

Death Toll In Texas Hurricane Reaches 25

Hundreds Of Families In Area Suffer

Rehabilitation Begins; Number Of Victims May Increase

HOUSTON (AP)—The southern coast of Texas Monday counted 25 dead and more than 150 injured, some seriously, as result of a hurricane which struck the coast line Saturday night.

Forces were mobilizing to provide emergency aid to the injured and the homeless. Freeport, Angleton, West Columbia, Velasco were devastated Saturday night and Sunday morning.

An emergency hospital was being operated in the Community House at Angleton. Prospects were that the death total at Angleton and elsewhere would increase where the gale left a trail of death and terror.

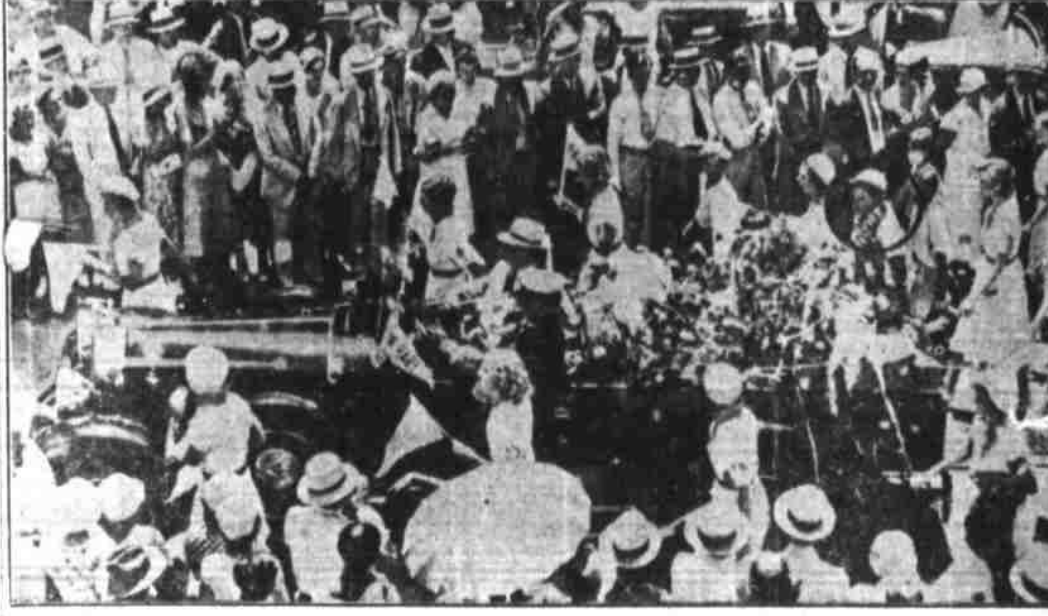

Emergency ration and bedding were furnished at Angleton, perhaps hardest hit of any community in the storm area.

Six hundred families were unofficially estimated as homeless in the general destruction of residences at Freeport and Angleton. No estimate had been made of property damage, which will run into thousands of dollars.

The eastbound American Airways ship, due to leave here at 6:04 p. m. Sunday canceled out because of low ceiling and visibility between Sweetwater and Fort Worth.

Eleanor Holm Values Victory In 100-Meter Back Stroke Event Higher Than Place In Cast Of The Follies

LOS ANGELES (UP)—The applause which broke forth in the Olympic swimming stadium when Eleanor Holm won the 100-meter back stroke was sweeter music to the champion's ears than any she ever heard as a follies girl.

"I got more of a thrill than I ever got before—and that includes the weeks I spent in the follies," said the beautiful ex-chloride girl.

In the final of the race, Miss Holm led five contestants who finished in the following order: Bonnie Mealing of Australia, second; Vallers Davies of Great Britain, fourth; Joan McSheehy, fifth; and Margaret Cooper of Great Britain, sixth.

The winning time of 1 minute, 19.4 seconds failed to set a new record. Miss Holm having broken both world and Olympic records in her first heat with 1 minute, 18.3 seconds.

"I wasn't trying to chalk up a new record," she said. "All I wanted to do was to win—to get across that line in front of Bonnie Mealing."

Phyllis Harding, the former world record holder, thinks maybe she can get it back.

"I'm going to England and have another try at it. I feel more fit back there. Out here the sunshine is an awful strain on us. I didn't realize the climate would have such an effect; you see, we are right out of our element."

Any qualms Eleanor Holm might have had about the wisdom of leaving the stage were dispelled in the joy of winning an Olympic championship.

"It's wonderful! I don't know whether I'm coming or going swimming is the grandest thing in the world—at least I think so. Maybe that's just because I'm on the top in swimming. I never even approached being on the top in anything else so I guess I'm no judge."

Even matrimony doesn't seem as important as swimming to her right at present.

"It's not that it would interfere with my swimming—I haven't even thought about that. I just haven't anyone to marry. I'm no authority on whether or not swimming championships and marriage mix—I've never been married."

Sports On Parade

By CURTIS BISHOP

Big Spring's two crack athletic events turned out to be hilarious performances yesterday afternoon. On the West Third sandlot the Couden Oilers, decidedly jealous of a team that had earned this column's praise by their winning streak of four games, pounced upon the luckless White Collars with a gusto that has not been equaled since Bill Cody started after buffalo.

The approximate score was 30 to 2. Something like twenty errors were chalked up against the Jamesmen, we believe, and not all were written down. The manager, Lex James, did not play but made the biggest error of all. He matched the game.

Just across the road the go-toppers swung into action and from what we could see were having a hard time of it. Our hat is off to anyone who can rope one of those clever, elusive animals. They have become wise in the lore of escaping the swinging lariats, and are better in an open field than Joe Hunt of A & M or Steve Grange of Illinois. At that Red Grange, the bronc-riding sheriff, turned in excellent time while we were watching. Our reference to hilarious performance does not include the gentleman who were swinging the ropes, but a member of the 1932 Stars football team, one Dub Coats. The co-captain of the Bovines was having the time of his life astride a fast, black mule. He tossed lariats galore, galloped from one end of the field to the other, and in general cavorted for his own entertainment.

Then suddenly the mule thought things over and came to the conclusion that as a horseman Dub was a much better wingman. The animal in question darted between two cars, side-stepped a speeding automobile, and was off. So, about fifty yards further, was Dub and in a much less graceful fashion.

The Mexican Tigers have, we are informed, re-organized and are again anxious to entertain their friends on the North Side diamond. For manager, if we haven't been grossly deceived, they have one Hubert Rutherford, one of the oldtimers in local sandlot circles. So pleased were Albert Garcia and Ferrido Fierro with the rejuvenation that they immediately renounced their pledges to the White Collars and rejoined with the Felinas, who celebrated their first game

Slaying 25 Years Ago May Be Cleared Up By Skelton Discovery

ODESSA—Discovery of a human skeleton last week on the Wade Ranch near Sanderson, has aroused belief that it may help to solve a 25-year-old murder, supposedly committed in the spring of 1907.

The missing man, Chris Lentzel, native of Germany, who had come to West Texas purchasing a large ranch in this section and having it well stocked with cattle, was last seen riding northeast toward Odessa with two men. Later the two men reported that Lentzel had slid them bolts property and they produced what turned out to be a fake deed to the property. When questioned further they said that Lentzel had ridden with them as far as Midland to board a train for the east, presumably headed for the old country. Upon further investigation it was found that they had in their possession a watch and articles of clothing that belonged to the missing man. The two men were not charged with murder.

When J. S. Dickens, employee of the Wade ranch, discovered the skeleton last week in a cave, he immediately called in other friends to help him uncover it. It had ## under the new leadership by defeating Couden.

Two former Big Spring hurlers have secured contracts with Class A leagues during the past week. "Lefty" Woods jumped from the Arizona-Texas disorganization to the Ft. Worth Cats, and did as well as any of the other hurlers in a 6 to 0 loss to Dallas. And "Too-Tall" Albers, the six feet eight inch young pitcher during the old West Texas League was sold to New Orleans.

Albers took his release from the Cowboys nonchalantly two seasons ago. "I can pick eight hundred pounds of cotton a day," he explained, "and ain't got no business trying to play ball anyhow."

Incidentally Albers was only nineteen on his last birthday.

Offense Against National Game Is Under Probe

The White Collars may be big game to Midway and the Jones Valley Sluggers but they're just animal crackers to the Couden Oilers. And the accent, it might be added, is decidedly upon the "crack."

The Refinerymen scored approximately thirty runs in eight innings yesterday, and in one stanza they retired to the field after a single out. The exact box score is not available as the scorer resigned at the third inning, but the writer distinctly remembers five home runs, two by Martin and one each by Billy Bass, Miller Harris and somebody else, a three base hit by Whittington and a half dozen other tripling, a pair of two base hits and numerous singles.

Warren of the White-Collars also clouted out a four base blow and this was responsible for the smaller end of the 30 to 2 score.

Circus catches by Miller Harris, Billy Bass and Bob Potter featured the contest. Smith, White-Collar shortstop, had a close lead over Joe Fiedle in the error contest with seven to six, while Bishop, second baseman, was in third place with four.

Ray McMahon, the hitherto invincible pressman, started for the Jamesmen, and turned out to be a pretty good third baseman. Bert Prescott managed to stagger thru three or four innings before giving way to Smith in the final frame.

The approximate scores:
Couden ..... 373 445 31-30 26 1
White Collars ..... 000 002 00-2 6 14
Batteries: Martin and Patton; McMahon, Prescott, Smith and Hall, Jones.

CHAPTER XXVII
The air was sharp and glowing. Nestling at Steve's side, warm in her wicker sport suit, Mona considered the world about her.

On either side in the Fifth avenue traffic were other expensive motor cars. The women in those cars were dressed beautifully. The men looked confident, distinguished.

Steve had pulled out of that life. Lottie was pulling out too. Her employer had raised her salary three times in the faces of offers from competitors.

Mona had bought it. Girls in the stratum of society to which she aspired bought their sport suits by the dozen. For Mona it took scheming and saving to buy one.

Steve drove with his eyes on the road ahead, a speculative frown touching his forehead.

"This is glorious!" Lottie called to them. Suddenly they reached a ridge, overlooking one of many broad, shallow valleys on the highway.

Further still, near the broad summit at the north, was an estate. On a terraced hill, above lawns and shrubberies, there towered a huge house. A copy of a French chateau of the last century.

"That's Twilands," Steve announced briefly, nodding toward the house.

"You've been here before, Steve?" Mona asked. "Several times."

"Why it's like the movies!" Lottie exclaimed in ecstasy. "I've always wanted to go inside one of these big houses where you have to send out a searching party to locate guests straying from the room without a guide. I've always wanted to semaphore a person sitting opposite me at dinner!"

Indeed it was a fine old place, Twilands, even from a distance, bespoke years of tradition, years of culture and care. Mona could picture the small Barry straggling about the lawn in white rompers, swimming in the pool or jogging along the country roadside on his pony.

She thought of him returning here from school bringing his friends. At the time she and Steve had been swinging along Third avenue on the backs of ice wagons, and being shooed from the neighbor's steps with their tops and jackboots Barry had been living in this beautiful place.

"Barry should appreciate his good fortune!" Lottie declared. The fortunate young man met them just within the gate, emerging from the shrubbery as the car whirled inside. Steve jammed on the brakes swiftly. Barry was bareheaded, a dog nosing at his heels. He was dressed in heavy boots, riding breeches and a sweater that was not new.

"It's great to see you!" he exclaimed, springing on the running board and pushing the dog aside with one large brown hand. "Drive on Steve. We'll have another breakfast if you can stand it. I've only had coffee. Then we'll take a tramp or something."

The car crossed the gravel stretch and halted under the porte cochere where Mrs. Faxon, the Townsend's housekeeper, met them, smiling. She understood at once that she was more than an employee. In her 25 years of service Mrs. Faxon had been governess, secretary and now "hostess" was probably the word to express her position. As Steve put it later, she "ran the place" even when his uncle was there.

Barry introduced them, standing with his arm about Mrs. Faxon's shoulder. She was a charming woman, somewhat over 50, with soft white hair and a face far younger than her years. Lottie, with great restraint, refrained from mentioning the rather obvious resemblance Mrs. Faxon bore to a motion picture duchess.

She greeted the girls charmingly. "You would have thought Barry had never had guests before," she said. "I was afraid he'd walk half way to White Plains to meet you if you didn't come soon."

She added that Barry's uncle was away but that they would try to do the honors in his absence. Mona caught the solemn wink Barry cast in Steve's direction, and smiled.

"The boy has every fireplace in the house blazing high," Mrs. Faxon said, leading the way through the paneled hall to the living room. There was a piano, comfortable chairs, tables, reading lamps. Everything was fresh, livable and cozy.

As they entered a dog rose from the hearth, and wagging his tail, waddled toward Barry. A maid appeared and led the girls to a room upstairs to remove hats and powder their noses.

In the ruffly, taffeta bedroom Mona and Lottie expertly repaired damages of the journey through the wind. The maid shook out their wraps and hung them carefully in the closet, indicating that when they needed again she would bring them downstairs. She straightened the gloves flung on the dresser, rescued Mona's handkerchiefs from the floor and quietly departed.

Lottie ran a comb with practiced skill through her carefully scalloped blond hair, cupping her hand carefully about its edges, crouching toward the mirror as she remodelled her scarlet lips. "If you let this chance slip, you're a fool!" Lottie announced abruptly. Mona glanced up in amazement. "What chance?" she asked, her eyes wide.

"Lottie walked to the window and looked out over the wide meadows. "I don't really mean that," she said. "This isn't a chance—it's an opportunity."

She wheeled suddenly toward Mona. "Don't let a school girl crush you of all this! Don't let your friendship for Steve keep you from seeing that Barry is crazy about you. All this, Mona, is yours for the taking! You don't even have to ask for it!"

"Lottie laughed. "Barry isn't in love with me. Don't be silly! He flirted with me at the office, but that doesn't mean anything."

Lottie lifted eyebrows that were regarded 'by the trade' as 100% perfect. "And Steve," Mona went on, "isn't it sounds silly—but he's just a friend."

"That may be," returned Lottie. "I don't know. But Barry Townsend is in love with you. She struck her little finger with the forefinger of the other hand meditatively. "He moons around whenever you are near and beside that—he told me so!"

"Told you so?" "Practically."

Lottie opened the door and the faint odor of coffee reached them. They could hear Barry's laugh. Steve's admonition to the dogs. Someone called: "Breakfast!" but Mona did not stir.

"Barry told you he was in love with me, Lottie?" she demanded. "You—you didn't ask him?" "I should say not! He told me so without the slightest assistance."

"When?" demanded Mona, incredulously. Lottie considered. "Let me see. Just one week ago. It was last Monday at 5:30 sharp."

Balloons Used In Stratospheric Work Found Near Denton

DALLAS (UP)—The curiosity of a farm helper who chased two small parachutes released by government employes making stratospheric observations was praised by officials at Love Field.

D. D. Meador, farmer living near Hebron in Denton county, found the first weather device while plowing Thursday. He ordered his helper, William Boenker, to continue the work while he hurried the device to Love Field where instructions asked it be returned.

Less than an hour later Boenker found the second of the two weather devices in the same field. Weather observers said the device found by Meador was released Wednesday noon, that it floated to an altitude of 10-miles before the balloon burst and the recording machine floated to earth supported by the small parachute. The second device, similar in construction, was released 12-hours later.

The fight to secure the proposed hospital is being backed by the Carroll Farmer American Legion of that city. Marfa received the unanimous endorsement of the state American Legion convention at Corpus Christi recently and hopes to have endorsement of the national convention. Three tentative locations have been made for the hospital and Marfa is fighting hard for its location. West Texas is entitled to one of the hospitals, especially the one for the treatment of tubercular patients, Marfa people declare.

Houston Chairman of B. Of L.F.&E. Gives Sterling Support

DALLAS Full endorsement of Governor Ross Sterling for his friendly record toward union labor has been accorded the governor by I. B. Arnold of Houston, chairman of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Engineers. It was announced today at Sterling headquarters here.

The endorsement took the form of a letter from Arnold to all members of the union in Texas urging members of the railroad union to support and vote for Governor Sterling in the run-off primary election. The letter in part said:

"R. S. Sterling was chairman of the Board of Control of the Port Terminal Railway in Houston at the time the railroad was put in operation July 1924. We employees refused the right to organize on the property by the railroad officials. Our chairman, M. S. Jennings, handled this matter with Mr. Sterling and through Mr. Sterling we were allowed to organize and were given a standard contract signed by Mr. Sterling himself.

"Later we had some trouble with violations of our contract and were refused any back pay for the 1927 award. At that time the write was elected chairman and called on Mr. Sterling about the matter. He immediately stopped the working agreement violations and ordered the railroads to pay back wages due our men.

"We railroad men who know the governor, the letter concluded, and his excellent labor record are going to support him in the run-off and in view of the above facts we are asking you to vote for Governor Sterling in the second primary and to make these facts generally known at every opportunity.

The letter was signed by Arnold and made available to Sterling headquarters without solicitation by the Sterling campaign forces.

FERGUSON—

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE ONE) a little desperate. When you get him in a tight place he gets mad and starts attempting to answer his opponents simply by hurling the lie and by making statements that are very obviously false. Then you know he's beginning to see the handwriting on the wall," said Stuart.

"At San Angelo," the Fort Worth man continued, "Ferguson told me that I was an ex-convict. I told them down there last night that it was big news to me that I had never been in that place myself but that as district attorney of Tarrant county I had sent a good many down there.

Stuart, who was in the senate during Mrs. Ferguson's administration, drew a comparison between that house full of bathrooms Jim likes to tell people Governor Sterling has down on the coast, and that house that pardons built which the Ferguson have erected in silk stockings row down in Austin out of the $1000 a year 'Ma' received as governor.

"One Sweet Time" Governor Sterling laughingly said "Jim's not going to get the chance because the people of Texas are not going to stand for having him in the governor's office again. If his wife could become governor again he'd have one sweet time getting rid of the members of the present highway commission whose terms continue after this year."

He said further "Ferguson's henchmen and some office-seekers who follow Ferguson's time-worn method of deliberately confusing the people on various issues would have the people of Howard, Dawson and other counties in the former bollworm regulation district believe that I could have vetoed the $500,000 for tick eradication tacked onto their $500,000 appropriation for bollworm remuneration without vetoing the bollworms, absurd."

"This is of course," Stuart said, "the bill which the house passed, known as the Satterwhite bill, provided $500,000 for bollworm remuneration out here. As I told the people here and at Lamesa two years ago, I was in sympathy with their desire to have repairs losses they incurred because of bollworm regulations. I meant what I said. "When the house bill was sent to the senate an East Texas member succeeded in getting an amendment tacked on providing $500,000 for tick eradication in East Texas. It was a silly thing to do."

"The house then concurred in the senate's amendment and the bill came to me in that form—providing a total of $1,000,000 in appropriations. I could not sincerely approve such a large appropriation when I knew full well the rider put on it by the senate was not justifi-

Tom Hunter Visits Here

Surprise Candidate Of July Race Enroute To Mountains

Tom F. Hunter of Wichita Falls, who started the veteran politicians of the state when he polled more than 220,000 votes in the July Democratic primary, spent Sunday night at the Crawford hotel here.

Judge Hunter was accompanied by Mrs. Hunter and their child. They were enroute to the Davis mountains for a short vacation.

Asked by one of the men who led the pre-primary campaign that placed Howard county in the Hunter column whether he had "rested up" from his strenuous campaign, Mr. Hunter said, "no, that's why I left home on this trip. The mail has been getting had almost submerged me."

Mr. Hunter has declined to take part in the run-off campaign between Gov. Sterling and Mrs. Ferguson and has made no statement of whether he has a preference between the two.

One of his supporters here told him "we're going to draft you two years from now."

Hunter smiled, saying "one of the boys up home told me yesterday that all I had to do was behave myself. That's a pretty big job," he added laughingly.

He said that his vote in the first primary fulfilled his expectation with one exception. "I thought I'd get the full protest vote. But some of the protest vote against Sterling went to Ferguson and some of that against Ferguson went to Sterling. A little more of the protest vote and I would have been in the run-off and, in that case, I am confident I could have won from either of the present candidates."

Scout Carnival Tuesday To Draw Many To Midland

Scouts of the Buffalo Trail Council were preparing today for the area water carnival at Midland Tuesday. The aquatic meet was postponed from last Thursday because of rains but showers here Monday were not heavy enough to cause a second postponement.

Original plans reached here called for representation from every troop in the city. Some troops are estimating a hundred per cent attendance at the Midland jamboree. Dr. J. R. Dillard, vice president of the council, asked that scouts who did not have ways get in touch with their scoutmasters today and participation would be provided.

The program includes several general swim, racing events, diving competition, a barbecue and a theatre party. Activity will center around Agoda pool beginning at 9:45 a. m.

Administrator For Mexican's "Estate" Appointed By Court

If Anisito Martinez, shepherd found dead near Foran last week, left any property, it will be disposed of according to law. County Judge H. R. Debenport, in charge of probate cases, has appointed Cecil C. Collins as temporary administrator of the Martinez "estate."

So far all the personal belongings of Martinez brought to light consist of a leather hat, plated leather whip with bear grass popper, two raw hide sling shots, a "nigger shooter" and a butcher knife. All are on display in the sheriff's office.

Officers are still investigating the death of Martinez but have no statement to make.

'One-Eyed' Cars May Be Rounded Up By Patrolmen

Rumors that the Highway Patrol will make a rigorous campaign against defective car lights were heard from a reliable source Monday.

While local state patrolmen refused to substantiate rumors they do not deny that an effort will be made to correct the local car light situation, described "as one of the worst in West Texas."
