

RUSSIA TURNS DOWN LATEST PLAN FOR A MUTUAL-AID PACT

British-French Efforts Received With Skepticism; Trade Negotiations With Germany May Be Resumed By Soviet

MOSCOW, May 31 (AP)—Premier-Foreign Minister Molotov tonight rejected as inadequate the latest British-French mutual aid pact proposal but left the door slightly ajar in case London and Paris are willing to meet Moscow's position.

Skeptically and caustically he described British-French efforts to build a bloc of nations as insufficient and ineffective and said: "It is impossible to think now whether they want to end aggression."

At the same time he made clear that Russia is not rejecting in advance any efforts by Berlin toward more normal Soviet-German relations. Trade negotiations with Berlin, he said, "may be resumed."

He outlined Russia's position in a long awaited speech of foreign affairs to the supreme Soviet, or parliament.

Some Sections Get Rain At Right Time

CHICAGO, May 31 (AP)—Prospects for normal seasonal farm operations blossomed today in the wake of drenching rains over much of the grain producing and livestock raising plain region.

Rains that wet dusty plains west of the Mississippi river the past week, saving crops in many fields and reviving dying plants, arrived in the nick of time, agronomists said, to prevent very serious crop losses.

Although some fall sown grains, particularly in the Southwest plains, were damaged irreparably, there were few sections of the belt embracing the nation's reduced 1939 wheat and corn acreage, that did not derive genuine relief.

Crop experts emphasized their opinion, however, that continued rains were necessary, particularly with the season of hot weather at hand, if the threat of drought was to be permanently allayed.

Greening pastures and plains promised to stem the increasing market-wide flow of cattle which last week glutted livestock slaughtering centers and caused the sharpest Chicago price break in almost a year.

Receipts at seven principal markets increased approximately 12 per cent compared with previous weeks. At the week's beginning, however, cattle supplies were 32 per cent smaller and sheep and hog and sheep marketings also were smaller.

The grain market was in an unsettled period, with prices reacting slightly from the highest levels of the season, due to the improved moisture situation. Crop experts reported winter wheat prospects were improved by the rains in many districts of the Southwest which escaped irreparable damage.

A week or 10 days ago many traders were privately estimating the winter wheat crop around 500,000,000 bushels—compared with last year's government estimate of 544,000,000. "Lost experts today said ideas have been revised, but none ventured a forecast pending release of reports within the next 10 days."

WRONG HORSE PAYS

OMAHA, Neb., May 31 (AP)—Mrs. John Donoghue, Omaha, bet on the wrong horse. She won $1,798.50.

Mrs. Lonoghue, a bookkeeper's wife, explained she wanted to bet on No. 3 horse and No. 11 horse in the Ak-Sar-Ben race track daily double. At the ticket window, she made a mistake and called for No. 4 in the first race and No. 11 in the second.

Both horses won.

New Assistant Superintendent Here For Preliminary Checkup On Work

King J. Sides, recently named assistant superintendent of the Big Spring schools, was in Big Spring Tuesday for a general inspection of the school system, and a conference with Supt. W. C. Blankenship on plans for summer activities and next year's work.

Sides will complete his contract as principal of the Snyder high school on July 1, and with his wife and four-year-old son will move here shortly after that date. He succeeds George Gentry, who, with Mrs. Gentry, planned to leave this week for a summer at Columbia. Gentry will assume his post as principal of the Temple junior college in September.

"I am delighted with the prospect of living and working in Big Spring," Sides said. "Everywhere I have found people to be exceptionally friendly and cooperative. I know my family and I will enjoy Big Spring very much."

"What I have seen of the school system impresses me very favorably, and I look forward to beginning my duties here. I hope that my work here will be successful."

Sides will serve as assistant to Blankenship, in charge of instruction.

No Chestnut-Pulling

Molotov declared that Russia must be vigilant and remember Joseph Stalin's warning "about pulling chestnuts out of the fire" (for Britain and France).

He announced that the Soviet Union would defend the frontiers of Outer Mongolia "as firmly as our own."

Molotov said that the latest British-French offers showed that the principle of reciprocity (with Russia in any mutual aid agreement) had been accepted but "modified by many clauses so that it may be only formal."

He said no progress had been made with regard to the small countries on Russia's borders. Britain and France, he stated, "only think of those whom they have guaranteed."

"The Soviet Union is not what it was in 1921," Molotov continued. "We are compelled to remind the world of this, for it seems that even our neighbors forget—Our strength has risen."

"It is time to understand that we will not tolerate violation of our frontiers."

"Now, about Outer Mongolia. According to our mutual assistance agreement we must help guard her frontiers. Our attitude is serious. We will defend those frontiers as firmly as our own. It is time to understand that all patience has a limit."

(Recent skirmishes between Outer Mongolian forces and Japanese Manchoukuoan troops along the Mongolian-Manchoukuoan border have been reported by Japanese news agencies. Outer Mongolia is in the Russian sphere of influence and has a mutual aid pact with Russia.)

July 15 Hinted As Adjournment Date

WASHINGTON, May 31 (AP)—Congressional leaders told President Hoover a definite prediction next week of a definite adjournment date Monday on the date congress might be expected to adjourn.

Tentatively, they spoke of July 15. The president has been withholding a decision on whether to start a transcontinental trip June 15 until adjournment prospects have been determined.

This morning Mr. Roosevelt conferred with Vice President Garner, Speaker Bankhead and the senate and house majority leaders, Senator Barkley (D-Ky) and Representative Rayburn (D-Tex.).

Rayburn told reporters afterward that adjournment hinged on the progress of such legislative items as neutrality and tax legislation.

Van Stone, who suffered a broken back three weeks ago in a fall from a horse near Alpine, will be taken this evening by train to Dallas for treatment.

Cotton Parley Called Sept. 5

WASHINGTON, May 31 (AP)—The United States asked ten major cotton-exporting nations today to participate in an international conference at Washington September 5 to consider the possibility of a world cotton marketing agreement.

Countries to which invitations have been issued by the state department, in behalf of Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, include: Egypt, France for the French exporting colonies, Great Britain for its exporting colonies, India, Mexico, Peru, Sudan, Soviet Russia, Argentina and Brazil.

STREETS BEAR BRUNT OF DAMAGE AFTER SATURDAY DOWNPOUR

Water erosion of a devastating nature is shown in the above photo, snapped on Big Spring streets Sunday morning after the Saturday night deluge. Upper left view looks up Runnels street from near First, showing how great blocks of topping were torn up by the swift water and hurled against posts and across sidewalks. One of the larger pieces of "drift" pavement is pictured in the upper right photo. A good idea of how the force of the water

"chewed up" the streets is given in the lower left photo, taken at Second and Runnels. Runnels was the most badly damaged of all thoroughfares, carrying a stream of water equal to that of a mountain freshet. How some stores fought the overflow with sacks of flour is shown in the lower right photo. Water poured in to several business establishments.—(Two left hand photos by Bradshaw).

Santone Area Benefitted By Rainfall

By the Associated Press

Several sections welcomed the end of protracted drought today, notably in South and West Texas. San Antonio's dry spell was broken on just as the city was rounding out 12 months of rainfall deficiency. Today it counted the blessings of Tuesday evening's 2.71 inch downpour, and was further cheered by the announcement of J. H. Jarboe, U. S. weather bureau meteorologist, that more rain may fall within the next 24 hours.

The rain, Jarboe said, appeared to have been heaviest in the city, where accompanying high winds, reaching a velocity of 35 miles an hour, blew down trees and signs and did other relatively minor damage.

The total at Randolph Field, 16 miles east of San Antonio, was .85 of an inch with high winds, while at Stinson Field, eight miles south, the rainfall totaled 1.33 inches, with light winds.

Although coming too late to save such small grain crops as oats, barley and wheat, which H. A. Fitzhugh, county farm agent, described as "complete failures," the rain was of incalculable benefit to ranches and dairy farms.

Three to six inches fell in south Taylor county, centered around Tuscola. Abilene had .38 of an inch and there was rain at Coleman and east of Baird with nearly an inch at Anson.

A drought was ended at Fredericksburg, where two and a half inches fell, with precipitation general over Gillespie county.

Heavy rains fell in southern Ellis county and there were showers in the Panhandle.

CITY POLL TAX IS VOTE REQUIREMENT, HIGH COURT HOLDS

AUSTIN, May 31 (AP)—A voter must pay his city poll tax in order to qualify as a "legal voter" in any election, the supreme court ruled today.

The ruling was in answer to questions presented by an appellate court as an outgrowth of a bond election suit in the city of Baird, Callahan county.

The questions were: "Is requirement of payment of a city poll tax, by those subject thereto, as a prerequisite to the right to vote at said municipal election in contravention of the constitution of Texas?"

"If the first question should be answered 'yes' then was evidence admissible to show how members of the excluded class of voters have voted had they been permitted to vote?"

Says Army Should Be Used To Fight Enemies At Home

WASHINGTON, May 31 (AP)—Major General George Van Horn Moseley, retired, shouted to a congressional committee today that President Roosevelt ought to use the army to fight communism in the United States.

"He ought to free the army from the restrictions now imposed on it," the former commander of the South Corps Area and one-time deputy chief of staff told the house un-American committee.

"The army can make plans to fight Germany but it can't do a damned thing to protect us from the enemy within our gates."

A short time earlier he testified, thumping the table for emphasis, that he had "warned" General Mark Craig, army chief of staff, of a plot to overthrow the government.

The information, he said, had come to him through James E. Campbell, of Owensboro, Ky., a reserve officer. He said the army intelligence service agreed the reports presented a serious situation.

Townsend Bill Up For Debate

WASHINGTON, May 31 (AP)—The house began debate on the Townsend old-age pension bill today, assured its own elderly members a right to vote on it.

Rep. Martin J. Kennedy (D-NY) asserted he had found 134 members were over 60 and asked whether, therefore, they were eligible under house rules to vote on the bill, because they might possibly be affected by its provisions.

Speaker Bankhead, saying he assumed Kennedy raised the point in good faith, replied: "It seems to me pretty well determined that where a bill comes up involving a general class, it doesn't proscribe or prohibit members of the house to vote on it."

Representative Cox (D-Ga), the first speaker, called up the closed rule for consideration of the Townsend bill which would prohibit any amendments and would call for a clear-cut vote on the most recent version of the Townsend program, introduced by Rep. Hendricks (D-Fla.).

Just before the debate began, 15 republican leaders discussed their strategy on the bill and decided, Rep. Martin of Massachusetts said, "to let the fellows vote their minds."

House Joins In Killing Veto

AUSTIN, May 31 (AP)—The house of representatives today followed previous similar action by the senate in overriding by overwhelming majority the veto by Governor W. Lee O'Daniel of a bill altering certain procedure in appeals from trial court cases.

The house vote to override was 160 to 22 while that in the senate was 17 to 8.

The bill would withdraw the authority for a review of trial court cases in a civil appeals court by means of a writ of error.

Senator Olan Van Zandt of Tlaxcala, author of the proposal, said it was designed to expedite appeal for all parties in a trial court and remove a dilatory practice.

The senate charged the present statute regarding appeal by the writ method worked a hardship particularly in compensation cases in that frequently, after an injured workman had been awarded judgment, an insurance company did not appeal for six months, resulting in prolonged litigation and sometimes the depletion of the workman's judgment.

The house's action left direct appeal the only channel for carrying lawsuits to appellate courts.

Holiday Death Figure More Than In '38

By the Associated Press

Violent death took at least 372 lives as the cost of the nation's four day Memorial Day "week-end" from Saturday through Tuesday.

In the three-day holiday period last year more than 250 were killed, and in 1937 the total was more than 350.

The holiday fatality list was lengthened by hot weather that crowded beaches with millions of bathers and packed roadways with country-bound picnickers.

An usual, highway crashes were the chief agents of disaster, taking more than 205 lives. Eighty-five persons drowned. Airplane crashes, shootings and miscellaneous accidents accounted for the rest.

Most spectacular automobile fatality was the death of veteran driver Floyd Roberts in a three-car pileup during the Indianapolis 500-mile speed derby.

In Kentucky a man died from a mule's kick; in Colorado a boy was killed in a fall from a cliff; in Illinois an amateur fisherman was electrocuted while gathering angle worms with a home-made electrical device.

Oddly, no automobile death was reported in the metropolitan New York area yesterday, although motoring millions thronged to the world's fair, Coney Island and other resorts.

New York state led in motor deaths, however, with 17.

SCHOOL BLAST INJURES 40 CHILDREN

AKRON, O., May 31 (AP)—An explosion blew out a wall of a two-story frame schoolhouse in suburban Barberton today, injuring between 30 and 40 children.

Some of the students bleeding about their faces, were taken to Baberton Citizens' Hospital and Baberton Clinic. Others suffered bruised legs, arms and bodies. None was burned, doctors said.

The explosion, ripping out the north-end of the public school building, plunged some third and fourth grade pupils into the basement, and debris fell on others.

One teacher and a janitor also were reported injured.

The school, at Third and Hopecon streets, is one of several temporary structures used by the suburb for "overflow" pupils.

Young Fellow Loved Fine Horses, So He Rode One; It Happened To Be Prize Mount Of The High Sheriff

Joseph Albreman is a young fellow from Illinois, but he has the plainsman's love of fine horses.

He probably regretted this fondness Wednesday, as he languished in jail wondering what would become of a complaint charging horse theft which had been lodged against him; he was probably wondering if his case would be doubly serious, because—

The pony he is charged with stealing was Tony, the prize mount of Sheriff Jess Blaugher. Tony was tethered on the courthouse lawn, awaiting use. Somebody mislaid him, and officers got to looking. Out southwest of town, where Tony had taken him for a ride, they found Albreman leading the horse. The story, as Monarchs Plan Trip To U. S.

By FRANK H. KING

VICTORIA, B. C., May 31 (AP)—Britain's touring sovereigns—Al and Canada at their feet—about faced today for their return trip through the broad dominion, with Washington, D. C., their major objective.

Due in the United States capital on the morning of June 8, the royal train awaited King George and Queen Elizabeth at Vancouver station, to pull out this afternoon on a more northerly route than the western trip.

King George's regret is that although he has seen much of Canada's vastness, and is going to see more, he will have to skip the Arctic, which he said holds so much of Canada's future.

Dull statistics show Canada's youth up to the present has been more interested in hunting the gold in the hills and cities of the United States than in the unsettled spaces of the north, but the king's advice to them, given at the official government luncheon here, was to go north where he said there is a field of enterprise for youth which it will take generations to exhaust.

BARONS HUMBLE ABILENE, 10 TO 4, TO GAIN IN FIGHT FOR SECOND

The Sports Parade

By HANK HART

Highly pleased at the developments in his parleys with the Abilene business men who have been meeting during the past week to force that city's WT-NM baseball league entry into sovereignty again is Fincher Withers, president and general manager, who with Mrs. Withers dropped in to witness the Big Spring-Apache game here last night.

Withers has right to smile. With wholehearted cooperation the merchants pitched in to raise the funds needed to pay off the players, regear the machine for further operation, give the Abilene fans a last opportunity to support their ball club.

Withers told your reporter that propositions to move the club had been received both from Littlefield and Brownfield, that Wichita Falls had even nibbled. Withers does not want to move but that the test with Abilene is far from over, that, despite the fact that present obligations will be met with the merchants' help, no guarantee was made to stick out the season.

The Apaches go home Thursday for an eight-day stand. Whether the Abilene supporters have warmed up to the proposition will be decided in that stretch. If the Apaches can play to enough customers to meet expenses, then Withers declares he will see it through, if not, then the franchise will be moved.

Withers, too, has promised new playing strength for the limping Apaches, now firmly entrenched in the cellar. The team has been playing in hard luck of late, has a far better team than its record would indicate, needs only a hitter or two to put the team back in the running.

At any rate that does not intend to surrender his franchise to League President Milton Price. He will keep shop somewhere or other.

At first glance the Big Springers' record in WT-NM loop standings seems but slightly better than that of the 1938 team at the same stage. In reality it is far better.

Last year in the first 33 games played, the Barons had won 16 of the 33 played for a .485 percentage. This season 15 victories in 33 starts makes for a .454 mark.

In '38 the Barons were four games off the pace being set by Lubbock. This year they are 4 1-2 games behind the leading Lamesa Lobos.

But this term they're riding in third place, two slots better than was last year's club.

The real difference is in the team's attack. The present day club, according to the league statistician, is hitting better than .350 or 50 points more than the '38 edition, have collected 270 hits to 204 for the Barons of the '38 seasoner.

Jack Hutcherson, last year's general manager of the club, dropped over for his usual visit Tuesday evening to watch the Little Yankees slap the Apaches.

He informs that Stu LeBaron, ex-Baron second sacker, is playing with Winnipeg, hitting in the third slot and going great guns. Stu was troubled with a sore arm and lame back while here, was released after a ten-day trial.

Definitely on the road to recovery of his last season's form is Bobby Decker, at the present just about the "hottest" thing in the way of infielder in the family.

The New Yorker has remedied his fielding faults and is turning in the same kind of plays that won him all-star honors last season. He's the leading candidate for the South's second basing honors in the July 25th all-star game.

Grid Arbitrator Dies
EMMITSBURG, Md., May 31 (AP)—Michael J. (Mike) Thompson, dean of football officials, who spent his 62 years teaching others to play the game, died of a heart attack early today.

This first job as an official was to referee the football game between Boston College and Brown in 1897. In 1905 he caused a flurry in sports circles by allowing the Carlisle Indians to get away with their famous "hidden ball" trick against Harvard.

WILBUR SHAW'S EARNINGS SET NEW SPEEDWAY MARK

By CHARLES DUNKLEY
INDIANAPOLIS, May 31 (AP)—The 27th annual 500-mile automobile race over the Indianapolis speedway brought death to one former winner and a second victory to another.

Wilbur Shaw, dapper 37-year-old Indianapolis driver who won the 1937 race, finished first again yesterday before 145,000 spectators to boost his prize money to $71,300 in nine races and become the leading money winner of speedway history.

JACOBS' PICK OF LOU NOVA OVER BAER MAY BE WISE

LONG TRAINING SEIGE TELLS ON MAXIE

By GAYLE TALBOT
NEW YORK, May 31 (AP)—Maxie Baer, the playboy boxer who reformed a little late, and Lou Nova, a comparative novice with a world of promise, clash in a 15-round fight at Yankee Stadium tomorrow night that might, just possibly, produce the world's next heavyweight champion.

If Nova's youth and speed and stamina give him the victory, as seems most likely, he will be hard to discourage in his quest of the title now held by Joe Louis. He's a stubborn young Californian, convinced he was cut out to be the champion. His only obvious drawback is his haste.

As for Baer, he has been champion once, and barring a couple of miracles, will not be king again. Max at 30 looks tired from his long training siege, and even if he succeeds in laying his famous right on Nova's jaw and knocking him out, his chances of regaining the crown must be considered slim as a drugstore sandwich.

The winner is promised a title shot in September against Joe Louis or, by some stretch of the imagination, Tony Galento, depending upon the outcome of their engagement on June 28. Promoter Mike Jacobs, if one may be pardoned for reading his mind, is staking his hopes on a "million-dollar" battle between Nova and Louis.

It will be a blow to him if Baer wins this one because the prospect of another Baer-Louis fight is not one to gladden the heart of a promoter. No matter how drastically Max has reformed, the memory of his surrender to the big negro in their other meeting still is too green.

Therefore the wiser choice seems to be Nova to win. Mike Jacobs practically always guesses right. A poll of newspaper critics shows they are almost evenly divided.

Baer has been growing ring-dusty for 17 months. The ambitious Nova, though without a fight since early winter, has been training steadily and improving his boxing skill, Jim Braddock, who has been working with him at Nyack, N. Y., says Lou's short right has a kick like a mule loader.

Both took only light exercises today and are ready to step on the boxing commission scales at noon tomorrow.

TEXAS LEAGUE RACE IS ONE OF CLOSEST IN HISTORY

By The Associated Press
The Texas league race is so close that only five and one-half games separated first place Dallas and last place Beaumont today.

It's probably the only league in operation calls two victories in a row a "winning streak."

There was considerable jockeying last night, especially among lower division clubs. Fort Worth advanced from seventh to fifth, Tulsa dropped from fourth to sixth, Oklahoma City eased into the top bracket and San Antonio moved out of the cellar.

Dallas finally managed to win a game from the rejuvenated Oklahoma City Indians, 5 to 2 but the Rebels lost the opener of a twin bill, 5 to 0. The Rebels left Oklahoma for home with one victory in four starts and a one-game lead over Houston.

Houston beat Shreveport 9-3 rapping three pitchers for eleven hits. Fort Worth swept a double-bill with Tulsa, 7-3 and 3-1, and Ed Silver went on a batting spree to bring San Antonio out of the cellar with a 4-2 victory over Beaumont.

East Texas Loop Leaders Beaten
By The Associated Press
The East Texas league race remained in status quo today because the three top teams couldn't win and the fourth-place outfit was too far behind to cause any worry—yet.

Kilgore was but four games behind leading Henderson but in this close battle that's considered a healthy margin.

Henderson fell before Longview 4-0 in a ten-inning melee in which Bill Howell limited the Oilers to six hits.

Second-place Texarkana lost to Jacksonville 5-3 because the Jax pounded out ten hits and Texarkana made six errors.

Third-place Palestine stayed in line by losing to Marshall 6-4 on Cal Lowman's homer in the eleventh inning with one aboard.

Kilgore nosed out Tyler 3-2 as a result of Eddie Knoblauch's single in the ninth with the bases loaded.

NEWSPRINT MILL FOR EAST TEXAS

G. B. Dealey, dean of the Texas newspaper publishing industry, said something worth listening to Saturday in a speech dedicating the new $6,000,000 newsprint paper mill at Lufkin.

"We are making the right kind of history," Colonel Dealey of the Dallas Morning News, remarked—"not history that has its background war, death and destruction, but history that is bringing warmth and joy to human lives, a fighting chance to men whom formerly opportunity passed by with averted face, a chance for honest toil and well-foreheads to those descendants of our pioneers, who ask only the chance to bend their backs in worthy endeavor."

The Lufkin plant won't come near to filling the Texas demand for newsprint, but it is considered merely the first of a series of mills that will loom large on the horizon of the industry eventually. As soon as the initial plant demonstrates its usefulness, there will be others.

East Texas is the natural habitat of such enterprises. Development of newsprint from slash pine, the contribution of the late Dr. Charles H. Herty and his co-workers to science and progress, will make prosperous the cutover pine lands of East Texas. It is claimed that timber suitable for the mill can be grown and replaced in a 10 or 12-year span, whereas it takes 60 years to grow a tree suitable to the Canadian newsprint industry. That means East Texas in time will become the center of a vast industry which will have an inexhaustible supply of raw materials. That means cheaper newsprint for Texas and the Southwest, a breaking of the foreign monopoly on that type of paper.

East Texas, led by newspaper enterprise, is showing the way to the rest of the state. West Texas should not be caught napping. She has similar opportunities in other lines, should lose no chance to exploit them.

Hour And A Half At A Stretch Is The Limit Under Water For Divers Raising The Squalus

By JACK THOMPSON AP Feature Service Writer

WASHINGTON—Raising a crippled submarine from ocean floor is fairly simple—on paper.

But when, like the Squalus, the craft is under 240 feet of icy water, the job may run into weeks, even months.

Divers, defying death, can work only an hour and a half at a stretch at that depth. It probably would take 20 of them, laboring in relays, to get the Squalus ready for raising.

Refloat itself If the submarine's "skin" has not been damaged too severely and it can be sealed airtight, the craft can be made to raise itself. Divers simply attach hoses from surface ships to the sunken vessel and the surface ships pump air into it. The air forces out the water and when the craft has thus been lightened sufficiently it will float up.

Sometimes the crippled craft is damaged so it can't be sealed. Then it must be floated with aid of pontoons. That takes time—and lots more labor.

The S-4, which sank after a collision in December, 1927, had to be raised by pontoons. The job was not finished until the following March.

It took even longer to raise the S-32, which went down in September, 1925, because severe winter weather forced the salvage crew to knock off for several weeks.

Tunnels Are Necessary When divers go down to a wrecked submarine their first job is to inspect it inside and out. They carry up bodies they come upon—in the S-4 they found 32 in the engine and motor rooms alone. Then they set equipment to pump out flooded compartments.

Meanwhile, if it's a pontoon job, the surface crew is making the pontoons ready to be lowered, and fastened to chains laid under the submarine, to make a cradle to bring the craft to the surface.

Divers tunnel under the sub with high-pressure water or air tools. But if they run into rock they have to drill or blast.

They thread the tunnels first with a small line, attached to a heavier line which, in turn, is attached to the chain. The other end of the chain is fastened to a line held up above on the salvage vessel.

Flooded And Sunk That end is attached to the pontoons, hollow iron cylinders, six and one-half to seven feet in diameter and about 20 feet in length. They'll hold 60 tons of water each and, when the water is expelled, have a buoyancy of 60 tons.

It takes probably four to eight of them to raise a submarine like the Squalus.

A line from a chain is passed Consign Us Your WOOL and MOHAIR Stockmen's Supplies Your Patronage Solicited BIG SPRING WOOL CO. 1st and Colled Sts. Phone 692

Pontoon made ready at the Brooklyn Navy yard to be towed to the scene of the Squalus salvage operations off Portsmouth, N. H.

through each pontoon. Then the pontoons are flooded so they'll sink to the level of the submarine. Divers secure them in position in pairs on either side of the submarine so that the craft rests on a cradle of chains suspended between the pontoons.

When everything is ready, the pontoon valves are opened and compressed air is pumped into them through hoses from the salvage vessel to force the water out, so they'll rise.

Air must be pumped at a uniform rate into all pontoons so that they'll lift the crippled sub on a fairly even keel. Buoyancy of the pontoons is kept under control so that the ascent will be slow.

Helium Is Introduced The men working on the Squalus have more than a man-size job to do. In the first place they move in an "atmosphere" whose pressure is seven times greater than that on land. Wherever they move they not only drag along that length of air hose that pumps life to them from the surface, but they also must drag the life line, the length of rope on which they are lowered and raised an over which they tug signals to the crew above in case their telephone goes out of commission.

On the Squalus operations, for the first time in navy rescue work, divers will breathe oxygen into which some helium has been mixed. The helium not only will diminish their chance of being seized with "bends" when they ascend, but it also will help keep their heads clear. Before the use of helium, divers working at great depths grew groggy.

Milk production per cow in the United States on March 1, 1939, was well above that of a year earlier and nearly five per cent above the ten-year average.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

(Mr. Lippmann's column is published as an information and news feature. His views are personal and are not to be construed as necessarily reflecting the editorial opinion of The Herald.—Editor's Note.)

SECRETARY HULL'S NEUTRALITY PROGRAM

There has been some criticism of Secretary Hull because he has waited so long before taking a position on the neutrality act. But his caution has, it seems to me, been wise, and the effect of the delay has been salutary. The delay has greatly improved the position in Europe, and the discussion before the congressional committees has resulted in a genuine clarification of American policy.

LIPPMAN

The reason for believing that the delay here has improved the position in Europe can be understood when we remember that nearly three months ago Great Britain stood helpless and irresolute while Hitler tore up the Munich agreement, overran Bohemia and Moravia, occupied Memel, and threatened Poland, Lithuania and Rumania. Since that happened the British and French have pulled themselves together, have constructed a great defensive alliance, and have made it clear that they mean to defend their vital interests. This has required the doing of a great many things that Mr. Chamberlain hated to do, the giving of guarantees to Poland, Rumania, and Greece, the making of an alliance with Turkey and with Russia, the adoption of conscription and the placing of British industry on a war footing.

The total effect of this reversal of British policy has been an acknowledgment of the fact that the vital interests of Great Britain in Europe can be defended only by Great Britain with such allies as she can find in Europe. Had the United States repealed the arms embargo two months ago, it is probable that this action would have been greatly misunderstood in London as meaning that the United States could be counted on to fight alongside of Britain in case the axis struck toward the west.

It is a reasonable assumption that if Mr. Chamberlain had had any reason for thinking he could count on the United States as an ally, he would never have committed himself in Warsaw, Bucharest, Athens, Angora, much less in Moscow. This would have been a dangerous illusion on his part. Mr. Hull's policy, whether calculated or not, has compelled Mr. Chamberlain to accept the fact that the restoration of a balance of power in Europe is a European responsibility and to act accordingly.

The delay has also had a good effect on Hitler and Mussolini. Back in March the two most prominent proposals before the committees were the Pittman "cash and carry" bill and the Thompson amendment to name "the aggressor." Neither bill commanded general support. Both had grave defects which would have caused all sorts of confusion and embarrassing difficulties. Had Mr. Hull sponsored either proposal, it would probably have been defeated, because in the test of debate it could not have carried conviction.

It would have been very dangerous indeed to have this debate with the prospect of eventual defeat at a time when Hitler was on the march and the European opposition to his policy was unorganized. It would have furnished one more reason, and a very powerful one, for continuing the campaign which so very nearly brought on a European war at the beginning of April. The delay here left Hitler and Mussolini uncertain as to what the United States might do, and convinced them, we may say, that the era, we forbid Americans to travel in that zone of combat, we forbid American ships to enter it, we forbid American-owned goods to be transported through it, and we forbid Americans to lend money to any one who is intending to carry goods through that zone.

But what we do not do is to stop trading with any part of the world as it is theoretically, though not actually, in the zone of the fighting. We do not abandon our interests anywhere at the mere behest of foreign governments. We do not tie up our ships in port or let them go only where foreign governments choose to say we may let them go. We do not let foreign governments decide whether we may sell this American product but not that one. We do not let foreign governments decide whether nations they mean to attack may get the arms to defend themselves.

Fairly considered, examined on its merits, I submit that the Hull plan does everything that men like Senator Nye have sought to accomplish. Though the method is somewhat different, the purpose is the same, in that it fixes a definite line which cuts the entanglements of American private interests in foreign wars. That is what Mr. Nye has been after, and that principle has been conquered.

The only difference is, first, that Mr. Hull cuts the entanglements at the zone of actual danger, whereas Mr. Nye would cut it at the three-mile limit; and, second, that Mr. Hull would have our own government, not foreign governments, decide where Americans shall travel and shall trade, whereas Mr. Nye would, unintentionally, of course, surrender that sovereign power to foreign governments.

The existing neutrality act puts the United States in a most awkward position. It gives to Hitler the power, by the simple act of declaring war or fomenting a revolution to stop our trade in a long list of commodities, to divert our shipping, to decide where Americans may travel, and to disorganize the financial basis of our foreign trade. Never in our own history, and never in the history of any inde-

TWO AGAINST LOVE

by Frances Hanna

Chapter 26 FATING GUESTS

"Why don't you stay with the Mack's?" Jocelyn asked Nola bluntly.

Nola carefully removed her suede gloves before answering. Her eyes were sparkling delightedly when she finally said:

"I only wish to help you out, Lyn. For the sake of long friendship. You must have guests in order to pay expenses. My money, so far as I know, is just as good as anyone else's. How many rooms have you rented so far?"

"None," Lyn grudgingly admitted. "But I will. It takes time and the ads have only been running three days."

"I know Thorn doesn't want me here," Nola shrugged. "But aren't you being rather narrow to resent me because of my personal differences with your brother? We always liked each other, Lyn. Why can't we go on being friends?"

With an impulsive gesture she held out her hand. "I have a million things to tell you, darling."

Jocelyn listened and commented with outward composure yet inside she seethed with unreasoning envy and jealousy. She knew it was stupid to feel this way, but her vivid imagination tortured her with pictures of Tally holding Nola in his arms; murmuring words of love to her; kissing her.

"Nola," she interrupted the other dependent state, has a legislative body voluntarily given such power over its own affairs to a foreign government. And never has a nation professed peace offered such an inducement to an aggressor, never has it put such a premium on going to war or on starting a revolution.

Though this is the effect, it was of course, not the intention of the American congress. The intention was to keep the United States from being entangled, against its will and contrary to its national interest, in a European war. The purpose of congress in enacting these embargoes and prohibitions was to keep private citizens and private commercial interests from getting so entangled in a foreign war and suffering such injuries that Americans would have to go to war to protect or avenge them.

Now Mr. Hull's program carries out this purpose as exactly and as efficiently as it is possible to do it. Instead of giving to foreign nations the power to keep Americans out of any part of the world that they choose to name, Mr. Hull proposed to have the United States decide what parts of the world are too dangerous for American travelers, American ships, American exporters. That is the essence of the Hull plan and, once understood, it is the plainest common sense.

The difference between his plan and the existing law is that Mr. Hull proposes to have the United States, not some foreign nation, determine where the fighting is serious enough to warrant forbidding Americans to travel and to trade. Under the present law, Japan or Germany or Italy can regulate our trade and intercourse with, for example, Australia or Canada, just by declaring that they are at war.

Did any one seriously mean to transfer so vital a part of American sovereignty to Tokio or to Berlin? Obviously not, but unhappily that is the state of the existing law.

Mr. Hull's plan not only recovers American sovereignty but it goes much further than the law as it has stood since May 1 in preventing private interests from getting us into trouble abroad. Under his plan we decide where the trouble exists. Having defined the area, we forbid Americans to travel in that zone of combat, we forbid American ships to enter it, we forbid American-owned goods to be transported through it, and we forbid Americans to lend money to any one who is intending to carry goods through that zone.

But what we do not do is to stop trading with any part of the world as it is theoretically, though not actually, in the zone of the fighting. We do not abandon our interests anywhere at the mere behest of foreign governments. We do not tie up our ships in port or let them go only where foreign governments choose to say we may let them go. We do not let foreign governments decide whether we may sell this American product but not that one. We do not let foreign governments decide whether nations they mean to attack may get the arms to defend themselves.

Fairly considered, examined on its merits, I submit that the Hull plan does everything that men like Senator Nye have sought to accomplish. Though the method is somewhat different, the purpose is the same, in that it fixes a definite line which cuts the entanglements of American private interests in foreign wars. That is what Mr. Nye has been after, and that principle has been conquered.

The only difference is, first, that Mr. Hull cuts the entanglements at the zone of actual danger, whereas Mr. Nye would cut it at the three-mile limit; and, second, that Mr. Hull would have our own government, not foreign governments, decide where Americans shall travel and shall trade, whereas Mr. Nye would, unintentionally, of course, surrender that sovereign power to foreign governments.

"Dear Nola!" she crinkled her nose in disgust. "It's too bad you didn't think about how much you wanted her before you kicked up a row. You only succeeded in pushing her into Tally's house and into his arms. You, you not only hurt yourself, Thorn, you—measured up my life, too. I—I ought to hate you!"

Thorn gasped. "Lyn, you don't mean you actually fell in love with that—that?"

"Farmer?" she choked. "Yes I did! I love him, do you understand?"

With a sob she turned and fled from the room. "I won't go near him," Jocelyn decided the next morning as she dressed. "I won't talk to him or see him or anything. Let him have Nola—I don't care. There's lots of other men in the world and I'll get over this! I'll have to."

So deciding, she chose a dark blue frock with puffed skirt and white pique collar. Thinking she really should look businesslike to be the proprietress of a hotel, she brushed her thick auburn hair into demure smoothness and turned the curling ends into a roll on her neck. It was five days now since she had inserted that ad in the papers. Surely someone would arrive today. She just had to make Tally and Nola and the others that she could earn a living.

However, all decisions to the contrary, she strolled toward the stables after breakfast, having learned from the maid that Nola was still sleeping. Simulating indifference to the plaintive whistling of Bury Me Not on the Lone Prairie, she stepped into Mephisto's stall and rubbed his velvety nose with her finger-tips, as if to say, "Hello, old fellow. You'll have to wait until afternoon, 'Phisto," she told the fidgeting horse. "Don't you realize I'm a business woman?"

Hearing Tally approach the stall she suddenly put her arm about Mephisto's neck and squeezed tightly, afraid to stand away from him lest Tally observe her silly nervous trembling. "Oh, Jocelyn," he said with casual friendliness, "I wondered if I could do some business with you? I could sell you milk, eggs, fresh vegetables, and your credit is good."

"I don't need credit," she informed him, still clinging to the pleased yet astonished horse. "Yet, if it will help you, I shall be glad to give you my business."

girl's flow of small talk with almost rude abruptness, "I have work to do. Please excuse me." Starting toward the door she hoped her control would not slip until she got away from Nola's far too keen eyes.

"Why did you break off with Geoffrey?" Nola demanded. "I thought you'd be married by now."

"Ask Gramp," Lyn flung over her shoulder and fled precipitately. Nola, sitting with Lyn and Thorn that night, appeared vastly amused at Thorn's frenzied desire to interest and please her, while Jocelyn writhed to see him being meek and anxious and subservient.

After dinner Nola changed into a simple knitted suit of soft scarlet wool, brushed out her silver-gold hair until it made a silky halo about her face, then proceeded around the fence to the Mack's abode.

Jocelyn, watching her go, felt a sick emptiness inside of her chest. Lovely Nola, exquisite Nola. Tally was not to be blamed for admiring her.

"Thorn," she said, "don't make a complete idiot of yourself. Can't you manage a little dignity? It won't do you any good to prostrate yourself at her feet. She wants Tally, you—yourself."

"I love him," she declared doggedly. She loved me once. Look here, Lyn, let's be practical! This plan going to pay and you must realize it by now. Nobody has even asked for a price for a room. It's too out of the way for tourists. If you don't marry Tally so we can sell this place, we'll starve."

"Very well; we'll starve. Do you think I'd go to him with a proposition like that? He's making a living, isn't he? We didn't get any money out of him, did we? No. We shoved him around with less consideration than we give our servants. I am in no position to ask a favor of him, and I won't."

"Then I'll have to try and marry Nola. I've always wanted to marry her, anyhow."

"So you just said." Jocelyn wrinkled her nose in disgust. "It's too bad you didn't think about how much you wanted her before you kicked up a row. You only succeeded in pushing her into Tally's house and into his arms. You, you not only hurt yourself, Thorn, you—measured up my life, too. I—I ought to hate you!"

You'll have to wait until afternoon, 'Phisto," she told the fidgeting horse. "Don't you realize I'm a business woman?"

"Th-thanks—" she stammered. "Although I don't see what you can do."

"Figure ways to cut down your operating expense," he offered. "You could let your maids and your cook go—the groom, too. Mother, with Gretchen's help could do the cooking for you, and Gretchen could help with the cleaning. You wouldn't have to pay them so much and they would be pleased to earn some money for clothes. Then I could supply you with practically everything but meat. Isn't that a good idea, Jocelyn? Nola really planned it last night."

"Now, isn't that nice?" she mocked. "Dear Nola goes to much thought and trouble just to help me! Well, I don't need her or yours either! If you must hire your family out as servants, no doubt you'd do much better in the city. They could earn more money!"

He jerked backward as if she had slapped him. His face darkened with indignation. "I was wrong about you I see. You haven't changed. It's too bad you can't learn a few things about decency and courtesy from Nola. Shoving his hands deep into his trousers pockets he turned and stamped out of the stable.

"Tally," Jocelyn whispered. "... I didn't mean it..." Mephisto whinnied softly and nuzzled her shoulder. "What makes me say such things, 'Phisto," she choked. "He was really being kind and I—I thought it was worth a try. He said it was Nola's idea. Am I really a horrid spoiled brat?"

He moved closer to her, unhappy at her trembling trying dumbly to comfort her and tell her he loved her.

Jocelyn, walking toward the front of the house, hating herself and wondering if apologizing would do any good, saw a yellow taxial pull up in the driveway. A little man wearing brand-new clothes peered at her from under the visor of a checked cap pulled well down on his head. He took a newspaper from his overcoat pocket and tapped it with a nicotine-stained finger.

"This place where you got rooms to rent, Miss?"

"Yes," she acknowledged. "Do you wish room and board?" His weasel-like eyes darted appraisingly over the landscape. "Yeah, I guess so. Sure this place is secluded?"

"Certainly," she assured him. "We are three miles from Santa Barbara and more than a mile from the nearest house. No one will bother you here."

"Good." He took out a wallet thick with bills and paid the taxi driver. "Tell him where to put my baggage, Miss."

FLIGHT OF THIS SLIM-BODIED FALCON came to an abrupt end when the giant air liner, one of Britain's Imperial Airways craft, narrowly escaped disaster at Croydon, England. The undercarriage of the plane, "Falcon," collapsed just as the ship landed, and only by skilful handling was the pilot able to avert loss of life. Two propellers and the undercarriage were smashed but 16 passengers and three members of the crew got by with a severe shaking.

Court Reaffirms Black Decision

AUSTIN, May 31 (AP)—The state's highest criminal tribunal today reaffirmed its decision that Francis Marion Black, Jr., was justly assessed the death sentence for conviction of abducting 14-year-old Marvin Dale Noblett off a high precipice in West Texas.
The court of criminal appeals, after a review of the record, denied a rehearing for Black, whose trial court sentence was affirmed several weeks ago.
The state charged Black pushed the youth off a cliff, near Alpine, in order to collect insurance. The crime occurred June 9, 1938, in Brewster county.
The tribunal affirmed a life sentence given Charles Wair for conviction of rape in Dallas county. The sentence was once reversed and remanded but on second appeal the court said the evidence left no room for doubt of Wair's guilt. Wair was indicted in Gregg county.

14 ARRESTED IN DETROIT STRIKE

DETROIT, May 31 (AP)—Fearing a new outbreak of factional violence in connection with the Briggs Manufacturing company strike, police today arrested 14 men and seized blackjacks, baseball bats and lengths of rubber hose.
Nine men were released quickly but the other five were detained for additional questioning.
At 3:45 a. m. guards at a hall of the United Auto Workers Union (CIO), which called the Briggs strike 10 days ago, asked for police help saying they feared an attack. Officers of the special investigation detail arrested three men they said were members of the Homer Martin independent faction of the UAW who came to Detroit "to settle this union fight."
Shortly afterward police cruiser squads brought in 11 men accused of besieging a restaurant in search for a pro-Martin auto worker said to be opposed to the Briggs strike. The police found Jesse Taylor, a Briggs employe, hiding in the cellar of the restaurant. Taylor said he was beaten Monday night and feared further violence.

ARMY

Moseley knew, he added, his blue eyes snapping, what General Craig had done about one case but he did not disclose the nature of the action.
Moseley asserted the "disease of communism" now attacking the United States could be cured "in five minutes from the White House."
He explained this could be accomplished if President Roosevelt would empower the army to investigate subversive activities.
Shouting frequently at members of the committee seated across the table from him, Moseley declared vehemently he thought there were several emergencies confronting this country.
Among these he listed subversive activities and "a plan on foot from coast to coast to get us involved in war."
"The first thing I would do if I were in the White House," the general said, "would be to fire every communist in the employe of the United States government and then I would release the army so that it could fight this enemy within our gates."

Lions Club Talks On Safety

A note of safety was sounded Wednesday at the Lions club by two men who make a living by being apparently unsafe.
Jack Miller and Dick Ward, two members of the automotive thrill show group known as "Death Dodgers," pointed out, however, that their feats were intended to demonstrate the mechanical perfection and safety of modern machines.
"The cause of accidents," said Ward, "is not due to faulty construction, but to faulty thinking of the driver."
Recalling the Memorial Day services here Tuesday, Miller said that something of that sort was needed to keep the public safety conscious, and added that "what we need is not a Safety Day but a Safety Year." He advocated that "everyone practice safety" because "it's contagious."
John R. Hutto, scoutmaster of the club sponsored Boy Scout troop, gave a report of the group's activities in the Round Up and called attention to the approach of summer camp.

RED MAN FIGHTS BACK FOR LAND HE ONCE OWNED

WASHINGTON, May 31 (AP)—The white man's "smart piece of business" in dealing with the Indians years ago is giving Uncle Sam a headache.
There currently are a score of disputes, some serious and some amusing, which have arisen from the economic and political strategy of the forefathers in giving about 300 treaties to obtain Indian land cheaply.
Seneca Indians, for example, are pressing on the government an alleged treaty claim to the bed of the Niagara river. Officials say the title, if established, may interfere with a power company's application to divert additional water from the river.
In lighter vein, Arizona officers and the Apaches are at loggerheads over Indian attempts to hire a white man to kill bears which are destroying large numbers of cattle on the Fort Apache reservation. For traditional reasons, no Indian will kill a bear, and state laws will not permit white men to do so.
Out of the treaties there have arisen claims against the government for more than $5,000,000,000.
"what the government apparently did not realize in the days when treaty violations by white men were winked at," says the Indian office, "was the fact that Indians might some day hire lawyers."

MARKETS

NEW YORK, May 31 (AP)—The slow-moving advance of the stock market stalled today as traders proceeded cautiously after the Memorial Day recess.
An early ripple of buying subsided and gains running to more than a point were partly eliminated or replaced by minor losses. Fractional gains and declines were mingled throughout the list near the finish, with a few up as much as a point.
Trading expanded a little but for the session focused up to only about $50,000 shares.

Nazis Protest Speech Made in Parliament

BERLIN, May 31 (AP)—A German official spokesman charged today that Britain was trying to set up a "terrorist center" in Germany and intimidated a protest might be lodged in London.
The basis for the charge was a speech made yesterday at Southampton, England, by a laborite member of parliament, Philip Noel-Baker, before a labor party congress.
Noel-Baker was quoted here as saying, "we are doing everything possible to feed propaganda to illegal publications in Germany so that the German people may be enlightened."
(The exact quotation on this point was not reported in the British press but Noel-Baker made a statement generally along that line.)

MALAY PRINCE TO MARRY DESPITE OBJECTIONS

OXFORD, England, May 31 (AP)—A Malay prince whose romance here with the pretty daughter of an Oxford tailor blossomed despite his Sultan brother's disapproval has now come of age and plans to marry her tomorrow.
They have reserved a suite aboard the liner Corfu, sailing Friday for Malaya. The question of a second ceremony in the prince's country, Trengganu, is to be decided there. Trengganu is a little smaller than New Jersey, which Prince Mahmud left to study in Oxford's cloistered halls.

TOO MANY REQUESTS

BASEBALL CENTENNIAL STAMP TO BE ISSUED EARLY NEXT MONTH

Stamp enthusiasts will have a new issue to add to their collections soon. And baseball fans may be interested in this, too.
Postmaster Nat Shick Wednesday released publicity concerning a Baseball Centennial commemorative stamp, to be put on sale for the first time on June 12, at Cooperstown, N. Y., where the game of baseball was first played in 1839.
Shick said those who wished cancelled stamps of the first day's sale, might prepare a self-addressed envelope, bring it to him with three cents, and he will forward the lot to Cooperstown for June 12th cancellation and return.
The new stamp carries a picture of a group of small boys playing baseball on a town lot, and to the left are crossed bats over a "mill and ball" with the dates "1839-1939."
Further information in regard to the new issue may be obtained from Postmaster Shick.

Fished Out A Cannon Ball To Pay Fine

WILMINGTON, Del., May 31 (AP)—Take it from Millard E. Dawson, 15, the good old summertime is still the best time for fishing—even though you're not after a prize bass but a Civil War cannon ball you rolled into a river "just to see how big a splash it would make."
Six months ago a judge sentenced Dawson to fish out a 30-pound cannon ball he removed from a war memorial and rolled into Brandywine river. If he failed, the judge said, he'd have to "face the consequences"—in other words a stiffer sentence for disorderly conduct.
Today after much fishing, one "reprieve" and many disappointments Dawson had the cannon ball back on dry land. He located it yesterday in chest-deep water, rolled it ashore with the aid of two companions, then lugged it home for safe-keeping until "I can give it to Judge John F. Lynn personally."
He had been given until August 15 to recover the relic.
The Brandywine was icy when the sentence was imposed last December.

Leaders Invited To White House

WASHINGTON, May 31 (AP)—Back from a holiday rest at Hyde Park, President Roosevelt invited the "big four" from Capitol Hill to a White House conference today to discuss what congress has been doing and—especially—what it is likely to do.
Particularly did he seek some prognostications about adjournment from Vice President Garner, Speaker Bankhead and Majority Leader Barkley and Rayburn. The president is planning a trip to the San Francisco world's fair and, possibly, to Alaska, and the date of departure depends upon congress' calendar.
If there is a possibility congress may adjourn by July 15, the president said he would defer his trip until after that date. If the legislators appear likely to remain in session until August 1, however, he probably will start for the coast June 15.

Jap Gendarmes May Be Holding English Military Attache

PEIPING, China, May 31 (AP)—British circles here believe that Lieutenant Colonel Spear, military attache to China, is being held by Japanese gendarmes at Kalgan.
He had been reported en route overland from Chungking to Peiping. Japanese newspapers today declared that a "mysterious foreigner" identifying himself as an attache of a "certain foreign nation" was arrested May 26 at a railway station between Peiping and Kalgan. British circles believed there was little question the man was Spear.

Pictured above is a car being hurled by its own speed over eight others—a perilous feat, to put it mildly, for the driver. This stunt will be performed as one of the thrill features of the "Death Dodgers" show to be staged at Barton park Thursday night at 8 o'clock under auspices of the local American Legion post. "Happy Jack" Miller, who heads the group of Hollywood stunt performers in putting on the show, is said to hold a record in having jumped a car 565 feet, and he will be at the wheel when the eight-auto leap is performed. There will be many other thrill feats on the Thursday night program.

O. E. Accused Slayer Shot To Death LOCKNEY, May 31 (AP)—Blazing guns have ended Ernest Williams' marital troubles. Charged with slaying his former wife, Mrs. Beattie Mae Smith, Williams was killed yesterday during an exchange of bullets with officers who cornered him in a hay-loft near here. Mrs. Smith, who obtained a divorce from Williams a year ago, was shot to death in the garden of her home Monday night. Deputy Sheriff Barlow Hill of Lockney said Captain Jim Lines of the Texas highway patrol and Texas Ranger Pat Tallafiero entered the barn where Williams was hidden in a mound of hay. In an exchange of shots, Williams was killed. Buster Williams, brother of the slain man, said Ernest admitted he shot Mrs. Smith.

The Effects of Liquor Cannot Be Repealed TEN YOUNG MEN'S IDEAS AGAINST LIQUOR Fearing the public is sometimes led to believe that only a few older people are opposed to liquor, I obtained the following reasons against the use of liquor from ten young people, ranging in age from sixteen to twenty-five and not strictly from temperance homes: 1. Drinking is harmful to one's reputation. 2. Money spent for liquor is a total loss. 3. Time spent in drinking is a total waste of time. 4. The best way to make a fool of yourself is by getting drunk. 5. Drinking interferes with one's having a good time. 6. Drinking interferes seriously with one's work. 7. A person under the effects of liquor is dangerous to the safety of others. 8. Drinking is harmful to one's health. 9. Drinking interferes with other people's activities and after spoils their plans. 10. Not one out of twenty are moderate. Why should I run the risk of losing my self-respect and will power?—(Submitted by and published at the request of the local WOTU).

I jumped at the DEAL THE FORD DEALER MADE ON MY OLD CAR How Much? Says I to the FORD Dealer My wife has been away for a FORD V-8. Figured I could swing it if I got a good trade on my old car. So I took the old four-cylinder around to the FORD Dealer. DID I GET A TRADE! The figure I had in mind was good enough. Imagine my surprise when the FORD Dealer paid me even more for my old car. Had he needed some used cars right now you bet I jumped at the deal. plus- 1. MATCHLESS V-8 PERFORMANCE. No other makes are costing less than around $1500 delivered, has it. Unequaled ground and all mileage proved in Gillespie-Yoccoite Run. 2. BIGGEST HYDRAULIC BRAKES. More square inches in hydraulic braking surface than any other car in the low priced field. 3. TRIPLE CUSHION COMFORT. Balanced action in springs, shock absorbers and seat cushions result in a shock free, level ride that is a revolution! Widest year seat of any low priced car. 4.
