A Flying Start

AL SMITH has placed himself solidly in agreement with the bitter critics of himself and John J. Rankob in his suggestion that the Democratic party pay off the "mortgage" the latter holds on the party. Smith, in a recent speech in New Jersey, declared that the party should pay back the $320,000 it owes Rankob so that it can be free of obligation to any individual.

The state should find hearty response with all classes of the party's followers, despite the criticism which might be leveled at Smith for his tardiness in recognizing the situation.

Smith said, "and send the party off with a flying start. We must not owe Mr. Rankob anything. We must be a party with nation-wide connections and on our own feet."

That suggestion must be followed if the party is to flourish. A shadow will be cast over the Chicago convention if it opens while one man still holds such a mortgage on a supposedly independent political organization.

Merchandisers' Bulletin

Proctor & Gamble chose this year—1932—a year of depression and reluctant spending, to launch their biggest sales and advertising drive for Oxydol, the all-purpose household soap with 50 per cent more suds.

The makers of Oxydol knew they had just the product for a time like this—a soap with an already enviable record for economy, for efficiency.

But before advertising was released nationally a pre-campaign test was made to determine the most effective way in which to tell the story of Oxydol to housewives.

Ten different newspaper campaigns were prepared and run in ten different cities. They appeared for two months and during this time careful sales checks were kept. Thousands of housewives were interviewed both before and after the appearance of the advertising.

The campaigns which scored the greatest sales increase were then released nationally. The campaigns in these wider areas have scored the same success the local experimental campaigns enjoyed—a consistent record of greatly increased sales.

Consumer comment on the merits of Oxydol explains why the sales curve of this soap is rising so phenomenally. Women have written to the Proctor & Gamble Co. praising Oxydol in its new form for dissolving almost instantly. Others state that it goes further—that it gives more suds for the money—that it gets clothes whiter in either hard or soft water—that it is easy on the hands.

In every period of business depression new sales leaders emerge. Oxydol is a conspicuous example.

In the evening W. H. (Bill) Wallace, pastor of the Methodist church at Lamesa, will speak at the First Methodist church and give an account of the unusual work being done with the young people and church finances.

In the morning Dr. J. Richard Spann will talk on "Spiritual Dietetics for Anxious Souls." Mrs. Chas. Morris has planned an anthem for each service.

Two Big Spring Bankers Attend State Convention

Mr. and Mrs. E. Reagan and Mrs. Seth H. Parsons returned Thursday evening from Austin where they attended the state meeting of Texas Bankers. Mrs. Parsons visited her husband who is in the University.

Enroute they spent Saturday night at Brady with relatives and Sunday evening and part of Monday in San Marcos with the Rev. and Mrs. W. A. Bowen and family. They encountered no rains on the trip but a great deal of mud on their return.

Mr. Reagan stated that the attendance was smaller than the usual and that West Texas was not well represented. He, representing the West Texas National Bank and Ira Driver, from the State National, were the only Big Spring bankers present.

The consensus of the bankers was that the country was beginning to recover from its business depression but that recovery would be a long, slow process.

Austin furnished cool, agreeable weather and many features of entertainment for the visitors and their wives, including a tea at the Governor's Mansion, many drives over the city, bridge luncheon at the Country Club, open house at the Austin Club and the Women's Club. Mr. Reagan attended the Rotary Club on Tuesday.

Mr. Driver is spending the week there to visit with his son, who is in the university.

Go window-shopping in your easy chair

Relax for a moment and turn the pages of your newspaper. Let the advertisements help you to make your shopping plans. Do you need a dress, or a coat, or a hat? Perhaps a new blanket for a guest-room, some curtain material, or even a few new pots and pans for the kitchen? Of course, there are many things you want and need... but you may be letting many of them wait until you see in a store or window exactly what you have in mind, at an especially alluring price.

Those are the very things you will find in advertisements. Attractive articles, new and improved ones, prices that make quick action an economy. Think how many steps it can save you to hunt out these things, and find them, in comfort at home! If a special opportunity is offered, you'll know about it in time. When new articles are announced, you can have them before they are the least bit out of date. And you can save hours of waiting and asking, miles of steps—and money too!

These are but a few of the ways the advertisements in your newspaper can serve you. If you read them every day, you are sure to grow wise in the ways of purchasing... and saving.

REGIN HERE TODAY
HEALTH CAREY, pretty secretary who is in love with BOB SHAR, has a proposal of marriage from HEY LAMPMAN, pen-ning young physician. She re-jects him. Ben is jealous and a few weeks later when Susan goes to marry ERNEST BENTL, her employer, Ben goes to Health, then turning the "on" himself. Meantime DE-LE ACKROYD has informed Susan that Susan is going to marry Ben. Ben's condition is serious. Susan is distressed. JACK BRING, Health's assistant, tells that Susan is still free. Bob goes to find her but can't. Su-san's aunt who is ill goes south. Susan stays with friends.

GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER XXXVI

She did not sleep at all the night after the shooting. She lay in bed, shivering, wondering if it would happen on the mor-row. Each time she closed her eyes she saw that terrible scene of Ben with the gun raised in the air, firing at Heath and then himself. How could she have missed that jealousy would drive her to such lengths! What if the newspapers should hear of the matter? Heath's position and hers would lend themselves to vivid imaginations. No, she would not even think of such a thing. Heath had said the matter would be settled up. But what if Ben died? It would be difficult keeping that secret. The whole wretched story could be blazoned before the world. "I mustn't let Aunt Jessie know," she said to herself. "She mustn't know in the morning without find- ing out anything about it." Some- one else is shattered. She lashed herself into a state of calm so that the older woman suspected nothing. Grumbling and fussing, she was pleased on the sly to see the invalid allowed her- self to be stowed away in a draw- ing room with the crisis nurse. The men began to give warning and Susan kissed the thin cheek, adding a rush of emotion. "You're good now!" she admon- ished. "Do just as you're told and don't fuss and fuss in no time at all." Aunt Jessie promised with suspended meekness. "I feel easy about you as long as you're staying with the Miltons," she said.

Susan dashed to the platform, slipping off just before the train began to move. She ran after it, waiting for a minute or two. Then suddenly it dwindled into a mere speck along the track. She felt for- n.

She was quite alone now. Was it or was it not a bad omen that the expected telephone call had failed to come through before she left her house? She felt now that she would not possibly wait to know the condition until returning to Heath's club. After a long wait during which her heart palpitated, finally she heard his voice. "How is he?" she asked fear- fully.

"He had a bad night," Heath told her. "and he's been running a high fever, but Blake says it's not alarm- ing and you're not to worry." "Where are they keeping him?" Susan wanted to know. Health mentioned the name of a small, private hospital. "It's going to be all right," he told her cautiously. "There's no need to worry. Blake has fixed everything."

Susan understood and was grate- ful, but she was not entirely re- assured about Ben's condition. A high temperature might mean many things. She never knew how she got through that day. It was a godsend to have the task of straightening the house after Aunt Jessie's departure. There were in- numerable little things to do but as Susan went about these tasks she listened apprehensively for the telephone to ring. Ben must get better. He simply must!

At four o'clock she went to Rose's home. Mrs. Milton noticed the girl's silence and put it down to a natural reaction following her aunt's illness.

"Your aunt's going to be fine now. Don't you think another bit about it," Mrs. Milton said. "Let's you and I have a cup of tea, lovey." Mrs. Milton eyed her young com- panion appraisingly. "You look mighty peaked to me," she an- nounced. "Did you have any lunch?"

"I don't remember. No, I guess I didn't."

"Lord love you! Did anybody ever see such a girl," Mrs. Milton said fondly.

"You'd better not go" around looking for a ghost or your man won't like it," Mrs. Milton had been taken into the secret of Su- san's engagement.

The girl flushed. "He won't mind," she said weakly.

Mrs. Milton went about the busi- ness of making tea but her heart was not in her work. She was puzzled over Susan. The child didn't look happy. There were no two ways about that. Could she be marrying this old fellow (thus did Mrs. Milton designate Ernest Heath in private) for his money? She dismissed the thought. Susan wasn't that kind, she decided. Nevertheless there was something troubling the girl.

At six Heath telephoned again. He said, "If I send a car for you at 7:30 will it be all right?" Some- thing in his tone frightened Susan.

"Yes, of course, but what is it?" she asked.

His voice was very low. "I can't tell you just now."

Health paused and knocked softly. A nurse's face appeared in the ap- erture. She nodded to him. "Yes, you may come in," she said. "He's awake now." Susan entered on unwilling feet. She scarcely dared to look at the face on the pillow of the high-ho- lical bed. Ben's eyes were open, staring in her direction. Susan glanced around her wildly. Health had vanished and only the nurse, businesslike and cool, remained at the foot of the bed. "You may have two minutes," she said in a matter of fact voice.

"and that will be all. The doctor," she added to Susan. "don't want him to become excited."

Ben's voice sounded unnatural, strange. She had to go very close to understand what he was saying. "Sorry," he muttered. "I'm sorry." "Wanted to tell you."

Susan bent over him with a rush of pity. "It's all right," she as- sured him. "It wasn't really your fault."

Those had been the right words. She saw that instantly and was glad. She knew, too, that she had spoken the truth. Ben had been the victim of a fever, a madness. She understood that. She had felt something very like it that night when she had seen Denise with Bob. Jeany was a fearful thing. It was a beast that drove you to unexpected violence.

She was glad she had said that. The sick boy's face lightened. "Bet- ter now," he muttered. "Think I can sleep."

"That's fine," the nurse interposed. "That's just lovely. Sleep is what you need right now." She motioned Susan out of the room.

Susan felt shaken but somehow exalted. Heath, pacing up and down the corridor, was startled by the luminous light in her eyes. She took his arm impulsively. "Tell Dr. Blake he must save him," she whispered. "They mustn't let the poor boy die."

Heath looked puzzled. "He's not going to," he said. "He's going to be fine. It's almost a miracle."

"Oh," Susan collapsed against him. He led her into the little ele- vator and pressed the button.

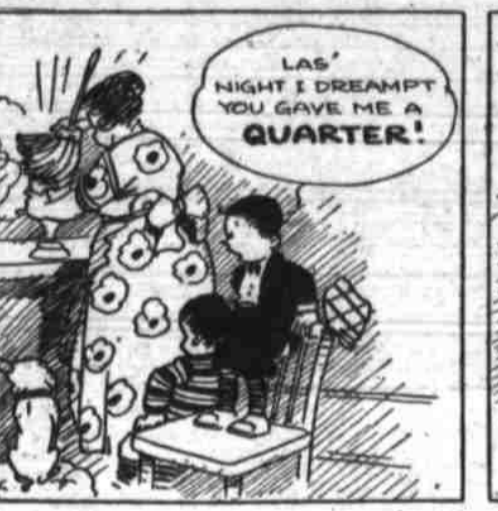

"You've had a frightful day," he muttered. "I don't wonder you're upset. Poor child." It was sweet to be taken care of in this fashion. Susan wanted to relax in the comfort of this man's affection but something hard with in her told her she must not. There was something she must do. Ben's eyes had showed her that. Love was a driving force. It was some- thing fierce and elemental. She would be doing Heath a wrong to marry him feeling as she did.

She began to speak but he stop- ped her. "Don't talk now," he said gently. "Later you can tell me all

Tea In The Governor's Mansion

Herald's Society Editor Attends Bankers' State Convention And Breaks Into Austin's Political Society Temporarily

By D.R.F.

Tea in the Governor's Mansion was the event in Austin to which I looked forward most eagerly. Well . . . so far as tea went, it was no different from any other tea I have attended in a Big Spring home except that I didn't know so many people to talk to and for tea they served a pretty coal-looking drink concocted from ginger ale.

The big thrills came from meeting the Governor and Mrs. Sterling and seeing the Mansion.

Mrs. Sterling was as natural in her manner as a next door neighbor. Her sweetness and simplicity were one of the high spots of the afternoon. You could not have felt timid in her presence if you had wanted to; her hair alone would have prevented that; it was waved up in the funniest, tightest, most old-fashioned manner and wrapped in a knot at the back of her head. She was a thin little woman and nothing in her appearance suggested a million dollars.

I heard her tell some man that she liked shaking hands and when I told her what a gracious thought it was to open the Mansion for these out of town visitors, she said in perfect sincerity, "Why, it's your home, all of you, and you are welcome whenever you want to come."

Governor Sterling was busy at the time shaking the hands of two young ladies aged about five, who had attended the tea especially to meet him and weren't bashful about telling him so. They seemed to be having a good time and later I overheard their parents say that the tea was a huge success.

The Mansion was lovely. We were ushered into two large drawing rooms connected by double doors and furnished in Colonial style. That was the only awe-inspiring moment of the tea. Then we went upstairs to see the San Houston bedroom which contained furniture which Houston used in the early days of the republic.

The big four poster bed was covered with a canopy that extended the full length of the bed and dwarfed the lower part. It was quite handsome, however, with its rose taffeta draperies. Houston's desk was in the room, also a big wardrobe, and a spinning wheel, which everybody wanted to turn.

We peeped into one other bedroom which was disappointingly small and very simply furnished. From the sight of the wraps of the bed, we decided it belonged to the Governor's personal suite and that Mrs. Sterling had taken the members of the house party up there.

The white curved stairway, with its mahogany handrail and its easy tread, was one of the most attractive features of the Mansion, as good to look at, as it was easy to climb. It arose from the end of the wide hall which separated the two sides of the house in good old Texas style.

Dining Room

The dining room was papered in scenic paper in which were copy- ing Indians and stern-faced white pioneers. The room's most attractive feature was a handsome fire place. It, too, was a small room and certainly could never be used for a large state dinner, but an enormous bouquet of double lilies, roses and Queen Anne's Lace covering the table and a lot of jewelry gifts (wearing fluffily embroidered and ruffled muslin) passing the punch and cake that we all had to eat) made the scene such a pretty one that it was hard to give one's attention to the room.

The living room opened out of the dining room and was more formal. There we waited while the men went after the family class. We had walked to the tea from the capitol, which is nearby.

The interior of the Mansion is not as attractive as the exterior. The big white pillars that extend the full height of the building, in its setting of a wide green lawn covering a whole block, give it a severe simplicity that is lovely. The severity is carried a bit too far in side, one feels. The white wood work is plain; the rooms are small. In the last few years, new rugs and draperies have been added, but even yet there remains much to be done.

Since Mrs. Dan Moody went out, a commission has been appointed, consisting of ex-governors, wives and the wife of whatever governor is in the Mansion at the time, to keep the Mansion in better repair and also to furnish it gradually in a Colonial manner that is appropriate to its style of architecture and to see that it kept that way and not torn up with every change of Governor. Mrs. Moody said it was almost threadbare when she went in but she was afraid to do much remodeling for fear of censure from the state.

She was probably right. If, however, women throughout the state will visit the Mansion whenever they have the opportunity, just as we did, there will be no criticism when the governor's wife wants some upholstering done or a little paint applied to the peeling woodwork.

Tomorrow I am going to tell you about seeing the Austin Women's Club and the new Federation headquarters in process of erection.

Mrs. H. C. Timmons Has Thursday Luncheon Club

Mrs. H. C. Timmons entertained the members of the Thursday Luncheon Club for an attractive luncheon at the Crawford Hotel. Perfect refreshments were plate favors for the guests.

After the three-course luncheon the members played in an upstairs suite. Mrs. Woodward made high score and received a nice prize. Mrs. Blomfield and Mrs. Bristow tied for second high; in the cut Mrs. Bristow received the high card and so was given the dainty prize.

Mrs. Baxley returned to the club at this meeting. Mrs. Olive Bristow was the only guest. Other members present were Miss G. R. Porter, Garland Woodward, E. V. Spence, C. S. Blomfield, J. E. Kuykendall and J. L. Webb.

Mrs. Woodward will be the next hostess.

Little Betty Sue Burlison Give Nice Birthday Party

Little Miss Betty Sue Burlison, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Burlison, celebrated her fifth birthday with a party Wednesday afternoon for her little friends.

The time was spent in playing enjoyable games. A lovely pink and white birthday cake, topped with five lighted candles, was cut and the slices, served with ice cream to the guests.

Those attending were Miss Burton Boyd, Dorothy Wixerson, Bobby and Marie Hickson, Bobbie Chapman, Marvin and Bobby Wright, Mary Jo Morrison, James, Janetta Pau and Bonnie Jean Byers, Lafan Busbee, Luther Gene Gray, Joe B. Curse.

Personally Speaking

Mrs. G. R. Porter and Mrs. Cecil Mitchell returned the first part of the week from a visit to Waxahachie and Dallas.

Mrs. C. C. Russell and daughter, Annette, returned to San Angelo last week-end. Mrs. Della K. Agnew accompanied them home for Mother's Day.

NOW SCIENCE TELLS WHY BRAN IS SO GOOD FOR HEALTH

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN Has "Bulk" and Vitamin B; Also Healthful Iron

By using Kellogg's ALL-BRAN millions of people have overcome common constipation, and the headaches, loss of appetite and energy that so frequently result.

New laboratory tests show ALL-BRAN supplies two things needed to overcome temporary and recurring constipation: "Bulk" to exercise the intestines; Vitamin B to help tone the intestinal tract.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is much like that of lettuce. Within the body it forms a soft mass. Gently it clears the intestines of wastes.

Further experiments prove ALL-BRAN provides twice as much blood-building iron as an equal amount by weight of beef liver.

Eat this delicious cereal and avoid pills and drugs. They cause artificial action, and often lead to harmful habits.

Try two tablespoonsful of Kellogg's ALL-BRAN daily—sufficient to overcome most types of constipation. If your intestinal troubles is not relieved this way, see your doctor.

ALL-BRAN has a delicious, nut-sweet flavor. Enjoy as a cereal with milk or cream, or use in making fluffy bran muffins, breads, omelets, etc. Recipes on the red-and-green package. Sold by all grocers. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

Ford Branch Plant At Houston To Resume Operations On Monday

HOUSTON, (UP)—The Ford Motor company's branch plant here will resume operations on a full-time basis Monday morning, giving employment to 500 men, District Manager F. S. Reinhart announced today.

At present 250 men are employed at the plant. Reinhart said production of the new model cars will be stepped up gradually until at least 1,300 men are at work in a few weeks.

Wages of the workmen, who will work eight hours daily, will average about $7 a day, Reinhart said.

B. S. Lankford, 84, Dies At Home In Minnola

MINNOLA, (UP)—D. S. Lankford, 84, for the past 10 years a resident of this city and a former mayor of Minnola, died here after an illness of thirty days.

Lankford was for 35 years in the drug business here and was a director of the Minnola State bank for 25 years. During the administration of President Woodrow Wilson he was Minnola postmaster.

He is survived by his widow, two sons and a daughter, all residents of this city, and three sisters.

Funeral services will be held today.

Growing seasons of 90 days are found in 90 per cent of the United States.

These Recipes Will Utilize Left-overs In Welcome Ways

By JOSEPHINE GIBSON
Meat remaining from last night's roast and bits of vegetables in the refrigerator need not appear on today's table in a form in which they will be recognized. They may be served in almost numberless dishes so flavorful and tempting that the family will enthuse about them. By adding a flavorful sauce, or by combining with another food an entirely new dish may be made. Vegetables offer possibilities for sandwiches and salads and the meats for pie, or delicious hash. Try these recipes for thrifty, flavorful dishes. They will bring welcome variety to your table.
Delicious Hash: Combine one cup grated cheese, two cups Rice Flakes, one egg, one teaspoon Worcestershire Sauce and a dash of pepper. Place a generous layer in a buttered baking dish, add a layer of chopped cooked ham and repeat, using remaining ingredients. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) until cheese is melted and the top slightly brown (about 15 minutes). If left-over ham is not available, use thin slices of cold boiled, or baked ham.
Vegetable Salad Sandwiches: Mix one large tomato, finely diced, 1-2 medium sized cucumber, finely diced, 2 tablespoons minced onion, 1-2 medium size green pepper, minced, 8 to 10 stuffed Spanish olives, 2 cups shredded lettuce, and salt to taste, and spread between slices of whole wheat bread which have been spread with mayonnaise salad dressing. Cut into rectangles, but do not remove crust. Serve with meat, egg or bean salad.
Baked Beans and Egg Salad: Place 2 cups oven baked beans in a sieve and wash with boiling water, then cool. Add 3 chopped hard cooked egg whites, 6 preserved sweet gherkins, chopped, 1 small chopped onion and 1-2 teaspoon salt. Moisten with mayonnaise and serve in crisp lettuce cups. Garnish with mayonnaise and egg yolks, pressed through a sieve. Serve very cold. Serves 4.

Benign and Malignant Tumors

(Fourth of a series of ten articles on cancer issued by the Texas Medical Association.)
All tumors, or new growths of the body are divided into two large groups, the "benign" and the "malignant." Those called "benign" are, as the term implies, comparatively harmless; the others are called "malignant" because of their disastrous effects upon the body. The malignant tumors are commonly called "cancers."
Benign and malignant tumors are alike in their disorderly growth and their failure to serve any useful purpose in the body. In other very important respects they differ widely.
1. The benign tumor usually grows slowly. The malignant tumor (cancer) usually grows rapidly.
2. The benign tumor merely pushes aside the parts which surround it. The malignant tumor grows into the tissues about it and may destroy them.
3. The benign tumor is quite self-contained and does not spread throughout the body. The malignant tumor has irregular outlines and almost always spreads to distant parts of the body.
4. The benign tumor is dangerous to life only when growing in some vital organ, such as the brain. The malignant tumor is dangerous to life wherever it may grow.
These differences between the benign and malignant tumor, however, are by no means as plain as they might seem. In actual practice, it is very difficult to say of many tumors, especially in their beginning, whether they are benign or malignant, whether they are cancer or not cancer. Only the specially skilled physician, by thorough examination and numerous tests, is able to determine the real nature of some tumors.
The failure to distinguish between benign and malignant tumors, in the early stages of their development, is directly responsible for much of the tragedy that occurs in connection with cancer.
There are few circumstances in the course of human life where knowledge counts so much and ignorance proves so disastrous.

Shreveport Teams Without A Home; Owners 'Through'

SHREVEPORT, La. (UP) — Shreveports sports of the Texas League were without a home field and emphatic refusal of management of the Caddo Baseball Association has been given that no attempts will be made to replace the stands and clubhouse burned last week.
O. I. Biedenham, speaking for the association, said the group was through with organized professional baseball in the Louisiana city, that baseball had resulted in a loss of $250,000 in Shreveport. Biedenham said the $25,000 of insurance carried on the stands, would, if collected, not be applied toward reconstruction of the stands.
B. A. Hardey, president of the Caddo association, said the ultimate home for the team had not been chosen. Tyler is the team's home port now.
Tyler was selected in a contest with Longview.
Hardey said other East Texas towns had made a bid for the Shreveport team.
"Our option runs to November 1," Hardey said, "and there will be some time after the season ends to determine whether a stock company can be formed to buy the club or find some other means of keeping baseball in Shreveport."

PIGGLY WIGGLY

People, not tenets of statesmen in the beginning inscribed upon fragile parchment, determine the virtues, the strength, or the vulnerability and weakness of governments.

THE Constitution is little more than a grandiloquent declamation if and when the people for which it was written insist upon its sanctity but disregard their duty to uphold it.

Have the constitution, laws, men, and brains of the United States of America become so saturated with selfishness, so doused in greed, so pickled by what America allowed herself to call 'prosperity' that the lives of children are not safe?

Moreover, criminals may steal children from their very homes, snatch them from their cradles and safely keep beyond the agencies set up to enforce laws we have so strenuously lulled ourselves into believing are sufficient within themselves to keep us and the things we hold dear safe always and everywhere.

IN the Lindbergh case the extent to which organized crime has gripped America has been all the more clearly shown by the fact that parents of the stolen, murdered child had to barter with the underworld in their efforts to find their baby.

And yet, men and women of America by millions of words carelessly spoken every day contribute to the undermining of their government.

We decry crime, charge its growth to the very enforcement agencies which we formed and whose personnel we selected, at the polls.

We weep for the future of our nation and grieve with the parents of this child.

YET, we weakly, foolishly, almost criminally by word and deed we cry out against "the government."

Good men and women by their silence add strength to those in the midst of every American community who seek the same ultimate ends that the gangs of our great cities have gained.

Our destructive tongues themselves go farther toward depriving us of life, liberty and pursuit of happiness than all else.

By destructive word and action we exert our own influence in a direction opposite from that which we criticize "the government" for not providing.

We—the people, in every town, every city, on the farms, in the factories and ranches—we are the government. This nation today is what her people have made it.

We shout for safety and despite the laws upon our statute books—laws enacted by our elected representatives.

When will we, the American people, retrieve lost courage, discard blind prejudice, gain unselfishness, make real our boasted grandness, cure "traditional" security, our empty dignity and make impossible the overriding of the laws we have ourselves devaluated?

TODAY, as America and the world weep with Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh, our first thought is that the murderers of their child should be punished—put to death.

But, did this awful thing not happen in our country?

Can we with clear conscience say that this very crime was not a part and parcel of The American Scene that the people have created?

Crime is as inevitable as this earth is perishable.

But crime, so widespread, so fortified by wealth and so ingrained into our government, is no tiny branch. It is fed from the roots of the National Body itself.

Until the Man-In-The-Street turns his brain and brawn, his voice and heart from petty ways that destroy into constructive actions that will through love for Civilized Living return Faith in Democracy and put Truth in the Security it was born to provide the American people must, after all, stand and done, enter a plea of guilty to contribution to conditions that lend safety to High Crime.

We are accessories before and after the fact.

AKRON AIR TRAGEDY

One of two men killed in an effort to moor the navy dirigible Akron at San Diego, Calif., May 11, is shown here dropping to his death after he and two companions were jerked into the air by the giant ship. The man falling to the right of the mooring mast is Robert H. Edfall of South Bend, Ind. Shortly thereafter, Nigel Heaton, Fresno, Calif., shown a still clinging to the rope also plunged to the earth to be crushed to death. Burt Cowart, the third man, hung on and was finally pulled to safety into the forward hatch of the Akron.

Congressmen's Families Report For "Work" Following Articles On "Family Payroll" Situation

By RAYMOND CLAPPER WASHINGTON, (UP)—Congressional wives, daughters and other relatives who are on the legislative payroll are showing up for work in increasing numbers as a result of inquiries from back home.

There has been many a family council among members of congress since the United Press recently began describing the extensive congressional payroll racket. Elections are coming and congressmen are giving their wives the choice of working for the salary they draw or of being cut off the rolls.

The result is new faces are appearing around the congressional offices daily. A number are going off the payroll but the names are being withheld as senators and congressmen insist on keeping these lists secret until they become obsolete.

Some congressmen are complaining although their wives work, they are lumped with those who carry non-working relatives on the rolls. There is the case of Rep. Albert Carter, Rep. Calif., which might be easily misunderstood unless one inquired into it. His wife is on the payroll at about $40 a week. She left for California last week to spend the summer but she is being continued on the payroll.

According to her husband, she will have charge of the congressional office which he maintains in the Oakland hotel, in Oakland, Calif. Mrs. Carter and her niece sailed last Saturday on the navy transport Henderson, via the Panama Canal, a trip lasting three weeks. There is no charge for a congressman's wife or family, except the $150 a day mess fee. Thus for $30 a congressman or his wife can take a trip that would cost at least $120 on a commercial boat for the most modest accommodations.

AUSTIN—Numbers of county fee officials who have gone back and made painstaking and conscientious search, since the investigations started, have been able to find items, mostly small, about which they were in doubt. These doubt have been resolved in favor of the state.

The result is that several hundred items, aggregating probably $10,000 or $15,000, have been found, and the money remitted to the treasury, which never would have been looked up on old accounts, except for the fee inquiry.

The same attitude toward new fee items have caused officials to pay over to the state small amounts that likely otherwise would have rested finally with the officers.

These sums in general are not those whose holding would involve criminal proceedings; but mostly are such as are doubtful in their proper destination, and such that being remitted to the treasury make them more likely to escape

Confusion or controversy.

Here is one advantage of a department's having fuller control over its revenues and disbursements than granted the usual agency of the state. The game department, foreseeing a shortage of $49,000 in its customary revenues from hunting licenses, tightened up on its expenses to the amount of $50,000. It did this by dropping 18 employees, by cutting down travel expense accounts, and by reducing salaries.

Its traveling deputies get three cents per mile instead of the five cents allowed by law.

Executive Secy. Will Tucker hasn't made out an expense account for his own travel since last fall.

It is the only department so far as known that had cut its salaries before this present agitation for budget-trimming got under way.

Senators Walter C. Woodward and Walter F. Woodul, Gen. Jacob F. Wolters and Gov. Ross S. Sterling were members of a group reaching Austin together during the past week.

Sen. Woodward, another of the group who will run for governor, if Mr. Sterling doesn't, reaffirmed that he has not the slightest inkling of Gov. Sterling's plans.

Woodul and Woodward were at work on the growing boom for Speaker John N. Garner.

If Mr. Garner is elected, it will be easy to find in Texas the four or five men who will stand close to the throne.

The civil judicial council is going to find out just how long the average case requires for final disposition in supreme court.

Members A. P. Johnson, Carrizo Springs, and R. W. Statton, Austin, have begun an analysis of the time that each case stays on the books.

books of the court, and this will be published to the legislature and the state as part of the work of the civil judicial council, along with another table that exploded the theory that district judges are overworked.

One of the cases they will encounter is the Fred Turner case, which has had up about $50,000,000 of payments in its own outcome, and has dependent cases which Atty. Gen. Allred said involved that much more. This case has been on supreme court's docket three years and three months.

And then it will find Tom Love's suit against the democratic party... settled in 16 days.

Final adjournment

When Big Spring's band and delegation had finished a brief jubilee in the Bluebonnet hotel lobby following their parade this morning, the T. C. U. band from Fort Worth dedicated a number to Big Spring and Chauncy Welten, chief of the Fort Worth delegation, told the crowd to vote for Big Spring for 1933.

"Nothing could suit me better than to come to Big Spring," said Welten.

of the condition of the child.

Physicians later theorized the compound fracture was caused either by a terrific blow on the head with a blunt instrument or from the effects of being hurled from a car.

The best medical estimate was that the body had been exposed to weather "about two months." However, physicians explained, the child might have been abandoned on the same night he was stolen from his home.

Allowed Bond Forfeiture

WASHINGTON (AP)—Gaston B. Means was allowed to forfeit a $60 bond on charges of assault, drunkenness and disorderly conduct, after he was arrested yesterday, after attacking Lee Sommers, a reporter.

Means will be arraigned today on the charge of embezzling $104,000 from Mrs. Edward E. McLean, claiming he would recover the Lindbergh baby.
