

CONVENTION SUCCESS DESPITE COLD

LOCAL BAPTIST CONVENTION IS WELL ATTENDED

Delegates of Twelve Churches Here for Meeting Yesterday

Approximately 100 delegates, representing 12 churches of this vicinity, attended the quarterly meeting yesterday afternoon here of the Panhandle B.T.U. Association. The meeting was held in the First Baptist Church.

Officials for the Panhandle Association were elected yesterday. F. N. Allen of Turkey was named director of the association, and Rev. Truman Caldwell, Hedley, was named associate director. Mrs. Caldwell was elected pianist and Mrs. Jim Fullingim of Memphis was made director of the Beginners Department. Mrs. Naylor, Clarendon, is director of the Primary Department; Miss Zady Belle Walker, Memphis, director of the Intermediate Department; Mrs. O. K. Webb, Memphis, director of the Senior Department, and Rev. Roy Brewster, Lakeview, is director of the Adult Department. G. S. Scott was named chorister and Prof. Lewis of Harrell Chapel was elected secretary-treasurer.

The next quarterly meeting is to be held in Lakeview. Rev. J. A. Howard of Panhandle spoke yesterday on "An Associational B.T.U. Revival" and Mrs. Howard spoke on "B.T.U. Goals." Rev. Leonard Siegle of Clinton, Okla., addressed the audience on "Christ Must Reign."

During the first week of March the association is to conduct a revival at several of the association churches, at which time the study courses will be conducted in the different churches with a view to increasing interest in B. T. U. work. Rev. O. K. Webb, local Baptist pastor, announced.

TRUSTEES NAMED COUNTY BOARD

E. M. Loy of Friendship and Vance Wingrove of Pleasant Valley were appointed school trustees Friday afternoon by the Hall County School Board, as the board met for a calling meeting in the office of the county school superintendent at 2:30 o'clock.

Discussion of bus routes was held, but no bus routes were changed. H. W. Kuhn, president of the board, presided over the meeting.

Mr. Loy replaces E. E. Shipman, and Mrs. Wingrove replaces W. J. McMasters, both of whom have moved from their communities.

CALL BEER ELECTION FOR COUNTY

Commissioners Court to Set Date for County-Wide Vote

Bearing the signatures of 161 Hall County citizens and voters, a petition calling for an election to determine whether the sale of beer shall be prohibited or legalized in Hall County was to be presented the Hall County Commissioners' Court today, as the court met for its regular monthly session.

The petition had previously been filed with Floyd Springer, county clerk. The Commissioners Court will probably set an election date this afternoon, County Judge Jim Vallance, who presides over the court, stated.

The 161 names signed on the petition were well over the number required to force the calling of an election. According to law, a petition bearing signatures of ten per cent of the voters who cast ballots in the last general election may force an election. There were less than 1,000 taking part in the last general election, and it was thought that about 80 signers could ask an election.

When the election is held it will mark the first county-wide election on beer in this county. In 1911 the county voted on general prohibition, and at various times since the liquor question has been up. Precincts number one and number four have voted at different times on the beer question.

Beer was sold legally in Memphis until last fall, when the Texas

RESCUED FROM ICE
 By Associated Press
 BOSTON, Feb. 10.—Seven CCC youths, marooned on floating ice in Cape Cod Bay since noon Sunday, were rescued by Coast Guardsmen this morning. They had been cast adrift when the ice broke from the mainland at Brewster. The rescue was accomplished by the use of a small boat which the guardsmen pushed over the rough floating ice to the youths, after a patrol boat had failed to break through the thick ice. The youths were in two groups a mile apart. One is reported suffering from frozen feet.

A quiet, demure Senator Long of Louisiana will serve in the present session of Congress, a striking contrast to the militant, fire-breathing Senator Long of the last session. Left to right are Palmer Reid, Mrs. Long, Russell—whose resemblance to his late father is striking—and Rosa.

DEFER TVA DECISION

By Associated Press
 WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—The Supreme Court again this morning deferred its decision on the Tennessee Valley Authority until at least next Monday. Only five opinions were delivered. One of them held that the Louisiana law taxing newspapers, magazine and motion picture advertisements was unconstitutional. The decision was on the law passed at the behest of the late Huey Long.

The Weather

WEST TEXAS: Fair, slightly warmer in north and east tonight; Tuesday fair, warmer in southeast.
 EAST TEXAS: Partly cloudy, slightly warmer in northwest, near freezing on west coast; Tuesday partly cloudy and warmer.

Local Cold Wave Is Now on Decline

With clearing skies and slightly higher temperature, backed up by a forecast of warmer weather tonight and tomorrow, the cold wave which has held Memphis in its frigid grip the past few days seems to be on its way out.

With the thermometer registering a minimum of 4 degrees above zero Friday night, the coldest of the winter, the past three days have been unpleasantly cold. The temperature this morning at 8:00 o'clock was 22 degrees, which had risen by noon to 37 degrees. The sky today is clear.

ATTENDANCE IS LIGHT; CARRY OUT PROGRAM

Name Winifred Swift Delegate to Stock Show, Fort Worth

Despite the fact that attendance at the joint district meeting here of the Home Economics Clubs and the Future Farmers of America Saturday was curtailed considerably by the severe weather conditions, the joint session was hailed as an outstanding success in interest and accomplishment by both school organizations.

Seventeen from Estelina, accompanied by the Home-Ec instructor; two from McLean, accompanied by the instructor; one from Wellington, one from Claude and 50 from Memphis, together with the instructor, registered for the district Home-Ec Club meeting. Approximately 60 Future Farmers of America, consisting of delegations from Estelina, Clarendon, McLean and Memphis, attended the area rally of the F.F.A. organizations.

Notwithstanding the fact that only about a fifth of the anticipated number attended the joint meeting, the scheduled program was carried out at the Home-Ec meet, and only one point of the F.F.A. program was cancelled. The Memphis Home Economics girls had prepared the state approved program in order that they might fill in should delegations on the program fail to appear. Most of the program was put on by the Memphis girls.

The soil conservation demonstration to be conducted by J. C. Eberole, Memphis SCS agronomist, was called off because of the adverse weather conditions, and the F.F.A. laid attended a program put on by the Memphis Public Speaking Department at the High School.

High light of the Home-Ec meeting was the address given by Miss Esther Sorenson Lubbock, district home-making supervisor, who spoke on "Texas Women." A tea for all Home-Ec girls was held at the conclusion of the meeting.

A resolution was adopted at the meeting Saturday to name the Home Economics clubs in this district the Future Home Makers of America, to be in parallel with the Future Farmers of America.

Winifred Swift, president of the Memphis chapter of the Future Farmers of America, was unanimously elected and delegated to attend the Fat Stock Show and Exposition in Fort Worth from this area the second week in March. Mr. Swift will represent Memphis.

LIBRARY BOARD HEARS REPORTS

The regular quarterly meeting of the Memphis Carnegie Library Board was held Friday evening at the local library.

A report of the library activities for the last quarter was given by Miss Byrd Pressler, librarian; and routine matters affecting the welfare of the library were discussed.

THE ANGLO-U. S. BOND

THE hardy American may be a rough and ready guy who has reverence for practically nothing but home and mother, but it does seem sometimes as if he had never quite outgrown his ancient habit of tipping his hat whenever a king passed by.

The British empire is mourning another monarch, and to judge by the amount of sentiment stirred up in the United States by the event one would almost be led to assume that 1776 was all a regrettable mistake; that the only thing we can do, as gentlemen, is to invite the redcoats to come back and camp on the summit of Bunker Hill.

We have had Edward's entire past rehased for us. We have gone once more into his falls from the saddle, into his ability as a dancer, his sunny smile, his notions of styles for men and his fondness for the company of attractive women of high but not regal birth.

We have seen endless lists of the European princesses who will be eligible to marry him, if he will have them.

We have had reams of good paper spoiled by sirupy articles about the dainty little Princess Elizabeth, daughter of the Duke of York, who bids fair to attain an American popularity second only to that of Shirley Temple.

All this might lead a cynic to suspect that there is something in the complacent British assumption that the United States is, after all, just another British dominion—a dominion which perversely fails to take the oath of allegiance to the British crown, but which, none the less, is fundamentally sound.

This might easily go on for column after column, wagging the head sadly over the apparently incurable Anglomania of the American people. But once we have had our fun with the notion, we might as well go on to recognize the fact that all this intense American preoccupation with British royalty is the visible symbol of a deep, underlying community of interest between the two great English-speaking nations.

V. L. McGlocklin Friday in the window at Perry's, arranging a display of hammocks. At least we thought they were hammocks, but the way the young ladies blushed when we mentioned them, maybe they weren't hammocks after all.

The Methodist preacher partaking of an Alka-Seltzer at Meacham's fountain about four o'clock Saturday afternoon. Funny how different folks are different; personally, we have to have our effervescent drink early the next morning.

The preacher said he was counteracting the effects of a cup of mid-afternoon coffee he drank at Roper's. Don't know whether that was a reflection on Roper or Ottie Jones, who sells the coffee.

And speaking of Meacham's—we noticed several things while in there. Charlie has installed nicely upholstered stools for his fountain customers, which make the drinks taste even better. . . . Henry Boyd's cute little cookie-duster appeared to be about two hairs heavier. . . . A large collection of prize bicycles and other articles in the front of the store that made it look like Santa Claus should be hanging around somewhere.

Janitor Anderson of the courthouse one day last week surveying the situation in regard to pigeons and wondering how he'd get rid of the birds. It seems they keep him awake at night, or something.

Only two kids sliding down the banisters at the courthouse Saturday, in place of the several dozen who usually make this their Saturday pastime.

Behind the Scenes in Washington

By RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON—It might seem funny if Congress and the administration had had to turn the business of saving the farmers over to Interior Secretary Harold Ickes, but the idea isn't as absurd as some people might suppose it to be.

The attempt to graft the AAA onto the soil conservation act is of especial interest to Ickes and his pals, because Ickes conceived the conservation plan, sold it by making the public "soil erosion conscious," built the Soil Erosion Service, wrote the act, lobbied it through congressional committees—and then the whole show was snatched away from him just before the final vote on the act.

The old NIRA, in its public works section, provided for erosion control. PWA was trying hard to get some money spent. Feeding cash into rural areas proved especially difficult.

Ickes was especially concerned with erosion, because it had damaged Indian lands under his care, so he decided to allot $5,000,000 to proving erosion could be controlled. As chief of the project, he appointed H. H. Bennett, who for 25 years had been shouting—unheeded—the dangers of erosion.

MOST bureaus in the Department of Agriculture fought for control of the five million. Unable to decide rival claims of the Forest Service, Extension Service, the Bureau of Agricultural Engineering, Chemistry and Soils, and others, Undersecretary Tugwell finally concurred with Ickes' idea that the new service be kept in the Interior Department.

Plans were laid. William A. F.

Stephenson was named chief of operations in January, 1934, and by June the SES was spending $800,000 a month and was busy with 4000 employes on 40 projects of erosion control.

Ickes boosted the allotment to $20,000,000. The force was doubled by fall.

Ickes and his subordinates preached erosion control, reams of propaganda were sent out, the country began to get the idea, and soon nearly every farm county was holding for a demonstration project.

Timing his plan with the first big dust storm, Ickes decided the service should be permanent and had legislation drafted. His men preached the idea to Congress and his bill was reported favorably.

THEN some persons in the Agriculture department got to working under cover. One day while Ickes was in Florida, Roosevelt authorized Tugwell to introduce a resolution to transfer funds and personnel to Agriculture, at a meeting of the special public works board.

The board, of which Ickes was chairman, voted the transfer unanimously and Roosevelt signed an order to that effect. Ickes read about it in the newspapers.

The bill, setting up the Soil Conservation Service, was amended by substituting "Agriculture" for "Interior" at the last minute.

The Ickes group thinks the service hasn't amounted to anything since. But the fact that the act is being administered under Secretary Wallace saved the administration from having to appeal to Ickes for an act under which to operate a farm program.

The STRANGE CASE of JULIA CRAIG

by Nard Jones Copyright NEA 1935

BEGIN HERE TODAY

JULIA CRAIG, pretty young secretary to GEORGE WOODFORD, lawyer, is ambitious to become a night club singer. Julia shares an apartment with AMY SANDERS.

PETER KEMP, young lawyer, is in love with Julia but they quarrel and Julia declares she never wants to see him again.

Woodford gives a party aboard his yacht and asks Julia to come to sing for his guests, including CINTRA LEE, dancer, MRS. JOSEPH, widow; HUGO NASH and ROYAL NESBITT.

On board, Julia discovers the trip is to be much longer than a week-end. The yacht lands at Evergreen Island where Woodford has a lodge. Julia meets TOM PAYSON who agrees to help her get away, but he is discovered on the yacht and accused of tampering with the radio. After an angry scene he is allowed to depart.

Back home Julia is hired to sing on TONY LATTA'S gambling ship. Tom Payson comes to the ship frequently. One night, after winning heavily, Tom is threatened. He and Julia escape in a speedboat.

Woodford telephones Julia and she goes to his office. He warns her not to tell anyone about what happened on the yacht trip.

Nesbitt's body is discovered. A policeman comes to the night club, tells Julia she must go to headquarters for questioning.

Now Go On With the Story

CHAPTER XXII

As long as Julia Craig lived she would never spend another hour such as the one which followed her entrance into that dark building with Dunphy at her side. The big Irishman had been full of consideration, but it was all too obvious that he regarded her with suspicion. He had watched Julia's every move, even during the ride in the taxi from the White Club.

"But what can they want me for?" she asked him nervously. "I don't know anything about it."

He grinned. "It don't do any good to tell me that, miss. You got to tell that to the captain and the prosecuting attorney."

That was while they were in the taxi, before he had led her into a cluttered, dimly lit office where two men sat in a thick haze of cigar smoke. One was unformed, thick-set and almost bald. The other was young and sharp-featured. As he turned his head to look at Julia he reminded her of some bird of prey suddenly regarding a field mouse.

"This is Julia Craig," Dunphy said, as if she were some insignificant object he had just taken from his pocket and tossed onto the table.

The police captain nodded. "Sorry to trouble you, Miss Craig. But Mr. Buchen, our prosecuting attorney, has some questions to ask you."

The younger man smiled, but there was nothing in his smile which appealed to Julia as she obeyed his order—it was hardly an invitation—to sit down.

"You were aboard George Woodford's yacht when it cruised up to his hunting lodge on Evergreen Island, weren't you, Miss Craig?"

"Yes. But—"

"Please. . . ." He held up a meticulously manicured hand. "Just answer my questions, Miss Craig. It will be easier—and quicker. Now," he stopped a moment, giving her that false smile again, "now, you saw Royal Nesbitt."

"Of course."

"When was the last time you saw him?"

"The evening before he—"

"Was murdered?" asked Buchen quickly.

"I—I wasn't going to say that."

Again Buchen's smile. "Of course not. What were you going to say?"

"I saw him the evening before he disappeared from the yacht. They told me he'd stopped off at Condon to take the plane into town."

"Why?"

"There'd been a hunting accident. Mr. Nesbitt was shot in the shoulder, and—" Julia stopped, confused and helpless. She grew suddenly angry. "Why are you asking me all these questions? Why don't you ask Mr. Woodford? It was his yacht, Nesbitt was his guest, and—"

"I've already talked with George Woodford," said the prosecuting attorney. "In fact," his voice grew smooth, "it was he who suggested we talk to you."

Julia's mouth opened in astonishment. "Why did he suggest that? Why don't you talk with the rest? With Nash, and Mrs. Joseph—"

"All in good time," interrupted the police captain. "Just now we wanted to see you."

"How long had you known Nesbitt? Before you made this yachting trip?"

"Yes," Julia answered—and then could have slit her own tongue.

"Indeed?" said Buchen, his eyes widening. "How long before?"

Julia bit her lip. Unwittingly she had opened the way for Amy to be dragged into this. And that mustn't happen. She'd had nothing to do with it, and if her name were brought in she might easily lose her job at the exclusive dress shop.

"Come on, Miss Craig. Answer the question. How long before this cruise had you known Nesbitt?"

"About a year."

"Ever go out with him, Miss Craig?"

Julia shook her head "No. . . ."

"That's curious. You knew him a year, yet you'd never been out with him. It was a business relationship, then?"

"No—it wasn't."

"No?" repeated Buchen. "Did he call on you, then, at your apartment?"

"Yes," Julia said quickly. "That's where I saw him."

The captain and prosecutor exchanged significant glances, as if to say, "Now we're getting somewhere!" Julia could feel beads of perspiration on her forehead. Her hand trembled violently as she raised it to brush them away. The room seemed to be swaying.

"I can't stand this," she told them suddenly, her voice breaking. "It's not fair! It's not fair! I tell you I—"

"There, there, Miss Craig. Just one more question, then that's all. Did anything happen at Evergreen Island that was at all curious? I mean, beyond the hunting accident?"

He talked with Woodford, Julia told herself. He knows about Payson. "Y-yes," she faltered. "A man tried to get into the radio room of the boat."

"Oh, yes. Who was he?"

"I—I don't know." She stood up uncertainly. "That's all now?"

Buchen bowed slightly. "For the present, yes. But I must ask you to remain here as a material witness."

"You mean I—I have to stay in jail?" She looked from one to the other, horrified.

"It's not so bad," the police captain said. "I'll see that the matron, Mrs. Barton—"

"But isn't there anyway you can fix it so I don't have to stay?"

Buchen nodded, told her that she might be released on bail. He named a figure which to Julia seemed fantastic.

"But I haven't that much money! I—I couldn't possibly raise it."

Mr. Buchen shrugged. The police captain bent over a paper on his desk. Then the door opened, and a black-garbed elderly woman entered. Julia felt the room whirling faster than ever. She knew that her knees were failing her—and then, quite suddenly, she knew nothing at all. . . .

When she opened her eyes she lay on a strange, narrow bed in a small room which contained, besides a bureau and a chair—and one small framed lithograph on the wall. She lay there numbed in body and mind, too dazed to review the swift chain of events which had put her in this place, and too weary to think of getting out.

She looked at the door, surprised that it held no bars. But it was obviously heavy, and the lock was competent. As she looked at it the knob turned, the door opened, and she saw the woman in black. Behind her was Tom Payson.

"Julia! . . ." He hurried to the side of the bed and lifted her to a sitting posture. "Julia, I just now heard what happened, and came down at once. Let's get out of here as quickly as you can manage."

She looked at him vaguely. "I can't, Tom. They're—they're holding me as a material witness, I think they called it."

"But I've put up bail. You're free to leave. All you need do is be available."

"Tom, you can't do that," Julia protested.

"But I have done it! Come on, Julia. I've my car outside."

She was wordless all the way to the apartment, and Payson did not ask questions. He seemed to know that Julia had answered enough questions for one night. But he insisted on going upstairs with her.

In the hall of Julia's floor they encountered Peter Kemp. His tie was awry and his eyes were wide with excitement. "Julia, I was just going down to see what had happened." He stopped, looked at Payson. "Is Miss Craig out on bail?"

Payson nodded. "It's a rotten trick. They had no right to take her down there like that, and she's no more a material witness than you are."

"That's Buchen. He's out to get somewhere politically in this town." Kemp turned to Julia again. "I'm going to defend you, Julia, if they try to point it at you."

"But look here," said Payson suddenly, "I was going to have my own lawyer handle it. She couldn't do any better, you know. It's G. Williams Miller."

Peter Kemp looked at Julia.

"I—it's nice of you, Tom," Julia said. "But I've known Peter a long time, and I have confidence in him. Even more confidence than I'd have in your lawyer." She stopped, leaned wearily against the wall with her head in her hands. "Peter . . . do you think it really will be bad for me?"

Mr. and Mrs. George Bass and granddaughter, Sue Lynn Guthrie, returned Saturday from a visit with their daughter, Mrs. Ernest Lee in Waco. They visited Mr. Bass' parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Bass in Mineral Wells en route home. Mrs. Sam Moore and daughter, Elenor Lynn, of Estelline accompanied them on the trip.

Archie and Tobe Williams left Saturday morning for their home at Hynes and Long Beach, Calif., after being here on account of the illness and death of their father, J. C. Williams.

Your Income Tax

Who Must File Returns

Returns are required of every single person who for the year 1935 had a gross income of $5,000 or more or a net income of $1,000 or more and of every husband and wife living together who for the year 1935 had an aggregate gross income of $5,000 or more or an aggregate net income of $2,500 or more. Widowers, widows, divorcees, and married persons separated by mutual consent are classed as single persons. The personal exemptions are $1,000 for single persons and $2,500 for married persons living together and for heads of families.

Husband and wife living together may make separate returns of the income of each or their income may be included in a single joint return. If separate returns are filed, one may not report income which belongs to the other but must report only the income which actually belongs to him. If a joint return is filed, such return is treated as a taxable unit, and the income disclosed is subject to both the normal tax and the surtax.

Husband and wife may elect each year whether to file a joint return or separate returns. Where, however, joint or separate returns have been filed for a particular year, neither husband nor wife may after the due date of the return file an amended return on returns in a different basis for that year.

Pampa Defeats Terrible Turks

Special to The Democrat
TURKEY, Feb. 10.—The Terrible Turks suffered a defeat at the hands of the Pampa Harvesters here Friday night 26-22. This was the Turks' second game with the Harvesters this year, having defeated them earlier in the season 23-20.

The score Friday night at mid-time was 17-8 for Pampa, but the Turks rallied in the third quarter and made nine to Pampa's two points. Early in the fourth the Turks tied the score at 20-20, but were unable to match the Harvesters' next six points.

Coker was high for the Turks with eight. Yarbrough was next with seven. Green was high for Pampa with 10. This was the Turks' second defeat of the year, having won 18 out of 20 starts.

The Turks, who are favored to win the county title, are to play in the county tournament at Estelline next Friday and Saturday.

OLD-AGE PENSION REQUIREMENTS

Property Limitations

AUSTIN, Feb. 10.—Because $7,500 worth of property for a married and $5,000 for a single person are listed as legal disqualifications under the old-age assistance law, applicants necessarily should be able to give adequate description of all real property owned, as well as personal property if the latter is valued at $1,000 or more, Orville S. Carpenter, who will be Executive Director of the Old Age Assistance Commission, said today concerning the new law.

"Each applicant should be able to describe all personal property, including jewelry, furniture, and live stock, in addition to his or her real property," Mr. Carpenter explained.

All applicants should have the following information available:

- (1) Original purchase price and date of purchase of all property.
 - (2) Description of property from the county tax assessor telling block number, etc.
 - (3) Amount property rendered for on tax rolls.
 - (4) Name of lien holder and amount still due on mortgage, as well as total equity in property. Also date and amount of lien.
 - (5) Description of all property disposed of during the last two years, person sold to, and purchase price obtained from such sale. Also date of transfer.
- Applicants will be able to get blanks in their own locality February 14. These forms may be filed as soon as filled out by applicants.
