Five Killed As Pilot Mistakes Lake For Fog

A half submerged mass of badly battered steel, here you see the remains of the great airliner San Pedro after it had plunged into the Argentine Lake Mar Chiquita, killing five persons and seriously injuring five others aboard. It is believed the pilot mistook the lake for a fog bank. Rescuers had to take to swimming horses to reach the wrecked plane.

Paralysis Victim Coast Epidemic

The spread of infantile paralysis in Los Angeles caused alarm in the film colony when Ida Lupino (above), blonde actress, was stricken with a mild case of the disease. Swimming pools, considered a source of infection, have been closed as a consequence on the Hollywood estates of film stars.

EXEMPT COTTON MUST BE FILED BY JULY 1

Saturday Is Last Day To Avoid Payment Federal Taxes

Applications for exemption from the federal tax on all cotton ginned prior to June 1, 1934, must be in the office of the county agent before July 1 in order to avoid payment of the tax, according to word from the county agent's office.

The tax is 50 percent of the money obtained when the cotton is sold, it was said. The tax going into effect July 1 is a part of the Bankhead Cotton Compulsory Control bill, passed recently by congress.

In meeting the requisites of the Bankhead bill, all old cotton is required to be tagged, whether it is located on a farm, at a gin, in a public or private warehouse, in a compress, in the hand of a common carrier, in a consuming establishment, at a port, in the hands of an officer or a department, agency or establishment.

In some instances there are exceptions to the tax, it was said.

ALLRED INDICTS SELF SAYS SMALL

Candidate For Governor Makes Charges Against Attorney General In Plains Talk

Special to The Democrat
Plainview, June 28.—Senator Clint C. Small, candidate for Governor of Texas, yesterday charged James V. Allred, Attorney General and also a candidate for governor, of bringing an indictment of his own department when he threatens as an issue in the governor's race, lobbying, utilities and monopolistic tendencies. Small made the charge in an address here before large and attentive audiences from all sections of the South Plains.

“I know of no candidate in this campaign who doesn't want to curb these evils,” Small said. “They all can be taken care of by proper law enforcement, which is the greatest issue before the people.”

“We hear one candidate, the attorney general who is charged with the responsibility of protecting the public from all three evils, saying for the first time that the law is insufficient. He never said anything about the poor law until he got into the campaign.”

“He never called it to the attention of the legislature, which has met many times while he has been in office observing this so-called terrible situation with his own eyes.”

“I charge that if we are overrun by the lobbyists and the utilities and threatened by monopoly, it is simply because his department has failed to function. A new attorney general will correct these abuses and it is idle to expect a correction from a governor who failed to act while he was attorney general.”

Following his unusual talk here, the candidate left for Big Spring with assurance on all sides that the Plains country will be back of him in the July Primary.

Oil Code Provisions To Be Enforced, Says Administrator Ickes

WASHINGTON, June 28.—Every means will be used to enforce the provisions of the oil code, Administrator Ickes said today. DONNA of the BIG TOP by BEULAH POYNTER

BEGIN HERE TODAY

When Donna is injured by a fall from the trapeze Madeline arranges for her to be taken to GRANDFATHER SIDDAL'S farm to recuperate. To please her partner Donna pretends to be Madeline. She falls in love with BILL SIDDAL, Madeline's cousin, and though she is ashamed of deceiving Bill and Grandfather she is afraid to tell the truth.

Meanwhile Madeline, who has married CON DAVID, the animal trainer, is killed. Con knows of Donna's deception and decides to blackmail her. He comes to the nearby town and Donna agrees to meet him. She departs, telling Bill she is going to a neighbor's.

Bill grows anxious because she is gone so long. He finds an anonymous letter written by Mrs. Planter telling him that Donna has gone to meet Con. He has just finished reading the letter when Donna arrives.

Donna keeps her appointment with Con and he threatens to cause trouble for her. She reaches home just as Bill has finished reading the anonymous letter. Donna tells him she was at the neighbors'. He knows she was not.

CHAPTER XLII

Bill was sitting by the window, staring out at the falling snow. He did not turn when Donna entered. She crossed the room and slowly began to remove her dress. She said, "I told you a lie tonight, Bill."

"I know you did."

"I went to town."

"I know that, too. Why?"

"It didn't occur to me that you would object," she evaded.

"I don't know that I did object. Not to your going to town."

"You deliberately tricked me into lying," she said hotly. "That was objecting."

"Why did you lie?" He rose and came to her. How small she looked and how pale! The healthy bronze of her circus days was gone and her features looked pinched and tense. There were shadows under her eyes and a pathetic quiver about her lips that made his heart ache. If only she would offer some explanation, something that would convince him that damnable letter was a lie! But even as sympathy swept over him the staggering thought that perhaps she was suffering because she loved another man made his voice harsh and cold.

"Why did you lie?" he repeated.

"Because — because I could see you mistrusted me and you had sworn nothing — nothing could ever make you doubt me again. I wanted to see — to see if you —"

His laugh cut like a rapier. "Testing me, eh? Thanks. After giving me a couple of rotten hours visioning you freezing to death in the snow you think it's sporting to test my truth. Thanks!"

"Bill!"

"Next time I won't waste my anxiety, but I would like to know what made you change your plans. Or didn't you intend to go to the Adamses when you left?"

She did not answer. Slowly she reached for her nightgown and went into the tiny dressing room adjoining. Sobs were tearing at her throat. Her heart was pounding in a way that made her sick and dizzy. She heard the creak of bed springs, and the fear that Bill would desert her that night disappeared.

From a closet she took out blankets, spread them on the couch in the dressing room and flung herself upon them. Every bone and muscle ached as though she had done hard manual labor. She felt she would never sleep again, but outraged nature rebelled and soon she was asleep.

Bill lay awake reviewing his life with Donna. Little incidents that head seem of no importance took on new meanings — the strange antipathy between Madeline and Mrs. Planter, the sudden exit of the housekeeper, the telephone call that had upset Madeline so. Had Mrs. Planter written the anonymous letter? Who else? It would be characteristic of the woman to strike back in such a fashion, but even Mrs. Planter must have had some basis for such statements.

He thought of the letter Madeline had written Con David that had been returned. Other letters, too, that she had received, supposedly from her partner. Suppose —

There was one thing Bill could do. He could find out if the circus performer was in Lebanon and what had brought him there. After that Madeline would have to make an explanation or — he groaned and dug his head into the pillow. Suppose he learned she was unfaithful? What would he do?

Long before Donna awakened Bill was up and dressed. Minnie had not yet arisen when he descended to the kitchen. He made coffee and drank it, black and strong. He mixed the mash for the cattle and filled pails of "slop" for the hogs. Then, in rawhide boots, cap and coat, he plodded through the snow to the stables.

The storm was over. There were huge drifts in the farm yard, but a streak of crimson in the sky gave promise of a sunny day. The car Donna had taken the day before had not been taken into the garage and was completely snow-covered. The radiator must be frozen, and probably the engine was water-soaked.

Bill felt bitter resentment toward the machine. But for it, Madeline could not have made that trip to town.

After he had fed and watered the animals he got out the sleigh and hitched the horses to it. He was going to find out whether Con David was in Lebanon or not.

Breakfast was being served at the Commercial House when he hitched the horses in front of the building. A drummer who had to catch an early train, the conductor of a freight that "made up" in Lebanon, and a farmer who had stay in town because of the storm were sitting at the long table reserved for regulars as Bill stalked into the office.

Pete's red head appeared from behind the desk, followed by Pete's freckled face and wide-toothed grin.

"Hello, Mr. Siddal," he chirped. "You're sure in town early."

"Yes. Mind if I look over your register a minute?"

Pete's answer was a grunt, intended as a negative. The register lay open on the desk and Bill made a rapid survey of the names before him, then flipped the page to the day before. Only one name appeared, "Con David, Chicago."

Until he saw that name heavily scrawled, he had clung to the hope that the circus performer was not in town, that the anonymous letter had been the work of a vicious imagination. Shock momentarily obscured the features of the small boy by the register, the wall about him.

Pete's voice brought Bill back to the necessity of hiding his emotions. "D'ye know who that is, Mr. Siddal? It's the feller that was here with the circus last spring, the feller that went into the cage with all them lions and tigers. But pshaw — of course you know! I plumb forgot your wife was with the circus, too, and that Con David came here to see her."

"I don't think he came to see Mrs. Siddal," Bill said quickly. "Of course they are friends but —"

"Oh, yes he did," Pete insisted. "Or he wouldn't a-written her a letter right away?"

"How do you know he wrote her a letter?"

"'Cause I delivered it for him. Didn't she tell you? He gimme a dollar."

"Regular plutocrat, eh?" Bill mumbled. "I'd like to see Mr. David." The name stuck in his throat.

"Now?"

"Yes, now."

"But he ain't up."

"Tell him I want to see him and I think he'll get up."

"But it's awful early and he might get sore if I woke him now," Pete argued.

"You tell him I want to see him," Bill's voice was more harsh than he intended, and the boy, his jaws dropping, scurried out of the office and up the stairs. Pete had to knock several times before there was a response. Then came a muffled, "What is it?"

"Mr. Siddal wants to see you."

The name "Siddal" woke Con at once. He leaped out of bed, shivering in the icy air from the open window. "What's he want?"

"Dunno. Said I was to wake you and that he wants to see you."

"Tell him to wait. When I'm dressed I'll ring."

Pete descended as quickly as he had gone up the stairs and delivered the message verbatim. Rader came into the office then, wiping his mustache. He greeted Bill genially, but his eyes showed the curiosity he felt. "Out early, ain't you? Snow do much damage in your vicinity?"

"No. The wind blew the branches off some trees and I had to dig the drifts away from the barn doors, but that was all."

"We're serving breakfast if you would like some."

"No, thanks." Bill took a pipe from his pocket, filled and lighted it and sat down in a chair by the window. When he had entered the office he had had no intention of speaking to the man he considered his rival. He had sent Pete after David on an impulse and now he was sorry he had done it. He felt incapable of handling a most unpleasant situation.

The hotel proprietor, noting Bill's grim face and haggard eyes, wondered what had happened. When his son whispered that Bill Siddal had sent for the circus performer Rader anticipated a scene and preened himself to become a witness.

But he was to be disappointed. The board behind the desk registered a bell ringing in 44. Pete hurried off to answer it and came back to tell Bill that Mr. David wanted him to come up to his room.

Bill's steps lagged as he moved down the weight of the stairs. He scarcely had time to get his hand on the door handle when he was with an anonymous letter. LET'S LEGALIZE BEER

OFFICERS, NO MATTER HOW CONSCIENTIOUS THEY MAY BE, CANNOT ENFORCE LAWS WITHOUT THE CO-OPERATION OF THE PEOPLE.

THERE WILL BE BOOTLEGGERS JUST AS LONG AS OUR PEOPLE BUY THEIR BEER. LEGALIZATION OF THE BEVERAGE WILL HELP MATERIALLY TO IMPROVE THIS UNPLEASANT SITUATION, AND PROVIDE NEW TAX MONEY AS WELL.

may soon become helpless when their long as the people want beer they're likely to get it, one way or another.

they may, officers cannot enforce a law popular with the people. So . . . if we're to have beer anyway—and it appears are—let's bring it out into the open and tax it. We can secure a sizable annual return for city, county and state funds through the sale of beer or we can continue to have it sold in violation of the law and without a penny's return in the form of taxes.

It isn't as if we were going at something blindly. Numerous other counties near us have now had beer long enough to test its worth. In every instance the people of these counties will tell you that it has been worth while, that it has aided business, minimized bootlegging and promoted temperance.

Morals cannot be dictated in this land of ours, but they can be regulated. You may tell your neighbor he can't have beer, but he'll get it—make no mistake about that. Why not let him have it—legally, and enjoy all the benefits that accompany such a procedure?

Presbyterians Hand Methoists Defeat To Tie For League

METHODISTS IN 16 TO 4 LOSS YESTERDAY

Methodists To Vie With Christians This Afternoon

Duplicating in part the feat of the Baptists of Monday, the Presbyterians yesterday completely routed the Methodists to enter into a tie for the lead of the Sunday School Softball League.

The smallest crowd of the season saw the Presbyterians connect for hit after hit and run in 16 scores to 4 for the losers.

Carl Melear, "Red" Lampkin, Allen Grundy, and John Deaver were the Presbyterian stars on both the attack and the defense. Melear smacked out two doubles, and Lampkin and Deaver also added two-base hits.

The antics of Lawyer Grundy were particularly amusing. Not only did he perform stunts out in left field, but he also kept up a continual string of wise-cracks, as did "Dirty" McCool.

This afternoon the Methodists are the guests of the last-place Christians, who will try to climb out of the dugout before the league closes. Tomorrow the last game of the week will be played when the Baptists visit with the Methodists.

Close? A Picture Had to Decide Finish

You often see hurdlers taking the first and second barriers matching stride for stride. But when they hit the next to last hurdle, a picture like the above is unusual. So close was this 120-yard high hurdles in the N. C. A. A. meet at Los Angeles that judges had to view official pictures before they decided on the winner. Then Sam Klopstock, Stanford, was declared victor, and George Fisher, L. S. U. originally thought to be first at the tape, was third.

Local Mechanics And Barbers Clash In Baseball Game

The Barbers and the Mechanics clash this afternoon at 6 o'clock in a regular baseball game at Fair Park Field.

Both teams boast strong batting attacks and the game promises to be a "thriller."

No admission will be charged and everyone is invited to turn out for the fray.

Batteries for the Barbers will be Lloyd Byars and C. E. Bentley and for the Mechanics will be Ross Springer and Wesley Hughes.

Other players on the teams are as follows: Barbers—Paul Blevins, Earl Ramsey, C. O. Davenport, Leon Randolph, Ed McCreary, Andy Simmons, Regnal Greenhaw and R. G. Patrick.

Mechanics—Dick Graham, Jimmie Mitchell, Raymond Ballew, Fred Gerlach, J. L. Hollingsworth, Charlie Dunn, Ed Foxhall and Don Wright.

'Leans' Down 'Fats' In Baseball Encounter Yesterday Afternoon

In a grudge baseball game yesterday afternoon at Fair Park field, the local "thins" evened the score by handing the Memphis "fats" a 15-7 defeat.

Despite the fact that the game yesterday afternoon was to settle once and for all the question of which was the better team, a number of the "fats" still contend that their team is the better of the two.

Another game between the two teams looms as inevitable.

C. G. Bumgarner, shortstop for the "thins", provided the large crowd with a thrill when he slammed out the only home run of the game.

Ted Hanna, shortstop for the "fats", connected with the next-longest hit when he knocked a long triple.

The line-up is as follows: Fats—Angus Huckaby, c; Bill Gaither, p; Joe Webster, lb; H. W. Kuhn, 2b; H. B. Estes, 3b; Ted Hanna, ss; Jerry Wright, lf; Harley Cudd, cf; Ed McCreary, rf.

TRIO OF TIPS ON PLAYING OUT OF THE ROUGH

When in the rough, there are three things to remember. One of them is to keep cool and relax a little more than usual. Another is to try to bring the clubhead down sharply on the ball, making no attempt to hit with a sweeping stroke which will stop by the thick grass. The third concerns a lie that is very heavy. It is far safer to shoot straight out on the fairway, where you have a possible chance of reaching the green with the next stroke, than to waste useless effort in the rough.

Local 'Fats' Will Clash Wednesday With Estelline

Meeting in a return engagement, the Estelline "fats" will contest the local "fats" in a baseball game at Fair Park field here next Wednesday afternoon at 6 o'clock.

The local "fats" administered a 25-12 shelling to the Estelline big boys Monday afternoon, and the Estelline team announces its intentions of avenging the wrong.

Despite the fact that the Estelline "fats" took a drubbing at Estelline Wednesday, the Memphis team was entertained royally.

"The biggest sports I ever saw," said H. W. Kuhn, playing manager of the locals.

...ation. Either the beer intoxicates or the bootlegger is still in business in spite of the legalized beer.

We quote now from an editorial in Dallas Journal, Jan. 6, 1934:

"But it is worth nothing to Dallas that from October 1st through Jan. 1st there is an increase in traffic accidents. Prohibitionists said this would happen; beer advocates said it wouldn't. Drunkenness for December showed up in police arrests in another increase for 1933 over 1932, a gain of about thirty per cent. Prohibitionists said that would happen; beer advocates said it wouldn't."

Perhaps this is what our friends who pay for full pages of unsigned propaganda mean when they say "It has promoted temperance and given our people a greater respect for law." Large increases in arrests for drunkenness and traffic accidents will not look like promotion of temperance and greater respect for law to the thinking citizen. 5. Evidence comes from all over the nation such as to alarm our national law enforcement leaders, to the effect that bootlegging has not been curtailed in the least but is probably increasing in spite of legalized beer. You will not get rid of the bootleggers by legalizing beer.

6. In counties where beer is legal, road houses spring up by the dozens where everything to drink is sold and immoral conduct is sponsored and encouraged. These places are conspicuously absent along the roads in dry counties, and we think the people of Memphis want them to continue to be absent in our community. The trash of the country is attracted to such places and they constitute a social nuisance. If we have beer we will have them.

7. Why should this be an election for that city only? Do not these people who live about Memphis, who vote here, who support the schools, the churches, own property and pay taxes in the city, whose families must attend school, church, lodge, and club in town, do they not deserve a voice in this matter. Where is the sense of justice of those who would vote beer into this town that has been dry for more than a generation without giving these good people a voice in the matter? If I were for beer I would refuse to support this unjust method of securing it.

8. What about revenue? That has ever been the cry of the wets, and the cry of evil. One betrayed his Lord for revenue. The only figures or facts given by our unsigned beer advocates, shows a measly little revenue received by the counties nearby. All the rest of their propaganda sheet is covered by misleading statements that are unsupported by the facts.

The trouble has always been with the wets that they saw no farther than a little revenue, when there were principles at stake which are above dollars and cents. Shall we sell our convictions for revenue. I hope not.

So let us for the third time within a year, and more emphatically than ever, say by our vote, that the people of Memphis desire to stand as they have stood for approximately forty years, against the sale of intoxicating beverages in public places and with public approval.

We expect to be criticized for making this statement. We have no desire to antagonize our neighbors who would give me the opinion, and we do not feel that the expression of a man's sentiments which he honestly holds concerning a public issue should cause any ill feeling, even when that man goes to the extreme of signing his name and letting his neighbor know that he is acquainted with his convictions.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for the kind invitation to discuss this issue through your columns,

We are respectfully,
Signed: E. D. Landreth,
O. K. Webb.

But
NOT ONE CORD LOOSENED!
NOT ONE TREAD SEPARATED!
Not one Blowout!

AS thirty-three speed demons careened and slid around the steep banked curves of the hot brick track, tires shrieked and smoked... break-neck speeds, 150 miles and more down the straightaway—tremendous centrifugal force tugging to rip the tread from the body of the tire. In fact, every conceivable force worked to tear the tire to pieces, but not one cord loosened—not one tread separated—and not a single blowout. What amazing proof of Tire Strength—Safety—Quality and Dependability!

Every one of the thirty-three drivers at the Indianapolis 500-mile sweepstakes chose and bought Firestone High Speed Tires. The fact that not one of the 132 tires failed is your greatest guarantee of the Extra Safety—Strength—and Dependability built into Firestone Tires.

The New Firestone High Speed Tire for 1934 is Safety-Protected on the outside by a wider tread of flatter contour, deeper non-skid, more and tougher rubber, giving you more than 50% longer non-skid mileage—Safety-Protected on the inside by eight additional pounds of pure rubber absorbed by every 100 pounds of cords. This additional rubber surrounds every cotton fiber inside every cord in every ply. This is accomplished by the Firestone patented process of Gum-Dipping, which soaks the cords in liquid rubber, counteracting damaging frictional heat, the greatest enemy of tire life.

MAKE THIS TEST YOURSELF

Note how the rubber in a Firestone Tire clings to the high stretch Gum-Dipped cords. This greater adhesion and strength is made possible by the Firestone patented process of Gum-Dipping.

Note how the rubber pulls away from cords that have not been Gum-Dipped. Regardless of the number of cord plies in tires not built with Gum-Dipped cords, friction will develop intense heat, and heat will separate the plies—very often causing blowouts.

Only in Firestone Tires are friction and heat counteracted by Gum-Dipping.

Your Firestone Dealer is prepared to let you make, for yourself, the amazing test illustrated above.

ARE THE RAILROADS WAKING UP?

THERE has been a distinct improvement in rail service through Memphis within the last few weeks. Two Fort Worth & Denver trains have been speeded up and service has been extended through to Houston. Announcement has been made that the other two trains will soon have air-cooled diner-lounge cars, a feature now advertised by the nation's leading trains.

Railroads have been slow—much too slow—to adjust themselves to a changing world. While other industries have progressed with the times, railroads have remained at a virtual standstill. And they've paid dearly for their lack of aggressiveness. Other modes of transportation have been quick to supply the things the railroads lacked and have consequently taken much of their revenue, some of which may never return.

There's little sympathy Mr. Average Citizen has with the railroads. He believes their plight is largely their own fault because they have been unwilling to change their methods of doing business.

There surely is a future for the railroads—but they must mould it themselves.

GOOD WORK DONE

THE record made by the 73rd Congress is one to bring a good deal of encouragement to all Americans who hope to see their democratic institutions perpetuated.

When that Congress convened, a year ago last March, our faith in those institutions was probably lower than ever before. There was a widespread feeling that Congress could not possibly function efficiently in an emergency; a common belief that nothing could make it unite on a program for the common good.

The record made by the 73rd Congress pretty well dispels that notion. It did a tremendous amount of work; it kept the national necessities in mind with pretty consistent thoroughness.

To be sure it made mistakes. It listened to the voice of partisan or sectional self-interest, now and then. It indulged in some loose talk. But in the main it made an exceedingly fine record.

Representative government in the United States met and passed a very grave test, during the last 15 months.

MODERN GIRL VINDICATED

THE modern girl is just as admirable a person as her mother was at the same age, and in some respects she is a good deal nicer.

This is on the word of Sister Laurentine, director of nursing in St. Francis' Hospital, Pittsburgh.

Attending a convention of the Catholic Hospital Association of the United States and Canada, Sister Laurentine told how she has directed supervision of more than 800 girls trained as nurses in the St. Francis training school.

"We get these girls at the flapper age," she said, "and they are as fine a lot of girls as anyone would want to meet. There is no reason to believe all the things said about modern girls. Some of them may have vices, but they are no worse than the girls of other generations."

This is what you might call expert testimony in the modern girl's favor.

DICTATORSHIP'S DREAD

A STRIKING insight into the philosophy of a dictatorship is given by the contrasting speeches made in Germany recently by Franz von Papen and Paul Joseph Goebbels.

Von Papen, vice chancellor of the Nazi government, advocated that the right to criticize the government—a right which has been sternly suppressed under Hitlerism—be allowed again. But a projected broadcast of a recording of his speech was immediately canceled and Goebbels, Hitler's minister of propaganda, asserted that the suppression of criticism would be continued.

That it will be Goebbels' view, and not von Papen's, which will prevail is hardly to be doubted. Nothing is so dangerous to a dictatorship as freedom of discussion.

A Hitler, a Mussolini, or a Stalin—they do not fear armed revolt, for that is a thing they can cope with. Plain, unhampered talk is the one menace they cannot endure.

JUST A LITTLE HOUSE UPON A HILL

HEALTH

BY DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN
 Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygeia, the Health Magazine
 Although we haven't had a recurrence of the epidemic of lethargic encephalitis, or sleeping sickness, that struck the St. Louis area last summer, we should be aware of its symptoms and be prepared for it.

This condition is essentially an inflammation of the brain. There is a variety of symptoms, chiefly drowsiness, which in some cases persists for long periods.

The disease usually begins with a severe headache, nausea, and vomiting, which are common to most infectious diseases. There is also a mental confusion, tremors of the hand, stiffness of the spine and neck, and some difficulty of speech, which points to the fact the infection has invaded the nervous system. Many of the people affected see double, others have trouble looking at night, and sometimes convulsions may appear instead of chills.

Not all having this infection become drowsy. Some become unconscious, others have excitable delirium, and a few may seem to be unable to sleep. Even those who are drowsy, however, can be awakened and caused to answer questions, though the answers sometimes are unintelligible. The difficulty in speech may be so great that the patient cannot make himself understood.

Cause of the disease has not been determined. Many cases are thought at first to be influenza, but are sometimes mistaken for typhoid fever, meningitis, infantile paralysis, or even delirium tremens. However, as the disease progresses, its nature soon becomes known.

Most people with this condition, if they are going to get well, begin to improve almost immediately. In most of the St. Louis cases the temperature was normal and the patients had begun to recover before the end of the second week.

Even in those cases which dragged out for several months, improvement began to occur, but in these cases complete recovery was not common. About one-fifth of the thousand people who were infected in the St. Louis epidemic died. Children recovered more often than did grownups.

In the treatment of this disease all sorts of remedies were tried, but without the establishment of any one of them as a certain cure. Nevertheless, life was saved in

The first Tong war resulted from an attack on a member of the Kwong Dock Tong by one of the Suey Sing Tong. Three of the former and one of the latter were killed. many instances by emergency measures which are known to the medical profession. These measures are directed at the symptoms of the disease rather than at its cause.

For instance, a needle can be introduced into the spinal column and the spinal fluid which is under pressure may be permitted to escape. The relief of this pressure saves the tissue, stops the headache and gives opportunity for recovery.

The injection of glucose solution aids the nutrition of the patient and support his blood pressure. It also provides the patient with fluid and overcomes the acid condition of the body.

The blood serum of those who suffered from the disease was tried, but did not seem to help with certainty the recovery of many of these patients.

As it is known that changes may occur in the nervous system after this disease, people affected by it should be examined regularly every six months for at least two or three years after having had an attack.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
 The Democrats Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON, June 28.—Although President Roosevelt will go away without officially announcing the appointments, two vitally important jobs and their occupants are now so clearly defined that they might as well be in the official roster:

Industry's agent in the New Deal—Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, NRA administrator.

Labor's agent in the New Deal—Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins.

That's the climax of a long fight, through which Johnson undertook to pose as the benevolent agent of everybody—industry, labor, consumer.

Johnson's insistence on that swept everyone else who tried to represent labor into the background—until the steel strike threat, when labor decided it had had enough and Roosevelt was forced to put Miss Perkins in charge of settlement.

General Favors Employers

Johnson was honest enough about it. But his idea of labor adjustment is that they should be made by employers. Industrialists with labor troubles found he was the person here through whom they could work most satisfactorily.

Johnson's recent dismissal of President John Donovan of the NRA employees' union, following a collective bargaining attempt, exemplifies his slant. So does his recent answer to a question as to what had become of Roosevelt's original idea of NRA as an equal partnership of government, labor, and industry.

"Somebody said something about a partnership," he replied. "But nobody ever said anything about an equal partnership."

Ambitious to Head Labor

Miss Perkins' great ambition has been to stand at the head of all American labor, organized and unorganized. Her position has seldom been more radical than that of President William Green and the A. F. of L. and her formula for labor is one of patience, persistence, and biding time.

But the idea that she should have some supervision over all labor matters touched by government and should be labor's spokesman in government has never left her. She is nearer that now than ever before, though her position in the steel dispute is that of a mediator and she may fall on that, as Johnson did.

The significant point is Johnson's retirement from the labor picture and her entry at a crucial point. Johnson has had the edge on her up to now.

Last summer Miss Perkins attended the first session of NRA's Labor Advisory Board and gave
