Take Good Care of What You Spend Your Life to Earn

The man who labors six days in the week for a liv ing should make an effort to save a part of his earnings for that time in the future when Age shall reduce his earning capacity.

The man with a bank account is in a position to do this, for this plan of setting aside a regular amount each month or week from the salary is the ideal method of saving money.

As far back as history will take us we find that there was always some crude means ri re koning the first mechanics, ones that would keep the time even approximately have been made in 1250 A. D.

The early Egyptians divided the day and night each into 12 hours, a custom adopted by the Jews or Greeks probably from the Babylonians.

The day is said to have been first divided into hours in 293 B. C., when a sun dial was erected in the temple of Quirinus at Rome. As early as 158 B. C. the time was alled in the streets of Rome by regular public criers.

In the early history of Englandwe are told that the people found a means of measuring time by the use that three inches of candle would last an even hour.

Among most of the nations of the north day began at sunrise, while among the Athenians and Jews it began at sunset. With the ancient Romans it began, as it does with us, ernment employes." at midnight.

Zanzibar a Veritable Paradise for the Conscienceless Money Lender.

A curious light is thrown on the character of the Zanziberis in a recent report of the consul general of the protectorate: "There is no time. The clock is, of course, a country in the world where the comparatively modern invention, habit of borrowing money is more confirmed than it is in Zanzibar. Neither the Arab nor the Swahili has the slightest idea of thrift. The former, when he has sold his cloves, immediately spends the proceeds in entertaining or in the purchase of European articles for which he has little or no use: he then mortgages his property at a ridiculous rate of interest or sells his next year's crop in advance, with the inevitable resuft that he is always up to the eyes in debt. The Swahili, if he happens to be out of debt at the beginning of the month, spends all his pay within a few days in food or native dances, and has to beg, borrow, or steal sufficient to maintain of wax candles. Builets from Revolver of Police Captain.

A blacksnake fully six feet long and nearly two inches in diameter which has been capturing young pigeons on the rocks just above the Birthingham station of the Panhandle railroad, Pittsburg, has attracted much attention.

Employes at the station and watchman at the mouth of the Mount Washington street car tunnel saw the serpent several times, but none were bold enough to attempt to capture it. More than a score of pigeons have nests on the rocks and the snake is said to have gone down the hillside from the grass and shrubbery to secure a frequent meal of the squabs.

Capt. C. E. Kemp of the police force of the Panhandle railroad was at the station one morning when the snake was perched on a rock in full view. Capt. Kemp fired at the serpent with his revolver. The snake fell from the rock and rolled down the hillside to the rocks above the tunnel. Four or five men climbed the rocks, but owing to the difficult scaling, the snake could not be secured.

Written By Christ. Country papers throughout the United States are printing what is aileged to be a letter written by Christ. In this letter was an injunction that it should be published to the world by whoever found it together with the statement that misfortune and bad luck would follow the person having possesion of it in the event that it was not given publicty.

There was likewise a promise that whoevery may have a copy of this in his or her possession will prosper and be followed by good fortune.

And as we are superstitious in regarding things of this kind we feel that she must be printed and so here it is.

According to the history of the letter it was written by Christ just after his crucifixion, signed by the Angel of Gabriel ninety nine years after the Savior's birth and presumably depoisted by him under a stone at the foot of the cross.

On this stone appeared the legend "Blessed is he who shall turn me over."

No one knew what the inscripletter and related its history for tion meant, or seemed to have more than one thousand years. sufficient curiosity to investigate, The Thompson woman began the until the stone was turned over by a little child and the letter which follows was discovered: Ga., Tribune on Oct. 31, 1891.

Doors, Blinds,

The natives in Nevada enjoy exercise and booze; Me.1, dogs, birds or beasts can tight if they choose. The asciticisms of swell society's whims Don't worry the denizens either phlegmatic or prim. The people are ready for a match or a mill, Provided the excitement reaches the limit to kill. So a mill was arranged for Grasshopper and Toad To contest for the mastery of the middle of the road. All kinds of creatures, great and small, Hurried to the scene to see it all. The lightning bug was busy to take films of the fight To show the absent people by the flitting flashlight. The champions appeared, prepared for the fray, And many stunts were pulled off that eventful day. The Grasshopper, you know, is a wise old guy, With a door knob face and a wink to his eye, And standing strate as a pig in graceful pose, He took his left hind foot and wiped his nose. The Horned Toad saw this challenge of skill And proceeded to advance to get ready for the mill. Just then a leaf, blown on the breeze. Came drifting along, opposite his knees; With quick, upward stroke of his pointed horn He pierced the leaf, all tattered and torn. The crusty Cicada cried, "he has it! he has it!" The Grasshopper smiled and said, "dad blast it." The crickets chirped and cheered the Toad As he pranced and pawed the dust in the road. The katy-did said, "he-did and he-didn't,' So nobody could tell which had or hadn't. The referee roared, "get ready, quick; Time's up; this is no place to get sick." Crouching low like a beast at bay in the brush The Horned Toad stood quivering, ready for the rush-To take the Grasshopper by surprise--unprepared-But he met with disaster and disastrously fared.

The Hoppergrass grinned with a smile of delight, As this was the way he was trained to fight. They met, they clinched in war's rude shock; They strove and writhed, giving and taking hard knocks.

Muscles of brass and twisted sinews of steel, Corded knots of ebony and ivory were revealed; Joints jerked, flesh bruised, bending of bone, Eyes blackened, silently endured there, struggling alone.

The Toad tore loose from this hot embrace, Receiving four upper-cuts on the side of his face: His jaw was jarred, his senses reeled, His defense was weak, he was beat, he could feel; He saw he couldn't see, for his eye was closed, While the Grasshopper hopped fresh on his toes. He punched him in the diaphram And kept him on the go;

The finish came with shouts and wild confusion:

If you lose only your nerve and keep your gall.

We have them under our feet.

Comfortable, reliable and neat."

At The Marriage Altar.

At the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Wells, last Wednesday evening at five-thirty o'clock, was solemnized the marriage of their laughter, Miss Qua, to Mr. George Sexauer.

At the appointed hour the couple took their place under a marriage bell of lavender, and white to the strains of the beautiful wedding march, Mendelssohn played by Mrs. J. S. Cobb.

The beautiful ring ceremony was used and Rev. R. B. Bonner of the Methodist church, pronounced the ceremony in a most beautiful, impressive manner. At the close of the ceremony congratulations were extended, after which the guests were ushered into the dining room where they were served with elegant ices and mints and white cake. The rooms and halls were decorated in lavender and white.

The bride's book in which all the guests registered was presided over by Mrs. W. C. Dickey. The ceremony was preceded by the beautiful song, "Oh Promise Me," by Miss Lottie Read in a most charming manner.

The bride is the charming laughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Wells of this city and has grown to womanhood in our midst and has the esteem and respect of all who know her.

The groom is a resident of the western part of the county and has a wide acquaintance here and is greatly admired for his many good qualities.

The bridal party departed on the northbound train for a wedding tour into Colordo and other points, after which they will return to Memphis and make their home out on the ranch west of Memphis where a fine home awaits them.
