COLLISION OF TAXI AND CAR SATURDAY EVE

Mrs Forrest McCrary In Hospital With Minor Injuries

Mrs. Forrest McCrary is in a Memphis hospital today as the result of an automobile mishap that occurred Saturday night about 6:30 o'clock at the Brice and Fourteenth street intersection.

The accident occurred as Mrs. McCrary was traversing Fourteenth Street, headed south, and a Cudd Taxi, driven by Claude Ferrel, was going east on Brice Street.

The taxi and the small coupe crashed knocking the woman unconscious and adding Ferrel. Mrs. McCrary and the cab driver were the only occupants of the cars.

Mrs. McCrary was taken to the Clark Hospital by Hub Bass, grocery deliveryman, who happened by, and she received treatment for internal injuries and bruises. Ferrel was not hurt.

The local woman was said by hospital attendants this morning to be resting easy.

Both the coupe and the sedan figuring in the wreck were damaged considerably, it is said.

MORE RAIN FELL HERE SATURDAY

Following the Friday night's fall of .40 of an inch, this section was visited by another splendid rain Saturday afternoon and evening. Starting about 5:00 p.m. and continuing until about 9:00 o'clock that night, the precipitation registered 1.03 in the local weather bureau gauge, making a total of practically one inch and a half of rain for the past week-end.

Saturday's rain is reported to have been quite general in this corner of the county, but Turkey and the southwest corner of the county report no moisture.

PHILLIPS TEAM WINNER TOURNAMENT

ESTELLINE, March 9.—A successful Gold Medal basketball tournament for independent teams ended Saturday night here with the Phillips 66 team of Pampa as the winner. Estelline and Pampa were in the final game, and the Pampa five overpowered the home team by three points, the final score being 27-24.

The Pampa club received gold basketballs and a large trophy as a prize. The Estelline team received silver basketballs as second place winners.

The Kirkland team, winning third place, received bronze basketballs. In the consolation division, Odell won first place, and

FUNDS REDUCED FOR PWA WORKS

WASHINGTON, March 9.—Secretary Ickes today told the Senate that the Public Works Administration had allotted a total of $76,901,446 to 69 non-federal electric power projects, including more than $10,000,000 for Texas projects. He said the reductions in PWA projects would leave 624 approved Texas projects, calling for more than $80,000,000 without allotments.

FRANCE POURS 150,000 TROOPS INTO FRONTIER

Britain Warns Hitler Will Send Support France, Belgium

LONDON, March 9.—Fear-filled France is pouring 150,000 battle-equipped troops into the fortifications along the eastern French frontier, as 15,000 German soldiers moved into the Rhineland.

London observers believed that Great Britain was ready to seek League of Nations consideration for Hitler's proposed treaty.

Germany, including the Rhineland, was wildly happy over the denunciation of the Locarno Pact and the remilitarization of the territory.

Mussolini has called a halt in the Ethiopian campaign, possibly to hold his armies ready in the event of the outbreak of European hostilities.

Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden warned Germany that any attack on France or Belgium, in violation of the Locarno Pact, would force Great Britain to come to the assistance of these nations. He told the House of Commons that he was thankful that there appeared to be no reason to suppose "present German action implied a threat of hostilities."

NEW CENTENNIAL STAMPS ON SALE

Twenty thousand official "Texas Centennial" stamps were received here this morning by Postmaster J. Henry Read to be used as regular United States Postage.

Texas Centennial stamps, honoring Texas' 100th independence anniversary, first went on sale March 2 at Gonzales, where the first battle of the Texas Independence War was fought. Sale of the stamps officially opened over all Texas March 3, but because of the demand for the stamps they were not received here until today.

The stamps are almost twice as large as the regular three-cent stamps and are of the same color. In one corner is a picture of Sam Houston, and in the other upper

DISTRICT COURT IN THEFT TRIAL

District Court this morning took up the case of the State of Texas vs. Lonnie Campbell, charged with chicken theft.

Campbell is charged with having on September 18, 1935, stolen several chickens from the home of Morris McCoy, living south of Estelline.

It is believed the case will not occupy more than one day of the court's time, and will probably be disposed of by tonight.

F. B. Posey, convicted last week of arson and sentenced to two years in the penitentiary, has, through his counsel, accepted sentence and given notice of appeal to the higher courts.

Enough Rope Beats Elevator Tieup

Passengers still have to walk up tedious flights of stairs because of New York's elevator strike, but ingenious business men have solved the problem of getting merchandise up and down without toting it. Julius Hausner (at right) reaches eagerly for the bundle lowered to him by rope from his ninth floor office.

Ft. Worth Boosters Will Visit Thursday

An invitation to attend the Southwestern Exposition and Fat Stock Show, March 13-22, will be given residents of this city Thursday afternoon at 3:10 o'clock, by approximately 100 men representing the Fort Worth banks and cattlemen.

They will come to this city in a special train, as part of the activities of the Southwestern Exposition Roundup Club, which is making eight invitation tours in the interest of the show. E. G. Parker is trip chairman for the excursion which will visit this city.

With the party of boosters will be Bob Celen, one of the three foremost trick and fancy ropers of the world, who has been a star of the Fort Worth rodeo for a number of years.

Bob and Gene McLaughlin, the youngest of rodeo performers, who have been sensations at the Madison Square Garden Rodeo for the past two years, will also be aboard the train. Bob and Gene, 7 and 5 years of age, do

ARREST MAN WANTED IN CAR STEALING CASE

Recover Car Stolen From Hall County School Teacher

E. R. "Whitey" Riggsdon, Mechanic oil driller, is in the county jail here, held on suspicion of complicity in the theft of an automobile from Miss Bertha Patrick, Quitaque teacher, Saturday March 1.

The stolen car, a 1935 Ford, was recovered last Thursday in Pampa, and is being held there by the insurance company, which will return the car to its owner, when found, the Hall County license plates had been taken off, and Wheeler County plates substituted.

Riggsdon was apprehended last week by Pampa officers near McLean, and jailed at Clarendon. Sheriff Joe Colvin went to Clarendon yesterday and brought the man to this city.

Riggsdon claims to have purchased the car from a stranger in Shemrock and had in his possession a bill of sale for the car, inasmuch as he could not identify the man who is alleged to have sold it to him, and several other vague portions of his story, he is being held here for investigation.

ASSERT PLOT TO KIDNAP CHILD

ATLANTIC CITY, March 9.—An asserted kidnaping plot aimed at Jack Dempsey's 19-month-old daughter, Joan Hannah, was under investigation by federal local officials, who thought threats were probably the work of a crank.

It was learned that a friend of Dempsey received a postcard in New York, warning him that the man had overheard "two Polish men" planning to kidnap the child. Dempsey sent a personal bodyguard to this city to protect his daughter.

HIBIT CALVES MARILLO SHOW

Hall County calves will be exhibited in the Baby Bees division of the Amarillo Fat Stock Show, which opened today and will continue with a pavilion sale Thursday according to County Farm Agent R. E. L. Pattillo.

JAPAN SEES LAST ACT

In the assassination of five liberal statesmen, Japan's militarists seem to have made an assault on democratic government in a way which the most up-to-date dictators of Europe could hardly have improved on.

But for all the fact that liberal statesmen lie dead, with military fire-eaters piling themselves on the patriotic glory of their assassinations, this frustrated upheaval in Japan looks more like the last act of an old drama than the first act of a new one.

The uniformed gangsters who sought power over the bodies of the opposition were not riding a mounting tide which was sweeping the country with irresistible force. The tide that carried them along was ebbing, not rising; their dramatic coup d'etat looked to the past rather than to the future.

Because our own relations with the Japanese government present certain points of strain, any change of regimes in Tokio will be bound to affect us. It is therefore a good thing for us to try to understand just what has happened.

BLOOD-THIRSTY militarism certainly is nothing new for Japan. For unnumbered generations the military caste there has been supreme, answerable only to the emperor. The state has existed to serve its soldiers; the army, in a very real sense, has been the nation.

For perhaps a quarter century the Japanese have been experimenting with parliamentary government. The experiment was never very successful; the shadow of the past always loomed across it, and the militarists never consented to a change that would make their group simply one among many groups.

What touched off this most recent explosion seems to have been the fact that the mass of the Japanese people had begun to insist on having the military clique whittled down to its proper size. The anti-militarist party won a majority in the last parliamentary election; furthermore, a sort of farmer-labor combine with definitely radical tendencies actually won 22 seats.

THE army group replied to this in the only way open to it—with the sword. But by so doing it did not start Japan off on a new path; it tried to restore it to an old one. And in that fact lies a measure of hope.

For it is pretty clear that the main current of Japanese sentiment is running the other way. The plain people of the land are beginning to suspect that the glories of a victorious army and a great navy put precious little butter on their bread.

They would like to see less attention paid to the army and more attention paid to the worker, the farmer and the business man.

It is possible that this coup d'etat is the last stand of the old order. It may make the immediate future exceedingly difficult; but it may also mean that the end of Japan's policy of compromising militarism is nearer than the rest of the world dared to hope.

CCC Dance Is Well Attended

Despite the threatening weather, the dance Friday evening at the CCC Camp was well attended. In response to invitations issued by the dance committee, many local couples joined the men of the camp in the dance, which was held in the recreation hall. The hall had been decorated for the occasion with the national colors.

During intermission, refreshments, consisting of cake, coffee and cocoa were served by a committee of ladies headed by Mrs. Fred O'Neal, wife of the mess steward. The 20-pound cake for the occasion was a product of the camp bake-shop.

Much credit for the success of the series of dances being given at the camp goes to the dance committee, composed of Moore, Block, Fletcher, Williams and Reilly.

Contributions to the fund for the dance are limited to 15 percent of the net income, exclusive of the contributions.

WAXAHACHIE.—An orchard consisting of 145 trees has recently been planted by Mr. and Mrs. Albert Bearden of Ellis county, according to Miss Irma Ross, home demonstration agent. The fruits include peaches, pears and plums, and Mr. and Mrs. Bearden have selected the varieties so that they will have fruit ripening from September to October. The dewberry plants were planted several years ago and will contribute to the variety of fruit produced also.

Behind the Scenes in Washington

By RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON.—Neutral observers on the political sidelines are mentally paging Senator Hugo Black of Alabama.

Black is chairman of a committee which has virtually unlimited power to investigate lobbying and that power was used last summer to obtain the sensational exposure of "power trust" tactics—an exposure which finally led to passage of the administration's public utility holding company bill.

The lobby committee guards its plans, but it is known to have been investigating activities of anti-New Deal agencies such as the American Liberty League, National Association of Manufacturers, American Taxpayers' League, and others.

Obviously, the investigation is being used as a political instrument—as this writer forecast last summer—and will be bringing out its biggest sensations as the campaign warms up.

But the question remains whether Democrats on the committee will try to avoid some illumination on operations of the big Democratic lobbyists here, especially members and ex-members of the party's national committee, who have been making fortunes by trading on personal and political friendships.

THE court-martial of Col. Joseph I. McMullen, convicted of "dishonorable conduct" for accepting railroad tickets from Washington to San Francisco and return from Joe Silverman—dealer in millions of dollars' worth of surplus army goods—starred as defense witnesses ex-National Committeemen Robert Jackson of New Hampshire and Arthur Mullen of Nebraska, and ex-National American Legion Commander Ralph "Spike" O'Neil. All three had been retained at one time or another by Silverman to lobby with the secretary or assistant secretary of war in connection with his contracts.

About the time the Democratic administration took office, Mullen, a prominent Democratic politician, was retained by Col. William Howard, prominent Republican, who had felt competent to handle Silverman's interests by himself as long as Republicans ran the War Department.

The two men are reported to have visited Secretary Dern's home one night to discuss a Silverman contract—a privilege few lobbyists other than Mullen could have enjoyed. Jackson was hired while still secretary of the Democratic national committee. O'Neil happened to be a close friend of Assistant Secretary of War Bert Woodring.

FURTHER evidence as to why Democratic politicians are hired as lobbyists was revealed by the Senate Munitions Committee featured O. Max Gardner, former North Carolina governor and national committeeman.

Vice President James I. Murray of Boeing Aircraft Co. evidently showed President E. A. Tamm the concern that Gardner had been employed shortly after cancellation of the air mail contracts and had been paid $75,000. He would maintain for $25,000, Murray said, would be of more value than sent to the industry in getting "proper" air mail legislation because "it is a politician of the first water and my observations tell me that in this administration, to get things done, resort must be made to politics."

The Black committee probably could find out why Gardner was worth $100,000 to an aviation company and why Jackson, Mullen and O'Neil were worth large sums to Silverman—if it wanted to. (Copyright, 1936, NEA Service Staff)

CRUISE TO NOWHERE

by Deck Morgan

© 1936 NEA Service, Inc.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

JANE WESTON feels her dreams have come true when she gets out on a three weeks' ocean cruise, accepted in payment for the salary due her when the magazine for which she worked as typist suspended publication. On board the ship, she meets handsome DIRK STROM, expert ski jumper, as penniless as Jane. The trip was a gift to him from the parents of a child whose life he saved.

Dirk introduces Jane to his friend, SNOWSHOES, a detective. Others on board are: NORA LANE, famous actress and owner of the Kokinor diamond; wealthy, eccentric MADAME DOREMUS; DUTCH LENZ and MANNIE JACKSON, blackmailers; TINO ROSSI, opera singer; KEN MARTIN and LINDA BAYES, floor show entertainers. Dirk and Jane spend much of their time together. Then a misunderstanding comes between them. Dirk meets Nora Lane and is attentive to her. Tino Rossi becomes Jane's constant escort.

Snowshoes persuaded Miss Lane to turn the Kokinor diamond over to the purser. They go to her stateroom to get it and find Mannie Jackson, dead from a bullet wound, on the floor. The diamond is missing.

Snowshoes takes charge of the investigation. Most of the passengers are not aware of the murder, though they know of the theft.

Leaving Nassau behind, a storm comes up that threatens to become a hurricane. Stewards notify passengers to get their life belts. Madame Doremus reports that Millie, her companion, is missing.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXI

The steady, dull roar of the wind endured outside the ship's bar, but most of those inside didn't pay it any heed. The tension had been too much for some of them; they were as high as the winds. Men who had given up their life belts to women and children sat about the small tables with scotch at their elbows, and told lugubrious tales about shipwrecks at sea. None of them had experienced them, but they told them with bitter relish indeed. "That ship hit a reef, and cracked like a shell. The lagoon was infested with tiger sharks."

Nobody would believe Dutch Lenz's tale. He had come into the bar, his face as white as paper, and begged in a trembling voice for a drink. He told the bartender about it, but Ed only laughed. All the men laughed. It was a better tale than anybody else had told.

Then Snowshoes came in, and Dutch cornered him at the bar. "It happened, I tell you!" he said pitifully. "Here, I'll give you $500 to guard me the rest of this cruise. Mannie was my pal. I don't know why he was killed, but now—they're after me!"

The detective said, "Get a hold on yourself Dutch. I won't be your bodyguard, but go on, spill it."

"I was down in my stateroom, when that awful roar began, the big winds. I was fitting on my life belt, standing before the mirror." Dutch's voice broke, and he had to take another drink. "Standing before the mirror, I saw the door knob turn and a gloved hand with a pistol thrust inside. I jumped down flat on the floor, and yelled—"

"I'll bet you screamed," the detective said. "Call it anything you like, but the hand disappeared. Don't you see? Mannie Jackson was my pal. Now the killer wants to get rid of me—thinks I know who he is. But I don't know him. I don't know nothing."

The hulking brute was piteous, as he stood there with quaking hands, downing hard liquor, trying to steel himself against the recollection of that close call from death.

"Stick close to the bar," Snowshoes advised. He didn't know whether to believe Dutch or not, but the blackmailer's panic was certainly not a sham. Dutch was completely unnerved.

Snowshoes went out of the bar, and walked through the recreation rooms to get an eye on the whole scene. He wanted to find Millie, the old dowager's companion who had disappeared with the box of jewels. The winds had slackened a bit, but the roar kept on. Everyone knew that the big blow was yet to come. It was after midnight now. They expected the winds to reach hurricane intensity shortly after 1 o'clock.

The scene in the recreation rooms was uniform. People stood or sat around in groups. They fingered their life belts nervously, and tried to hide their separate fears. A few people continued to play bridge, but one couldn't hear much for the wind. The orchestra played on.

Snowshoes didn't find the dowager's companion. He came up to Jane and the party about her—Dirk, the actress and Madame Doremus. "No trace of the little girl," he said, "but I'll poke around the ship. Dirk, you stay here with Miss Lane. I haven't forgotten my job. Don't let her out of your sight."

Cruise to—

But Nora Lane was busy entertaining a group of little children. She had a Punch and Judy set, and was giving a whole performance, wagging the dolls appropriately with her hands. The kids could hardly hear her, but the pantomime in the doll's hands was enough to amuse them.

One by one, the children ceased crying and responded to the spell of the puppets. And the actress was perfectly happy at this job! Gone were her fears of blackmail and extortion; all her personal fears had vanished.

In the time of extreme danger it's only the preservation of life that counts!

Dirk was trying to quiet Madame Deremus, who seemed to be more disturbed by the loss of her jewels than by the storm. Then he and Jane sat on the floor and watched Nora Lane's show.

In this hour Jane felt herself drawn to Dirk. She sat there watching him covertly from the side. He seemed to be fascinated by the puppet show, but his eyes roved about the room at intervals, as if he were looking for something to do that would help others on the ship. He was so immeasurably strong. She sensed his amazing strength of character.

For her Dirk had some of the same attraction she had felt when she first saw him on shipboard. How she had wanted to know him! His vitality animated her. And then childish ambitions had come between them.

Last night she had fought off an overpowering urge to stay with Dirk on deck under the stars, but the moment was lost.

Now Dirk sat watching Nora Lane, and when Jane spoke to him he didn't even hear her.

Dirk and Nora Lane belonged to each other. Each was secure in the realization of his own strength.

Jane felt suddenly alone, and looked about for something to do, to help others. She tried to comfort the old dowager for the loss of her jewels.

The storm raged outside, and one felt the ship driven before the wind. On the bridge the captain was fighting to keep her on the course, off the reefs. Thus far he had won, but his face was ashen; he had aged in the past three hours. He awaited the big blow with his chin grimly set. It would take all the seamanship in him to keep her afloat until morning. But it was the reefs which bothered him in the night.

The detective, exploring below, found not a single person in the cabins. He did the job thoroughly, though there were a hundred places where a person might have remained concealed during the hurricane. The disappearance of Millie and the jewel-box from Madam's suite had baffled him more than any other thing, not excepting the thing he had discovered in Suite AA, the scene of the murder.

He hastened to the bar, hoping to find Dutch Lenz there to tell him this amazing thing.

But Dutch was not there. Snowshoes found him seated with the tiny tots watching the Punch and Judy show, but talking about him apprehensively at times. Dutch was so scared he wouldn't even trust the men in the bar. He had joined the women and children.

But before the detective could attract Dutch's attention he became aware of the increasing intensity of the storm. It seemed to rise crescendo, as he stood there listening. The roar rose like a vast volume of sound, like a howl that had no end. And the winds began to shriek and tear things loose on the decks outside. Crash after crash resounded through the din, and then pandemonium reigned.

Every person in the recreation room paused, and listened. They thought they had become used to the storm, and then these new furies were added. It was the big blow, and human bravado didn't answer this one. People stood up, with their hands to their throats. This was what they had all been waiting for, the last three hours since the first onslaught of big winds. It was 1 o'clock and the winds had reached hurricane force.

The first great surge of the wind seemed to lift the ship clear of the water. The answering shudder shook the very timbers loose. The ship rolled terribly. One of the grand pianos broke its lashings and went sliding across the room, to the accompaniment of shrieks of terror. Stewards stopped the plunging instrument, and tried to lash it again, but it went amuck, pinning a man to the wall, cracking his ribs like sticks. His cries added to the terror.

Outside deck chairs were torn loose from lashing and splintered like kindling, and one great wave rolled up the side of the ship and pounded over the boat-deck. The sound of that water pounding against 20,000 tons of steel was more terrible than the wind. The ship listed badly.

IT IS POSSIBLE TO OBSERVE THE EARTH SPINNING ON ITS AXIS! A LONG PENDULUM, SWINGING NORTH AND SOUTH, IN THE NORTHERN HEMISPHERE, WILL CHANGE SLOWLY TO A NORTH-EAST BY SOUTH-WEST DIRECTION, AS THE EARTH TURNS BENEATH IT.

The roar didn't slacken, but one became accustomed to the added fury of the storm. People stared at one another, wide-eyed, and those who had not donned their life belts, hastily complied with order. No one played cards. Momentarily the orchestra had stopped. The careening piano unnerved them.

Dirk saw the detective and came to him just as Dutch Lenz turned his head. Snowshoes motioned to Dutch who came within hearing shot. "I just came by Suite AA," the detective said. "I thought something might turn up at the scene of the crime. Can you imagine what I like a child. "You see, the murderer's loose in this storm. He won't stop at anything to cover his tracks. He'll try to dispose of me—like the corpse. Please!" begged. "Give me some protection. Don't let him get me! I don't know nothing about the crime."

"Corpse?" Madame Deremus cried. But she did not faint. She paused, and said angrily: "I care about a corpse in this storm. Have you found Millie and her jewels? I've just remembered she was a problem child. Oh, surely my little Millie hasn't run away with the corpse?"

Snowshoes shook his head emphatically, and one saw that he was he had said, stumped.

Dutch looked about him with a gasp. He began to move toward the stairs, shaking with fear. "I got something," he said, and ran for the stairs toward Deck B. Snowshoes followed him.

Something Fishy About This

Herbert L. Welch can go back to Rangleys Lakes, Mo., and tell a story about catching a fish in Grand Central Palace, New York, that many listeners will classify as a tall tale. But it's true. Welch, fly-casting champion, is shown above as he landed a trout in an artificial stream erected in the huge building as part of the National Sportsmen's show.

Exposition's $230,000 Hall of Foods and Beverages

The $230,000 Hall of Foods and Beverages for the Texas Centennial Exposition is rapidly nearing completion on the Dallas grounds. The interior, to have it ready long before the Exposition, first Southwest World's Fair, opens June 6.

Here's Statue That Started Texas Row

This statue of "Buffalo Bill" Cody, famous Indian fighter and scout, looks like a harmless piece of art. But—when the United Daughters of the Confederacy learned it was to adorn the entrance of the Hall of Fine Arts, in the City Cultural Center at Texas Centennial Exposition which opens in Dallas June 6—there was a great to-do. The ladies claimed "Buffalo Bill" never lived in Texas and, furthermore, was a Union spy during the Civil War. Their formal protest is before Exposition officials.

Here's Finale of Texas State Fair Park

For 50 years the Texas State Fair has been "the fair" to show. For more than 35 years these towers stood by the main entrance of the Fair Park at Dallas. Above, the last of the landmarks topples to the ground, making way for the Texas Centennial Exposition which opens June 6 with the old Fair grounds the center of its huge lot.

Heap Big Indian

No, not a Comanche chief, just Owen P. White, nationally known magazine writer, as he visited the Texas Centennial Exposition grounds at Dallas. Mr. White, the oldest living white person born in El Paso, drew considerable attention with his story entitled "Dripping Dry Dallas."

A Real Newspaper Photographer

"Snookie," the 2½-year-old chimpanzee only a year out of the Belgian Congo, adopted as the official mascot of the Texas Centennial Rangerettes, was taken for a walk in the Exposition grounds, at Dallas, to have his picture taken. "Snookie" decided the cameraman didn't know what it was all about and tried to take pictures himself as Rangerettes Carolyn Durham, left, and Emogene Coffman watch.

A Big Man Watches a Big Job

They grow real men in Texas. J. G. Tarver, 8 feet, six inches, 440 pounds, watching work on the Dallas grounds of the $25,000,000 Texas Centennial Exposition as they prepare for June 6 opening. With a circus in his youth, Mr. Tarver now lives in Dallas.

Folk Leader

Gertrude Knott, noted authority on folk lore, is supervising handling of the third annual folk festival, which will open at the Texas Centennial Exposition in Dallas June 14. Special attention will be paid this year to the songs of the Old Southwest.

ORDINARILY we plan to furnish protein to our families by serving meat in some form at least once a day, but when meat is off the menu we must look elsewhere for our source of protein.

We all know that protein is found in meat, fish, nuts, the legumes (dried beans, peas and lentils), milk, milk products and eggs. We also know that there are different "qualities" of proteins, those of good quality containing all the amino acids necessary to the construction of body protein.

Dr. Walter H. Eddy tells us that "the proteins of milk, meat, eggs and cheese are rich in ALL the essential amino acids, while those of cereals are not." Also that "It is part of wisdom to see that in selecting our protein requirement from natural foods we insure against amino acid deficiency by including in every day's diet enough milk, eggs or meat to obtain protection against the possible deficiencies of cereal or vegetable proteins. Especially is this important if we reduce our total protein intake to near the minimum requirement."

Eggs-a-Day Recommended

Since eggs are a concentrated food in that there is no bulk in the way of connecting tissue, they must be properly combined with other foods for a well balanced meal. Plenty of fresh vegetables and cereals or other food-stuffs of high caloric value are needed.

Much has been learned in the last few years about the vitamin content of eggs, particularly the egg yolk and one noted doctor who specializes in nutrition advocates an egg a day along with orange juice and a quart of milk and the usual normal diet suggested for health and growth.

Tomorrow's Menu

BREAKFAST: Orange juice, cereal, cream, crisp broiled bacon, whole wheat toast, milk coffee.

LUNCHEON: Rice timbales with salmon sauce, pumpernickle, stuffed celery salad, canned cherries, cocoa nut cookies, milk, tea.

DINNER: Eggs in ramikins, Saratoga potatoes, asparagus, cucumber and cress salad, rhubarb shortcake, milk, coffee.

Properly cooked eggs are easily digested and can be served to the entire family from the baby up. This does not mean that a small child may eat "devil'd" eggs or fried eggs or eggs served in any of the highly seasoned sauces. But it does mean that he may have poached eggs, eggs soft-cooked in the shell (if properly cooked), carefully scrambled eggs, baked omelets and shirred eggs.

Eggs in ramikins is a dish that is very easy to make but important looking. Serve with buttered asparagus and a dessert of rhubarb shortcake.

Eggs in Ramikins

Put a round piece of toast in each ramikin. Cover with mushrooms which have been sauted in butter and moistened with cream. On mushrooms put a poached egg. Pour over a thin white sauce to which grated cheese has been added. Sprinkle with grated cheese and put in a moderately hot oven (375 degrees F.) to brown the top. Serve in ramikins. If you prefer you can use a large shallow baking dish in place of individual ramikins.

STORIES IN STAMPS

By I. S. Klein

The RECEPTION of TERU TERU

AN unusual bird is the "teru-teru." It is off on a visit to a pair of others of its kind and receives a reception becoming a prince. Welcoming the visitor with cries and signs of pleasure, the pair strut up to him, stand side by side and a little behind him; then all three march about rapidly, and in step, making a loud drumming sound. Suddenly they stop, the visitor stretches out his wings, and while he continues his outcries, the other two puff out their plumage and stretch their beaks to the ground. After the three have stayed in these positions for some time, the visitor finally leaves.

This is the quaint bird of Uruguay called "teru-teru" from the cry it makes; but it really is a Cayenne lapwing. Its wide rounded wings enable the bird to wheel about while in flight, and their slow flapping gives it a jerky movement through the air. The bird is a fearless fighter and often will fly even into the face of a man.

Since it is common on the pampas of Uruguay that country issued a series of stamps in 1922 picturing the bird on 12 values.

Licenses Must--

Hall County drivers, Mr. Bownds stated, and it is thought that at least seven thousand will be applied for. With April 1 as the deadline for driving without the state permits, Hall Counties will have to apply for the licenses more promptly than heretofore. Issuance of the permits fell off last week over the preceding week. Additional help has been added at the tax collector's office to care for the demands.

The licenses are free and must be used after April 1. Highway patrolmen will arrest all persons operating cars on state highways after April 1 without the licenses. Fines range upward to $200, and driving when a license has been revoked carries with it a mandatory jail sentence.
