Revealing Munitions Secrets

That King George of England had intervened in negotiations between an American munitions company and the Polish government two years ago in behalf of Vickers, Ltd., English armament firm, was the testimony of Louis L. Driggs, president of the Driggs Ordnance and Engineering Co. of New York, before the Senate munitions committee. Driggs (right) is shown with L. F. NON-JURY CASES TAKEN BEFORE JUDGE FIRES

Two Divorcees Given By District Court; One Settlement

Non-jury cases were brought up for settlement before District Judge A. J. Fires yesterday during the second week of the September term of District Court in session here. Only civil cases are on the docket for this week and the jury empanelled for the week was dismissed Monday by Judge Fires.

Two divorce cases have been disposed of during the present term of court. Grace Stewart was granted a divorce from Leonard Stewart, and Lester Bowman was granted a divorce from Eva Bowman. On the latter case no order of approval has been issued.

In the case of O. B. Smith and others versus Fred T. Cooper, settlement was reached and the case dismissed. The terms of the settlement were not announced.

Other activities in District Court yesterday included the removal of disabilities as a minor granted to Cleo Cantrell.

Other civil cases were slated to be heard before Judge Fires today.

FAIR PRESIDENT APPRECIATES AID

Grateful to Memphians For Support of Tri-State Exposition

Willbur C. Hawk, president of the Tri-State Fair, is grateful for the effort Memphians are making to support the exposition this year.

When informed by telephone this morning of the city's plans for a special train, he told a Democrat reporter:

"Please express to the people down there my sincere appreciation of their interest in the Tri-State Fair and tell them that everything possible will be done to assure them a pleasant visit from the moment the special train arrives until it leaves.

"I am especially pleased to know that you are bringing your Black and Gold band. Bands from neighboring cities deserve a lot of credit for the success of the fair each year and we appreciate every one of them."

SENATE OKAYS RELIEF BONDS

AUSTIN, Sept. 12.—The Texas Senate today recommended the passage of the relief bond sales bill which would issue nine and a half million dollars in securities and retain the present Texas Relief commission.

WORKING ORDER HAS NOT BEEN RECEIVED

Operating Time Set At 60 Days; Two Weeks Needed

Approval of the operation of two government canning plants in Hall county, one at Memphis and one at Turkey, was received yesterday from the Texas Relief commission by Judge A. C. Hoffman, Hall county relief commissioner.

Construction of the plants will begin as soon as approval of an application for sufficient man-labor for the construction and equipment is received, and operation of the plants will begin shortly thereafter, Mr. Hoffman stated.

Expect Okay This Week

The application for construction and equipment of the plants has not as yet been approved, but is expected this week, he said. Mr. Hoffman is emphasizing the fact that no work will be made available until the construction order is received. Public announcement will be made as soon as the order is received and work on the plants is available, he said.

Operating Time of the plants was established by the Texas relief commission at 60 days, instead of the 90 day period asked in the application filed by the Hall County Commissioners court in August. It is probably that this time will be extended if the plants are operated successfully and on a paying basis, Judge Hoffman said.

BEACH CLUB GIRL

BEGIN HERE TODAY
BOOTS RAEBURN, 18 and pretty, is snubbed by wealthy SYLVIA RIVERS. Due to Sylvia's gossip, Boots is forced to resign from the Juniors. Both girls live in Larchneck, fashionable New York suburb.

Hurt and humiliated, Boots accepts the attentions of RUSS LUND, swimming instructor. MRS. RAEBURN returns from a trip out of town and Boots dreads her mother's hearing what has happened. On impulse she marries Russ who takes her to live with his brother and his wife. Russ has no job and apparently no ambition. Soon Boots begins to see him as he is. She goes to look for a job one day and encounters ISABEL HATHWAY, an old friend.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER XXII

It was too late now for Boots to pretend she hadn't seen Isabel. The other girl's warm, welcoming hand was in hers. Her bright eyes were full of friendly interest. It was as if the months between their last meeting did not exist.

"Why, Boots dear," Isabel said again and again. "But how terribly nice! and I had been thinking of you! But I didn't know you were in New York. I hadn't the least idea."

"We were to have gone to Florida before this," Boots offered vaguely, walking along beside her, "but we're still out on Long Island." "Out on Long Island" sounded rather better on the whole, than "Astoria," Isabel was polite. Isabel did not ask where on Long Island the young Lunds were living. Boots blessed her for the omission.

"Will you have lunch with me?" Isabel bubbled. "Here I was, hating to eat alone—you know me of old!—and practically starving to death and all that—"

"I was just about to stop for luncheon myself," Boots said brightly. "But I forgot about it, shopping."

It was a lie. Of course it was a lie. But she couldn't tell Isabel the truth; couldn't say she had been looking for a job in Lacy's. "This old suit," she said with a rippling laugh she boned fervently was convincing, "is positively mouldy. I had to get something to wear . . . and things for the south, too, although they're not showing much in that line yet. Too early."

Isabel nodded sympathetically. She had an arm linked in that of her friend. They were opposite one of those big, plate-glassed tea-rooms so dear to feminine hearts. Isabel, guiding her, wheeled expertly through the shopping throngs, steered her through the revolving doors. Boots protested faintly.

"Please take time for just a bite, please!" Isabel begged prettily. Boots, thinking of the lone quarter in her flat chance purse, shuddered inwardly. But the next words reassured her.

"It's my birthday. I want to celebrate a bit. Daddy gave me $20," said Isabel, answering the black-frocked hostess' nod and following her to a table for two. "Let's have the creamed chicken and the double chocolate ice cream—remember how we used to love it?"

So it was Isabel's party after all.

Over their heaped plates the two girls reviewed, explained, murmured.

"You haven't seen your mother," at last Isabel asked with gravity. Boots shook her head. In spite of her manful efforts her eyes swam in a mist. Her voice thickened. "I haven't really—dared," she said. "Daddy's so mad at me. I wrote her twice. She didn't answer—"

"She doesn't dare," Isabel told her, her own eyes watering in impulsive sympathy. "I do think your father is being mean about it. Why, people elope all the time. There's nothing terrible about it. He's behaving like a stone age father."

"I don't blame him," Boots said thickly, painfully, glancing down at her slim linked hands. "It was a shock. If I had it to do over again . . ."

"You'd tell them all about it, I know," supplied Isabel, trying to restore a more cheerful atmosphere. "But you know what I'd do if I were in your place? I'd go up there some day, see my mother and fix everything up. Just don't pay any attention to him," advised Isabel gaily. "And once your mother sees you—why, she misses you frightfully, you can imagine—everything will be all right."

"I could kill myself when I think of hurting her that way," Boots said youthfully.

Isabel patted her hand. "You take the train up there some morning when your father is safely out of the house," she said. "Everything will be simply fine. See if it isn't."

Boots, thinking of her empty purse, of the fare to Larchneck, nodded dimly. She couldn't tell Isabel about that, though. There were some things you simply kept to yourself.

They clung to each other on parting—Isabel in a girlish jumble of warnings and whispered affection, Boots as a drowning man who sees his proverbial last straw fast disappearing.

"We must see each other soon again," was the burden of Isabel's song. Boots, agreeing, still felt the barrier between them. The old foothold could not be regained, however strong the bond was. Her new life was too confused and too uncertain for plans. At length she promised to telephone, to write. Her own address she did not give. They were moving any day now, she said.

It was difficult after all this to go back to the shabby flat. Somehow it had never seemed so sordid, so definitely run-down-at-the-heel, before. Gloria was at home, spreading pattern papers and a zaudy purple and red silk remnant of printed silk all over the living room floor.

"Russ called," Gloria looked up to say abstractedly. "He said to tell you he thought he had something lined up and he wouldn't be home for supper."

Boots sat down in the tufted plush chair, the springs of which were already sagging. The collector had not received the full amount for this chair up to date. She took off her hat and ran her fingers nervously through her hair. If Russ weren't home until late it meant an entire evening in Gloria's company. The prospect, especially after Isabel's amusing chatter, was well nigh unbearable. Russ made this life tolerable for her. Without him there was simply nothing. . . .

She hung up her things neatly and began to mend her other pair of stockings. If there were only some books about she thought wildly, finishing that task. If there were a piano. . . . But only the snipping sounds of her sister-in-law's scissors met her ears. No wonder people in these little boxes of flats sought the movies as a means of escape. There was nothing else to do, nothing else to look forward to.

"Shall I fix things for dinner?" Gloria shrugged. "Well, I got some sausage and there's a can of corn."

Somehow Boots got through the rest of the afternoon; the early fall evening closed in. Lights winked on in all the square windows. Children huddled around a bonfire in a vacant lot at the end of the block. The prospect was dull and uninteresting, but Boots from her perch envied the small struggling figures milling about the scarlet flare, tasting the good smell of wood smoke and burning fingers in their attempts to take toasted marshmallows from the end of the stick.

Up in Larchneck, at this time of year, leaves were heaped in great piles for burning. Her mother, in her old gray sweater and a well-worn tweed skirt, would be raking, too, in the lower garden, setting a match to the neat piles. Boots felt a lump in her throat at the thought. Isabel's words had tugged at her heartstrings. Her mother did miss her, fretted over her. Why, sometimes at night she woke up in a cold fright, shivering at the thought that perhaps she would never see her mother again.

She shook off the sick fancy. Russ would do fine things, make something big of himself. Then she wouldn't be ashamed to go back home, face everybody. She had been foolish, hadn't given her marriage sufficient consideration beforehand. But she would show them some time that it had all been for the best.

Lou came in and lights went on garishly, brilliantly all over the small square rooms. The smell of frying meat and bubbling corn permeated the apartment.

"Aren't you hungry?"

"No. Not very. I—" Boots hesitated over the words—"I met an old friend. She took me to lunch."

Gloria's eyes lighted avidly. "The Ritz, huh? Guess you can't see our cats." Her face looked mean, looked curious in the bright glare of the overhead fixture.

"No," Boots said quietly. "Just a tearoom."

Lou ate quickly, noisily, not joining in the conversation. He did not believe in "jawing" at meal time, he often said. Eating was a serious business.

Boots offered to wash the dishes and Gloria, anxious to get back to her basting, did not protest. At nine o'clock when she was hanging the last pan on its hooks she heard Russ at the door. He came in briskly, bringing a breath of cold, fresh air with him.

"The boy wonder!" He thumped himself on the chest.

Boots ran into his arms. "You've got something?"

"Yep!" He held her off at arm's length. "A club at Miami. Better than the one last year."

Boots danced in sheer excitement. "Miami! I've never been there."

"Hold on a minute, kiddo. I can't take you with me. You'll have to stay behind—for a while at least."

New Strikers Celebrate Walkout

Silk mill employes of Paterson, N. J., celebrated their participation in the nationwide textile strike by carrying girl workers through the streets on their shoulders. Afterward they settled down to the serious business of picketing the plants to insure their staying closed.

DEATH SHIP TRAILS ITS SURVIVORS TO LAND

Like Nemesis relentlessly pursuing her victims, the Ward Liner Morro Castle, which became a floating crematorium for scores of passengers and crew, trailed to shore the few who survived both fire and immersion in the turbulent Atlantic. Taken in tow by the Coast Guard Cutter Tampa, the Morro Castle broke free from the tow line and drifted onto the beach at Asbury Park, just a few miles from the spot where disaster overtook her. The fire-scarred, smouldering bulk is shown as it wallowed in the shallow surf, a few yards from the beach on which some of its survivors landed.

(The above photograph of the Morro Castle is the best received in the office of The Democrat, illustrating clearly the terrible disaster that carried more than 100 people to their death.)

Reading Fun in Store for Boys

Here's important news for the boys of America, THE AMERICAN BOY—YOUTH'S COMPANION, the nation's quality magazine for boys, has been reduced from $2.00 a year to $1.00. The three-year rate, formerly $3.50, has been reduced to $2.00.

"For a long time we have been seeking a way to reduce the cost of THE AMERICAN BOY to readers," states Griffith Ogden Ellis, editor. "Recently we have effected savings that make the cut possible, and we think boys will agree that the new price is big news on the reading front. We hope boys will help us to spread the good news by telling their friends."

Along with the cut in cost, the magazine's publishers are planning a magazine that will continue to set the pace in fiction, articles, and departments. The favorite characters of millions of boys will parade through THE AMERICAN BOY in new stories. Douglas Renfrew of the Royal Canadian Mounted, Hide-rack, the red-and-gold collie, Bonehead Jim Tierney, the detective, will give the reader many exciting hours in the months to come.

William Heyliger, whose true-to-life, gripping vocational stories have won him wide acclaim from parents and librarians, as well as the hearty approval of boys, is working on new stories. Staff writers are interviewing famous coaches and athletes and world-renowned explorers, to bring boys the color and fun of sports and travel.

In short, THE AMERICAN BOY, under its new price, will continue to give boys a magazine that measures up to the best standards set by adult magazines. Send your subscription to THE AMERICAN BOY, 7430 Second Blvd., Detroit, Michigan. Enclose your name and address and the proper amount of money, and THE AMERICAN BOY will soon be headed your way, loaded with reading thrills.

Mob Attacks Negro Association Heads

By Associated Press
STEELE, Mo., Sept. 12.—Seven negroes, one a woman, were attacked and beaten here yesterday by a mob following the conviction of four of their number for "unlawfully organizing the negro race."

Four of the victims, Robert Thomas, Sam Sawyer, Dave Johnson and Ella Brown, alleged organizers for the Africo-Pacific movement of the East, each was fined $1,000 and sentenced to a year in jail by Justice of the Peace Max Kelley.

Immediately following the conviction the white audience in the courtroom charged the defendants and their attorney and his two companions. Officers were thrust aside and fists and blackjacks were used on the prisoners.

The crowd dispersed quickly and no arrests were made.

Overrules Motion To Drop Charges Against Pollard

By Associated Press
AUSTIN, Sept. 12.—District Judge W. F. Robertson today overruled motions to quash an indictment charging Claude Pollard, former Texas attorney general, with consenting to the use of counterfeit cigaret tax stamps and ordered the trial to proceed.

The judge overruled contentions by Pollard's counsel that the state cigaret tax act is invalid and the indictment faulty because of insufficiency.

REVIEWS OF CURRENT MOTION PICTURES

RITZ
Fast-moving and diverting, "Ladies Should Listen," closing tonight at the Ritz is sure to please if you're out for a "different" evening at the movies.

It's not by any means what one might term a powerful story, but you won't care. The clever lines, hilarious situations and rapid-fire action will keep you so full of snickers and occasional good, deep belly laughs that the more or less absence of plot will give you no concern.

"Ladies Should Listen" is billed as a farce comedy, and it is exactly that—very neatly executed by each of its principal players. Cary Grant is very satisfying as the male lead and Frances Drake is just as pleasing as the young lady who finally trips him into matrimony. Edward Everett Horton's talent deserves a stronger role than he was allotted in this film. Spectacled Nydia Westman trips and falls a number of times with a surprising finesse.

This is the picture in which Charles Ray is supposed to stage his "come-back." In our humble opinion, he fails utterly, if our humble opinion means anything to you.

Gainesville Assured Road Will Be Paved

by Associated Press
GAINESVILLE, Sept. 12.—Gainesville citizens are almost convinced that state highway No. 40 from this city to Red River, a distance of 6.6 miles, is to be paved, closing the last gap in U. S. highway No. 77 through three states.

For years, the highway remained unpaved, first because it led to a toll bridge, and then because the state highway department could not decide whether to change its route to pass Gainesville on the west.

When the route was definitely established and contract let to the Standard Paving Company, the surfacing of the road seemed assured. But the drought dried up the stream from which water was to be obtained for washing sand and gravel used in concrete mixing.

The paving company drilled a deep water well, but lost tools in the hole and had to drill another well. This was completed last week, and the first bucket of concrete was poured Wednesday.

Boyd Dickson and Euyene McElreath have returned from Canyon where they visited with Ezell Champion for a few days.

PALACE
"Springtime for Henry" is a nightmare for Tom and Dick and Harry and Betty and Sue and Jane.

The picture, now showing at the Palace Theatre, is undoubtedly one of the craziest (there's no other word for it) ever filmed.

Its plot smacks of the old, old triangle, but in this case it is a rectangle; but after five minutes one finds that it is nothing like the ancient theme at all.

In fact, there is no theme—there is little or no plot. There is absolutely no reason.

Otto Kruger plays the part of wayward bachelor who is "straight-laced" by Heather Angel. That is not unusual, except that it extends to the "nth" degree.

Nancy Carroll is the "temptation" that turns out to be something entirely different, and Herbert Mundin adds an extra laugh as the man about the house. We do not remember the name of "angle No. 4" and the advance publicity doesn't even mention him, but he almost steals the show.

Although the picture is crazy humorous, it would not be accepted as such by children. If you are not too "high-brow" to enjoy cheap comedy, "Springtime for Henry" will be entertaining. It's so crazy it's funny.
