NEGRO CONFESSES HE SLEW TEXAS SHERIFF

FILM ACTRESS, PURVIS TO WED

HOLLYWOOD, Calif., Mar. 17 (AP)—Dan cupid marked two notches in his bow today for Janice Jarrett, film actress, and Melvin Purvis, ex-department of justice agent.

The engagement of Purvis, now a San Francisco lawyer, and the "most photographed girl model" was the occasion of a party here last night.

Miss Jarrett said they would be married in San Antonio, Texas, her home, the latter part of April and she would give up her movie contract.

Had Escaped Jail, Feared For His Life

Suspect Taken To Henderson Because Of Fears Of Violence

DESCRIBES HOW HE KILLED ALEX BROWN

Recaptured By Officers After Being Wounded In The Leg

HENDERSON, Mar. 17 (AP)—Ranger Captain Hardy Purvis announced today that Charley Brooks, 39-year-old negro and former railroad sleeping car porter, had confessed he assassinated Sheriff Alex Brown of Jefferson early last Wednesday.

Feared Would Be Killed

Purvis said the negro said he slew the officer because he feared Sheriff Brown would kill him for his part in an escape from the Marion county jail.

The suspect, who had been held at Jefferson following his capture, was brought here because of fears of mob violence.

The confession was taken by District Attorney Steve Wells at Henderson.

Brown, whose vigorous law enforcement had brought him prominence throughout the vast East Texas oil belt, was killed when a soft-treading slayer fired a shot into his back as he undressed for bed in his quarters on the jail's ground floor.

Ranger Purvis, Lufkin officer who directed the great manhunt which for several days appeared clueless, said:

Three Gun In River

"Brooks admitted he was the one who slipped up to the Marion county jail and assassinated the sheriff. He told us he threw the murder weapon in the Sulphur river and we are going to make an effort to retrieve it."

Purvis, who was assisted by Rangers Bob Goss and Leo Blisch, and a host of sheriffs and deputies throughout this region, said Brooks' statement related the negro "slipped to the jail building and watched the sheriff pull off

BLUM DEMANDS FREE HAND TO SETTLE TROUBLES ARISING OUT OF BLOODY INDUSTRIAL RIOTS

PARIS, Mar. 17 (AP)—Socialist Premier Leon Blum, beset by sudden protest strikes and political attacks from his popular front supporters, was said by a member of the cabinet today to have threatened resignation of his government unless enraged French communists give him a free hand to settle the aftermath of last night's bloody Clichy riots.

While furious leftists milled at the suburban scene of the left-rightist police fighting which killed five persons and wounded 300, this minister—who asked that his name be not used—said the premier told the communist leaders, Maurice Thorez and Jacques Duclos that he would quiet unless he was assured of harmony.

The communist leaders, it was understood, agreed provisionally to waive their own demands and extend M. Blum freedom in dealing with the situation.

Coincidentally, there were several brief strikes and talks of a 24-hour general walkout to protest the action of police in dealing with the communist demonstrators who last night besieged a rightist mass meeting in Clichy, part of the industrial "red ring around Paris."

The bloody struggle between communists, mobile guards and rightists brought a one-hour strike of workers at the grounds of the forthcoming Paris International Exposition, at the Hotchkiss motor plant and in several clothing stores in protest against the deaths and arrests of communists.

Members of parliament filed notices of interpellations of Socialist Premier Leon Blum's administration for his handling of the riots, the most sanguinary in Paris in three years.

Strong cordons of police were thrown about strategic government centers to guard against rising political agitation.

Communists, enraged by what they called the "massacre of Clichy," demanded immediate arrest of Col. Francois De La Rocque, leader of the militant right, and dissolution of his "French Legion" a meeting of which led to the communist demonstration and the riots last night.

NEW NAZI PROTESTS TO U. S. REPORTED

WASHINGTON, Mar. 17 (AP)—Responsible persons said today German Ambassador Hans Luther intended to lodge new representations with the American government over references made to Adolf Hitler by Mayor LaGuardia of New York.

The ambassador made an appointment to confer with Secretary Hull this afternoon.

A previous protest that LaGuardia's remarks were insulting drew from the state department an apology accompanied by an explanation that the government had no control over the remarks of the New York mayor.

A MYSTERY IS SETTLED; THAT FARLEY BLARNEY STONE STORY SEEMS TO HAVE BEEN A JOKE

WASHINGTON, Mar. 17 (AP)—St. Patrick's Day brought a solution to the captain's greatest Irish mystery—Postmaster General James Aloysius Farley did not import a hunk of the blarney stone to America.

It started when one James J. Daly—red-headed son of Erin—staggered into an office building on Pennsylvania avenue bearing a strong looking weighty object.

"Shh," he whispered to one Guy Collins—another son of Erin—"close the door quick."

"What's that chunk of cement for?" asked Collins.

"Cement nothing," snorted Daly, "you're looking at a piece of the blarney stone."

"Postmaster General Farley," explained Daly, "brought it back from Ireland. That's all I can tell you. I want to leave it here for safekeeping."

Collins kept it safely all right. He put it in a safe and then went out and called the policeman on the beat. After hearing the tale, the patrolman kissed the stone.

Word of the "precious" object flew about the city, bringing scores of Irish gentry to view the rock.

The truth came after Daly juggled the 15-pound rock off to St. Patrick's party and one O'Reilly got him on the telephone.

"If it's not a piece of blarney stone," he demanded indignantly, "then what is it?"

"Just something," replied Daly with a loud guffaw. "I dug up in the back yard."

(Editor's note: This story can not be completed until a man named Collins finds a man named Daly.)

Justices As Witnesses On Court Plan?

That Possibility Talked After McReynolds Makes Statement

SAYS LEGAL LOSERS OUGHT TO BE SPORTS

First Indirect Reference From Court To FDR's Proposals

(AP)—Justice McReynolds' criticism of those who complain about adverse court decisions revived talk today of asking supreme court justices to give their views on President Roosevelt's court reorganization proposals.

"Must Be A Good Sport"

Such a possibility developed just before Prof. Edward S. Corwin of Princeton told the senate judiciary committee that a majority of supreme court justices had "forgotten their supreme obligation" to interpret the constitution as a broad document written for "an undefined future."

Justice McReynolds' criticism was made last night in an address in which he said that the "evidence of good sportsmanship is that a man who has had a chance to present a fair case to a fair tribunal must be a good sport and accept the outcome."

Senator Burke (D-Neb.) an outspoken foe of the president's court bill, immediately commented that the justice's statement was "very well put and very appropriate at this time."

Senator Logan (D-Ky.), a supporter of Mr. Roosevelt's proposal to increase the size of the supreme court unless justices over 70 retire, observed that McReynolds was "entirely within his rights."

Ready To Call Them

Chairman Ashurst (D-Ariz.) of the senate judiciary committee declined to comment on McReynolds' criticism—the first indirect reference to the president's plan by any of the nine justices now on the bench—but he said that if any of them ever hinted he wanted to be heard, he would be asked to testify.

3rd Son Born To Mrs. Alford

New Arrival At Governor's Mansion Named For Sam Houston

AUSTIN, Mar. 17 (AP)—Sam Houston Alford, third son of Gov. and Mrs. James V. Alford, was born in the executive mansion at 10:20 a. m. today.

Attending physicians said Mrs. Alford and the infant were "doing fine."

"Everybody tells me this is a most unusual child," the governor commented.

The child was born in the Sam Houston room of the mansion, and took his first glimpse of life from the old four-poster bed of General Houston, second and fourth president of the Texas Republic and later governor.

It was the second boy child ever born in the mansion to a governor's family. The first was Sam Houston's son, Rogers Williams Houston.

The second son of Gov. and Mrs. Dan Moody was born in an Austin hospital. Gov. John Ireland's grandson, his daughter's child, was born in the mansion.

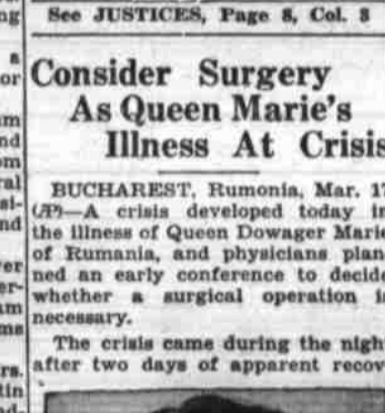

The Alford's have two other sons, James, Jr., 7, and David, 4.

The baby weighed nine pounds. This was more than either "Jim Boy" or David weighed at birth.

OGDEN AND HALL SEEK CITY POSTS

Announce Together As 'Progressive' Ticket For Places On Municipal Board

RAY W. OGDEN

JESS F. HALL

A contest developed today for places on the city commission with announcement of Ray W. Ogden and Jess F. Hall as candidates subject to the municipal election on April 6. They are seeking the commission posts now held by J. W. Allen and Leo Nalle, both of whom have announced for re-election. Those are the only two vacancies occurring on the commission this year.

Ogden and Hall announced together, as a "progressive" ticket. They will consolidate campaign efforts, they said. In making announcement of candidacies after filing for places on the ticket Tuesday afternoon, the two said they would stress the need of immediate action to solve Big Spring's water difficulty, which they consider the city's most pressing problem; and would push an extensive paving program. They said formal statements as to policy would be issued through the press tomorrow.

Hall, a resident of Big Spring for seven years, is manager of the Southern Ice company plant. He is a former director of the chamber of commerce, former director of the Rotary club and has been active in Red Cross work. Ogden, insurance man, has lived here for three years, coming from Alamo, in the Rio Grande valley, where he was active in civic work.

Is Charged In Style Event Dual Slaying Thursday Eve

Man Sought After Wife And Daughter Shot To Death

HALLETTSVILLE, Mar. 17 (AP)—J. W. Williford was charged today with slaying his wife and her daughter, Mrs. Lillie Dufner, at the Williford home last night.

South Texas officers pressed an intensive search for Williford and Houston police watched the home of Mrs. Sophie Byers in that city. Mrs. Byers, sister of Mrs. Williford, was warned of a threat against her son.

Sheriff Arthur McElroy of Hallettsville said the Willifords were married about three years ago and divorced last year. He added that they remarried again and separated a short time ago and that Mrs. Williford had a suit for divorce pending here.

Houston police threw a guard around Mrs. Byers' home.

Mrs. Byers left Houston shortly after noon for Hallettsville.

She told newsmen in Houston that she received a special delivery letter from Mrs. Dufner, mailed just before Mrs. Dufner was slain, warning her that a man had made threats to harm her 11-year-old son in school at Houston.

Jim Dufner, divorced first husband of Mrs. Williford, was an eye witness. He told Sheriff A. P. McElroy of Hallettsville that a relative of Mrs. Williford killed the mother and daughter.

"The man came into the house a little after 8 p. m. and began arguing with Mrs. Williford," Dufner said. "He waved a pistol and threatened to kill the whole family."

"I tried to stop him and he knocked me down, injuring my shoulder."

Mrs. Williford and Lillie ran into the front yard, screaming. The man followed them and I heard several shots."

REARMING TO MEET OTHERS, SAYS DUCE

TIPOPOLIA, Libya, Mar. 17 (AP)—Premier Mussolini, referring scathingly to British nervousness over Italy's ascendancy in the Mediterranean, told a cheering throng of 100,000 today the Italian empire had been forced to rearm to meet the rearmament threat of others.

While the guns of the massed Italian battle fleet boomed in the harbor of the province's capital, Duce shouted:

"We rearm on sea, in the sky and on land because it is our imperious duty in the face of the armaments of others."

FREED UNDER BOND

J. H. Stump, charged with driving while intoxicated, posted $500 bond shortly before noon today and was released. Justice of Peace Joe Fausett had set bond a short time earlier.

Stump was taken into custody after the car in which he was riding had been forced to rearm to meet the rearmament threat of others.

Stump was reported to have smashed through a yard, crashing into a fence and yard plants.

Labor Chiefs Won't Meet For A Parley

CHRYSLER STUDIES 'FURTHER STEPS'

'Liberty Or Death' Placards Displayed At Auto Factories

DETROIT, Mar. 17 (AP)—More than 5,000 sit-down strikers defied a court injunction against their occupancy of Chrysler automobile plants today as their leaders declined to meet with a committee named by Governor Frank Murphy to seek solution of labor disputes.

"Liberty or Death"

An hour after the deadline set for the strikers' evacuation passed, union sympathizers estimated to number 30,000 surrounded the Chrysler Jefferson Avenue plant, blocking traffic for five blocks.

Nearly as many surrounded the huge Dodge division plant, ordinarily employing 25,000 workers, where strikers hung out a sign, "Give us liberty or give us death."

Homer Martin, United Automobile Workers' president, informed Governor Murphy that he believed the proposed committee "will not serve to eradicate the evils of job insecurity and low wages."

The governor, still optimistic of settlement of the Chrysler strike difficulties, would not discuss reports that a meeting of Walter P. Chrysler, chairman of the corporation board, and John L. Lewis, head of the Committee for Industrial Organization supporting the U. A. W. strikes, was regarded as providing the quickest means of a solution.

Consider "Further Steps"

A Chrysler spokesman announced corporation attorneys were considering "further steps" in the injunction action.

The corporation, which obtained the writ Monday, must file formal notices with Circuit Judge Allan Campbell that his injunction has been disregarded, and obtain writs of attachment for the strikers before forcible ejection can be undertaken.

There was no immediate indication when the corporation's legal See LABOR CHIEFS, Page 3, Col. 2

Calotabs Help Nature To Throw Off a Cold

Millions have found in Calotabs a most valuable aid in the treatment of colds. They take one or two tablets the first night and repeat the third or fourth night if needed.

How do Calotabs help Nature throw off a cold? First, Calotabs are one of the most thorough and dependable of all intestinal eliminants, thus cleansing the intestinal tract of the germ-laden mucus and toxins.

Second, Calotabs are diuretic to the kidneys, promoting the elimination of cold poisons from the blood. Thus Calotabs serve the double purpose of a purgative and diuretic, both of which are needed in the treatment of colds.

Calotabs are quite economical; only twenty-five cents for the family package, ten cents for the trial package. (Adv.)

Reading AND Writing

By John Selby

James Hilton has taken his own good time writing the successor for "Mr. Chips." He has been awfully busy with the movies, but he has done it now, and if you'll forgive a terrific pun, it's a chip off the old block.

A disappointing chip. Heaven knows that in this machine age a writer scarcely can be blamed for writing to patterns. Everything else runs that way. Just the same, according to the Woolcotts and other drum-beaters, "Mr. Chips" was a little masterpiece, and little masterpieces don't come in duplicate.

This is how it is. "We Are Not Alone" concerns life in a little English cathedral town. Its chief character is a doctor instead of a schoolmaster, a chap who has a slight touch of genius and an engaging, absent-minded manner. He has a wife who manages his affairs, and a son who is very nervous. Neither the wife nor the son is in the least real. There also is the shadowy Lenz Kraft, a German dancer with a Russian name who breaks her wrist in a fifth-rate English theatre.

By imperceptible degrees, a remarkable state of mutual sympathy grows between the schoolmaster-I should say doctor-and the dancer. He finally brings her home to look after his nervous son, still without there having been any intimacies of the physical sort. Of course the doctor's wife disapproves and in a short time the inevitable scene is had, and the girl must depart the premises.

But it happens to be the day war is declared, and for no conceivable reason, the doctor decides that he must spirit Lenz away from town, and put her on a boat for Germany. While they are running away, the doctor's wife is dying from the effect of a poison. The story as how she got the poison must be reserved for Mr. Hilton's last-page fillip.

Suffice to say, the doctor and Lenz had nothing to do with it, although they were hanged as murderers.

This is not a very substantial tale, and certainly not a very probable one. Mr. Hilton writes, as always, beautifully, though too sweetly. The book is affecting, but later the taste of so much tenderness is somewhat cloying; the fragrance is that of lavender, and the last page fillip is so obvious that one has a strong desire to spank Mr. Hilton for using it.

Only More Sturdy Buildings Stand At Scenic State Park; Picnic Units Wrecked, Few Trees Now Are Living

These past twelve months have reflected the wisdom of those who wrought buildings of heavy stone atop the scenic Mountain state park. They have borne out the contention that massive construction was the only type for the park. They have revealed that the talents of CCC workers were in rocks and not in trees.

Today, a year after it was formally declared complete the heavy construction work by the CCC at Scenic State Park is a thing of the past. The picnic units and the national park service still stands much as good as the day it was completed.

Enrollees attempted to transplant approximately 1,000 plants along this trail through the flat in the south part of the park. About all that is left today is a couple of dozen red cedars and a few lilac bushes, a scattering of other plants and a few Chinese elm trees.

Plans are now being made to dismantle the army barracks on the park site and ship them to Austin. When this is done little will be left in the park except the heavy rock walls and buildings and native shrubbery.

Today it appears that the government contribution to the park is losing some of its effectiveness because no provision has been made by the state for maintenance. Otherwise, the next twelve and succeeding months may be much the same for the park as the last year.

which they have ready access. However, the pavilion is in sound condition and the concessions building, operated as a private concession, is essentially as well kept as the day it was completed.

Modern trail blazers are once more pioneering in uncharted roads off those through the park. Unplanned spurs off the main drive are cropping out at frequent intervals and one road leads to another rim drive on the west side of the mountain.

The "nature trail," publicized as one of the future show spots of the park when landscape engineers with the park service dreamed the rosy dreams, has all but gone back to the weeds and bare grass. The walks are hardly distinguishable and the ditch in which water lilies were lain is fast becoming a gully for drainage purposes.

Jackrabbits, those lop-eared gallopers that will race an automobile down a "dust bowl" lane, are the subject of many another "windy" One story was intended to show that nothing was free of dust and rabbits.

A motorist stopped to fix his tire and was surprised when a mother rabbit and several bunnies hopped out. The young ones didn't walk away. They turned cartwheels—because they had been born inside the tire!

A fabled West Texas rabbit once got lost in a "moderate" duster and wandered for several hours looking for its den. Finally, it came to a likely opening and went down—and landed on a bed of hot coals. The rabbit thought surely it must have traveled all the way to Hades—but discovered it only tumbled down a rancher's chimney.

West Texans and others of the dust country laugh at themselves, but few believe the story popular elsewhere that some day their homes will be in a desert waste. Most follow the opinion of a Kansas professor who declared that drouth had not ruined the Great Plains any more than floods ruin the Ohio Valley.

Oil Leaders Are Silent On Labor Issue

Industry Forgets Trouble Threat, Looks Ahead At Upswing

TULSA, Okla., Mar. 17 (AP)—Although patently disturbed by the prospect of further labor difficulties in the oil industry, leading executives steadfastly refused today to discuss that phase of the petroleum situation.

They focused their attention, rather, on the sustained indication of a heavy business within the next few months.

As for the agreement reached Monday between the Mid-Continent Petroleum corporation and a negotiations committee representing employees who are members of the union, executives of other companies refused to discuss in any way what that might augur for the future. Neither would they discuss the reports from Texas of opposition from workers and operators alike to the C.I.O. organization program.

As to the fiscal aspect of the oil picture, one oil company president had this remark: "Well, everybody's looking for oil."

When that condition is obtained, he continued, the business is sound. To the concern in some quarters over the present high rate of consumption, manifest yesterday in the sixth consecutive record weekly high, 2,572,850 barrels daily, he pointed to the fact that the output was being used up.

As to the scarcity of crude, operators asserted that discoveries of new reserves were not keeping pace with consumption and forecast a still further increase in exploratory work.

The tightness of the crude situation was leading to the re-working of many small areas of light production.

The chart of the Oil and Gas Journal showed a jump of 53 for the week in completion of oil wells throughout the nation to a total of 568. Crude prices were unchanged.

Life Wags On In Tall Tales Of Dust Bowl

Northwest's Paul Bunyan Has Windy Rival In Southwest

AMARILLO, Mar. 17 (UP)—Five years of recurring drouth have failed to sway the faith of Texas Panhandle residents in their dust bowl country—or to dull their ability to take a joke.

Many a tall tale, some of which would make the North woods famed Paul Bunyan blush, is told by old-timers to "tenderfeet" from other sections and to those who brave reports of a coming "Great American Desert" to make their homes in the dust country.

Stories of the West Texas wind are based on fact and fancy. It is a matter of record that barbed wire fences have been blown down—when bounding tumble weeds catch in the strands and form a solid barrier. Sand drifts for many years have bothered livestock breeders. The sand piles so high around fence rows that cattle and horses can step across.

Story of a Raindrop Newcomers usually are initiated with the story of a man who lived in one plains village for several years without seeing any rain fall. A drop of rain struck him one afternoon as he stepped into the street, and the man fainted.

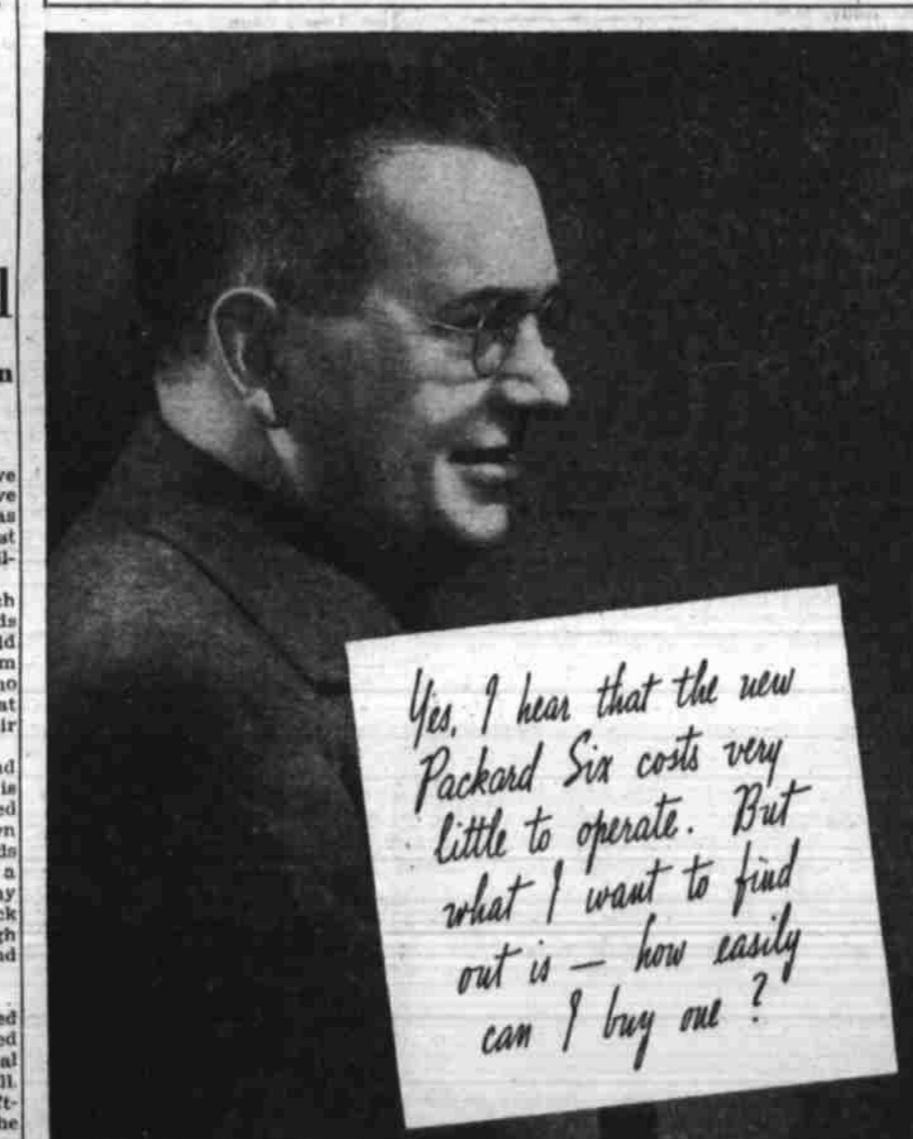

Passerby threw four buckets of sand in his face to revive him. Other unwritten legends concern the methods of figuring how hard the wind is blowing.

"We've always leaned toward the 'goat-skin test,' one 'sand-bag' reported. 'Me and my three boys got a goat-skin and slap it over the kishie. If we can't hold it here, it's too windy to work in the field!'"

"It's easier to use the log-chain method," replied his neighbor. "Just hang a good-sized log chain from the eaves of the house. When she's standing straight out, you'd better stay inside."

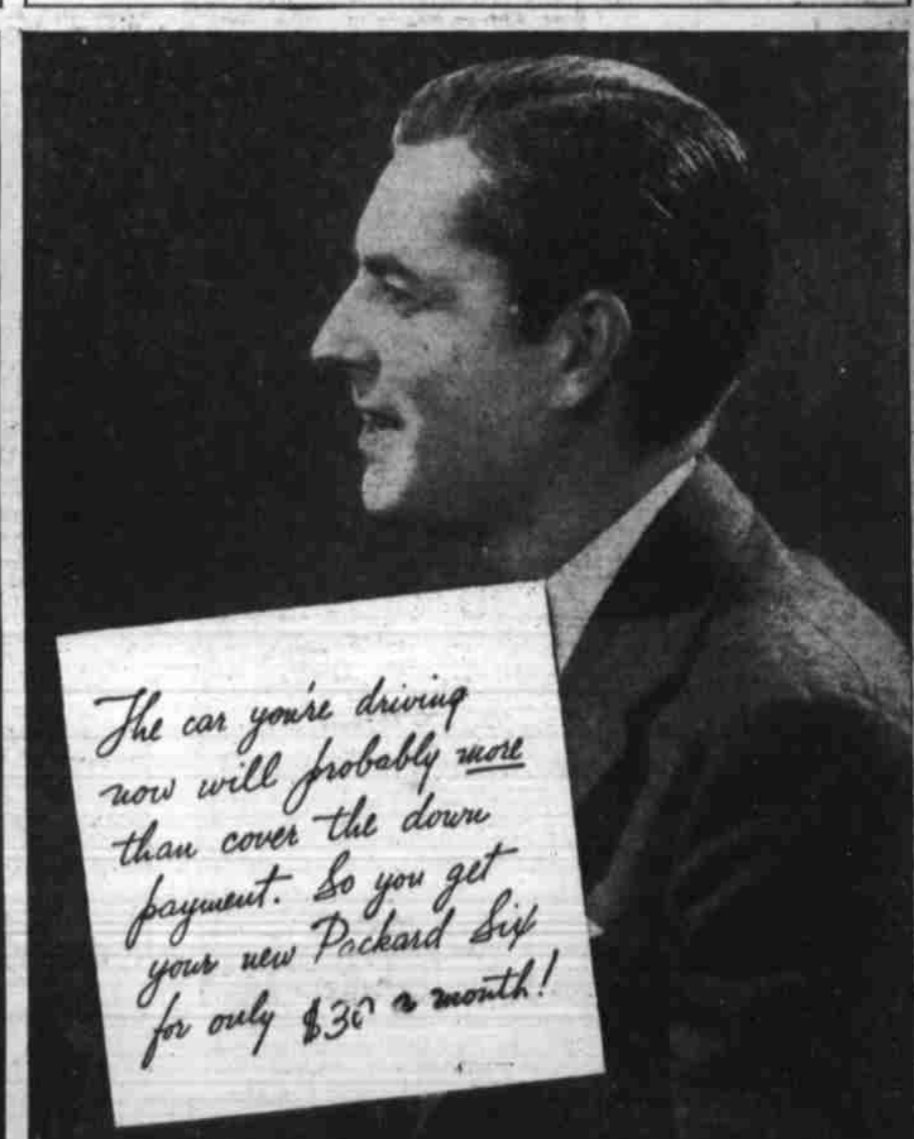

A Baptist minister of the South Plains once told his congregation how to determine if it was too windy to attend church: "Stick your right hand into the cup it, and bring it down. If

"HOW MUCH WILL A PACKARD COST ME?"

Yes, I hear that the new Packard Six costs very little to operate. But what I want to find out is—how easily can I buy one?

"ONLY '30 A MONTH, MR. JONES!"

The car you're driving now will probably more than cover the down payment. So you get your new Packard Six for only $30 a month!

SEND IN THE COUPON and you'll find that the Packard Six costs less to buy than you ever dared hope.

And here's more good news... the Packard Six can challenge any car for low-cost operation. This is true for two reasons...

First, because this powerful Six is unusually thrifty with gasoline. (Ask us to show you the actual gas mileage that local owners are getting.)

Second, because the car is designed so simply that it costs very little to service. For example, most service operations can be performed on the Packard Six in less time, with less labor hours, than on cars lower in price!

And the Packard Six will not only need very little service but will last longer. This long mechanical life, coupled with the famous lines that keep Packards looking like Packards, make it the ideal car for the man who buys out of income.

So fill out and mail the coupon, and get the pleasantest surprise in motoring!

SHIFTING TAXES

Should the Texas senate approve the tax remission bill enacted by the house it would end the payment of state ad valorem taxes for five years. The eight or nine millions of dollars thus taken from the general fund would have to be replaced by a levy on other sources that would yield a like amount. Should the legislature approve even a part of the tax bills already proposed on what are broadly called natural resources, not only these millions but others would be supplied and the general fund be replenished.

Under one section of the bill, and one that should by all means be retained should it be finally adopted, the money collected as state taxes would be kept in the county treasury instead of being sent to Austin, and could be used for such legitimate purpose as the county commissioners might propose, and the voters approve, for it provides for a referendum before that money can be spent.

And unless the commissioners submitted and the voters approved a purpose of spending, the money would be used, would have to be used, to reduce the county tax rate.

This would leave it within the power of the voters of any county to have some say so about the tax rate, and if they did not take advantage of it to reduce their county tax, and thereby prevent an increase in the total rate, they would have to carry the blame.

The whole plan is somewhat nebulous and a roundabout way of taking money from one pocket and putting it in another, but much legislation nowadays is that sort and we had as well get accustomed to it. So long as there are spenders in the citizenship, and members of the legislature responsive to their demands, there will be spending. This seems to be a measure that will satisfy the demand of one group for less state taxes and at the same time let the remission not result in an increase in another form.

The tax remission program remains, nevertheless, a system of shifting money of governmental agencies. If the county governments are helped, the state treasury suffers to the same extent, and to replace the money in the state treasury calls for additional revenue. The argument against remission seems to The Herald to outweigh that in its favor.

Man About Manhattan

By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—A few hundred swim strokes from New York (if Eleanor Holm Jarrett is making them) is a jut of land which goes by the wholly unromantic name of Rat Island.

Nevertheless, it is a favorite rendezvous of theatrical and literary celebrities, and many spend their spring and fall vacations there. A horseshoe pitch to one side is another island, a very tiny one about the size of a nightclub dance floor, which means that it is of the postage stamp variety.

Now the relation of these islands to each other is this: When untutored guests, or sordoughs, visit there, they are taken gaily to the smaller island for a picnic. At a signal the host and hostesses explain that they must return to the larger island to pick up a few nicknacks, but that they will be back directly. Then they paddle quickly away, leaving the guests happily ignorant of the trick being played upon them.

But they aren't in ignorance very long. As the host and hostess disappear, the tide comes in, and the Atlantic tide-waters, rolling landward, completely inundate the tiny island, leaving a confounded and very, very damp group of guests to wait disconsolately to be ferried back to camp. This is considered very amusing by those in the know, and a new batch of human guinea pigs is imported every season for the big "picnic."

It seems strange that Vincent Lopez, who has been on Broadway 15 years, has played in only three hotels. . . However, it seems less incongruous when one considers that one engagement (the St. Regis) lasted eight years, another (The Pennsylvania) six years, and that now he is rounding out his first twelve months at the Astor.

Incidentally, Lopez is one maestro who believes in providing appropriate atmosphere with every tune. That is, each number is played to a different lighting arrangement. Fast, gay tunes are floated on a sea of light. Casual dance melodies call for medium glow. . . A dreamy waltz brings down a soft shadow-haze. . . Nice idea!

It is about this season of year that Miss Amy Hemingway Jones begins to think of spring ploughing. Although this farmette, as a member of the Carnegie Foundation, has many chores to occupy her spare time, she never permits anything to interfere with her duties as mistress of what undoubtedly is the world's smallest plantation. Her annual crop consists of no more than two stalks of corn, reared and harvested in the front yard of her home (it's about five feet wide), at No. 7 MacDougal Alley.

 Wallace trying to reconcile scarcity and abundance. Administration expects 35 Senate votes on court plan. Justices use had timing on income tax ruling. Compromise neutrality bill is held likely.

Squirmin' WASHINGTON, Mar. 17 — This practice of digging up a statesman's words from last year, or even last month, is becoming a major threat to the order of the new order.

Now, right after President Roosevelt was plagued with his words from his book implying that court packing would be a dangerous precedent, Agriculture Secretary Wallace is privately chiding himself into spasms over the invitation he gave farmers a few weeks ago to produce as abundantly as they can.

Wallace has worked himself into knots before, trying to maintain the difficult position of both abundance and scarcity, but this time it is really getting complicated. For instance, the largest cotton planter is helping Wallace out by publicly predicting the world will use more cotton in 1937-38. Inside AAA reports indicate that both Wallace and the largest cotton planter are being taken literally in the can-brakes and at the cross-roads, and the great trouble is that cotton (as well as tobacco) is an export crop which Wallace does not want produced to the limit.

His master publicity minds have been in deep thought for several days figuring some way to get him unraveled without removing his spine. They will be out with something shortly.

Note—Wallace's original thought was that abundant general production for this year would store the bins for his ever-normal granary, but he has already built up an abnormal lumpy for cotton in his Commodity Credit corporation. His soil conservation curtailment program held production down to 12,000,000 bales last year, but experts now fear 15-16,000,000 bales.

Strength
 The best inside poll of the senate made by Mr. Roosevelt's leaders show a maximum prospect of 25 votes for him on the court issue. This was not made on the pending administration bill, however, but vaguely on "any bill he would sign"; that is, the best possible compromise.

Untimeliness
 The supreme court apparently does not know as much about timing as Mr. Roosevelt. On March 15, the day when all taxpayers were groaning over their income tax returns, the court handed down a decision in favor of a taxpayer. However, the decision favored only those taxpayers receiving income from municipal, state or federal quarters. Consequently it may make other taxpayers share this vacillating proportion of the government costs, and thus the ruling may become unpopular among the largest number.

Mr. Roosevelt should lend the court some of his publicity advisers.

Missgivings
 The debate backstage on the Reynolds and Pittman neutrality bills is more interesting than the public argument. The bulk of the legislators do not seem to like either bill, or see much practical difference between them, but dare not vote against neutrality.

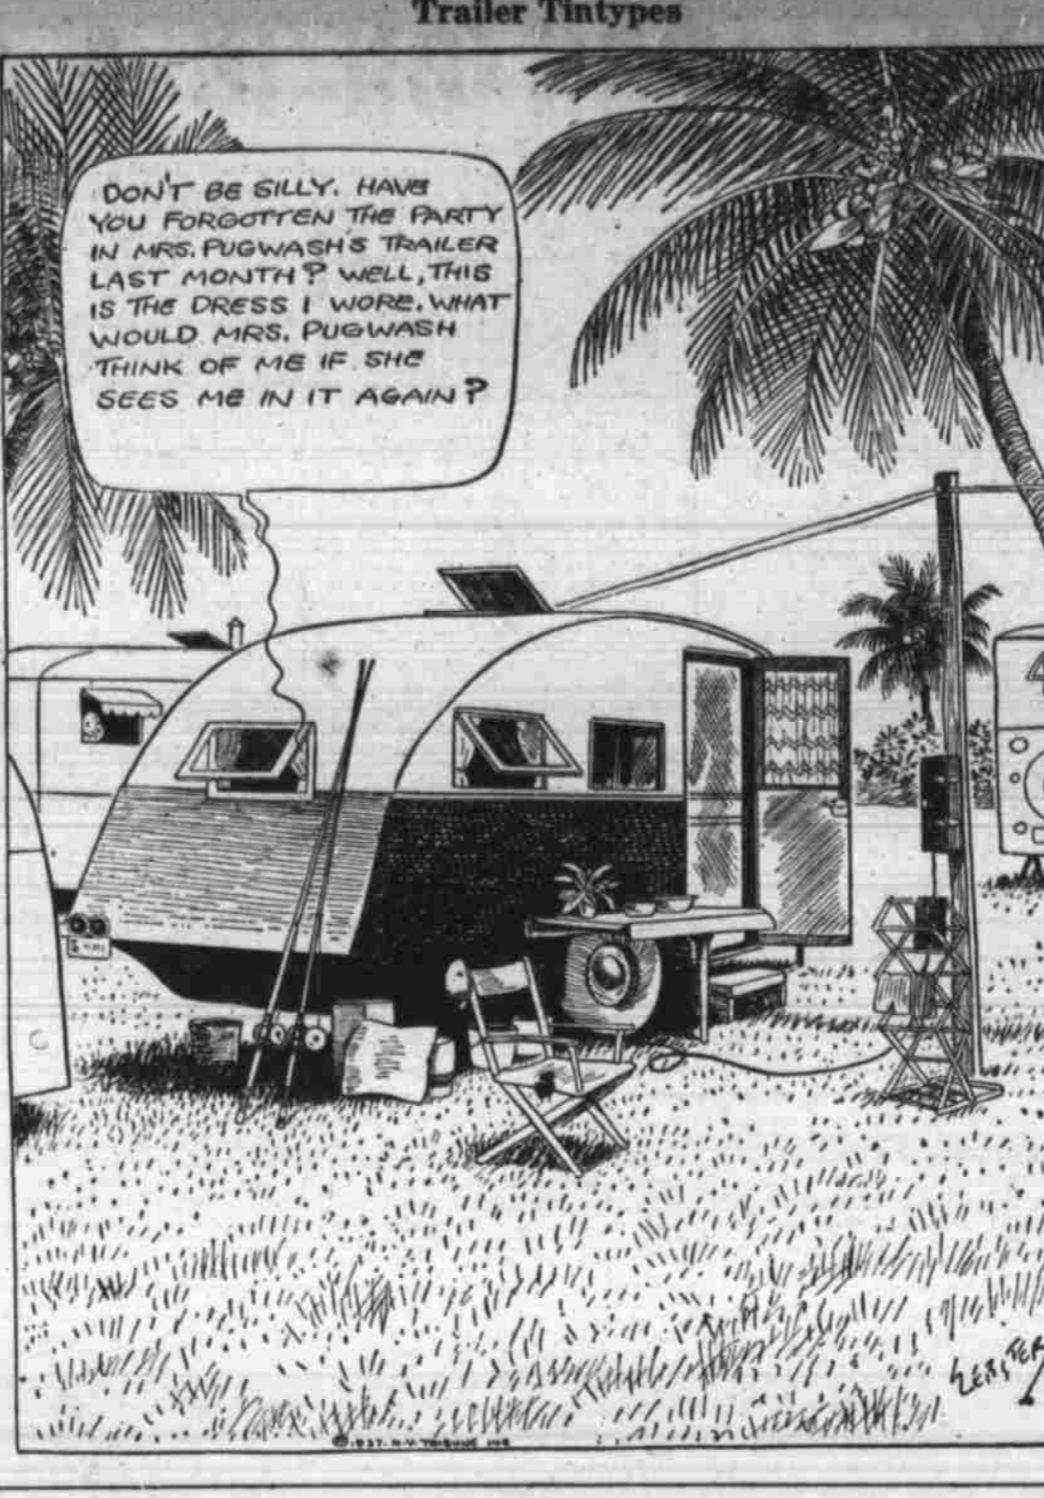

Their feelings get down to the old controlling factor of self-interest for their districts. What worries the regional statesman is that the president is empowered, upon declaration of war, to put an embargo on the products of their home districts—oil, cotton, wheat. They know that, in a big war, the president probably would embargo everything.

Legislators from seaboard districts wonder what will happen if American shipping is tied up; the farmers' representatives are thinking about what that will do to farm prices. The Yankee traders feel that, if other nations find their trade cut off, they will begin making other trade alliances permanently for normal times.

Thus, neither bill satisfies many, but a composite bill unquestionably will be adopted in the end, because the cry for neutrality demands something, and no one knows a better answer.

Girl
 The old feud between Works Progress Hopkins and Public Works takes is likely to break into the public prints shortly. Both are trying hard to get a lot more money than the president allotted them in the budget, and he will have to disappoint one or the other. Every time the president leaves town, these two angry men run over each other's toes. The last warning seems to have made them quieter about it this time, but has not curbed their ambition.

Split
 Some surprises have already developed, and some more may yet develop in the choosing of sides over the president's court packing program.

Chapter 35
AN ANONYMOUS LETTER
 It was half past three. Bigelow felt irritable and depressed and he did not know what to do with himself. He picked up the latest editions of the papers and after one look at them, settled down in a corner to examine them eagerly.

The police had received an anonymous communication which was reproduced in facsimile. It was typewritten and read:

To the Police of New York, Gentlemen:

The man who was recently found dead in his apartment and who was known as Count Anton Vronski was an impostor. Really, he was a Russian peasant from the Vronski estates in Russia and his name was Paul Cienkowski. In the revolution, he joined the Bolsheviks but he afterward turned traitor and fled from Russia with a fortune in stolen jewels. The Vronski family was wiped out during the revolution. This man deserved the death which came to him.

The newspapers wondered if the letter furnished a valuable clue to the murder or if it was merely a red herring intended to obscure the trail.

Bigelow went to his room to call Austrelitz, but his telephone was ringing as he unlocked his door and Austrelitz was on the wire.

"Hello. . . Have you seen the evening papers?" asked Austrelitz.
 "Yes, a few minutes ago. I was just going to call you. What do you make of it?"

"That letter was typed on the machine in my private office," said Austrelitz significantly. "I just typed out a copy to compare with the facsimile in the paper and I'm sure. It's an old machine, you know, and the eccentricities of the type are identical."
 "Good Lord," cried Bigelow.
 "You mean you think—"

"The lady who managed to get in there to wait for me yesterday," said Austrelitz gravely.
 Bigelow whistled under his breath.
 "Better not discuss it this way," advised Austrelitz. "Are you going to be free for a bit?"
 "I'm afraid so," admitted Bigelow gloomily.
 "Let a taxi then, and come up!"
 "Right!"

The Torn-Off Letterhead
 Bigelow hung up and put on his hat and coat, but with his hand on the door-knob, he hesitated, glancing uncertainly at the telephone. With a slight shrug, he turned back to call up Anne. But Austrelitz answered, informing him that she had not yet come in. He glanced at his wrist-watch, thinking the was taking a long time over lunch, then with a sigh, he set out.

In the lobby, the little man took up the trail and followed Bigelow, but although Bigelow acknowledged his presence with a scowl, he made no effort to shake him off.

Dr. Austrelitz had him ushered in without delay, and laid out for his inspection on the desk the facsimile of the letter the police had received and the copy he had made himself on his old typewriter.

"Look at these!" said the doctor quietly.
 Bigelow examined them interestedly.
 "You see how the e is blocked up so that the top part prints solid," pointed out the doctor, "and the u is slightly crooked and in 'Cienkowski's' prints slightly above the line? It doesn't seem possible to me that another typewriter would have all three defects—or at least, not probable."
 "But how in the world did you think of comparing this typing with the typing done on your machine?" asked Bigelow curiously.

"I don't know. One recognizes typing done on one's own machine. I suppose without realizing it oneself, one's mind becomes aware of the various oddities of the type. And then there was one curious thing that I observed yesterday without really thinking about it. You know how one sometimes notes and records an impression mechanically without realizing until afterward that one has done it?"

"Yes," nodded Bigelow.
 "Well, it happens that I have a habit of pacing the floor when I'm restless or absorbed in thinking. I did it yesterday while Karasankoff was here and as I passed the desk, by eyes fell upon the waste-paper basket several times. The basket was about half full of wastepaper, and on top of it lay a thin strip of paper—the letterhead torn or cut off a sheet of my stationery. Its presence there attracted a vague curiosity somewhere in the back of my mind, but I was too intent on what Karasankoff was saying and looking to concentrate on the matter of the torn-off letterhead. And by the time Karasankoff had departed, I had forgotten about it. But this afternoon when I saw the newspaper, I remembered the letterhead. Perhaps that first suggested to me that the letter might have been typed here. Afterward, I questioned Miss Westcott and she assured me she had not thrown it in the basket. So it must have been Karasankoff. No one else used this room except when I myself was present."

Bigelow nodded. "I think it's fairly clear, then, that Karasankoff typed the letter. Do you suppose she represents her government or some Russian secret order formed to deal with cases like Vronski's?"

"It seems possible. And I can think of no good reason why she should have written the letter if the facts in it are not true. I mean—if she was officially acting as a stenist, there is a purpose in

FEDERAL REVENUES OVER THREE MILLION

WASHINGTON, Mar. 17 (AP)—Federal revenues, bolstered by the inflow of cash from March income tax collections, have crossed the $3,000,000,000 mark this fiscal year.

A treasury report said today revenues between last July 1 and March 15 totaled $3,002,344,350, of which $919,248,535 came from income taxes.

March income tax collections reported through last Saturday totalled $112,650,862, or $27,932,291 over the same period last year.

Internal revenue collectors throughout the country were busy today tabulating income tax receipts up to the payment deadline last midnight. March collections are expected to aggregate around $840,000,000.

ESCAPE IF YOU CAN

BY FREDERICK JACKSON

her sending the letter—to let others know what fate traitors can expect. Otherwise, what purpose could there be?"

"She might have sent it in an effort to set the police on the right trail—or perhaps merely to aid Dryden."

Austrelitz shook his head with a faint smile. "In my opinion Madame Karasankoff is too interested in her own career to waste time or thought on matters that do not directly concern her. Let me lay before you my own reasoning in regard to that letter. Here is my line of thought."

"You think she shot him?"

Austrelitz began to pace the floor. "Either the facts in that letter are false or they are true. If they are false, she has gone to some trouble to invent them and for what purpose? To clear Dryden—a man that she does not know? That doesn't seem to me. On the other hand, if the facts are true, they mean more to you and me than to the police. They mean that Karasankoff must have learned their in order to be able to reveal them. But when did she learn them, after Vronski's death or before?"

"Before, of course!" cried Bigelow.

"We can't be sure of that, but if she knew them before, we could understand something which puzzled us—her curious reactions when you first mentioned Vronski's name to her on the ship and when you afterward presented him."

"She knew who he was all the time!" cried Bigelow.

"I think so. I think she recognized his name on the ship but wasn't certain it was the man she had in mind until you actually presented him."

"And a few hours after that, he was shot," said Bigelow.

"Yes," they looked at each other gravely.

"You think she shot him?" asked Bigelow.

"Yes. I have thought so from the beginning, only I could think of no way of establishing the fact except by eliminating all other possibilities. And until now, you must remember, we have had no motive to ascribe to her."

"Do you want to establish the fact of her guilt?" asked Bigelow curiously. "I mean—you don't want to see her in Dryden's place, do you?"

"No, I can't honestly say I do. Theoretically, one realizes that it is one's duty as a citizen of a civilized community to see that a murderer or murderers pays the just penalty for his or her crime. But in a case like this, where the victim was a thorough scoundrel and the murderers such a beautiful creature and such a brilliant dancer—one hesitates to denounce her. On the other hand, is one to let Dryden go to the chair?"

"Certainly not," agreed Bigelow.

"I'll admit the case against him does not seem very strong, but one never knows about juries. So much depends upon how the lawyers present their case—and how persuasive they are—and what sort of brains the jurors have got and what sort of lives they've lived. . . . Any number of things. . . . Suppose the case goes against Dryden and he's convicted and Karasankoff has by that time departed these shores—that she has no inclination to confess and sacrifice herself to save him. She may argue that he meant to kill Vronski—that he would have killed him if she hadn't saved him the trouble—and that therefore he is just as guilty as she is and just as deserving of punishment."

Reach Agreement On Rail Retirement Plan WASHINGTON, Mar. 17 (U. P.)—Railroad leaders turned today to a fight for a $360,000,000 wage increase after reaching an agreement with railroad executives on a new retirement system for the industry's 1,200,000 workers. "The labor groups determined to ask for national wage conferences rather than system-by-system negotiations. Non-operating employees seek a 20 per cent increase, with corresponding hikes in piecework pay and guaranteed working time. They have requested a conference in Chicago on March 30, to meet the increase effective April 15. "The brotherhood, representing about 300,000 engineers, firemen, conductors, switchmen and trainmen, expect to ask for a 20 per cent pay boost on March 22. "George M. Harrison, president of the railway labor executives association, said he believes the lines will agree to a national conference. "The retirement agreement, reached by groups headed by Harrison and by J. J. Peley, president of the Association of American Railroads, would cut the initial tax on workers' incomes and on employers' payrolls from 3-1/2 per cent to 2-1/2 per cent each.
