And the barrier material has to be manufactured in large quantities of uniform quality. In Tennessee there are many acres of such barriers filtering out uranium 235.

Try and Stop Me DAILY STORY FROM THE BEST-SELLING BOOK

-By BENNETT, CERF-

THERE is a formidable blonde lady on the Bowery, according to Joseph Mitchell, who has achieved great local fame as cashier and proprietress of a movie "grind" house where ten cents gets you a double feature, newsreel, selected shorts, and a crack at a set of dishes.

"Mazie," is the lady's name, and she keeps her house open from 8 A. M. to midnight. On cold days, many a "bum" pro-duces his dime early in the morning and sleeps peacefully until closing time.

"Some days I don't know which this is, a movie theatre or a flop-house," sighs Mazie. "Pictures with shooting in them are bad for business. They wake up the customers." If one of the sleepers snores loudly enough to annoy the rest of the audience, Mazie charges down the aisle with a couple of copies of a confession magazine folded as a bludgeon. "Outa here on a stretcher, you big baboon!" she hollers. "Every tooth in your head! Every bone in your body!" The women and children, reports Mitchell, enjoy this mightily, particularly when Mazie gets the wrong man, as she frequently does.

While it adds to an evening of fun to speculate over the possibilities of atomic power within this and the next generation, most scientists are agreed that it will be quite some time before this awesome force is brought to bear in our everyday life. However, more immediate will be the effects of the many secrets uncovered in the historic search to tap the basic forces of the universe. It has been estimated that more than 5,000 new methods and products were uncovered during the atomic bomb

For instance, those working on the project found they would have to have couplings, valves and new pipe far more impervious to corrosion than anything heretofore known. A company came up with the answer. Similarly, revolutionary ideas were developed in pumps, and in sealing around the shafts for the pumps. Out of it also came new lubricants, and a host of items dealing with vacuum as well as a series of new and more effective refrigerants.

Researchers went so far as to say that at least one business would be revolutionized by discoveries made in the atomic search and that many others would be drastically altered and benefitted.

*Some of the fields manifestly due to profit are the petroleum industry (and West Texans should be interested) through improved pipes, couplings, heat exchanger, new methods of separating gasoline fractions, etc.; general chemical; manufacturers; high vacuum industries processing gas in industries electrical industry; medical profession; refrigeration industry; and industries employing corrosives.

Aside from the implications of atomic power which stagger human imagination, it would now appear that the two billions of dollars of public funds expended in its research would have proven one of the most profitable investments ever made even had the ultimate goal have eluded scientists.

All signs now point to an early swing back to standard time. Almost as soon as some folks awoke on the morning that war time went into effect and found that they had beaten the sun up, there has been an intermittent but continuing campaign for repeal of war time.

Now that the war has gone, the solons, with an ear to the ground, have rushed through measures which open the way to the resumption of standard time as of Oct. 1. That this was a highly important and vital piece of legislation is demonstrated by the fact that it was rushed through while congress still piddles around about lesser items involving reconversion, draft, demobilization, strikes.

It is almost amusing to reflect how this mole hill of time has been puffed into a mountain. So far as we can ascertain, it did not seriously affect many other than those who are involved in evening meetThe Timid Soul
