he thinks certain other brain trusters helped it along. Don't be surprised at anything you read about Charles W. Taussig, administration sugar-cuba adviser—or even Rex Tugwell himself—which might indicate Moley animosity.

A month or so ago, Moley editorially panned another top-rank brain trustee—who went unnamed—for certain public utterances which were quoted. Subsequent backstage uproar, based on report that Moley was out to "get" that gent, still reverberates. Although Moley remained in New York, his friends and enemies here had some heavy skirmishes.

Darrow Reports "Leak"
General Johnson's attribution of "Communist purpose" to the Darrow board has caused some alarm, as it indicates the general may be running out of unhackneyed adjectives.

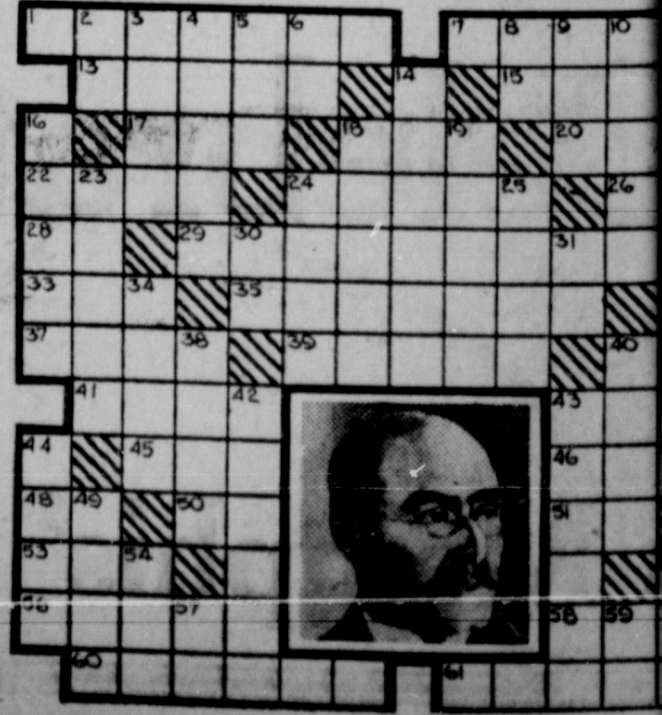

The second Darrow report was "leaked" when it went to the White House, lest it be held up until NRA prepared withering counterblasts.

When Secretary MacIntyre of the White House staff telephoned to locate the "leak," Darrow professed ignorance, but added: "I mean I'm glad

Banker's Glasses Are Troublesome

By Associated Press HOLLAND, June 23.—L. B. Mewhinney, president of the First National Bank of Holland, removed his glasses and held them gently as he told of his fondness for them. He had just recovered them for a third time. A year or so ago while on a deer hunt in south Texas Mewhinney decided to take a nap four miles from camp. On returning to camp that night he discovered one lens gone. To test his sense of direction the hunter returned to the spot where he had slept the previous day and found the lens. Last spring while rowing on Little river on the Newhinney ranch, his glasses were swept from his nose by an overhanging bough. The river was half banks and Mewhinney was unable to search for his cherished glasses. Several days later when the water had receded the banker-fisherman waded out to the spot where the specs had gone overboard, felt about and brought up the glasses which had lodged by the ear pieces in some roots.

Mrs. Annie Greer of Amarillo is a visitor here today.

The raiders. The district, together with the fastness of the Cookson Hills in Oklahoma, has been used before as a desperado's hideout. Jake Fleagle, member of the Kansas bank robbing family, was shot fatally in Branson three years ago. Officers At Ranch The officers assembled at the ranch at 4 a. m. They included Sheriff Scott Curtis of Greene County, Missouri, sheriffs from surrounding counties, and sheriff Thomas B. Bash of Kansas City, whose riot gun has dealt death to gangsters there. A carload of federal agents from Kansas City and state highway patrolmen likewise swooped down upon the hill district. They waited until 6 a. m. to descend upon the Higgs ranch.

They found no one there but Higgs, who denied any one had been at his ranch in the last two days and that any one had arrived there in an ambulance. The sheriff searched Higgs' cabin thoroughly.

Sheriff Curtis said it was the belief of officers the two men were taken to the Higgs place in an ambulance and that they obtained medical treatment and departed.

Sheriff Curtis said he had been told a physician, whose name he did not know, but whom he believed was from Wichita, Kan., had been at the Higgs ranch in the last few days. He said he believed this physician possibly had treated the wounded man.

The weather turns sultry. But the family still eats three meals a day. And they must be just as complete and well-balanced as on the coldest day in winter, too. That's where substantial vegetable dishes come in. Some of them make complete meals with the addition of bread and butter, salad and dessert. And they're cheap because you can leave off meat.

A hearty vegetable dish is made up of two or more vegetables and has some added ingredients, such as cheese, peanut butter or egg. These combinations are finished in the oven and are served from the casserole or baking dish, saving dishes, too. Garnishing just before serving sends them to the table in most attractive form.

Garnishing Suggestions The following are suggestions for garnishing: parsley, tender watercress, slices of hard-cooked egg, threads of canned pimento, rings of fresh green pepper, cross sections of stuffed olives, spots of paprika, sprinklings of minced parsley, grated raw carrots, chopped salted nuts, grated cheese and minced chives.

Both canned and fresh vegetables may be used, and the very nature of these dishes makes them ideal as a way to use left-overs. Macaroni, rice or any cooked cereal can be combined with one or more vegetables, too. A well seasoned white sauce, plain or with cheese added, often is used to blend the mixture. A good dish of this sort uses cooked carrots and cooked macaroni in a rich cheese sauce and the whole is baked twenty minutes in a hot oven.

Another good dish combines cooked lima beans with boiled rice. The rice and beans are arranged in layers with thinly sliced cheese. Milk is then poured over the mixture, just enough milk to Monday's Menu BREAKFAST: Grape fruit, cereal, cream, crisp graham toast, milk, coffee. LUNCHEON: Jellied bouillon, radishes and celery, baked lima beans and rice, repeated rolls, filled chocolate cup cakes, milk, tea. DINNER: Cold boiled ham, potato salad, rye bread sandwiches, apple slump, milk, coffee.

Peanut butter is added to thin white sauce which is poured over diced, cooked potatoes arranged in a bagging dish. The top is sprinkled with buttered crumbs and the whole is baked from fifteen minutes in a hot oven. Stuffed green peppers and stuffed tomatoes furnish innumerable savory combinations. Did you ever fill tomatoes which have been scooped out with a mixture of celery and balanced shredded almonds? Cover with buttered crumbs and bake thirty minutes in a moderate oven. Serve on rounds of hot buttered toast.

Either peppers or tomatoes may be stuffed with combinations of corn and beans, peas, limas and carrots.

Eggplant, cucumbers, squash, in fact all the summer vegetables can be used to make delicious, hearty dishes that are out-of-the-ordinary and inexpensive.

Mr. and Mrs. W. K. Davis of Clarendon were guests of Dr. and Mrs. C. Z. Stidham here yesterday. They were enroute home from Dallas where they had been to see their son, Kennedy, who had his back broken in an automobile accident several weeks ago. They report him much improved.
