URGING ADOPTION OF BIG WORK PLAN

Proposing that a long range series of useful public works be initiated as a means for providing employment and taking the government out of relief, President Roosevelt today asked Congress for a four billion dollar work-relief fund in a message forecasting a new peak in public debt of 34,239 million dollars by June 1, of next year.

DEATH MYSTERY IN AMARILLO IS UNSOLVED

Officers Ask Aid of Public in Search for Unknown killer

AMARILLO, Jan. 7.—An appeal for public aid in solving the mysterious murder of Mrs. George S. Hamlin, 33-year-old Amarillo housewife, was issued by District Attorney Grady Hazelwood last night as authorities reported they had made no advancement in the investigation of the case.

The statement was issued after the district attorney had visited the scene of the crime and after investigators found evidence of a recent visit by a man to the garage at the rear of the Hamlin home. The key to the garage, which officers entered by sawing off the lock, has been missing since the murder was discovered.

Relatives announced today that George S. Hamlin, husband of the slain woman, had been located in Oakland, Calif.

Wants Sum Subject To Allocation By Himself, Report

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—President Roosevelt today asked Congress for a four billion dollar work-relief fund in a message forecasting a new peak in public debt of 34,239 million dollars by June 1, of next year.

Declaring that "unemployment alone blocked a balance budget, he envisaged an evening of government expenditures and receipts "as rapidly as private industry is able to re-employ those now without work."

This second accounting of the New Deal, read separately to expectant Senate and House members, allowed for the spending of 17,101 million dollars in a two-year fiscal period ending 18 months hence.

The President's request for four billion dollars was coupled with a recommendation that the money be in "one sum subject to allocation" by himself. This phase of the budget is expected to stir congressional controversy.

Congress was informed that the government's income would meet all expenditures except those "to give work to the unemployed." The president did "not consider it advisable at this time" to propose new taxes, but asked continuation of existing levies.

To newspapermen, the president said there was no need for "inflation" to finance the huge 1936 budget.

One of the major cuts in the "recovery" items for 1936 was to two hundred million dollars benefit payments to farmers.

Former Utility Head Dies in Amarillo

AMARILLO, Jan. 7.—Herbert S. Brown, 58, former assistant manager of the West Texas Gas company at Lubbock, died at the home of his son, Lewis Brown, here today.
Mr. Brown came to Amarillo when he became ill three months ago.
The body will be sent Monday to Oil City, Pa., his former home. He is survived by his son, a brother and two sisters.

SHOWERS COVER MEMPHIS AREA

Light Rainfall here follows Cloudless day with Summer-Like Temperatures Sunday

Light showers, ranging from .1 to .3 of an inch spotted the Memphis Area last night, following a day of spring-like weather. According to J. J. McMicken, local weatherman, the precipitation in Memphis was .20 of an inch, with local showers of about the same amount covering the entire territory.

Reports from over the Panhandle indicate that the rainfall was much greater in other sections. Most of the South Plains received beneficial showers, with an inch reported at Lubbock and lesser amounts at Plainview and Slaton.

The rainfall, which began suddenly, followed a day of cloudless skies and summer-like temperature.

Phenomenal lightning and thunder was noticed in the Memphis area before the rainfall began.

Saar Police Guard Against Riot When Anti-Hitler Forces Cast Nazi Votes

SAARBRUCKEN, Saar Basin Territory, Jan. 7.—Snow-covered umbrellas—what looked like a quarter of a million of them—stormed a hilltop here in Hitlerite demonstrations for return of the Saar to Germany.

The program itself was brief, consisting of a few patriotic songs and two speeches while the throng stood in pools of cold water. The main purpose apparently was to demonstrate overwhelming popular enthusiasm for return to Germany.

As the Hitlerites marshaled homeward, another throng marched toward the status-quo mass meeting scheduled for the afternoon across the river from the morning demonstration—the police problem being to keep the rival factions

RECEIVE CHECKS FOR $2,578 ON COW BUYING

Last Purchases Will Be Made This Week End, Jackson says

Hall county stock raisers will be richer by $2,578 this week as the result of cattle purchases made by the government on the drought relief plan in this county. Checks for this amount were received this morning for immediate distribution by County Agent James A. Jackson.

The amount is made payable on 111 checks and represents the balance due stock raisers who sold drought stricken cattle to the government on the 4,000 head appropriation for the county prior to the latter part of January.

The government's cattle buying plan will come to a final climax this week-end when last purchases are made on a 15-day extension granted on the 4,000 head quota recently, Mr. Jackson has pointed out.

Cattle buyers will begin Estellina until 2 o'clock Wednesday and will conclude the buying in the Turkey section Thursday, Saturday will be the final day for buying in the county, when group lot purchases are made in Memphis, Mr. Jackson said.

Plan Opening Of Housing Project

WICHITA FALLS, Jan. 7.—Wichita Gardens, Inc., one of the first of the government's subsistence homestead projects, is scheduled to be opened to 300 persons within a short time.

This unit of the American plan of restoring home comforts to those who were uprooted during the postwar boom and "hit it hard" when the depression came along consists of a 241-acre plot designed to combine rural freedom and modern city conveniences.

Rows of cottages, 50 of them, each surrounded by a three-acre farm, line the impressive system of driveway fashioned area, and a large lake and park add to the landscape.

The homes are equipped throughout with modern conveniences, and each is provided with a garage, storehouse and a shed for the cow.

How State Says Baby Was Killed

The diagram illustrates the state's version of the manner in which Charles Augustus Lindbergh, Jr., met his death: as the kidnaper carried the baby down the ladder after stealing him from his crib in the second-floor nursery of the Lindbergh home, the ladder broke, the child dropped to the ground and was killed instantly. Attorney General David Wilentz named Bruno Hauptmann as the man on the ladder.

GERMANY WILL JOIN LEAGUE OF NATIONS

France and Italy to Form Foundation For Peace Unit

ROME, Jan. 7.—Possible return of German to the League of Nations was seen today as the effect of the far-reaching Franco-Italian agreement reached by foreign minister Pierre Laval and Premier Mussolini.

Observers believed that Germany and France might make an understanding whereby Berlin would sign a non-intervention accord and reenter the League in return of France's legalization of rearmament which she asserts Germany has achieved.

Laval and Mussolini tonight will place their signatures upon the accords linking France and Italy in a policy collaboration which may form the foundation for a new European peace structure.

NURSE ON STAND IN TRIAL OF HAUPTMANN

Describes Scene as Lindy Finds that Baby is Missing

FLEMINGTON, N. J., Jan. 7.—Nursemaid Betty Gow collapsed today after the strain of three hours as a witness in the trial of Bruno Richard Hauptmann for the kidnaping and murder of baby Charles Augustus Lindbergh Jr.

She had testified among other things that the thumb-guard worn by the baby was found by her a month after the kidnaping a hundred yards from the Lindbergh home at Hopewell, N. J.

FLEMINGTON, N. J., Jan. 7.

—Bruno Richard Hauptmann's defender, Edward J. Reilly, today drew from Betty Gow, Scotch nursemaid, acknowledgment that she told her sailor-friend, "Red" Johnson and "probably others" of Lindbergh's family movements.

Miss Gow, whose charge was the kidnaped and slain baby, Charles Augustus Lindbergh Jr., became the object of a vigorous attack by the defense immediately after finishing her testimony for the state in which she identified the undershirt worn by the child on the last night she saw it.

Describing the scene after discovery that the baby was missing she said that Colonel Lindbergh "ran into his closet and came out with a rifle and all three of us went into the baby's room."

"He said: 'Anne, they have stolen our baby,'" Miss Gow testified. Cross examination pointed to the line of defense announced previously, which is an attempt to show that the kidnaping was plotted in the Lindbergh home by others than family members and carried out by two men and two women.

New Sheriff and Force Have some Unusal Coins

The new Sheriff's department is literally "broken-out" with old and unusual coins, it was revealed recently when The Democrat asked to know of the oldest and most unusual coin in the Memphis Area.

Sheriff Joe Colvin is the possessor of an 1843 dime—82 years old. On one side is shown the full figure of the lady "Liberty" and on the opposite side is shown the date and 13 stars, representing the 13 original states.

Sheriff Colvin also has two Indian head pennies, bearing the dates of 1853 and 1866.

Deputy B. Wilson has a collection all his own, also. The most unusual is a bronze penny, dated 1863. It is an Indian head coin, much heavier than a modern penny and as large as a nickel. He also has a half five-cent piece dated 1866, a Panama dime, dated 1930 and a Chinese coin so badly worn that it is impossible to tell the date or denomination.

A BRIGHT OUTLOOK FOR A DAY

THE perennial and thorny subject of crime news, and what a newspaper editor should do about it, has been given a distinctive approach by J. H. Wolpers, publisher of the Popular Bluff (Mo.) American Republican.

On the day before Christmas, this newspaper made it a point to keep all "unsavory and unpleasant news" off the front page. This is in line with a Christmas policy which Mr. Wolpers adopted five years ago, and it seems to be an exceedingly sensible idea.

No newspaper can ignore "unsavory and unpleasant news" all the time. It would be false to its trust if it did. Such news is part of the great record of human activities, and the editor who refused to recognize its existence would not last long.

But to submerge such news on one day out of the year—to fall in line with the Christmas spirit by giving the world, for a moment, a brighter face than it really possesses—that is something else again.

MORE REVELATIONS TO COME

SENATOR GERALD P. NYE, head of the Senate Munitions Committee, says that President Roosevelt has indorsed the proposed appropriation of additional funds to carry on the investigation this winter.

As a result, the senator is preparing to resume hearings early in January, and expects to give the country some new revelations quite as interesting as those which have already been made.

The ordinary citizen, unquestionably, will look on this announcement as very good news indeed. There had been discomfiting rumors that the administration would not look on the committee's work with a kindly eye.

In view of the vast importance to every citizen of the information which this committee has been digging up, it is good to know that its work has been indorsed at the White House. That ought to make it certain that it will be continued.

Contract is really a fascinating game, and I am sure that if you found time to take it up you would eventually derive tremendous enjoyment from it.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

ANN HOLLISTER, pretty and 20, breaks her engagement to TONY MICKLE, commercial artist, because of his drinking and general irresponsibility. The same day PETER KENDALL, wealthy and prominent, learns how VALERIA BENNETT, his fiancée, has deceived him and tells her everything is over between them.

Ann and Peter, both heart-sick and disillusioned, meet in a restaurant. When Peter asks Ann to marry him she agrees.

They go to Florida and spend several weeks happily. Then Peter is called home because of business. All of the Kendall family except Peter's sister, MILLICENT, wish Ann to go.

Ann hears that labor trouble is brewing at the Kendall factory. Believing Peter is in danger, she follows him there and hears him make a talk which quiets the situation. Ann realizes she is in love with her husband.

MRS. KENDALL suspects her daughter, CAROL, is in love with LAWRENCE, the chauffeur, and discharges him. Carol prepares to visit friends in Miami. Ann sees her in a car and learns that Carol has married the discharged chauffeur. She promises Carol that she will keep her secret.

A few days later, when Ann is convalescing, Valeria comes to see her. Valeria tells Ann that Peter's grandfather has cut him off in his will because of his marriage and intimates that Peter regrets the marriage.

Believing her love for Peter is hopeless, Ann runs away.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXXI
"Your office is calling sir," the maid said timidly from the door. "Something important, they said."

Peter smiled grimly. Something important! "Susan, I'm shutting this place up for a while. I'll give you and Evans and Rose each a month's salary in advance."

"Yes, sir."
"Tell Evans to pack two large bags and send them to the club for me."

In the kitchen the three servants conversed in low tones. "It was like he had gone crazy," Susan said. "He stood there looking down at the letter, his hand shaking so he could hardly hold it and his face as white as that flour."

"Would you have believed it?" Rose shook her head. "Didn't know when she was well off—Mr. Peter so handsome and rich and doting on her so."

Susan shook her head. "I knew all the time something was wrong. They didn't act natural to my mind. Mrs. Kendall's maid said he was engaged to Miss Bennett a long time and they quarreled and so he married Mrs. Kendall to spite her."

"That flashy blond who was here yesterday?" snapped the cook. "I don't believe it. Mr. Peter has eyes. Wouldn't surprise me if that one didn't make trouble while she was here. Where do you reckon Mrs. Kendall went?"

Peter was wondering where Ann had gone. To Sarah's? To her former home in Greenfield? Then came the thought plunging him into torment. She had gone to Tony's. The idea was like a thousand devils destroying him. If he didn't put it aside it would drive him mad.

He must get away from this place where Ann had been, where he had been building up hope after hope, where his love had grown until nothing else seemed worth while in life.

Haggard, wild-eyed, he caught the elevator. Evans had brought his car to the front. He got in, took the wheel and drove away from town.

A half hour later he drove up in front of the home he had purchased as a surprise for Ann. He had let the nurse into the secret and she had said Ann would be strong enough today to drive out.

He had pictured Ann's excited eyes, her rapturous exclamations.

Perhaps after a while, he would sell the place. But not now. Not for a long while. He wondered if the time would ever come when he would be willing for anyone else to own Ann's home. He had planned it, even to the smallest details, with the thought of her happiness and comfort. He had pictured the soft, imported rugs here, beautiful draperies, the furniture, things she had chosen.

He went out, shutting the door, turning the key on his broken dream.

Mrs. Kendall had said to Millicent, "This family has had entirely too much undesirable publicity and something must be done."

She was telling everyone sweetly, "Peter's wife has gone to visit her family. She was feeling so let down after the accident and thought it would be a nice time to go."

Sarah received the same news. She had called Ann's apartment several times and the phone was not answered. Then she had called Peter's office. The girl who answered stated that Mrs. Peter Kendall was away. No, she didn't know when she would return to the city.

Something was wrong, Sarah decided. Ann had not mentioned going away when she was with her a few days before. Even though she had looked a little pale from the accident, she had seemed radiantly happy. Something not connected with her illness was behind this—Valeria, Tony, or the Kendalls.

Sarah decided to write to Ann's aunt in Greenfield, thinking grimly, "If there's been dirt work I'll get to the bottom of it if I can."

Mrs. Kendall had called Valeria as soon as she heard the news of Ann's flight. "Can you come over, dear? I've something exciting to tell you. Something I think you will be glad to hear."

"Mrs. Kendall wants me to come over," Valeria told her aunt.

"What in the world does she want?"

"It's only a guess. But I think she's going to tell me Peter has broken with his wife. You were the one who was so sure I had lost him forever, weren't you?"

Mrs. Wainwright studied her niece's face—insolent, not in the least beautiful now without clever makeup. "Your work, I suspect."

"You didn't think I would let her keep him?"

"How do you know he'll come back?"

"How do I know anything? How do I know that he will be terribly let down and sore and unhappy and humiliated? You don't doubt that I'll make the most of my opportunity, do you?"

"No, I'm sure you will."
Mrs. Wainwright was suddenly sorry for the girl who had been unable to match her niece's cleverness and unscrupulous methods.

When she left the house Valeria was wearing a demure frock and hat with a half veil that shaded her eyes. Her face had been made up to a becoming pallor and her lips were only lightly touched up.

"I'll probably have lunch with Mrs. Kendall," she said, "and then perhaps we'll drive by later this afternoon and pick up Peter for dinner. He will be feeling pretty badly."

Her aunt was moved to admiration of such ability. Valeria was a perfect actress. All traces of ugliness were gone. Her voice was low and sweet again. Her eyes smiled wistfully.

But the program did not work out as Valeria had planned. At Peter's office they learned he had not been in all day.

Peter was with Millicent. "I may be wrong," she told him, but it wouldn't surprise me if Valeria had a hand in this."

He shook his head. "No, she was friendly."

He couldn't betray Ann, telling Millicent about Tony. And Millicent did not tell him about the friendliness through which the Valeria of the world do their deadliest work.

"Well, anyway, I suspect she's pretty well satisfied."

Peter suspected Valeria would be pleased, too. He determined to keep out of her way. But in the days that passed there apparently was no way of managing it. Valeria was always appearing on his path.

"I'm so glad I ran into you. I'm simply ravenous for a bite and something cool to drink. Could you spare a half hour?"

If he said he was busy, it was "You couldn't be that busy! Besides you have to eat something."

Or she would offer to drive him wherever he was going. "I've nothing but time on my hands," she would say. That was all Peter had, too. Time for brooding and work.

On one of these occasions, Sarah saw the two having lunch together. She could not see Peter's strained weary face, for his back was toward her. She only saw Valeria's smiling eyes and guessed how triumphant she was feeling.

Sarah's scorn of Peter was complete. It was outrageous for him to be having lunch with Valeria. She couldn't have found a logical reason for her feelings. They were all mixed up. She was sure, somehow, that Valeria had driven Ann away from Peter.

Sarah passed the table, nodded briefly to Peter and ignored Valeria.

"You're looking fearfully thin, Peter," Valeria was saying. "It's really wrong to let yourself go like this, shutting yourself away from all your friends."

"Don't worry about me, Val. I'll be all right."

"I am worried. How could I help it when I see—see," she hesitated and went on, "someone I care for suffering?"

Peter looked up at Valeria then.

Her voice sounded as though she were going to cry. There were tears in her eyes.

He said uncomfortably, "It's foolish of you to worry about me."

Valeria followed up her advantage. "When I think of Ann hurting you like this—"

"Leave her name out," Peter said hoarsely. The stark misery in his eyes enraged Valeria. She hated Ann, who had put it there.

She had used all her resources during the month, only to meet Peter's blank indifference.

"It's awful to be shut out like this," she said now. "I've been so lonely. I haven't been anywhere. I couldn't worry about you."

Paul Johnson looked up as Peter entered the office. "Peter, a call came for you. Someone wants you to come to this address on Bond street. Where the devil is Bond street? Ever hear of it?"
