AL PEOPLE DIE IN TWO ACCIDENTS

Injuries Result Overturn and Collision of Cars

Two people figured in two accidents in and near Memphis. No one was injured in either of the two accidents.

A 1935 Model Oldsmobile seen by Miss Nita Cudd, of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Memphis, turned over afternooon on a country road near Salisbury when Miss Cudd applied the brakes.

The sand caused the car to overturn. The driver, one of the six girls, occupants of the car, was injured. Those in the car were Jeanette Watson, a paper, Martha Thompson, Boreen Jeanne Drap, and Miss Cudd.

The car was damaged considerably. The top was bent in, the fenders smashed. The driver, was uprighted by the car and driven into town. The roadster driven by Dale of Mr. and Mrs. Lind, Memphis, was damaged Saturday night about 10 o'clock, when the car and a truck driven by a Lakeview man (Continued on Page 8)

Crew Is Now Busy On 200-Foot Bridge Over Indian Creek

Six carloads of lumber for the construction of bridges in this precinct have arrived in Memphis, according to Cloyd Messer, head of the WPA projects for Precinct 1 of Hall county.

Construction on the proposed 200 by 20 feet wooden structure to be built across Indian Creek between the Indian Creek school and Plaska has begun. One bent of piling has been driven, and the bridge crew is working on the project five days a week.

Carnival of Values Was Great Success

The three-day Carnival of Values, sponsored by the business interests of the city, closed Saturday, with one of the largest crowds of many months in town to see the amusement events and take advantage of the special values offered by the merchants during the event.

Despite the handicap of an especially cold day Saturday, the people thronged the square all day, braving the cold to see the entertainment features offered for their amusement.

SENATE PASSES BONUS MEASURE THIS MORNING

President's Veto Is Overridden by Big Majority in Vote

By Associated Press
WASHINGTON, Jan. 27.—Ending a battle for the payment of the soldiers bonus which has lasted for years, the Senate today passed the Baby Bond Bonus Bill and made it a law over the veto of President Roosevelt by a vote of 76 to 19.

The House had smashed the veto down last Saturday by a vote of 326 to 61.

The passage of the bill now raises the problem of securing over two billion dollars to pay off the veterans. Whether the money will be raised by new taxes or not remains to be seen.

SCOUT TRAINING IS WORTH WHILE

RECENTLY at one of the higher institutions of learning in the nation, the freshman class felt that it had a grievance against the executive board of the college and, as is often the case, the more the members of the class thought of what they felt was an injustice, the greater the imagined offense became and the higher grew their indignation.

Finally, led by a disgruntled few, the class was on the verge of a serious riot, and the leaders had them worked up to a point where only a spark was needed to set them off on a wild riot, with the destruction of college property as its aim.

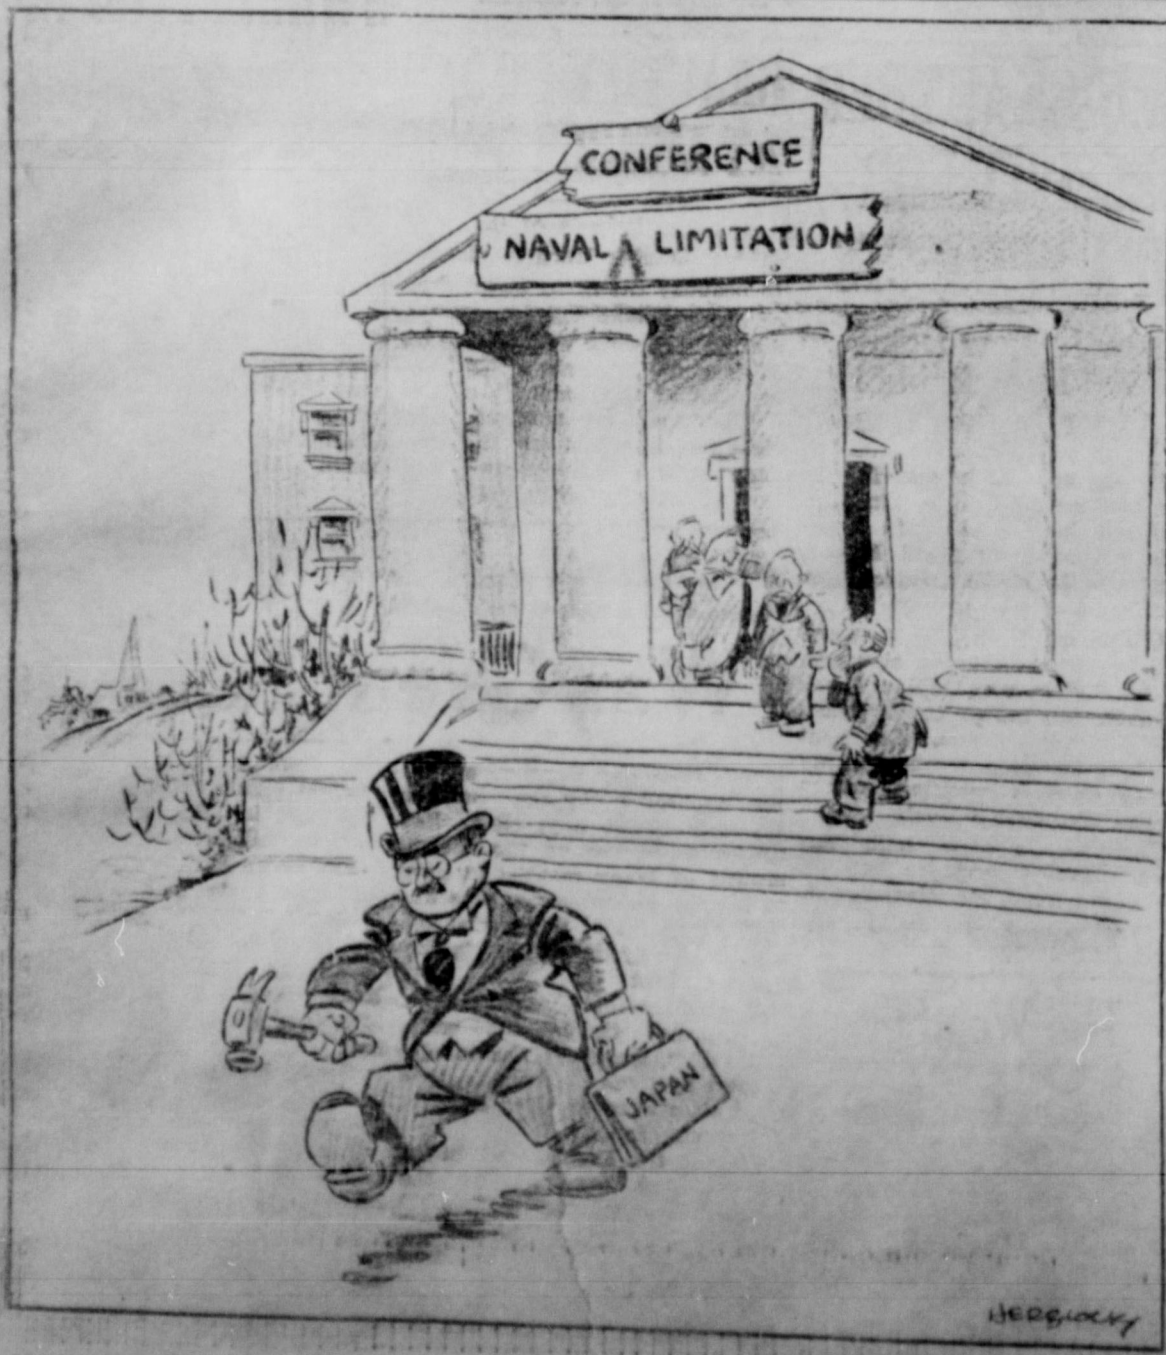

At this point there stepped into the affair a mild looking, unassuming member of the class who had had little to say during the wild arguments which led up to the climax. He wasn't by any means the largest man in the class. In a battle of fists he would have been defeated probably by the greatest number of his fellow classmen . . . but he took charge of the situation in no uncertain fashion, quelled the incipient riot and saved the college perhaps thousands of dollars worth of property damage . . . besides preventing his fellow freshmen from perpetrating an outrage which would have been disastrous to every member of the class.

After the entire affair had simmered down and the trouble had been adjusted, the Dean of the institution, having heard of the young man who stepped in at the critical moment, called him into his office and asked him just why he took the step he did.

The young man credited his action and its success to two of the things he had learned while a Boy Scout. One was the ninth point in the Scout law—A Scout is Thrifty—he does not wantonly destroy property. The other—the one which enabled him to handle his fellow freshmen—was the training he had as a Second Class Scout in averting panics and quelling a mob.

And that is the kind of training interested local citizens are anxious to give the boys of Memphis. Will you do your part?

WASHINGTON—There is something almost pathetic about the administration crowd's yearning to challenge the U. S. Supreme Court and make the tribunal's decisions a campaign issue. The New Dealers are moaning and groaning because they just don't dare—yet.

President Roosevelt decided to let the issue ride for awhile. He is believed to have assumed that the wide sweep of the AAA decision read by Justice Roberts meant the annihilation of the Guffey coal act, TVA, Wagner labor act, Social Security, and everything else on the New Deal list.

After awhile his constituency might get fed up with the supreme court and summon itself to a loud squawk. Meanwhile, he has made it evident that he wouldn't burn his fingers again as he did in the famous "horse and buggy" statement.

The president's attitude is reflected among practically all the pro-Roosevelt Democrats and Progressives here. Most of them evince a yen to go charging into the arena to advance the belief that the conservative majority on the supreme court has asserted an unprecedented usurpation of power and an unwarranted political prejudice against all New Deal measures.

Yet in practically every case—senators, representatives, official politicians, and brain trusters—the fact is admitted or deplored that the voters aren't "educated" up to the New Dealers' point of view. The New Dealers contend the court vote—its economic and political prejudices, yet they admit that the people at large stand in awe and reverence of a supreme court majority as something sanctified and deified.

SO there the administration stands, tense and alert, waiting for indication that opinion has reached the point where Congress can be persuaded to pass a law that will enjoin the court or a point where the court can safely suggest that the administration is entrenched wealth.

WHETHER or not you've heard that Donald R. Richberg made a couple of "educational" speeches warning that the supreme court has upset the balance of the executive, legislative, and judicial functions, please don't tell me that Richberg is telling you to make a series of speeches on the dangers of judicial dictatorship.

He is embarked on an expedition to destroy what he privately describes as "the mists and incense" surrounding the supreme court majority interpretation of the Constitution.

After his speech to the University alumni, Richberg billed in Boston Feb. 6, New York on March 7, and an optional radio hookup March 8. And then some more.

RICHBERG'S campaign is the beginning of a new "education," not officially sponsored by the White House.

Richberg is one of the brilliant lawyers in the country. Not long ago he was known as "assistant president" of the closest of all to Roosevelt's latter's councils.

He was shunted to the side when his mission—that of eliminating "Big Business" in Washington, in intimate cooperation with administrationists.

The King Is Dead... Long Live The King!

A dinner coat is more to the new King's liking than soldierly trappings, yet here duty forced him to don the uniform of the Welsh Guards.

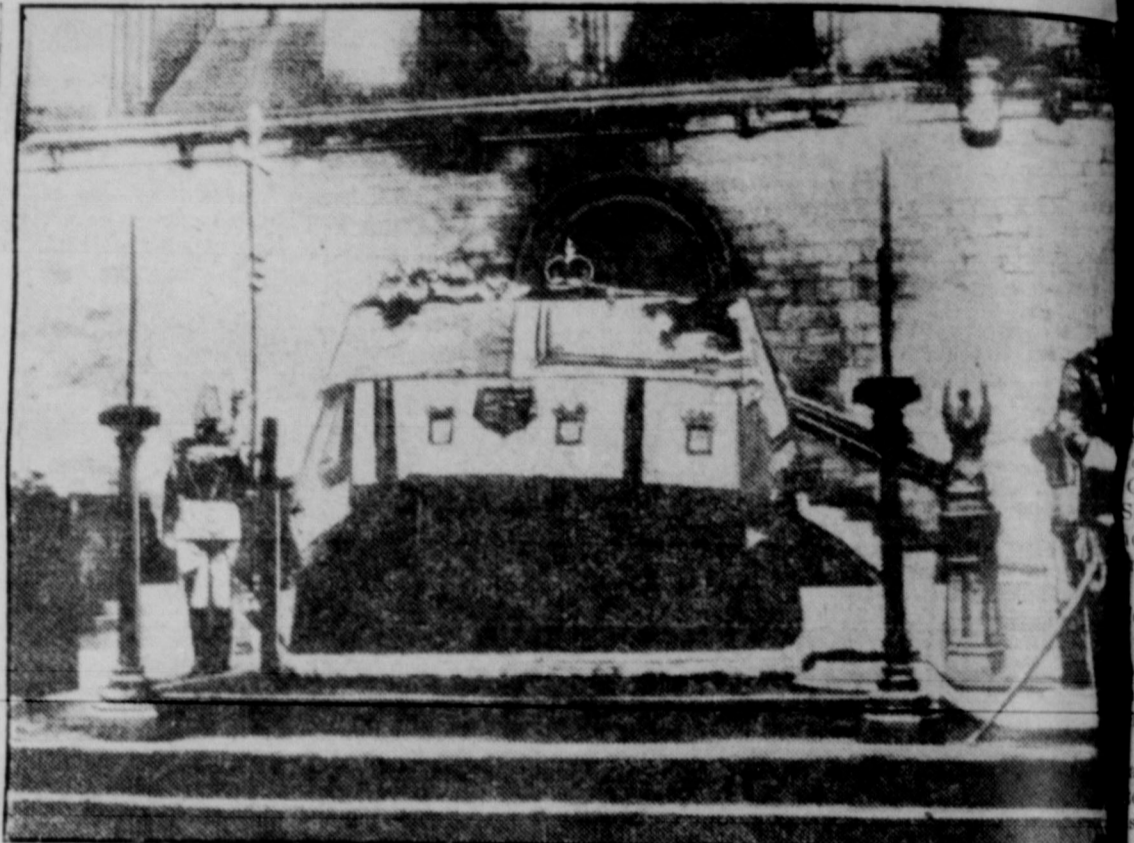

England's far-flung dominions weep for the deceased king with their motherland. So the flag flies at half-staff in front of the Canadian legation (above) in Washington and throughout the world.

A cute baby was King Edward VIII of England—and a serious one, judging by this picture, taken when the new sovereign was only 4.

Fluttering at half mast on the S. S. Majestic as it docked in New York, the two flags symbolize the mourning of Great Britain's seafaring men in merchant and naval service.

Resting on its catafalque in the center of historic Westminster Hall in London, the coffin of George V of England, the imperial crown placed on its top, is shown in this picture, radioed from London to NEA Service in New York. No other furnishings broke the vast space of the hall, which was lighted only by a few candles suspended from the timbered roof. At each corner of the catafalque stood one of the personal bodyguards of the late monarch.

Here is Edward VIII, new British sovereign who automatically became ruler over one-fourth of the people of the world when his father, King George V, passed peacefully into death at Sandringham House last week. The new monarch, the former cosmopolitan Prince of Wales, at 41, has been the first bachelor King of England in 176 years.

with the Woodfords as long as they don't let it out that they have ambitions. A girl who wants something—badly—is considered fair game, you know."

"I didn't know," Julia admitted. "I'd better be getting back to the lodge before they send someone out. I—I wanted you to know, just in case."

"But look here," Payson said.
"My camp's across the inlet. I won't be within calling distance.
And I want to help you." He thought a moment. "There's a small settlement down about 20 miles. A fellow down there has orders to come back and get me in another ten days. If only I could get word to him he might get us out of here tomorrow."

"But how would I explain that?
I mean, it would look foolish if I just ran away."

"You want to get away, don't you?"

"Yes . . . I'm afraid they may stay on here indefinitely—and heaven knows where they may decide to go when they board the yacht again!"

"Well," went on Payson

thoughtfully. "I could have this boat fellow pretend that a wire had come for you at the settlement. He could say someone was ill in town and you had to get back immediately."

"But how will you get in touch with him?"

"There's only one possible way.
The yacht has a radio-telephone aboard, doesn't it?"

"Yes, but the captain told me that nothing could go out on it unless Woodford ordered it."

"We'll have to try it somehow," Payson told her. "Maybe one of the crew could use an extra $20 when he gets back to the city. I'll sneak out there tonight in my little tub and find out."

Julia put a hand on his arm.
"But you'll get into trouble. I don't want anything like that to happen."

"Don't worry," he grinned down at her. "I can take care of myself—and I'm hoping I can take care of you, too."

Julia had never known such relief as she experienced on the way back to the lodge. She wondered what she would have done if she hadn't met Tom Payson—a man at once understanding and competent. A man willing to help her yet knowing nothing of her except the story she had told him. Suddenly it occurred to her how little she knew of him. Hardly more than his name and what he looked like, the way he smiled when he talked. Ten minutes ago neither had known the other was in the world—and now they were in an exciting conspiracy together. A conspiracy, Julia reminded herself soberly, which might mean trouble for Tom Payson.

"He shouldn't do it," she whispered to herself. "He—"
She turned back on the path,
started toward the water again,
she heard the chugging of the outboard motor on his boat. It was too late to reach him now.

As she reached the porch of the lodge she saw the glow of a cigarette. It was Cintra Lee's and the dancer regarded Julia with unfeigned interest.

"So you took a run-out powder on the party?"

"I—I had a little headache,"

Atalantean Anniversary

The Atalantean Club observed their anniversary with a breakfast Saturday morning at 9 o'clock at the home of Mrs. C. W. Broome, president of the club.

As soon as the guests arrived breakfast was served in the dining room. Tall candelabra and crystal bowls of varicolored sweet peas were placed at either end of the long table, while a beautifully decorated oak on an old fashioned cake stand graced the center.

Favors were small hand-made books filled with mints. These books had for their titles, names of books the club had previously studied. Each member told the author and something of her book. A clever original poem, "To the Club," written by Mrs. Broome, was given by Mrs. H. B. Estes.

After breakfast, the guests were invited into the living room. To further emphasize the books that have been reviewed in the club, each member of the social committee was dressed to suggest a title of some book. Mrs. James Norman represented the book, "Pink," Mrs. S. L. Seago was dressed to suggest "Mexican Maze," Mrs. J. B. Chitwood represented "Hope Girl," Mrs. Frank Phelan appeared as "Grandmother Brown's One Hundred Years," and Mrs. Troy Broome as "A Daughter of the Samerain." Members were to guess the title and author of these books. Mrs. Broome being declared winner was presented with a lovely quilt.

Those present were: Mrs. C. W. Broome, Mrs. J. B. Chitwood, Mrs. W. C. Dickey, Mrs. H. B. Estes, Mrs. T. T. Harrison, Mrs. N. A. Montower, Mrs. W. B. Kimberlin, Mrs. D. A. Neeley, Mrs. Frank Phelan, Mrs. S. L. Seago, Mrs. C. R. Webster, Mrs. Wade Hilliard, Mrs. Riley A. Carlton, Mrs. James Arthur Anthony and Mrs. Troy Broome.

"I hope I'm dinner."

The Lee girl laughed. "They've forgotten dinner. I think they desire only liquid nourishment." She pointed to sandwiches on the porch and Obo out of these.

"She's crazy about him too," Cintra said bitterly. "She pretends it's Nash. But she's along, too, because Royal came."

Julia was about to reply when she was startled by a noise below them on the path. Turning, she saw two of the yacht's crew coming up the path holding Tom Payson firmly between them. As they brought him onto the porch and shoved him through the open doorway of the lodge her eyes met Payson's for one brief second.

She caught his unspoken warning not to recognize him before the others.

Paducah Defeats Estelline Quint

Special to The Democrat

ESTELLINE, Jan. 27.—In a return game with the Paducah Dragons, the Estelline Bear Cubs were defeated 27-24. After winning one game from the Paducah team, the Cubs were slipped up on Thursday night when the Dragons overpowered the Cubs by three points.

Although the Cubs trailed the entire game, the score was close all the way; and the game was interesting throughout. The score at the half was 16-14.

Edmonson led the Estelline team in scoring. The cubs played a good defensive game but were not powerful enough to hold down the Dragons. The Paducah five showed some fast breaks and sure passes, which were responsible for the victory.

Texas Towns Will Get Special Days

Memphis will probably have an official day at the Texas Centennial. Every city and town in Texas with a population of more than 2,500 people will have the opportunity of naming its own date for a special day at the Centennial Exposition in Dallas, according to an announcement from General Manager W. A. Webb.

Each town is invited to arrange a special program either with band, orchestra or other entertainment talent. Radio facilities will be provided them at the exposition. An auditorium will be built for these broadcasts and the special-day entertainments and programs.

Special days are also being planned for sections of the state, according to the regional Chamber of Commerce groupings.

GOVERNOR SAYS NO SESSION TO BE CALLED NOW

Silent on Probable Special Session Call in February

By Associated Press

AUSTIN, Jan. 27.—Governor Allred this morning said that there would be no special session of the legislature immediately. He stated "if it becomes necessary to call a special session later, I shall do so."

The governor said it was not good business to call the legislature to consider the raising of old-age pension money until the pension organization had been completed.

The governor declined to say that he might call a special session between February 14, when the pension law becomes effective, and the elections next summer and fall.

He said special sessions were costly and that no taxpayer wanted one if it could be avoided.
