Brush Fire Ravages Vast Coast Area

Flames topped by immense billows of smoke licked down mountainsides and through canyons, as pictured here at Carrell canyon, to drive back fire fighters and take toll of more than $7,000,000 in California's latest devastating brush fires. A 150-square mile area was damaged, the series of fires at one time extending from San Juan Capistrano, 60 miles south of Los Angeles, to Malibu Beach, 25 miles north. Homes of a number of movie notables were among the buildings in the path of the conflagration. More than 2000 men fought the flames, which destroyed crops, killed livestock burned out powerless, and blackened thousands of acres of woodland.

The meeting is to be held in the Annex to the First Baptist Church, starting at 10:00 a. m. J. W. D. Chappell, president of the county-wide organization, will conduct the meeting.

Discussion will be held on a county teachers' banquet. The San Antonio State Teachers' Meeting will also be up for discussion, as will the organization of Centennial choral clubs.

Interscholastic league officials to conduct the Hall County interscholastic league meet next spring will be elected by members of the association Saturday.

Local Business Men Talk Roads With Oklahomans

A delegation of Memphis business men composed of F. N. Foxhall, S. T. Harrison, Roy Fultz, D. J. Morgensen, J. A. Whaley, Leslie Foxhall, F. V. Clark and C. H. Messer, representing the County Court, attended a "good roads" meeting last night at Mangum, Okla.

An Oklahoma City delegation, comprising a good will trade trip, of about 100 members, accompanied by the Kiltie Band, a band of girls dressed in Scottish attire, attended the meeting. The unique Kiltie Band was the feature of the evening's entertainment.

A delegation of 50 from Wellington and other delegations from Memphis to Oklahoma City from points on Highway No. 9 in Southwestern Oklahoma were present at the "good roads" meet.

Talks were made by members of each delegation, dealing with the question of improved roads as affecting Southwestern Oklahoma and the Texas Panhandle.

Or chief interest was the improvement of Highway No. 9 which is about nine miles northeast of Wellington, from the Texas to the Arkansas line. C. H. Messer, county commissioner, said, Memphis people are desirous of having this highway designated for improvement, because then Hall County citizens would call on people of the Oklahoma section to assist in getting the Texas State Highway Commission to designate a highway from Fax-

Local C.C.C. Camp Is Authorized For Extension

According to Lieut. Louis A. Hill, commanding officer of the local C. C. C. Camp, the camp will receive 63 new men tomorrow, with the arrival of a part of the personnel of the camp at Hereford, which is being disbanded.

The Hereford camp, located in the Hereford State Park, received orders last week to disband, and sent the men to various other camps in this section of the state.

The new contingent will bring the local enrollment to near the 250 mark, there being in camp now 180 men, according to Lieut. Hill. This will give the local company, No. 1821, practically its full strength for the first time since the establishment of the local unit.

Authorization was received Monday for another 6 months for the local camp. The camps are authorized for six months periods only, their tenure being extended as the need appears. This authorization assures that the camp here will be active until May first, at least.

Thirty-three junior recruits were given medical examinations and enrolled in the service yesterday morning at the local camp. They were from Hall, Collingsworth, Gray, Wheeler and other adjoining counties, and were sent to camps at Cloudercroft and High Rolls, New Mexico, for service.

Lieut. Hill made a trip to Lubbock headquarters Monday, where he conferred with district officers regarding the additional men.

GROCER TO MOVE

Workmen are busy today repainted interior and exterior of the store building vacated last week by Sloan's fruit store, and it will be occupied by Draper's Grocery when the work is completed, probably the latter part of this week. Mr. Draper is planning a rearrangement of his store when he gets into the new location.

THIEVES BREAK INTO HOME HERE

Steal Clothing and Food Saturday Evening

Clothes and foodstuff valued at between 30 and 35 dollars were stolen from the home of Hayden Goodnight on North Sixteenth street here Saturday night some time between 7:30 and 9:30 o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. Goodnight and family were in town shopping at the time the burglary occurred. Entrance into the house was effected through the back door, which was unlatched. The back portion of the house was ransacked, Mr. Goodnight said, and a suit of men's clothes, jackets and some canned food were taken.

Officers were notified, but no clues have been reported as to the identity of the burglars.

The Weather

WEST TEXAS: Partly cloudy and showers Thursday, and in Panhandle tonight; colder Thursday.

EAST TEXAS: Partly cloudy tonight; Thursday cloudy with probable showers in north; somewhat colder in north.

Boy, oh boy, do we feel high-tat today.

In the first place, just look over our new location. Of course, we're sort of on a side street now, but look at our neighbors. To our right, Herblocky's swell daily cartoon; just below that, the editorials; and on the other side of the page, Sodney Dutcher's "Behind the Scenes at Washington."

Another thing that makes us wonder if we don't need a new hat... one of our little squibs was included in "Tri State Press" in Monday's Amarillo News.

Now we know we've three out-of-town readers, anyway... the lady that writes "I Saw" in the Wellington Leader... the guy that writes "I Saw" in the Panama Daily News... and the writer of "Tri-State Press" in the Amarillo Daily News.

Ray Martin in to see why he wasn't getting his paper regularly. He evidently missed an issue and was afraid we had him in the column that day.

Owen Fields being congratulated on all sides for his splendid dancing in "Sky High" Monday night. Mr. Blslock, who really did the dancing, took Owen's part too late for the names to be changed on the program, and the black-face make-up did the rest.

Mrs. W. S. Gooch still won't believe it wasn't Owen. She says: "I didn't know he could dance but I'd know that boy, black or white, and you can't tell me that wasn't him."

Uncle Rich McElreath in for his Democrat. He won't trust a carrier boy to bring it to him, but drops in every afternoon and gets it himself. Says he believes business is getting better anyway, that folks have a little more money to spend now.

Two small girls riding bicycles around the square and doing full justice to a candy bar apiece at the same time.

Jim Stanford and Horace Horsecellar in the window at Rep. lin's. Some of Jim's friends suggested that there was a slight resemblance. All joking aside, though, Jim... a darn nice window.

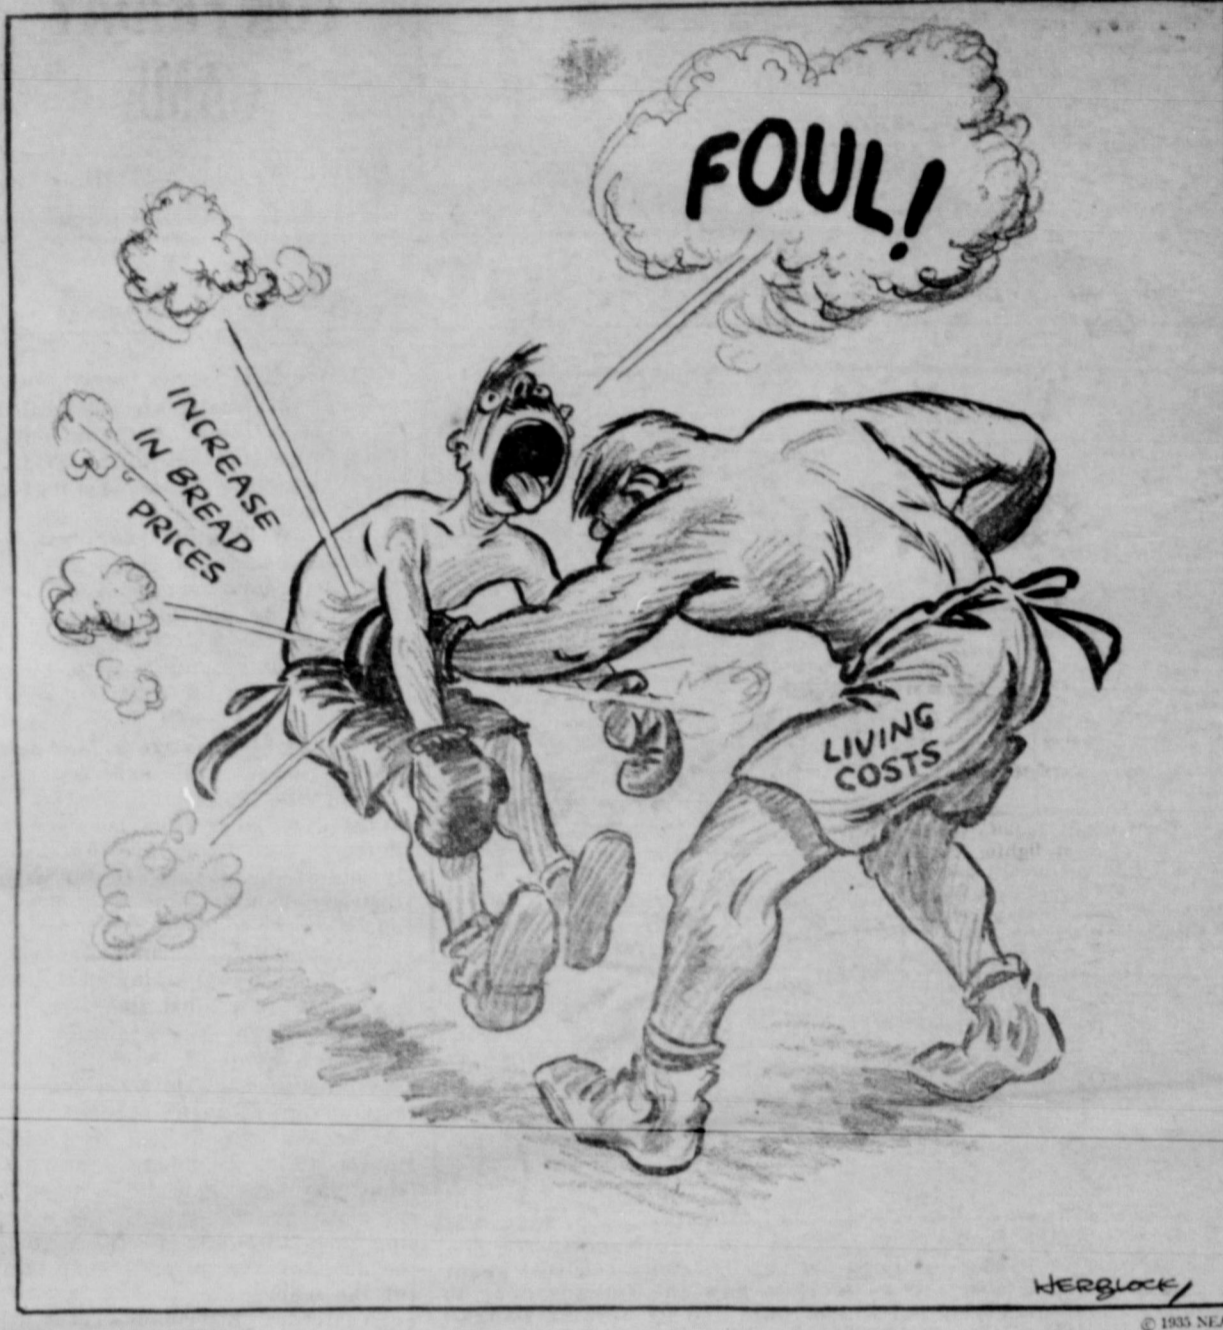

Carl Harrison in, stocking up on order and receipt books. Must be expecting a rush of business.

Two small boys in a parked sedan on the west side, who played Indian all afternoon and never budged out for three hours. Bet they were tired kids when bedtime came.

Mrs. M. G. Ray in the office, wrapping up a supply of shirts and underwear for M. G. at Kilgore. Said she honed his duds didn't get dirty before the new supply got there.

Deputy Sheriff Turlington "shake down" two prominent citizens at the Beattie House last night. The pockets of County Judge S. W. Low, of Clarendon, gave up a silver fork, while a biscuit was found on the person of Supt. W. C. Davis. We can understand why a man would want a fork, but what in the world did a professor start with a second-hand biscuit!

JAPAN MAY TAKE ANOTHER WHIRL AT IT

A SIGNIFICANT item in the grist of yesterday's news was a small 13-line dispatch by Associated Press from Tientsin, China, which stated that Japanese authorities had warned Chinese officials that anti-Japanese activities in North China must cease... or else. Major General Tada, who issued the ultimatum, followed it with a statement that the Japanese government "feared for the welfare of China and its people, as well as the peace of the Orient." This is but the prelude to another invasion of China, if past performance is any guide. The only fear that Japan ever held for China was that they would not get a big enough slice of her territory for exploitation. The fact appears to be that Japan a short while back did to China just what Italy is doing to Ethiopia, and got away with it. The League of Nations did not turn a hand to prevent the conquest of Manchuokoa, and the little yellow brothers are anxious for another bite. They have kept an eye trained on the Italo-Ethiopian affair, and figure that the League has its hands full at the present time, and would conveniently turn its head upon any further inroads on Chinese territory. Japan is not near so worried about the "peace of the Orient" as she is in securing the resources of China, to aid her in the inevitable conflict that will one day come between Nippon and the Caucasian races. The island empire always has in the back of its mind the thought of war. There is no more warlike people on the globe today than these same yellow fellows across the sea. They are developing an army and a navy, second to none, and are preparing for a war which will mean either victory or national suicide.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

By RODNEY DUTCHER, NEA Service Staff Correspondent. WASHINGTON, Oct. 30. There are two journalistic theories about Mr. Hoover.

One is that he seeks recognition by the Republicans. The other is that he has neither thought nor expectation of renomination, but seeks only an influential voice in party policy and selection of the candidate.

The answer is this: Hoover in recent months has summoned to him certain friends, usually ex-officials who still exert some political influence in their home states. He has asked them point-blank whether he could obtain their delegations for the next G. O. convention.

Frequently, one hears consultants have expressed doubts. Whereupon Mr. Hoover has been known to pull out a list of possible nominees and carefully outlining the disqualifications of each, cross names off one by one until was left only that of General Herbert Hoover.

Confidants say Hoover suggests himself as another Grover Cleveland, who was voted out of office in 1888 and re-elected years later. (A possible insight on that idea is the fact Cleveland had a popular majority of 100,000 votes in 1888 despite his electoral college defeat, whereas Hoover was defeated by a majority of more than 7,000,000.)

When political correspondents go into a huddle these days, they often arise and agree that Senator Arthur Vandenberg of Michigan looks, at this admittedly early date, like the probable nominee for the Republicans.

This comes through a process of elimination, after the pretense that the outstanding possibilities now are Vandenberg, Col. Frank Knox of Chicago and Gov. Landon of Kansas. Wrong as they may or may not be, most people here are unwilling to take the Knox candidacy very seriously. Faced with an obvious paucity of "available" material, politicians seek primarily a vote-getter of demonstrated ability. Colonel Knox has never had a chance to demonstrate popular appeal at the polls.

Landon, according to shrewd men who have been out to look him over, lives up to much of the current ballyhoo for him. While his stature scarcely overtops the Washington monument, it appears to be at least equal to that of Coolidge or Harding.

He is described as a man who would accept much of the liberal program Roosevelt has advanced to date—such as AAA, the postal policy, banking reform, TVA and the labor dispute act—would fight for a "New Deal" bargain rates.

But it is this liberalism of Landon's which already causes eastern leaders to look askance at him and it's said to be very doubtful whether Landon would make the concessions to them which they would demand in return for support.

Also, the boast that Kansas state and local taxes under the personally and publicly parsimonious Landon have been cut from $127,000,000 to $97,000,000 can be riddled by citation of New Deal millions—relief, benefit check, public works and so on—which have poured into Kansas and made such a reduction possible. Other governors have similar records.

War Scene as Italians Prime Guns for 'Big Push'

This map, picturing latest progress of Italy's invasion of Ethiopia, gives you a comprehensive picture of the scene as Mussolini's Blackshirts and their black-skinned native allies were reported about to launch a big-scale offensive on four fronts. The dotted arrows indicate how the Italians hope to penetrate Ethiopia's machine-gun studded mountains from north and south and its burning Danakil desert and plateaus from the east, the invaders then to be in position to strike toward Addis Ababa, the capital, from Dessye, in the northeast, and Harar, in the east.

CYCLONE PREPS Estelline Plays FOR FRIDAY GAME Lakeview Friday

Both Wellington and Locals Expected Shoot Works

After a short scrimmage session Monday afternoon, in which the Memphis Cyclone looked rather sick, the local team has settled down to a week of fundamental play in getting set for Friday night's tussle with the Wellington Skyrocks here.

The Wellington aggregation, boasting a none too impressive record, will have everything to gain and nothing to lose when they come here, for their scheduled conference game, and they are expected to put up a stiff battle Memphis, too, will have little more than her prestige to lose, and both teams are expected to "shoot the works" in order to stage come-backs from last week's defeats. Both teams are practically out of the picture, so far as a district championship is concerned.

In Monday's scrimmage session, W. C. Crump, playing on the second team against the first, intercepted two passes and got loose for jaunts of about 30 yards each to run the interceptions to touchdowns. Neither the first nor the second team looked very good in the first scrimmage practice that has been held here in over two weeks, the scrimmages having been discontinued for a time because of the injured condition of the team.

Yesterday afternoon's practice period was confined mostly to football fundamentals, with most of the time being given to handling the ball. The ability of the Memphians in handling the pigskin via the air resulted in the Cyclone's good showing Friday night against Shamrock and proved the major factor in the Cyclone's gaining almost 100 yards more from scrimmage than did the much heavier Shamrock Irishmen.

Coach Chesty Walker will probably feature an aerial attack against the invading 'Rockets here Friday night, and reports from Wellington are that the Skyrocks are preparing to combat the blasts from the air. Considerable work on pass defense is being given in the enemy camp, it is said.

Delay Removal Radio Station

Information has been received here that the communications commission in Washington, D. C., has heeded pleas of nearly a dozen chambers of commerce over this section and has suspended its permission for removal of radio station KGKO from Wichita Falls to Fort Worth until a hearing can be held.

The Memphis Chamber of Commerce joined in the protests against the removal. A date for hearing the application for removal will be set later.

Chambers of commerce protesting were those at Memphis, Wichita Falls, Iowa Park, Burkburnett, Electra, Graham, Quanah, Vernon and Seymour, Texas, and Frederick and Temple, Oklahoma.

Cooperative Unit at T.S.C.W.

Bowie Hall, one of seven cooperative units at Texas State College for Women (CIA), houses 36 girls who do their own house-keeping in order to reduce college expenses. The girls plan meals, purchase food, cook, do the cleaning and laundry. Pictured above are the seven student house managers who oversee the work in each house. Mrs. Belle Stanforth, inset, is in charge of the entire cooperative system.

HAS UNIQUE COOPERATIVE PLAN STATE COLLEGE FOR WOMEN NOW

DENTON, Oct. 30.—Young men and women have lived in portable shacks, made themselves into walking bill boards, given blood transfusions, attempted parachute jumps—in fact, there are very few stunts, sensational or otherwise, these individuals have not accomplished in order to pay for an education.

Institutions and organizations, too, have inaugurated many plans for lightening the financial burdens of the college student. Farm produce has been accepted in exchange for tuition, student loan funds have been made available to the needy and scholarships of all kinds have been given to worthy students.

However, Texas State College for Women (CIA) has worked out its own unique system, a plan whereby young women who are otherwise unable to attend college can obtain a college education with a minimum of cost.

In September 1934, what is known as the cooperative system was put into operation. A small cottage, accommodating ten girls and a hostess was leased, and before the registration period closed, another building had been rented and 16 more girls had set up housekeeping for the year. The plan grew with each succeeding semester and with the opening of three new houses this year, a total of seven cooperative homes, accommodating approximately 180 girls, are in use.

Each house is under the direct supervision of a mature college student and a student house manager. It is the duty of the house manager to arrange programs of work, menus, check out the groceries for meals, and supervise the house work. Each girl works by a schedule and the duty of no girl usually exceeds over one hour of work per day. The menus are checked at intervals by a home economics teacher who is on the cooperative dormitory committee. The expense of operation in this system has not exceeded ten dollars per month per girl. Rent and utility bills are prorated and each girl pays her share. Groceries are bought at wholesale prices or brought from home by the girls themselves. When the food is brought from home, the girls receive credit for it at regular wholesale prices. In the event that the girl brings food from home, $5 or less takes care of her demand for cash during the month.

Hallowe'en Carnival

The West Ward P. T. A. will stage its annual carnival, with a number of unique features at the West Ward building, tomorrow night.

A downtown parade will start promptly at 6 o'clock, and those wanting to be in the parade will get in touch with Mrs. Clyde Milam, president. Doors will be open at 6:45, following the parade.

The West Ward building will be decorated appropriately for the occasion and the various rooms will present side shows in charge of the different committees. Including will be a "Fishing Pond," "Days of 49," "Blue Beard," "Sky High," "Chamber of Horrors," fortune telling and many other attractions. The crowning of the Queen will be one of the main features.

An admission price of ten cents to enter the building will be charged and the inside attractions will be free. Hamburgers, popcorn, candy, pop sicles and cold drinks will be sold.

The money to be raised will be used for the benefit of the association, according to Mrs. Clyde Milam, president.

The public is urged to attend the carnival so that funds for the worthwhile projects may be obtained.

Baptist Banquet Well Attended

The banquet tendered to the ladies of the church, last at the Church Annex, was well attended, there being over 100 present, and the program rendered was a splendid one.

Supt. W. C. Davis, of the Memphis schools, gave an interesting talk on the necessity of taking their proper place in training of youth, and in the moral church work.

Judge S. W. Low, of Clarendon, spoke on qualifications of laymen. He said these were of great importance, attention to the details of church life, keeping some burden off the pastor, and stewardship.

Mrs. D. L. C. Kinard gave report on the financial condition of the church, and challenged the men to do their best in meeting the financial requirements of the church.

Music for the occasion was furnished by a stringed orchestra composed of Mack Graham, Britton, Gordon Gillam, E. Gillam and Mr. Rogers.

The dinner served by the ladies was voted as "wonderful" by the men, who backed up their statement by doing full justice to the victuals set before them.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

BY MARY E. DAGUE

NEA Service Staff Writer
A WOMAN in my town is sending her son through college on salted nuts. I don't mean that she is feeding him on the nuts—though I suppose she is in a way, at that. For she makes the nuts—hickory nuts, almonds and black walnuts—by the ton, almost and sells them to her fellow townspeople who buy them, not only for parties and church societies but for home use.

There are three ways to accomplish the salted nut—by roasting in the oven, pan frying and deep-fat frying. For all nuts except pecans oven-roasting produces a more crisp and tender nut than the other methods.

Blanch Nuts With Skins

All nuts with a tough outer skin like almonds must be blanched before salting.

To blanch nuts, pour over boiling water to more than cover and let stand five or ten minutes. Rub or pinch off the skins. Drain as thoroughly as possible in a colander and then spread on a dry linen towel and pat dry with another towel. Best to let the nuts stand for several hours at this stage, since it shortens the roasting process.

Peanuts for salting should be bought raw and shelled and blanched.

Olive oil and butter give the most delicate flavor to nuts, although any good cooking oil usually may be used for deep-fat frying. Butter or a butter substitute is excellent for roasting.

To prepare nuts for roasting, pat the inside of a bowl with oil or melted butter. Put a few nuts in the bowl and shake well until each nut is lightly coated with fat. Continue adding fat as necessary until all the nuts are

Tomorrow's Menu

BREAKFAST: Orange juice, cereal, cream, plain omelet, crisp toast, milk, coffee.

LUNCHEON: Cheese fondue, stewed tomatoes, crusty rolls, celery hearts, nut pudding, milk, tea.

DINNER: Cider cocktail, stuffed lamb chops, Martinique potatoes, green peas in cream, stuffed prune salad, raisin puff puddings, milk, coffee.

coated, but use as little fat as possible.

Spread prepared nuts on a baking pan and roast in a moderately hot oven (350 degrees F.) until a delicate brown. This will take about twenty minutes, although the dryness before coating determines the length of time.

Deep Fat Method

It will take about two minutes to fry nuts in deep fat. Use any good vegetable oil or fat or olive oil if you prefer it. Heat in a deep kettle to 390 degrees F. and the fat thermometer. Be sure the nuts are free from all moisture and spread them in a frying basket. Immerse in hot fat and fry until a delicate brown. Drain thoroughly on brown paper or paper toweling and sprinkle with salt. Spread out to cool and become crisp. The nuts will color slightly after they are removed from the fat so be careful not to let them get too brown.

Spiced nuts are grand for holiday parties. After browning, mix 1-2 teaspoon cinnamon, 1-4 teaspoon cloves, 1-4 teaspoon nutmeg with 1-2 teaspoon salt and sprinkle over 1 cup brown nuts.

passenger station for one day, only, Wednesday November 6th. Weighing sixty tons and measuring more than fifty-five feet in length, from its massive head to the powerful tail, the whale presents a spectacle of unusual interest. In the huge mouth alone, fourteen men could stand. The tour of the whale, according to reports, has caused a revival of speculation concerning many facts about whales which has thus far baffled scientific inquiry.

In the first place the whale is an air breather. He can dive a mile under water if he cares to, and remain there as long as a half hour at a time without coming to the surface for air. How they manage to stay so far down under the water is unknown, and how they resist the tremendous pressure of the water in the lower sea depths, is also not known. Another interesting point regarding them is that the ears are about eighteen inches under the outer layer of blubber, still their hearing is very acute, and quietness must prevail at all times in a whaling vessel. The eyes of a whale look but forward and they have no control over head or side-way glances.

Captain David Barnett and his able assistant, Capt. Jack Lampe, both merry old salts of many days of whaling, tell many interesting stories about the old and the new days of whaling. Both Captains will accompany the Whale and Marine Exhibit.

Series of Brief Discussions on Driving, Dedicated to the Safety, Comfort and Pleasure of the Motoring Public. Prepared by General Motors

No. 6—POWER AND SPEED

Our motor cars will go so much faster than we ever care to drive them, that no doubt people often wonder why so much speed is built into them in the first place. Of course, automobiles aren't built with the idea of making the manufacturer or the engineer or the man. They're built to suit the men and women who are going to own and drive them. And there are things that people do insist on in their cars. Things that some of those things are of such a nature that when the engineers provide them, an automobile goes fast just naturally.

For instance, nearly everybody likes to get going as fast as possible. Now that's just a matter of preference we have in our engine and how our car is built.

There's the business of hill-climbing. That means as much in some localities as in others, we have to be built to suit us whether we live in New York or Florida, Iowa or California—wherever we live and wherever we may want to go.

Engineers tell us that they could build a fairly low-powered car that would pull us up the steepest hill. But if they did, they would have to gear it so low that when we got over the top and onto a level stretch, we could only go crawling along at a rate that wouldn't satisfy even the most conservative drivers.

But perhaps the most important reason for having our power what it is in modern cars, is a matter that many of us have never considered. We all know what happens to us, when we, ourselves, are going at high pressure all the time, either physically or mentally. A person can work 12, 14 or 16 hours a day, but we know we get along best when we don't tax our last reserves of energy all the time.

In the same way, anybody who has ever run machinery knows that if you keep it going at full speed and full speed day-in-and-day-out, you're just multiplying the chances of a breakdown, sooner or later.

That's how it is with a car. By building in the margin of safety, engineers make it practical to run at reasonable speed. If our car can go 80, 85 or maybe even more miles an hour, we won't have to strain to go thirty-five, forty, or even faster if circumstances demand. So we can drive it along at sensible speeds hour after hour, day after day, without over-working it.

When we stop to think about it, lots of things are built with that added safety margin. Elevators in our office buildings could carry far heavier loads than the weight of all the people they can hold. So could modern bridges. The steel girders of our buildings, the rails under our trains—in fact, any number of things we depend on day-by-day—are much stronger than they really have to be. They all have that extra margin of protection.

So with our cars, what we have to remember is that speed is simply a by-product of power. We can use that power unwisely, or we can use it sensibly to get better performance and dependability as the result. Manufacturers intend that. It's all up to us.

The GOLDEN FEATHER

by Robert Bruce © 1933 NEA Service, Inc.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

JEAN DUNN, secretary to DONALD MONTAGUE, lawyer delays her answer when Bobby Wallace automobile salesman asks Jean to marry him.

At The Golden Feather night club she meets SANDY HARKINS, whose business connections are vague. Sandy introduces Bobby and Jenn to MR. and MRS. LEWIS and Bobby arranges to sell some bonds for Lewis. He sells them to Jean's employer.

LARRY GLENN, federal agent long a friend of Jean's parents, is trying to locate Wingy Lewis, Bank robber. Larry locates some stolen bonds and questions SONNY BOYD, gambler, about them. Boyd confesses he bought the bonds from Donald Montague. Montague tells Larry he bought them from Bobby.

Larry talks to Bobby, learns Lewis bought a car recently, and suspects it is armored. Federal men go to Lewis' hotel, but he and his wife have disappeared.

As a joke, Larry takes Jean's fingerprints. She quarrels with Bobby over Sandy. Jean sets out for a vacation visit to her home town. A few days before she had told police Sandy was with her at the time of a robbery. Jean suddenly realizes this was not true. She asks him to explain.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXIII

For a long moment after Jean had demanded that he explain his deceit, Sandy looked at her steadfastly. Then, when Jean felt that she could not stand the silence any longer he slowly looked away, and it seemed to her that an expression of sadness and weariness came over his bronzed face. He patted her hand slowly, and at last looked into her eyes again.

"I reckon I'd better tell you the whole story," he said softly. "I'd intended to all along, but somehow I just kept putting it off. It'd been better if I'd spoken."

She waited, breathless, looking up at him with that expression by which a girl unwittingly tells a man, "Please, please tell me some sort of story—any sort of story—that I can believe so I can stop doubting you." Again he patted her hand gently. "It started a long time ago," he said, the western drawl in his voice more pronounced than ever. "Back in Oklahoma. I was just a kid, then, and kind of wild. Another fellow and I got into a scrape. Fact of the matter, we'd got to sort of helling around that little town we lived in, and we fell in with a bunch that used to play cards and drink pretty heavy. Anyhow—"

He looked away once more, as if staring beyond the green coolness of the little park to the open ranges of the west.

"This fellow and I, we were working on a cattle ranch outside of town," he went on presently. "One Saturday the boss had us take a bunch of yerlings in to the shipping point. We were to take 'em in and sell 'em, there in the town, and then of course come back with the money next day. Well, we got in all right, and sold 'em—got about $200. This other fellow kept the money, and then he and I set out to have some fun before starting back.

"Well, like I said, we were young and wild then. We fell in with these birds I mentioned and we each got more or less of a skinfull. I remember I finally fell asleep in a little room back of a poolroom. When I came to it was after dark, and here was Rags—that was what we called this side-kick of mine—standing there looking like somebody that'd been sent for and couldn't come.

"I was still kind of muddled, and I asked him what's the matter. Well, it seems he'd got into a poker game and got cleaned. Not only lost all his money, but also lost that $200 we were supposed to take back to the boss.

"So there we were. I remember Rags saying, 'You're in this just as much as I am,' and I was still so kind of hazy I didn't argue with him. So we sat there, and Rags had a bottle, and he said we'd have a drink and get straightened up so we could think what to do—and of course we just got worse.

"Anyhow, after a while Rags got an idea. There's a moving picture house down the street a ways, and being Saturday night there'd be sure to be a big crowd in it. So Rags said we'd go down and—stick the place up, and get our money that way. If he hadn't been drunk he'd never in the world have dreamed of doing a thing like that, and if I'd been myself I'd have talked him out of it.

"But we were both—well, pretty well cocked. I had just sense enough not to like the idea, and I argued and argued, but it was no use. Finally Rags said, 'Well, I'm going to do it, and if you're too yellow to come along, why to hell with you.' So he started out. He'd got a gun somewhere—I don't know where. We didn't either of us carry 'em cowboys don't any more, you know, when they go to town—and he pats it there in his coat pocket and starts out.

"I followed him. I had some hazy notion of stopping him, or of warning the theatre people, or taking the gun away from him; anyway, I followed. He got ahead of me and I ran to catch up. I overtook him just as he got up to the ticket widow of the movie house and stuck his gun on the cashier.

"Well, something went wrong. I don't know how it happened, but Rags—he pulled the trigger and shot her. Killed her instantly. Then there was an awful tumult and I remember running off in the dark as fast as I could go. I must've wondered down into the freight yards and shaken people off my track; anyway, next morning I came to in a box car, 50 miles out of town and still traveling.

"I was scared green when I remembered what had happened. I stopped off at a city down near the Oklahoma-Texas line, and lay low waiting to find out how things stood. Then I learned they'd got Rags. The cops had chased him and shot him, and he'd died on the way to jail; but before he died he'd gone and put all the blame on me—so here I was, wanted for murder."

He stopped and patted her hand slowly once more, while she waited, breathless, for him to go on.

"Well, there it is," he said at last. "I had to keep going. I left Oklahoma and I never went back. I came out this way, got into business, and did well. But all the time that thing's been hanging over me. If they should ever lay hands on me back in Oklahoma I'd be electrocuted sure as shooting—because who'd ever believe my story? I wouldn't have a chance.

"This business up in Dover was like I told you—just a case of mistaken identity. But—do you see?—I didn't dare get arrested, even for something I hadn't done. Because if I did, as like as not they'd start checking up in the files, the way they always do and they'd find the handbills that were sent out from Oklahoma years ago—'Wanted: For Murder,' with a photograph, description, and everything.

"I'd be sent back to Oklahoma, and just as sure as you're a foot high I'd be sent up. So when I found out about this up in Dover, I—well, I got panicky."

He looked at her and grinned ruefully.

"As a matter of fact, I'd been in a movie that Friday afternoon," he went on. "But who'd have believed me? How could I have proved it? I couldn't have. I went all alone. There wasn't one chance in a hundred the cashier or any of the ushers would've remembered seeing me. I'd have been out of luck."

"So—I took advantage of you. You didn't remember what day we'd been out together, and it was too easy. And that fellow at the boathouse, he didn't remember either. I went out to see him, and I had him talked into thinking it had all happened on Friday, instead of Thursday, before he knew what was going on."

He paused and looked at her soberly.

"I ask your pardon for having lied to you and got you mixed up in it," he said solemnly. "Can you forgive me?"

Pity welled up in her. She squeezed his hand and said, "Oh, Sandy, of course! But why didn't you tell me?"

"I should have," he admitted. "I wish I had. But—well, I guess I was afraid to. You see, I"—his eyes burned into hers—"I was afraid you'd not want to see me again, if you knew about this Oklahoma business."

"But it wasn't your fault!" she protested eagerly. "I mean, it wasn't anything criminal."

"I know. But I couldn't be sure you'd look at it that way."

He stared down at the brown water of the river.

"You poor boy," she said softly, after a pause. "Is this—this thing always going to be hanging over you?"

He looked up and brightened. "Oh, I forgot to tell you about that part of it," he said. "You see, I told Mr. Montague all about it. He'd handled some legal business for a friend of mine, was how I happened to hear about him and go to him. Well, I told him the whole story—not about how I'd deceived you; I mean about the mixup in Oklahoma—and while he agreed that I couldn't afford to be arrested just then, he said there was nothing to worry about in the long run.

"He said he'd put a private detective agency to work up evidence, and he would convince the authorities of the truth of the matter. Before the end of the month it ought to be all up. Then I can come and anybody else, with not a fear of."

He squared his shoulders and threw his head back, gave a sigh of relief. "Sandy!" she said, glad.

She did not stop to let emotions, to figure out the last bit of news was like a weight from her.

She did not realize that consciously she was thinking never dare marry a man something like that had hit her; nor did she realize the wave of happiness that came over her at the promise that would be cleaned up might mean that she was ready to marry this man, after all. She knew that she was glad that she had been explained, that she need not have to worry about having deceived her, that she would not have to go to that old accusation in court. Simply and guilelessly, glad, nor did it occur to her to doubt a word that he had said.

Sandy looked around him, the bushes and trees, and was deserted as only a park in the midwest can be. He put his arm about her shoulders; almost timidly, she nestled against him.

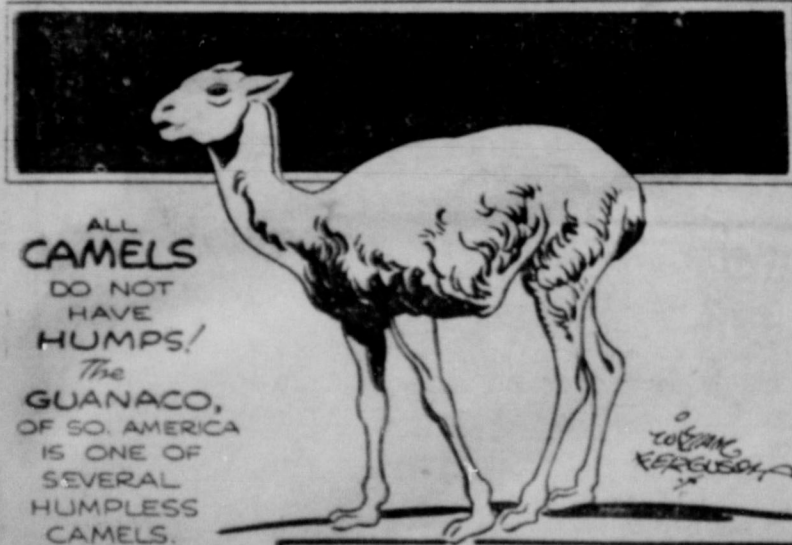

"Then you don't mind lying to me?" he said, looking at her and smiling.

"Not any more," she said, was awfully mad when I covered it. But I don't

...s greed for the plumes of the egret almost brought about extinction of this beautiful white heron in the early part of the century. The plumes, known to the millinery trade as "egret" sold for $32 an ounce. The killing of the birds now is prohibited by law, but poachers continue to destroy large numbers.

MISS JOHNSON HAS MESSAGE IN MUSIC

Famous Pianist Asks Concert Prices Reduced

Mrs. B. V. Blackwell of Amarillo, mother of Esther Johnson, the internationally famous pianist, was in Memphis Monday and Tuesday visiting in the home of Dr. and Mrs. J. M. Ballew, and conferring with officials of the Harmony Club and the Democrat, joint sponsors of the concert to be given by Miss Johnson in the High School Auditorium on next Tuesday evening.

"Esther is never happier than when bringing pleasure to others through her piano interpretations," said Mrs. Blackwell. "She feels that she has a real message in music for the people of Memphis, and she wants nothing to stand in the way of anyone who would like to hear her play. She is less interested in the box office receipts than she is in making the price of admission available to everyone, and so, as a special favor to her, she requests that tickets be made available on advance sale at a materially reduced price."

To hear Mrs. Blackwell's description (with pardonable mother's pride) of her daughter's playing would inspire a desire in the heart of anyone to hear her, whether or not they think they have any natural appreciation of music. "Her playing has received the enthusiastic praise of some of the world's foremost musicians, and yet, her interpretations are not over the head of anyone. When Esther played in Amarillo to an audience of more than 1500, even the children sat as if glued to their seats."

Just before the Amarillo concert a request was sent in for "The Last Roundup". Miss Johnson purchased a copy of that popular piece, composed her own arrangement and played it at the concert, where it made a tremendous hit with the audience. Since that time she has composed an arrangement of "When I Grow Too Old to Dream", a song loved by Will Rogers and one that was played at his funeral. She has also composed an arrangement of "Old Faithful", another of Will Rogers' favorites. These numbers will probably be used by Miss Johnson for encores when she appears here in concert next Tuesday.

In accordance with the wishes of Miss Johnson, admission prices for the concert will be reduced on advance sale to 25c for students and 55c for adults. These prices will prevail until the evening of the concert when the ticket office is moved to the Auditorium. After that time the admission will be 50c for students and $1.00 for adults.

Tickets may be purchased from any member of the Harmony Club, or at the office of the Democrat. Seats may be reserved without any additional charge at the Democrat office. Make your reservation early to be assured of a desirable seat.

Mrs. J. M. Elliott, Mrs. Jack Jarrell and Mrs. F. V. Clark spent yesterday in Clarendon. Mrs. Elliott and Mrs. Jarrell visiting their daughter and sister, Mrs. James Ed Teer, and Mrs. Clark her daughter, Mrs. George Carter.

The chief speaker at the meeting last night was the chairman of the Highway Committee of the Oklahoma City Chamber of Commerce. In the course of his speech, the chairman pointed out that it is likely that Southwestern Oklahoma will have to resort to a ballot to get the required cooperation on the matter of good roads. It is thought that through political action these ends can be attained. F. V. Clark, secretary of the Memphis Chamber of Commerce, stated.
