LARGE AREA IN DARKNESS AS PLANTS CLOSED

Parts of New Mexico and Texas Without Electric Service

By Associated Press
 EL PASO, Feb. 27.—Electrical power from Las Cruces, New Mexico, to Tornillo, Texas, embracing an area of 100 miles, including El Paso, was shut down today when several hundred power workers went on strike for the second time in a year. El Paso was plunged into darkness when the power went off at 10 a. m., with all electrical devices stopped. Hospitals and schools suffered, as pickets paced the front of the two power plants. The police broadcasting station was silenced and street railway service halted where they happened. The electrical union charges that the electric company had broken an agreement with the workers. WPA ELIGIBLES BEING SOUGHT

Those Moving Urged to Register New Address With NRS
 Addresses of "lost" persons eligible for Works Progress Administration job assignments were being sought by WPA officials today. A number of persons who have changed their places of residence since January 1 are now unavailable for assignment because their whereabouts are unknown. Miss Helene Ziegenhals, assistant supervisor of employment, Lubbock, explained. Letters to these persons have been returned to the Lubbock office when postal authorities were unable to make deliveries for lack of forwarding addresses. Eligible persons who have moved their residences should register with the National Reemployment Service and make their present addresses known so that they may be available for assignment when positions are opened on WPA projects in their

Tractor Sub Seeks Gold in Sea

In the newest device for treasure-hunting, a baby submarine tractor, shown upper photo, Halley Hamlin, young salvage expert, is crawling on the ocean floor off Angel Island, in San Francisco Bay, seeking the hulk of the steamer, H. J. Cochran, which sank in 1913 with more than $100,000 in gold bullion and pig lead aboard. Hamlin's own invention, the tiny "sub," 8 feet long by 20 inches in inside diameter, is shown below aboard the surface tender, Mae, which supplies power for its two motors. Equipped with powerful searchlight and telephone for contact with the tender above, the tractor will operate at a depth of 600 feet, Hamlin claims.

Spring In Air

The wonderful spring weather which has been prevailing the past few days has set local merchants to scurrying about, unpacking their new, seasonable spring merchandise for the approval of Mr. and Mrs. Buyer. Stores and show-windows have put on gala attire of bright and attractive colors and fabrics which are a pleasure to the eye. Very little more winter weather is expected, and it is about time for you to lay aside your heavy garments and don the lighter ones. Glance over the offerings of our local merchants in this issue, and plan to do your buying early... and HERE.

No Clues to Others In Car When Man Was Knocked Out

Charges of robbery and misuse of automobile license plates were this morning filed against C. W. Ennis, now being held in jail here in connection with the robbery and slugging Sunday evening of Jesse Misenheimer, which occurred just west of the city. Misenheimer, who was picked up by three men in a car, slugged, robbed and then thrown out alongside the road, gave the officers a sufficiently clear description of the car and its driver that they were able to apprehend Ennis. Officers from the sheriff's department learned that Ennis, who had been living on the Clint Robertson place, near Lakeview, had left for Oklahoma Monday afternoon. Getting on his trail, they located him in Collingsworth County, where he had stopped at the home of his father-in-law. Sheriff Colvin and Deputy Turlington made the arrest and brought him to this city, where he was placed in jail, after being definitely identified as the driver of the car by Misenheimer. The latter also identified the car, a Whippet. In checking up on the car, the officers found that the plates on it had been issued for a Model T (Continued on Page 8)

Undertaker Rides in New Ambulance

First Passenger in His New Vehicle When Leg Broken

Weston Hodges, Memphis undertaker and proprietor of the Hodges Funeral Home, through a freak twist of fate yesterday became the first person to ride in his new ambulance as a patient. It happened thus: Hodges, accompanied by J. W. Slover, went to Oklahoma City Monday to purchase a new combination hearse and ambulance. After buying the funeral car, the Memphis men went to a hotel to get some rest. Hodges had had no sleep in two days. About dawn the next morning, Hodges had a "nightmare" and thought that the hotel was on fire. He hastily put on his trousers and shoes and ran down a fire escape leading to the street. The

CCC CAMP PLANS INDOOR GAMES

The CCC Camp will hold another series of indoor games this Sunday afternoon at the recreation hall at the camp, and citizens are invited to go down and compete for honors with the personnel of the camp. Games played will include checkers, dominoes, chess, forty-two, pitch, horseshoe pitching and croquet. It is planned to make this second of the series of games even more interesting than the one Sunday before last, and the citizens are urged to have their best players attend the events. The last series of games were very enjoyable, and both town men and camp members enjoyed them very much.

PROCESS OF LAW IS COSTLY

ONE of the handiest ways to kid yourself right now would be to suppose that the constitutionality of the vast TVA program has been settled just because the U. S. Supreme Court at last has spoken.

When you stop to review this decision and what went before it, you discover that a good many things still are up in the air; and you also get a look at one of the most cumbersome and inefficient devices of government which any great nation has ever put up with.

The TVA scheme was put through back in 1933. Under congressional authority, some almost incomprehensible far-reaching plans were drawn up. Great dams were started; whole towns were taken off the map; new towns were laid out; hundreds of people were moved from homes which their ancestors had occupied for scores of years.

THINGS had hardly begun to move before protests were heard. Men who had devoted their lives to a study of the law asserted that the whole business was unconstitutional, that the federal government was spending millions on a job which it had no right even to touch.

Lawsuits began fluttering through the air like falling leaves in October. One after another, they got into the courts; and in the course of time, the judicial machinery ground one of them all the way up to Washington.

So at last, nearly three years after the great project was started, the supreme court handed down its decision.

BUT did this action finally settle things? By no means. The supreme court expressly refused to pass judgment on the validity of the plan as a whole. It took one relatively small part of it and said that this one small part, if handled in such and such a way, was legal.

Concerning all the rest it did not commit itself. Presumably some new lawsuit, struggling up to the surface from the murky depths of some lower court will, some day hit the supreme court bench—and then we shall get a new ruling on some other small portion of the whole.

You could not easily think of a clumsier or more inefficient way of doing business. Three years of delay—then a ruling on only part of the whole project—and meanwhile millions are spent, great engineering works are completed, the map is radically altered, and no living man knows if it is being done according to Hoyle or not.

This is not to say that the supreme court should not pass judgment on acts of Congress. It is simply to point out that everything would be much better if the court could render advisory opinions before legislation is finally passed.

Let the constitutionality of a measure be determined before, not after, the millions are spent.

Lots of beer electioneering on the streets the past day or so, and what a variety of views we've heard expressed.

One fellow says that if beer is legal it will decrease the consumption of hard liquor; another says there'll be more whiskey consumed.

One man said that if beer became legal, every place in the city that sold beer would sell whiskey. Boy, oh boy, if he knew what he

One man said that he didn't live in the Memphis precinct, and was not going to vote, because if the county went wet, he could always vote to make his precinct dry. Another said that he had never voted wet in his life and wasn't going to this time, precinct or no precinct.

But enough about beer. Let's get into something more dry.

Alman Kinaard plowing up his yard on South Ninth, and did he do a good job. He plowed up the yard, the walks on both sides of his house, and for a time we feared for the streets, but he stopped when he hit the gravel.

A communication from "A Postal Clerk" reprimanding us very severely for our squib of a day or two ago about one of Uncle Sam's employees complaining about making out blanks for a customer. It seems that we're "all wet" and that the customer is supposed to make them out. After all, we shouldn't have jumped on the poor postal employees, being under Civil Service, with a holiday every time somebody has a birthday; they wouldn't have a thing to worry about if we'd let 'em alone.

Carl Nahn wearing a patent neck-tie yesterday. In case any of you wonder why it

Edward Bourland "beefing" because we failed to mention his name in our write-up of Friday's football scrimmage. "I go out, do my best, get hurt, and still you don't mention my name," he wailed.

Buster Helm tip the beam yesterday in his shirt sleeves at 185 pounds, up weight. He immediately began thinking about another reducing campaign. Charlie Gilpin, with a brand new hairwash, which, of course, is incidental, managed to tip the scales at upward of 100 pounds.

Mrs. Omer Johnsey parked in front of the post office yesterday. We asked her what she was waiting for, and she said she was just letting the car cool off, that she didn't want to have to put any water in the radiator.

County Judge Jim Vallance walk across the street from the court house the other day without his hat on. It is the first time in four years, he said.

Soil Conservation

Soil conservation is a vital part of the New Deal program, aimed at preventing the erosion of fertile lands and ensuring the long-term productivity of the soil.

The erosion is something fierce! The New Deal is the only way to save our soil. The New Farm Program is essential for the future of our nation. Soil conservation is not just a matter of agriculture; it is a matter of national security.

100 YEARS AGO TODAY

February 27, 1836

Governor Smith printed Travis' heroic message on handbills, appending thereto an appeal to the people of Texas, which read as follows:

"Fellow Citizens and Countrymen: The foregoing official communication from Col. Travis, now in command at Bexar, needs no comment. The garrison, composed of only one hundred and fifty Americans, engaged in deadly conflict with one thousand of the mercenary troops of the dictator, who are daily receiving reinforcements, should be sufficient call upon you without saying more. However secure, however fortunate our garrison may be, they have not the provisions nor ammunition to stand more than thirty days siege at farthest.

"I call upon you as an officer, I implore you as a man, to fly to the aid of your besieged countrymen and not permit them to be massacred by a mercenary foe. I slight none! The call is upon all who are able to bear arms, to rally without one moment's delay, or in fifteen days the heart of Texas will be the seat of war. This is not imaginary. The enemy, from six to eight thousand strong, are on our border and rapidly moving by forced marches for the colonies. The campaign has commenced. We must promptly meet the enemy or all will be lost. Do you possess honor? Suffer it not to be insulted or tarnished! Do you possess patriotism? Evince it by your bold, prompt and manly action! If you possess even humanity, you will rally without a moment's delay to the aid of your besieged countrymen."

Again from the diary of Col. Almonte, of the Mexican army: "Saturday, February 27, Lieutenant Menchard was sent with a party of men for corn, cattle and hogs, to the farms of Seguin and Flores. It was determined to cut off the water from the enemy on the side of the old mill. There was a little firing from either side during the day. The enemy worked hard all day to repair some intrenchments. In the afternoon the President was observed by the enemy and fired at. In the night a courier was dispatched to Mexico, informing the government of the taking of Bexar."

CRUISE TO NOWHERE

by Deck Morgan

© 1936 NEA Service, Inc.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

JANE WESTON feels her dreams have come true when she is out on a three weeks' ocean cruise, accepted in payment for the salary due her when the magazine for which she worked as typist suspended publication. On board the ship, she meets handsome DIRK STROM, expert jumper, as penniless as Jane. The trip was a gift to him from the parents of a child whose life he saved.

Dirk introduces Jane to his friend, SNOWSHOES, a detective. Others on board are: NORA LANE, famous actress and owner of the Kokinor diamond; healthy, eccentric MADAME FOREMUS; DUTCH LENZ and ANNIE JACKSON, blackmailers; TINO ROSSI, opera singer; BEN MARTIN and LINDA RAYES, floor show entertainers. Dirk and Jane spend much of their time together. Then a misunderstanding comes between them.

Dirk meets Nora Lane and escorts her to a cabaret entertainment in which the ship's passengers are to take part. Miss Lane appears on the program but Tino Rossi, with Jane, refuses to sing. Later Dirk overhears a romantic scene between Jane and Tino. TO GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XII

Jane did not go directly to the stateroom. She went to her stateroom to repair imaginary ravages to her face and hair, and Tino waited for her outside in the passageway. She looked in the mirror, and stood back in wonder. Her face had a glaucous tinge it had never owned before.

And how well that one evening Tino had served her on this cruise! She was glad that tomorrow they'd be on shore, and she could wear informal clothes. One didn't like to appear in the same dress, night after night, and this cruise had been a gay affair after another.

For a moment her thoughts drifted back to the chill fall winds in the city, back to her jobless state, and she banished these now, as easily as she powdered a shiny spot on her nose.

The Bahamas were right out there under that gorgeous moon! Jane had a romantic figure in tow. Tino didn't seem impatient when she came out to join him. Together they made their way into the Venetian Room.

Last night she had made a spectacular entry into this room, alone, after her quarrel with Dirk Strom. Tonight she felt keenly this moment of personal triumph. The steady wine of Tino's flattery and his flowery words had gone to her head!

They stopped at the bar, and Jane sat on a high stool where her reddish head glistened under the lights. At her side Tino made a distinguished appearance. The hostility the passengers had exhibited when Tino refused to sing at the ship's gala had vanished. The looks which people bestowed on the pair were again those of admiration. Their heads dominated the room.

To Jane it seemed that everyone had merely come on from the ballroom to the bar. Looking about the room she saw Dirk seated with Nora Lane and the detective at a corner table. They seemed quiet, subdued.

Dirk bowed to her slightly, and she nodded in return. It was the first friendly exchange they had passed since their quarrel last night.

Dirk had turned to Nora Lane again. He was afraid the actress had been aware of his distraction over the newcomers in the bar.

But Miss Lane was busily engaged in talk with Snowshoes. Dirk realized, a little ruefully, that the detective had monopolized most of her interest this evening. While she talked to Snowshoes, she had lost some of her tensed feeling about the ugly incident on deck that afternoon.

She was so receptive to every whit of the human comedy about her. She had suffered and lived tragedy. Snowshoes asked her about the Kokinor diamond and she smiled. At the same time she let a hand slip to her throat where the Kokinor usually nestled, and she seemed almost surprised not to discover it there. Dirk saw her flush.

"I was so distracted I forgot to wear it tonight," she said.

"I'd feel better," Snowshoes said, "if you'd hand it over to the ship's purser for the rest of this cruise."

Her returning smile was one of sincere gratitude. "It's nice to have you both think about my welfare. I have two friends on board," she said happily. "Tell me more about that fantastic numbers racket. I think that is the worst one of them all. It takes the pennies and dimes out of the pockets of housewives and school children. To think that a giant octopus racket has invaded our grocery stores. I thought the corner grocery was an inviolate

American institution—" "What can the grocer do?" the detective said unhappily. A finger-man comes around and says, 'We've picked you to sell numbers.' If he doesn't agree to sell, it's just too bad for him!"

"Why the mere thought of it makes me indignant!" she cried.

"If there were a few more indignant persons we could do something about it. But we Americans, since the Spanish-American War, seem to have lost the power of getting indignant over anything."

"It's outrageous!" the actress added. "We haven't outsmarted the mobs yet. The numbers racket gets (Continued on Page 6)

BE NOT DECEIVED

Saturday Feb. 29 the voters of Hall County have a chance to vote on the question of the legalization of beer. This election is called by the voters who want the legalization of beer in the county. This is part of the program of the whole nation to clear off the statutes which would hinder the sale of alcoholic liquors of any kind. Some of the county have voted in favor of the legalization of beer before but now the county will have a vote Saturday Feb. 29.

There are many honest people who have been misled by exaggerated promises of economic relief through beer. The number is becoming increasingly large since the nation has not been able to get out of the terrible economic grip that it was in. Conditions have improved in the nation but anyone that knows anything about the economic movement of the nation knows that this is not due to the alcohol that is sold and drunk. It is interesting to note the dairy industry. Ten wet years before the national dry law milk consumption of the nation increased 3 million gallons. In five dry years the increase was 1 billion 3 hundred million or an increase of four times as much as in five wet years. In the same dry years the butter consumption was times more than the same wet years. When the drinking of legal beer takes the place of coffee and in the dinner pail of the masses of the nation there will be a terrible drop in the dairy production of the farmer. The soft drink trade will be vitally affected. Is beer going to restore prosperity when it will reduce tax revenue on legitimate business? If people cannot buy bread and their taxes. How can they buy beer and pay taxes also? It has a great way of impoverishing the many while enriching a few. It is the greatest poverty producer of all times. The sale of beer and the drinking of it has increased our problem.

Legalized beer in Hall County would be a smoke screen for the sale of whiskey. We are told that it is being sold now and this is probably true but does anyone suppose that by legalizing it there would be any less sold and drunk? Those that are interested in the question are not interested in the decrease of the consumption of beer in the increase. The dry goods merchants are interested in selling their goods and more goods. If the argument that more beer should be sold under the system of legal restraint than under license then the same argument would hold good for the drygoods merchant. Then he would sell more goods to close his doors on the main street and rent him a dark room in a back alley and employ some secret men on the streets to induce the customers to sneak to his place of business and under cover purchase his goods. Men in the times of depression will grab at a straw but the beer straw will pull him into the water deeper.

For my part I do not see that any Christian man or woman can vote for or support for anything that will be against the program of the church and for the good of the homes of the community. And I do not see that any man, or woman could support any measure that would be for the social deterioration of the race and against the permanent happiness of the community. Beer will not better your community.

Again for my part I am for a closer check on the enforcement of the law against the bootlegging of the County. And I will be one that will personally support a stronger enforcement than we have in this county at the present time. Your vote against beer in this county at the polls Saturday Feb. 29 will help to call for a stronger sentiment in the direction of better law enforcement and an upturn in the moral affairs of the county.

Yours truly,
O. K. WEBB.

To Hall County Voters:

I would like to call the attention of the voters of Hall County to one feature of the beer election to be held in the county Saturday, which no doubt many have overlooked. That is the local option feature of the matter.

Just as I believe that no one state has a right to regulate the affairs of another state, or no one county to tell another county in the state how they shall conduct themselves in matters pertaining directly to the county—I believe that the principle should extend to the precincts within the county itself.

If any one precinct in this county believes that it is to the interest of the majority of its people to allow the legal sale of beer, I believe that the other precincts in the county should not put themselves in the light of dictating the actions of that precinct.

However, according to the provisions of the liquor laws of the state, a precinct cannot vote wet in a dry county, hence for a precinct which wants beer to get it, a county-wide approval must be given.

On the other hand, any precinct in a wet county can vote itself dry in a precinct election.

These provisions supply the means for granting any precinct which wants beer the right to have it, and at the same time gives the precincts which do not want it the means of remaining dry.

In the present election, for instance, precincts which desire to remain dry, but do not wish to put themselves in the light of dictating to the other precincts of the county, may vote to legalize beer in the county as a whole, and then call a precinct election to vote beer out of that particular precinct.

This is, I believe, the thing that should be done Saturday in the county-wide election.

The voter who does not desire legal beer in his precinct, but, at the same time, does not want to set himself up as a dictator as to what his neighbor in another precinct shall do or not do, should either vote for beer or remain away from the polls. Then, when an election is called for his particular precinct on the beer matter, go to the polls and vote his conviction.

In this way, he will have secured just what he wants in his own precinct, without dictating to his neighbors.

Believing in this principle, I take this manner of submitting it to the voters of the county for their serious consideration.

the little change, and now the jewel thieves are organized to take care of our zeal for hoarding precious jewels. You might be interested to know how carefully they work the whole country. A diamond merchant was forced off the road outside a small Mississippi town last week. They found his riddled body in a ditch. The haul in diamonds was forty thousand dollars. The old-time diamond salesman, amiable cuss, carried them around in a leather wallet, just as Diamond Jim Brady did. But that's all changed in the last six months. Jewel salesmen make the rounds in armored cars. Women won't wear their jewels outside the house. You'd think precious stones had become the only medium of exchange.

"To get the jewels which belong to the Sultan of Hyderabad," Dirk put in, smiling, "you would have to pass through dens of cobras, sabre-toothed tigers and fire."

Snowshoes scoffed. "One of our monocled jewel thieves would charm the cobras, make the tigers purr like pussy cats and put out the fire. They'd get the diamonds if they found the cave. They're clever."

"And you think we have them with us on this cruise?" Nora Lane smiled at him, as one always smiles at a man's pet alarm.

"Never can tell. You see them in Paris. You see them in Amsterdam. You see them most frequently in de luxe resort hotels, where the rich congregate and wear their jewels. I've seen hundreds of them in my career as a hotel detective. We caught one with the goods at Lake Placid last winter. He was posing as a Belgian count. He wormed his way into everybody's confidence, and on the night of the Carnival ball at the Lake Placid Club, when guests were in fancy costume and naturally did not wear their jewels, 50 people were robbed. A housemaid caught him in the fifty-first room and locked him in. When he tried to escape from a window he fell and broke his arm. We caught him."

Nora Lane said, "I will be more careful with my diamonds in the future. I didn't know jewel thieves were so prevalent. Why, a few years ago, you couldn't sell a diamond. They were drugs on the market."

"But not any more. People are jittery about gold and silver money today—unsettled conditions. Nothing seems safe to some people but a store of precious jewels."

"Persons in the public eyes are more subject to attack than others," the actress advised. "They are publicized. Everybody knows their personal habits, where they lived and alas! where they travel. I must admit I was rather unnerved by that photographer on deck this afternoon."

"You had a right to be!" Snowshoes put in. "Since the snatch racket fell under G-men blows, blackmailing has got its nose under the wire. Every yegg that thinks he has something on another person tries to put on the squeeze."

"I've been subject to extortion threats for a long time. My name is in the papers too much. This person—Mannie Jackson, as you call him—may have meant no harm. But I suppose I've become a little jittery on the subject. My nerves—"

"Snowshoes said laughingly, "You need a bodyguard, Miss Lane!"

Nora Lane looked at him and without hesitation said, "You're hired."

Snowshoes laughed out loud.

"No, no!" he said. "I'm on my first vacation in 20 years. I was only joking—"

She seemed terribly in earnest, and Dirk decided to take her side. At the thought of protection she seemed to be happier.

"I'd like to see you undertake that job, Snowshoes," Dirk said. "Really, I'm a little afraid about Miss Lane's safety myself. Maybe I've got the jitters, too, but—"

"Oh, please do!" she added. "I'm sure you wouldn't leave me with this feeling now. I do believe I am in danger. Every instinct in me warns—"

Snowshoes was weakening. He was old-fashioned enough to be moved by the thought of a lady in distress. "I'm not getting any rest, anyway," he said. "Gamblers. Tough-looking customers all around."

Dirk laughed heartily.

"I am a woman of experience," Nora Lane went on. "I've had a bodyguard before, and I am prepared to discuss the business end of it. I would be grateful to you if you'd undertake the job, and I'd like to quote your fee—three hundred dollars for the duration of this cruise."

LET KIDNEYS FLUSH OUT 3 LBS. A DAY

Clean Out 15 Miles of Kidney Tubes

Nature put over 15 miles of tiny tubes and filters in your kidneys to strain the waste matter out of the blood. Kidneys should pass 3 pints a day and so get rid of more than 3 pounds of waste matter.

When the passing of water is scanty, with smarting and burning, the 15 miles of kidney tubes may need flushing out. This danger signal may be the beginning of nagging backache, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes and dizziness.

If kidneys don't empty 3 pints a day and so get rid of more than 3 pounds of waste matter, your body may take up some of these poisons causing serious trouble. Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, which have been used successfully by millions of people for over 40 years. They give happy relief and help the kidneys to flush out 3 pounds a day. Insist on Doan's Pills.

Announces District Judge

R. H. Cocke of Wellington announced his candidacy for the office of district judge of the judicial district, subject to the action of the Democratic primary in July.

Cocke is well known in the district, having presided over the court there several times during the past two years. In making the announcement, he said: "I am not unmindful of the responsibilities connected with the office, or of the honor of being elected in whom the citizenship expects a prompt disposition of matters before the court,—this not to save expenses and conduct the court in an orderly and businesslike manner, but that justice be done in all matters before the court."

Here For 46 Years Born in Texas, I have resided in Clarendon County for 45 years, practicing law since 1907, having graduated from Clark College and Cumberland University. I served as county attorney and county judge, and have considerable experience as a judge. Many citizens of Clarendon County, of Hall County, of Wilkes County, and of Collingsworth County have had opportunity to observe my manner of holding and presiding as district judge. And as I have practiced law in the courts of all the counties of the district, most of you have had opportunity to know the character of man I am, and likewise, having, as a boy freighted to Memphis and Childress, and as a young man having attended School in Clarendon for four years, every citizen of the district can, if desired, learn of my life from boyhood to this date. I am now 52 years of age.

Those who have offered for this office to this date are my friends, and will be when this campaign is over for the reason that this office, honorable though it is,—if held with honor—is not to me worth the sacrifice of friendships.

"Courts should be tribunals of justice, and, without delay, where every human and property right is settled with fairness and in accordance with the law which fixes our relations each with the other, and with the commonwealth, and this justice should be had with the most possible dispatch, and with economy. It is my firm belief that when you have elected me your district judge, the court will be able to make such a record for fairness, economy and prompt dispatch of business, that you will feel with me, THAT THE HONOR OF BEING YOUR OFFICER LIES IN DOING WELL THE DUTIES IMPOSED. For to me there would be no honor in being your judge unless therein I could be such an officer as will do well the duties of such position.

"I most deeply appreciate the many friends over the district who, believing in me, have expressed their wish that I should offer for this office, and to all alike I hope for your thoughtful consideration, and then your active support, and will endeavor to see you personally, that you may know the manner of man I am to offer for this important and honorable office."

CAR WRECKED

A Model A Ford, driven by a man named Burnett, whose identity we have been unable to learn, was wrecked at Tenth and No. 1 last night about midnight. The driver stated that, in avoiding the car in front of him, which went out of control when it struck the dip in the pavement there, his car hit the curb and tore down a highway marker. Both front wheels were torn from the car and the front badly damaged.

fire escape terminated about 15 feet above the sidewalk. The Memphis man swung down a ventilation pipe and fell to the paving where he sustained a broken leg.

He was rushed to a hospital in an emergency ambulance, where it developed that both bones of his right leg were broken just above the ankle. The ankle had been broken several times before. The leg was placed in a cast, and Hodges received his dismissal from the hospital.

Slover brought the injured Memphis man to his home last night, where he is resting fairly easy today.

The new funeral car—it is a combination ambulance-hearse and is a big, black Studebaker. The lining and upholstery is of red mohair. The car is commodious, has a pleasing appearance and is said to be one of the best in this section.
