Twenty-Five Years of Organized Work

By Phebe K. Warner

The men of the world have been working in organized groups for centuries. Every government, every great business, every great institution such as the church, the school and the State is the result of the work of organized men. But not until a little more than fifty years ago did the women of our country dream of such an institution as an organization of women. Until that day every woman lived her life alone. Some women were greater in their ideas of things than others and as a result of their own power and then would make their life count for something more than a mere unit of society. Sometimes she would back the discoverer of a great nation as Queen Isabelle in 1492. Sometimes she would take her dreams of things and her ambitions into a book and give them for posterity. But what she did she did alone so far as any other woman was concerned. It was not until about fifty-three years ago that a few women got together in New York City and decided to pool their strength and their ambitions and organize a body of women for the purpose of working together for the promotion of the interests of themselves and other women. Great and glorious thought! Since that day the women's clubs of America and the rest of the world have been organized and set to work. All the women's church societies and mission societies both Home and Foreign have been created. The W. C. T. U., National Congress of Mothers, the General Federation of Women's Clubs and all the State and national organizations of women have come into being during the past fifty years. It is little less than marvelous what man has done for himself and for others since she discovered herself and her latent powers in the latter part of the nineteenth century. It has been said "The greatest discovery of the nineteenth century was the discovery of 'Woman' by herself." It took the spirit of the woman's club just twenty-five years to travel from that first meeting and that first group of women in New York City to the first meeting of the Texas Federation of Women's Clubs at Waco, Texas, in May, 1897. At that time only one woman's club had been organized in Texas and had grown in spirit and interest until they felt the need of a State organization to bring them together and hold them together. If a group of women could accomplish more working together than its individual members could accomplish each working alone, then they should not a group of clubs accomplish more working together than they could all accomplish working alone. That was the theory and it proved true.

At the first meeting of the Women's Clubs of Texas they builded better than they knew. Not one of those women realized what a great institution they were creating. Not one of them realized how their field for usefulness would expand the first quarter of a century of their work. At that time they had little idea of swaying political elections, and leading the national movements of their State in their day.

It was that only twenty-five years ago. Two weeks ago, November 7-10 this same organization met in Houston, Texas to celebrate its Silver Jubilee; to review and invoice twenty-five years of work and achievement and to dream dreams and make plans for the next quarter of a century. With the strength and working system of the Texas Federation of Women's Clubs as it has been developed up to the present time who dares to dream what they will accomplish in the next twenty-five years?

Twenty-five years ago there were twenty-one clubs with a membership of a few hundred women. Today there are more than 500 clubs with a membership of nearly 50,000 women all working and pulling together for the good of Texas. In his address to the delegates and visitors attending the Silver Jubilee dinner in the ball room of the Rice Hotel, Governor Neff said: "If I had a State Legislature that would work for the good of Texas as this State Federation is working, we could have anything and everything we need in Texas for the good of all its people."

During the past year the Federation has enjoyed its greatest growth. During the year just ended 108 new clubs have been received into the State organization representing several thousand new members. This was an increase in the 25th year of twenty-five per cent of all the other twenty-four years. This wonderful growth was not because the club extension chairmen were more active than their predecessors but because the club movement is gaining such momentum that women no longer have to be urged and argued into the clubs but the women are seeking the clubs and writing for information to organize clubs in their home communities and thus become an active part of this great university for women.

Twenty-five years ago the prime purpose of the club was personal development. Today the work of the club represents every interest of the home, the school, the community and the State that affects the well being of women and children and the progress of mankind. Art, music, literature, Americanization, moving picture censorship, scholarships and loan funds for deserving Texas boys and girls, kindergartens, library extension, public health, child welfare, thrift, rural life, home economics, parks and playgrounds, prison reform, the protection of our delinquent children, industrial conditions of women and children, these are some of departments of work carried on by the State Federation for the good of the State at large, while the local work of individual clubs is too numerous to mention.

It has taken the spirit of the woman's club just twenty-five years to reach the women of our cities and towns. It is our wish that during the next twenty-five years the spirit of the Sisterhood of Women will penetrate into the open country until the last school district in the State of Texas will have it an organization of women to do the many little things that make for a better community. As a member of the State Federation it is our greatest desire to see the county and not the city only become the unit of activity in the State Federation, for by no other way can the State become a real unbroken democracy of women.

Sixty-nine per cent of our people live in the country. 800,000 of our State's children go to school in the country. The source of Texas' wealth is her soil, and its combined production must depend on the children of the soil. Where, then should our greatest work be? The greatest work and the greatest possibilities of the woman's club have not yet been touched. Education was the keynote of the Houston convention. "Equal education for all the children of the State" should be the keynote of the Texas Federation for the next twenty-five years. Texas should have a million club women in twenty-five years from now. Let's go!

In the alleged transfer of 80,000 gallons of alcohol by Louis and Abraham Auerbach, and others, of Cleveland, more than $15,000,000 changed hands in a little more than a year. The Auerbach brothers, Abraham Limbert, Morris Moss, Samuel Selker and Moritz Cohen entered pleas of not guilty to indictments charging them with a conspiracy to evade the prohibition laws. The government alleges the defendants withdrew 80,000 gallons of grain alcohol on Federal permits paying about $6 a gallon on the ground they were using it in toilet preparations. It is alleged they sold it to bootleggers for $26 a gallon. The bootleggers, it is said, then diluted it one gallon to three, colored and flavored it and sold it for $64 a gallon.

Notice to Contractors.

Bids will be received at the office of the County Judge, Hall County, Memphis, Texas, until 1:00 p. m. Monday, December 4th, for the erection and completion of a fire proof courthouse building; including the plumbing, heating and wiring, which will be let separately from the general contract.

Each bid is to be accompanied by a certified check for 3 per cent of the amount of the bid and is to be made payable to W. A. McIntosh, County Judge. This check is put up as a guarantee that the contractor will make bond and enter into contract should any of the work be awarded him.

For Plans and Specifications apply to C. H. Page & Brother, Architects, Austin, Texas.

The contract for the sale and removal of the old building will be let on the above named date.

The usual right is reserved to reject any and all bids.

SAD FATE OF HENRY JASON

Subject Condition of Harpepedd Mac Band, Example of the Loss of Personal Property.

Henry Jason, the noted harpepedd band leader, is another example of what the loss of personal property can do to a man. When the harpepedd of our constitution passed the law relating to matrimony they forever put the shackles on Henry Jason. Henry's new love came when Paula Strong led him to the altar and the justice of the peace tied the fatal knot. He has tasted no terrors of Henry's kind, Bert Walker writes in the Topical Capital. But Henry has not the strong and forceful character of Old Bill Shattles, so he submits without a struggle. He tried shipping over and it put him in a hospital for two weeks. One day when Paula was away attending a meeting of the Advanced Thought club, which was very busy encouraging women, a long-haired leader left a pamphlet at the Jason kitchen door. Henry stopped long enough to read the front page. The first line read: "It is high time to administer a rebuke and to check the forces which are trying to overthrow our constitutional liberties and liberties." Just then Henry heard a step on the front porch. He thought it was Paula. He was at once stricken with palsy and fell in a dead faint. It was two hours before he came to and was able to burn the pamphlet. He was still shaking like an aspen leaf when Paula returned at midnight. Had Henry Jason not been dyed red of his personal property when a wrong man his name would have gone down on the page of history alongside those of John L. Bullard and Jack Comptey.

MEMPHIS HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

On the afternoon of November 15, 1932, the president called a class meeting of the Juniors, and they elected representatives, temporarily for the "most favored girl." The representatives were: Eva Reed, Agnes Swift, Louise Caviness and Irene Henry.

The class pits for the Juniors have been received. All the Juniors were wearing a smile Tuesday morning as that was the time set for having pictures made for the annual.

The Current Event Club had a very interesting program Tuesday morning. These programs are very helpful and the program committee are doing all they can to make them interesting.

Hubert Long is back in school after being absent for a week. The freemason class seems to be full of "japs" when the Thanksgiving football game is mentioned. They all seem ready to do their part.

"N. T. C." Tips

Since the last report the N. T. C. girls have had some exciting times. The first was one of the greatest social events of the season, given at the home of Pauline Goodnight, November 18, in honor of the Senior boys. The class reporter put it mild when he said that everyone had an elephant time. Pauline entertains admirably. The honey snubs and canny youths met on equal grounds, for once, and all were in favor of a good time which added greatly to the spirit of the party. The girls' efforts seemed to have been crowned with a glowing success.

Last Friday, November 17, the N. T. C. girls along with senior boys, celebrated senior "start day," to the enjoyment of the lower classes and a sort of detriment to study hall in general. Although we tried not to excite much, the teachers, even Mr. Vaughn, couldn't suppress a feeble smile, and on account of the latter's kindness, the friends were allowed to get out fifteen minutes early in order to take pictures for the annual. The N. T. C. girls intend to elect the "Favorite Girl," for the annual from their members. After taking the pictures, it was decided to go to town in our make-up, but for some unknown reason the boys declined to go. The girls went and had a dandy time. Candy and soda pop were enjoyed with the compliments of Spanglary Bakery, Neel Grocery Co. and Berry Grocery Co., and through the generosity of Elizabeth Wright. Automobile rides were also enjoyed as favors from Misses Frankie Johnson, Hazel Delaney and Leona McKay.

Elizabeth Kennedy was introduced as the "flower of the family" (Blowery idiot) and Mabelle Knox as Miss Sunkelshewer, who was declared to put look over twelve or thirteen. On telling people who stared at us in blank amazement, that we were N. T. C. girls, one person remarked that N. T. C. must stand for "No Tame Cats."

After all it was decided that "Senior Days," are "Jolly Days" and a good time is a senior's privilege.

High-Fifth Grade Notes

The high fifth grade organized their room into a society called the "High Climbers." It was decided to meet twice each month. The following officers were elected: Bessie Brewer, president. Bonnie Howell, vice-president.

Bonnie Woods, secretary. Ira Hayes, treasurer. D. E. Thomas, press reporter. Program committee: Claude "Ten-ton Harvest" and Jay Sale. Social committee: J. G. Gardner, Lora Reynolds and Clifford Moses.

If you want to dye or want any dyeing done, just call at Herod's Tailor Shop. We will quote you close prices. 25-2-4

Shells from heavy guns at Fort Sheridan ripped and tore through the exclusive section of Lake Forest, north shore suburb of Chicago, recently. Four shells struck the residence of Francis V. Farwell and others landed in the Cyrus H. McCormick estate. Terror-stricken servants ran screaming from the Farwell house when the bombardment began. The commander of Fort Sheridan rushed to the suburb of Lake Forest to make an apology on behalf of the United States Army. Investigations proved that some new recruits trained four one-pounders in the wrong direction and instead of shooting out over Lake Michigan the "rookies" bombarded the suburb.

Get the Facts about Your Eyes

The practice of optometry as it exists today may be said to date from the discovery that bad vision is not the only nor even the main symptom indicating the need of glasses. On the contrary, it has been found that keen vision often is associated with great ocular discomfort and with headaches, nausea and other distressing symptoms, due to a strained condition of the eyes, but admitting of unimpaired vision. Suitable lenses in such cases do not necessarily make the sight better—only more comfortable—but may add greatly to the endurance of the eyes.

An Irish joker entered a shop and asked for a yard of milk. The shopkeeper was ready for him; he dipped his finger in the measure and drew a line of milk three feet long on the counter. "There ye are," he said. Pat was rather taken aback at this, but recovering from his surprise he asked, "How much is it?" "Eight pence," said the shopkeeper. "All right," said Pat cheerfully. "Roll it up an' O'Flaherty take it."

SEX OF EGGS AND CHICKENS

Department of Agriculture Says There is No Dependable Method to Determine Sex.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
Raisers of poultry have long wished for a reliable means for determining the sex of chicks and of eggs to be used for hatching but, in spite of the promises of various manufacturers of devices, the United States Department of Agriculture says there is no very dependable method for determining the sex of chicken that a certain egg will produce, and that it is extremely difficult to determine the sex of chicks of most breeds.

Barred Plymouth Rock Cockerel.

The department has made tests of a number of devices claimed by the makers to give good results in sorting out male, female and infertile eggs. In all cases they have been found to be useless for the purpose, as two persons could never get the same result with a lot of eggs, and hatching tests showed that one could do just as well by closing his eyes and picking out the eggs at random.

On account of the difference in the color of the down of the sexes it is often possible to select with considerable accuracy the hens and cockerels of the Barred Plymouth Rock as soon as they are hatched, but in the case of most other breeds and varieties this selection cannot be made with any certainty until some time later. Those who know the breed well are able to distinguish between the sexes of Leghorns when they are three to four weeks old. The sexes of the medium-weight breeds, with the exception given above, have the same appearance until the chicks are 10 or 12 weeks old. The surface sex differences in the Asiatic breeds are not as apparent until the birds are three or four months old.

GREAT IMPORTANCE OF OATS

The importance of oats in the poultry nation cannot be overlooked. It forms the backbone in many rations. It is chiefly important in the growing ration for young chicks, for it will grow frame and muscle more economically than any other grain. Steel-cut oats, rolled oats, or growing mash—having ground oats or oatmeal as a base are exceptionally economical feeds for growing stock. Fed in conjunction with buttermilk, it makes the best growing ration now known. Of course, a grain mixture should be fed for variety.

DOULTRY NOTES

- Confine the hen until the chicks are weaned.
- The busy hen is the one that lays the most eggs.
- Chicks should not receive feed until they are 36 hours old.
- The baby chick will not stand chilling. It must have access to heat whenever it desires.
- Toe-mark the chicks as soon as they are hatched. This enables one to tell their ages later.
- Disease control and sanitation are among the most important things in poultry management.
- Chicks chilled at some time early in their development keep dropping off even after attaining considerable size.
- The coop for hen and chicks should be well ventilated, easy to clean and of sufficient proportions to insure comfort.
- The cockerel that can be marketed as a broiler in March or April brings more money than the one marketed in June.
- In cold weather ten to thirteen chicks are sufficient for one hen, while in warmer weather fifteen to twenty

BEAR AND BEAVER

Billy Bear waved his head and sang this song:
"There was a young bear in the zoo—
"Who said, 'I'm disgusted it's true.
"Just because I'm a bear,
"And because I've four legs and not two."
Then Benjamin Beaver who was not far off in his zoo home sang this song:
"There was a young beaver and he'd work with a zest,
"But he knew as well how to rest.
"He'd work and he'd work,
"Not a task would he shirk,
"But when he was through,
"He was through, through, through."

Billy Bear waved his head in the direction of Benjamin Beaver's home and he said:
"That was a good song, Benjamin. There was some sense to what you said and it rhymed quite nicely."
"That was a good song, Billy Bear. I'm glad it pleased you. I liked your poem. I thought it was fine, and it had a lot of sense, too, because it is foolish for people to think it's any more queer to have four legs than to have two. That showed thought on your part, Billy, to work that out, and there was nothing the matter with your rhyme."

"Thank You, Billy."

"If the rest of the world thought as we did of ourselves and of each other we might be considered fine poets," Billy growled cheerfully.
"But the trouble is we're not," said Benjamin.
"Oh well," said Billy, "even if we can't be fine poets we have lots of fun with our rhymes. And then, too, we wouldn't want to be the whole world."
"Just suppose we were even a good part of the world. That would be awkward."
"Why, part of us might want to be in Asia and part in Africa and part in America."
"That would be awkward," said Benjamin. "It is just as well we are as we are."
"But you know," Benjamin continued, "that people think beavers do nothing but work. They speak of being as busy as a beaver."
"There is a saying that goes like that and a sensible saying it is in a way. There is no creature who can work so hard and well and thoroughly and completely and with so much thought and care and skill as a beaver. That is my beaver opinion, at any rate."
"But we don't work all the time. We go off on vacations in the summer time. We go a-visiting other beaver colonies."
"We know how to stop after our work is done and think and enjoy the good, fresh air and the sweet beaver thoughts that we have."
"Ah, it is nice to be a beaver and to work and to rest both with equal skill and enjoyment."
"We build fine houses for ourselves like mounds with various entrances to our rooms and tunnels and store rooms and canals and food basins."
"This, of course, is all when we're free. Yes, we do very well indeed."
"But here in the zoo it is somewhat different. Yet I keep busy. And I rest, too, and I don't bother to chatter or talk much. This is unusual of me to chat so much."
"Yes," said Billy Bear, "you're not much of a talker, Benjamin."
"Well, I am more of a sociable creature. The keeper and I are very friendly. He calls me his little Brown Bear pet."
"He loves me, he says, and I love him."
"He gives me a nice loaf of bread every afternoon. And it is so good. I get hungry about four in the afternoon and I like a little refreshment, and just as I am thinking of my refreshment I receive the loaf of bread."
"I always thank him, of course. I would not be rude like the Polar Bears, who grab what they can get, but who never have a growl of thanks to give."
"For I think it is good of the keeper. And I like to tell him so."
"And he likes to have me thank him for he tells all the visitors to the zoo how I never fail to thank him for my food, especially for my afternoon loaf of bread."
"Well, well, here he comes now! And I'm just beginning to feel very much like it, too!"

The Reason for It.
"Mother, why does the stream seem to be laughing along on its way?"
"The phunnel has just been fixed."

It is said that Governor Cox, of Ohio, went about the gardens of the Tuilleries in Paris in the cool of the evening with an interpreter, sounding the man-in-the-street for his views on the League of Nations.

An oil-well shooter narrowly escaped death near St. Marys, West Virginia, recently, when a charge of nitroglycerine exploded in a well while he was preparing to lower another shot. When the first shot went off the shooter covered the can of shot number two with his body, lying on the ground. He was covered with a shower of small rocks but the nitro under his body did not explode. The derrick was wrecked and a masthead from the rig fell close to a wagon which contained 60 quarts of nitro. It is believed a stone caused the shell to go off as the well had not been cased.

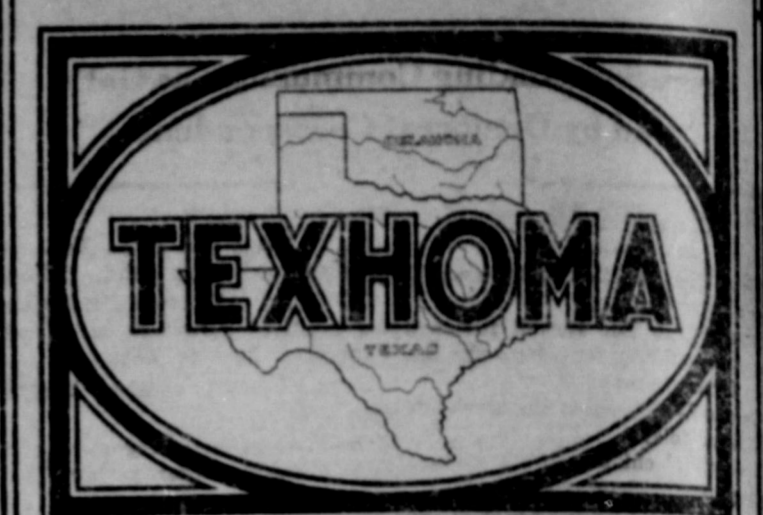

Frequent Headaches

"I suffered with chronic constipation that would bring on very severe headaches," says Mrs. Stephen H. Kincaid, of R. F. D. 1, Cripple Creek, Va. "I tried different medicines and did not get relief. The headaches became very frequent. I heard of and took it for a headache, and the relief was very quick, and it was so long before I had another headache. Now I just keep the Black-Draught, and I don't let myself get in that condition."

Theford's Black-Draught (purely vegetable) has been found to relieve constipation, and by stimulating the action of the liver, when it is torpid, helps to drive many poisons out of your system. Biliousness, indigestion, headache, and similar troubles are often relieved in this way. It is the natural way. Be natural! Try Black-Draught.

SPECIAL-SIX TOURING $1275

Studebaker

At its new low price of $1275 the Studebaker Special-Six Touring Car maintains Studebaker ideals of quality and performance, with added features that make it even a greater value than before.

It is known for its striking beauty just as it is for its thorough dependability. Luxurious comfort is assured by the nine-inch seat cushions of genuine leather and the long semi-elliptic springs, front and rear.

Power, flexibility and ease of handling are combined to make the Special-Six the most highly regarded five-passenger car on the market.

By manufacturing complete motors, transmissions, bodies, tops, castings, forgings and stampings, middlemen's profits on such items are eliminated and one profit only is included in Studebaker prices. Highest standards of workmanship are maintained and materials are the finest the market affords.

In the Special-Six Touring Car you will find such value and satisfaction as only Studebaker can offer.

The name Studebaker is your assurance of satisfaction.

SYNOPSIS

PROLOGUE—Motoring through Arizona, a party of caterers, father and daughter and a male companion, stop to make a cattle round up. The girl leaves her car and is attacked by a wild steer. She escapes by riding on the part of the cowboy's saddle.

CHAPTER I—Clay Lindsay, range-rider at an Arizona ranch, announces his intention to visit the "big town," New York.

CHAPTER II—On his first day in New York, Lindsay is splashed with water by a woman. He is introduced to "Kitty M." by a friend. He meets her father, Colin Whitford, and she is introduced to him. He is introduced to her father, Colin Whitford, and she is introduced to him.

CHAPTER III—Lindsay is introduced to a woman by her father, Colin Whitford, and she is introduced to him. He is introduced to her father, Colin Whitford, and she is introduced to him.

CHAPTER IV—Clay's "rescue" is introduced to a woman by her father, Colin Whitford, and she is introduced to him. He is introduced to her father, Colin Whitford, and she is introduced to him.

CHAPTER V—Kitty is introduced to a woman by her father, Colin Whitford, and she is introduced to him. He is introduced to her father, Colin Whitford, and she is introduced to him.

CHAPTER VI—Lindsay's acquaintance with Beatrice Whitford. Through her father, Colin Whitford, Lindsay is introduced to her. He is introduced to her father, Colin Whitford, and she is introduced to him.

outside my room half a sec, will you?"

The cattlemán waited in the darkness of the passage. If his enemies were trying to ambush him in the house next door the girl's plan might save him. He would have a chance at least to get them unexpectedly in the rear.

It could have been scarcely more than two minutes later that the young woman joined him. They padded softly along the corridor till they came to a flight of stairs running up. The girl led the way, taking the treads without noise in her stockings feet. Clay followed with the utmost caution.

She took him toward the rear to a ladder which ended at a dormer half-door leading to the roof. Clay fumbled with his fingers, found a hook, unfastened it, and pushed open the trap. He looked up into a starlit night and a moment later stepped out upon the roof. Presently the slim figure of the girl stood beside him.

They moved across to a low wall, climbed it and came to the dormer door of the next house. Clay knelt and lifted it an inch or two very slowly. He lowered it again and rose.

"I'm a heap obliged to you, Miss," he said in a low voice. "You're a game little gentlemán."

She nodded. "My name is Annie Millikan."

"Mine is Clay Lindsay. I want to come and thank you proper some day."

"I take tickets at Heath's Palace of Wonders two blocks down," she whispered. "Look out for yourself. Don't let 'em get you. Give 'em a chance, and that gang would croak you sure. You will be careful, won't you?"

"I never threw down on myself yet."

The girl's flippancy broke out again. "Say, lemme know when the weddin' is and I'll send you a salad bowl!" she flashed at him snudly as he turned to go.

Clay was already busy with the door. Darkness engulfed him as he closed the trapdoor overhead. His exploring feet found each tread of the ladder with the utmost caution. Near the foot of it he stopped to listen for any sound that might serve to guide him. None came. The passage was as noiseless as it was dark.

Again he had that sense of cold fingertips making a keyboard of his spine. But he trod down the panic and set his will to carry on. He crept forward along the passage. Every step or two he stopped to listen. Nerves keyed to an acute tension.

A slight of stairs brought him to what he knew must be the second floor. To him there floated a murmur of sounds. He soft-footed it closer, reached the door, and dropped noiselessly to a knee. A key was in the lock on the outside. With infinite precaution against rattling he turned it, slid it out, and dropped it in his coat pocket. His eye fastened to the opening.

Three men were sitting round a table. They were making a bluff at playing cards, but their attention was focused on a door that evidently led into another room. Two automatic revolvers were on the table close to the hands of their owners. A blackjack lay in front of the third man. Clay recognized him as Gorilla Dave. The other two were strangers to him.

Something evil in the watchfulness of the three chilled momentarily his veins. These fellows were the gunmen of New York he had read about—paid assassins whose business it was to frame innocent men for the penitentiary or kill them in cold blood. They were of the underworld, without conscience and without honor.

A soft step sounded in the corridor behind the man at the keyhole. He had not time to crawl away nor even to rise before a man stumbled against him.

Clay had one big advantage over his opponent. He had been given an instant of warning. His right arm went up around the neck of his foe and tightened there. His left hand turned the doorknob. Next moment the two men crashed into the room together, the Westerner rising to his feet as they came, with the body of the other lying across his back from hip to shoulder.

Gorilla Dave leaped to his feet. The other two gunmen, caught at disadvantage a few feet from the table, dived for their automatics. They were too late. Clay swung his body downward from the waist with a quick, strong jerk. The man on his back shot heels over head as though he had been buried from a catapult and crashed face up on the table, and dragged it over with him in his forward plunge to the wall.

Before any one else could move or speak, Lindsay's gun was out.

"Easy now," his voice was a gentle drawl that carried a menace. "Lemme be boss of the rodes a while. No, Gorilla! I wouldn't play with that chief if I was you. I'm sure he—on this gunstiff. Drop it!" The last two words came sharp and crisp, for the big thug had telegraphed an unintentional warning of his purpose to dive at the man behind the thirty-eight.

Gorilla Dave's fingers opened and the blackjack dropped from his hand to the floor.

"For the love o' Mike, who is this guy?" demanded one of the other men.

"I'm the fifth member of our little party," explained Clay.

"Wot 'ell do youse mean? And what's the big idea in most killin' the chief?"

The man who had been flung across the table turned over and groaned. Clay would have known that face among a thousand. It belonged to Jerry Durand.

"I came in at the wrong door and without announcin' myself," said the cattlemán, almost lazily, the unhurried indolence of his manner not shaken.

"You see I wanted to be on time so as not to keep you waitin'. I'm Clay Lindsay."

The more talkative of the gunmen from the East side flashed one look at the two automatics lying on the floor beside the overturned table. They might as well have been in Brazil for all the good they were to him.

"Move over to the other side of the room, Gorilla, and join yore two friends," suggested the master of ceremonies. "And don't make any mistake. If you do you won't have time to be sorry for it. I'll cert'ainly shoot to kill."

The big-shouldered thug shuffled over. Clay stepped sideways, watching the three gunmen every foot of the way, kicked the automatics into the open, and took possession of them. He felt safer with the revolvers in his coat pocket, for they had been within reach of Durand, and that member of the party was showing signs of a return to active interest in the proceedings.

"When I get you right I'll croak you. By G—d, I will," swore the gang leader savagely, nursing his battered head. "No big stiff from the bushes can run anything over on me."

"I believe you," retorted Clay easily. "That is, I believe you're tellin' me yore intentions straight. There's no news in that to write home about. But you'd better make that if instead of when. This is three cracks you've had at me and I'm still a right healthy rube."

"Don't bank on fool luck any more. I'll get you sure," cried Durand sourly.

The gorge of the Arizonan rose. "Melbessa. You're a dirty dog, Jerry Durand. From the beginning you were a rotten fighter—in the ring and out of it. You and yore strong-arm men! Do you think I'm afraid of you because you surround yoreself with dips and yeggmen and hopnuts, all scum of the gutter and filth of the earth? Where I come from men fight clean and out in the open. They'd stomp you out like a rattlesnake."

He whipped open the door, stepped out, closed it, and took the key from his pocket. A moment, and he had turned the lock.

From within there came a rush that shook the panels. Clay was already busy searching for Kitty. He tore open door after door, calling her loudly by name. Even in the darkness he could see that the rooms were empty of furniture.

There was a crash of splintering panels, the sound of a bursting lock. Almost as though it were an echo of it came a heavy pounding upon the street door. Clay guessed that the thirty minutes were up and that the Runt was bringing the police. He dived back into one of the empty rooms just in time to miss a rush of men pouring along the passage to the stairs.

Cut off from the street, Clay took to the roof again. It would not do for him to be caught in the house by the police. He climbed the ladder, pushed his way through the trapdoor opening, and breathed deeply of the night air.

But he had no time to lose. Already he could hear the tramping of feet up the stairs to the second story.

Lightly he vaulted the wall and against provokers of the night. He knew that at any moment now the police might appear in pursuit of him. There was no time to lose.

He crossed to the last house in the block—and found himself barred out. As he rose from his knees he heard the voices of men clambering through the scuttle to the roof. At the same time he saw that which brought him to instant action. It was a rope clothes-line which ran from post to post, dangling from one corner of the building to another and back to the opposite one.

No man in Manhattan's millions knew the value of a rope or could handle one more expertly than this cattlemán. His knife was open before he had reached the nearest post. One strong slash of the blade severed it. In six long strides he was at the second post unwinding the line. He used his knife a second time at the third post.

With deft motions Clay worked swiftly. He was fastening the rope to the chimney of the house. Every instant he expected to hear a voice raised in excited discovery of him crouched in the shadows. But his fingers were as sure and as steady as though he had minutes before him instead of seconds.

"There's the guy—over by the chimney."

Clay threw the slack of the line from the roof. He had no time to test the strength of the rope nor its length. As the police rushed him he slid over the edge and began to lower himself hand under hand.

The wide eaves protected him. A man would have to hang out from the wall above the ledge to see him.

Clay's eyes were on the gutter above while he jerked his way down a foot at a time. A face and part of a body swung out into sight.

"We've got yuh. Come back, or I'll shoot," a voice called down.

A revolver showed against the black sky.

The man from Arizona did not answer and did not stop. He knew that shooting from above is an art that few men have acquiret.

A bullet sang past his ear just as he swung in and crouched on the windowsill. Another one hit the bricks close to his head.

The fring stopped. A pair of uniformed legs appeared dangling from the eaves. A body and a head followed these. They began to descend jerkily.

Clay took a turn at the gun-play. He fired his revolver into the air. The spasmodic jerking of the blue legs abruptly ceased.

"Yuh'd better give up quietly. We're bound to get yuh," an officer shouted from the roof by way of parley.

The cattlemán did not answer except by the smashing of glass. He had forced his way into two houses within the past hour. He was now busy breaking into a third. The window had not yielded to pressure. Therefore he was knocking out the glass with the butt of his revolver.

He crawled through the opening just as some one sat up in bed with a frightened exclamation.

"Who-is-it—s-s-it?" a masculine voice asked, teeth chattering.

Clay had no time to gratify idle curiosity. He ran through the room, reached the head of the stairs and went down on the banister to the first floor. He fled back to the rear of the house and stole out by the kitchen door.

The darkness of the alley swallowed him, but he could still hear the shouts of the men on the roof and answering ones from new arrivals below.

Five minutes later he was on board a street car. He was not at all particular as to its destination. He wanted to be anywhere but here. This neighborhood was getting entirely too active for him.

Certain sections of Big Business are beginning a campaign for the abandonment of immigration restrictions, alleging a threatened shortage of common labor. The inconsistency of this with high tariff legislation to keep out the product of European labor is so apparent that a mere allusion should be sufficient. It is the paradox of economics that Big Business claims to champion the American wage-earner by excluding the products of foreign factories, while bringing into direct competition here the foreign labor itself. It is equally paradoxical to expect to maintain an American wage level, with the foreign market closed or partially closed in retaliation.

But the plan is neither paradoxical nor inconsistent, when the motive is realized. Big Business seeks cheap labor, not only to gain larger profits, but to hold the threat of unemployment over American workmen. Nothing so subdues a worker as an army of job-hunters hungry for his place. So the emergency Congress is to be called upon to open wide the gates, not to actual immigrants desirous to make homes and become citizens, but to hordes of every class who cross the ocean only to gather together what seems to them a fortune, with which some day to return to the homeland and a life of ease they could never wrest from home employment.

They will endure privations here for a time to amass the means of enjoying the future. Many will be disappointed, for the lure is a false one; many will become, if not already recruits to the ranks of the lawless; many will return despondent; while our own labor will be degraded. But if Big Business wins, the transatlantic liners will be crowded, and unscrupulous immigration agents will reap a large harvest.

The process is simple, but sure, as experience of the past teaches.—Dearborn Independent.

A negro boy 13 years old is to be electrocuted in Oklahoma, November 17. The boy murdered a white woman because his brother-in-law had promised him a pig to do it. The brother-in-law was convicted of complicity in the murder and given a life sentence. The 13-year-old boy is held in the Oklahoma penitentiary at McAlester, according to a dispatch.

The center of Negro population of the United States has moved northeast. It is now located in the extreme northwestern corner of Georgia; approximately 9.94 miles farther east, and 19.4 miles farther north in 1920 than in 1910. Former movements have been southwesterly.

Dr. Adolf Lorenz, the famous orthopedic surgeon, has returned to this country to continue his charity work among cripples and to introduce a new bloodless operation claimed to relieve the sufferings of hitherto hopeless cases.

Ex-Premier Clemenceau was at one time a librarian in New York City.

"If my colleagues in the United States Senate could have seen me in my kitchen the morning after I was appointed Senator, hunting my old apron to put on before preparing my own breakfast, undoubtedly they would have exclaimed, 'What are we coming to?'" Thus spake Mrs. William H. Felton, first woman member of the Senate in a recent interview. "The call of the age is for partnership in the family, in the church, in state and national affairs, between men and women. It is not myself," she said, speaking of her appointment, "it is the recognition of womanhood and what it will mean to the incoming generations."

A special residence tax for foreigners has been fixed by the Thuringian government, according to reports from Weimar, Germany. Americans will have to pay from $2 to $50, according to the length of their stay. Residence of more than three days will cost from $2 to $4; for a month, from $4 to $10; for more than six months, from $30 to $50. Other foreigners are to be taxed in proportion.

Coal is being salvaged from the ocean bottom off the coast near Narragansett Bay. It is believed that between 5,000 and 6,000 tons will be raised to relieve the coal shortage in Newport, Rhode Island. Twelve coal barges have been found, some of them sunk 12 years ago, in water ranging from 100 to 155 feet in depth. A steam lighter equipped with a dredging bucket is the equipment used.

Card of Thanks.

We wish to thank all the kind friends who gave of their services and heartfelt sympathy in the loss of our Dear One. Friends are earth's richest blessings.

Mrs. Lizzie Beard, wife, and daughters, Annalee and Lorena, Clovis New Mexico.

Mrs. Jim McKinney, mother, McKinney, Texas.

Brother, Elmer Beard, Mexia Texas.

Sisters, Mrs. E. T. England, McKinney, Texas and Mrs. Artie Flesher, Greenville Texas.

Notice of Constable's Sale. (Personal Property) By virtue of an order of sale issued out of the Justice Court, Precinct No. 1, Hall County, State of Texas, by A. C. Hoffman, Justice of the Peace for said Precinct, on a judgement rendered in said Court on the 3rd day of June, A. D. 1922, and directed and delivered to me as Constable of Precinct No. 1, Hall County, Texas, I have levied upon and will offer for sale on the 27th day of November, A. D. 1922, between the hours prescribed by law, at public auction to the highest bidder, for cash in hand, at Memphis, Hall County, Texas, the following personal property, to wit: Two bay horses about 16 1/2 hands high and about 9 years old each.

The above property is levied upon as the property of J. S. Farkner and will be sold to satisfy a judgement foreclosing mortgage in the Justice Court of Hall County, in favor of R. A. Schastag against the said J. S. Farkner, for the sum of $130.45, principal with interest at the rate of 10 per cent, per annum from the 3rd day of June, 1922 and the further sum of $3.95, costs, and all costs accruing by virtue of said act.

Witness my hand, this 15th day of November, A. D. 1922.

A. E. THOMAS
Constable, Precinct No. 1
Hall County, Texas.
