No business can escape change. change.

What is the title of a page in Nation's Business. The page is covered by short descriptions of new developments for various types of products people buy.

One of the ways out of depression lies in the offering of new or improved goods and services which are based on sound conceptions of public wants and needs.

For instance: a new kind of sausage is being made of kippered salmon and sardines, encased in cellulose; soybean oil is being tried as a substitute for lard in paint.

The business man, the professional man, the employe—all must nowadays maintain vigilance, that they keep abreast with new things that can affect their business, their profession or their labor.

In most every town that has grown more rapidly than the average there are regrettable instances of men, in business for years, who let love for "the old paths" and "the good ways" of their everyday business-life overpower any desire to keep pace with a growth going on all around them.

Being wide-awake in business does not mean that one must be extravagant, sell goods at a loss, or become a business-ballyhoo addict.

Tempo of business changes; if we do not adjust the notes at a quickened pace we find ourselves out of tune.

This does not apply solely to the man in business. Professional men must watch every advance in the knowledge imparted by the leaders of professions.

The worker, whether he wears a white collar or not, may find ample opportunity for acquiring facts and an attitude toward his work that will broaden his usefulness, his productiveness to the employer—and then both parties profit.

The other day we visited a town some distance from here which is described nowadays as being more "hard hit" than its neighbors. It was easy to discern that little thing was being done. But, before we went away we saw one store with a lot of customers, plenty of activity—the dash register bell was ringing—and no special "sale" was under way, either.

There is always a reason for such a situation; somebody is making a serious business of his business.

Sentiment has no place in business, we've often heard. Most often that is heard when someone tries to picture a business man as heartless because he tried to collect the bill. But it applies also to the business man who allows memories of the past, when folks bought instead of being sold, to become substitutes for profit.

TROOP MOVEMENT ALONG MANCHURIAN BORDER NEW COMPLAINT

The note said the movements were having an unpleasant effect upon Japanese and Chinese troops. It was reported 20,000 to 30,000 Russian soldiers had concentrated in two border towns.

Newspapers claimed the Russians were furnishing arms and ammunition to an army of Chinese and Mongolians which was believed to be planning to seek an independent state.

The government decided to submit its treaties it claims China has failed to observe, to the league of nations. It still contends the league council's vote asking evacuation of Japanese troops not binding because it was not adopted unanimously.

Overwhelming Majority Given Conservatives

MacDonald's Nationalist Government Crushes Old Labor Party

LONDON, Oct. 28 (AP)—Premier Ramsay MacDonald's coalition nationalist government won a sweeping victory in the election yesterday. Status of the cabinet was uncertain, however, as conservatives who joined him in forming the government received a clear majority for themselves.

With more than half of the returns in for a total of 615 seats in the house of commons the conservatives had 322 seats, the national liberal party ten, the national liberals 43, Lloyd George's liberals four, and the opposition labor party 27, independents one.

The topheavy conservative majority was the greatest since 1832, when liberals had 370.

The old labor party, which refused to follow MacDonald, was crushed. Its new leader, Arthur Henderson, was defeated in his own district.

It was believed the conservatives likely would pass a protective tariff.

Truck Fight Spreads To Panhandle

Lubbock Man Obtains Temporary Rec Training Order

LUBBOCK, Oct. 28 (AP)—A temporary restraining order to prevent the sheriff and the county attorney of Lubbock and the sheriff and county attorney of Lynn county, J. H. Edwards, bus and truck inspector for the Texas railroad commission, Jack Reavis, highway patrolman and constables and other law enforcement officers from enforcing provisions of house bill 335, was granted L. P. Jeffreys, Lubbock truck man, by Judge Clark M. Mulliken in 9th district court today.

Hearing on the issuance of a temporary writ of injunction was set by Judge Mulliken for Monday, November 9, when the persons named in the order are to appear before the court.

In the petition Jeffreys sets forth that he has a contract with the Handley Gin company to haul cotton seed from the company's gin to the Quahok Cotton Oil company's mill in Quahok, Hardeman county. Mr. Jeffreys has two trucks, he says, and makes his living in that manner. He claims to be a "contract carrier."

Provisions of the law, enacted by the 42nd legislature, are cited in the petition with a plea that enforcement would work a hardship on the petitioner, enforcement would, he claims, deprive him of the use of his property.

Vaughn Wilson, county attorney and Wade Hardy, sheriff of Lubbock county and B. L. Parker, sheriff and G. H. Nelson, county attorney of Lynn county are named specifically in the petition.

HOW'S your HEALTH

Dr. Jago Goldstein
Infantile Paralysis—II

The acute stage of infantile paralysis is of relatively short duration. However, where the patient has suffered paralysis the treatment period may last for many years. Through proper treatment and competent after-care, much of the loss in muscle function and in power may be regained.

In all cases, deformity may be kept to a minimum and muscle growth encouraged through the proper treatment.

The after-care of infantile paralysis requires the services of experts, a certain amount of detail being necessary to prevent deformity. Through proper treatment and competent after-care, much of the loss in muscle function and in power may be regained.

In the early stages of the disease where there are pain and paralysis rest is the most important feature of treatment.

The patient is kept in bed. To relieve pain, to maintain muscle balance and to prevent deformity of the muscles and joints affected, splints and plaster of paris bandages are utilized.

Depending upon the extent of the paralysis and the muscles affected, different types of splints and bandages and different postural positions may be required.

Every effort is made to facilitate the repairing process which the body carries on after the acute stage of inflammation subsides.

Following this early stage, pain and tenderness in the affected muscles and joints are diminished and the patient enters upon the period of convalescence and recovery.

It is at this time that efforts are made to encourage movement in the affected muscles. Massage, passive exercise and voluntary movements are used to build up the strength in the weakened muscles and to encourage the development of normal function.

This is an important stage in the disease and one that requires very expert care. Exercise of the affected parts must not be overdone for fatigue injures rather than helps the weakened muscles.

Morrow's Death

PERHAPS the saddest thing about Dwight Morrow's death is the fact that it came just when his real career seemed to be beginning.

Within the last few dozen years Mr. Morrow had become recognized as one of the United States' most valuable citizens. As a diplomat he has had few equals. The friendly relations that exist between the United States and Mexico, for instance, constitute one of the finest legacies any man has ever left to his country.

But his work had barely begun. No one doubts that Mr. Morrow would have come to occupy an exceptionally exalted position in the senate, had he lived. There is no question out that his talent for diplomacy would have been called into play again and again. That he should go now, with so much work still to be done, is a very heavy loss to the entire nation.

Tomorrow—The Nervous Child

WASHINGTON DAYBOOK

By HERBERT PLUMMER

WASHINGTON—That fiery, pugnacious and hard hitting senator from Iowa—Smith "Wildman" Brookhart—probably chuckled to himself when he read the papers the other morning and said, "Finally, all things come to him who waits."

For there was reported the rumor that President Hoover had selected Daniel Frederick Steck of Ottumwa, Iowa, as a member of the tariff commission.

Now it so happens that Brookhart and Steck have no love for each other personally and politically. They don't speak, although they served side by side for years in the senate, representing the same state.

Steck must be confirmed by the senate before he becomes a member of the tariff commission. And unless the unexpected happens, Brookhart will have some choice things to say in the senate about him. Already he has said significantly:

"I'll attend to it when the time comes."

FIVE YEAR FIGHT

The Brookhart-Steck "feud" started five years ago when Steck took Brookhart's seat in the senate from him in an election contest. It has continued unabated since.

Neither attempts to conceal his feelings. In that bible of official Washington—the Congressional Directory—for example, in the biography of each which they wrote themselves, Steck points out: "Seated after a contest with Smith W. Brookhart."

Brookhart goes further. He writes:

"Received certificate of election certified by the executive council of the state of Iowa which showed his (Brookhart's) election, but notwithstanding the senate of the United States disregarded the Iowa election laws and seated his democratic opponent (Steck)."

Proudly he adds in the next line: "I immediately entered the republican primary as opponent of Senator A. B. Cummings and defeated him for the republican nomination by 71,827 votes."

STECK OUT OF SENATE

Steck is out of the senate, having been defeated last year by Lester Dickinson, a member of the house. Gossip has it that he looked longingly on the democratic nomination to oppose Brookhart in 1932, believing that what he did once he could do again.

Steck's career in the senate was uneventful. During the last congress he spoke but four times, and one of these was to ask permission to have inserted in the Congressional Record an address on national defense. His other three speeches were concerned with the soldiers' bonus and reinstatement of citizenship at Annapolis.

Although pleasant and affable,

SAM

BY FREEMAN LINCOLN

SYNOPSIS: Sam Sherrill tells Peak Abbott, whom she promised to marry because of her family's financial difficulties, that although she has been in love with Freddy Munson she now has parted definitely with Freddy. Peak believes that since her stepfather, Fourth Aldersha, has become wealthy, Sam will make peace with Freddy.

Chapter 32 DISCOVERED AFTER MID-NIGHT

"Don't you really believe me? It is true," Sam said.

Peak turned to her swiftly. "Do you mean to tell me," she demanded savagely, "that all you and Freddy Munson talked about was dresses and parties and such silly drivel? Do you mean to say you didn't explain why you didn't go to New York with him that night?"

"I'll admit I tried to explain, but he wouldn't listen."

"Why not?"

"He said there wasn't any use. He said he wouldn't hear a word of it unless I could say yes to a question he wanted to ask."

"What was the question?"

She hesitated briefly. "He asked me, Peak, if I was in love with him."

"Well?"

"This time her pause was longer. At last she said quietly, "I can't answer the question—not the way he wanted. I couldn't say a word, so he went away."

Peak stared at her. Then he said hoarsely: "Do you know what you're asking me to believe? I can't believe it, because it can't be true."

"I know how you feel. It seems incredible to me, too. A few months ago I'd have married him in a minute. I thought it was the only thing in the world I wanted to do. I was terribly unhappy when he went away. I thought I'd never be happy again. I thought I loved him." She shrugged. "Even this morning I wasn't sure, not until he asked me that question. Then I knew."

She rubbed one hand wearily over her eyes. "It makes me wonder just what kind of a person I am. I wonder whether I ever loved him at all. It is possible that I was just attracted to him because his life seemed so glamorous; because my own seemed so impossible. I hope so, but I don't know. I only know that I'm ashamed."

"Don't be ashamed," Peak spoke roughly. "What have you to be ashamed of? It isn't your fault if you've changed your mind. It isn't important whether you ever loved him or not. The only important thing is that you don't love him now. That's what we've got to realize and understand. What does it mean? It's so sudden and so contrary to everything I've been thinking for so long that I can't quite grasp it. What does it mean, Sam? Where do you and I stand now?"

"I've been thinking about that all afternoon and all evening, and I'm not sure. I'm only sure that from now on, Peak, you can trust me. From now on there are going to be no more reservations and no more deceptions. Whatever I say to you you can believe. You can believe that I'm happy."

There was a pause, and then Peak said suddenly: "I have a feeling that something is going to happen. It's more than a feeling; it's conviction. It grows upon me."

"Are you happy, Peak?"

He sighed. "The girl has the supreme effrontery to ask me if I'm happy!"

"I take it that you are." She nodded. "That's good, because I'm happy too."

believe, for instance, that I am ready to marry you, if you still want me—knowing what you do."

"You mean," asked Peak slowly, "that you're still willing to go through with it?"

"It means more. It means that I want to go through with it."

"Why?"

"That's a hard question to answer, Peak, but I'm going to try to do it." Sam spoke carefully, choosing every word. "I've liked you ever since I've known you, but never quite so much or in quite the same way as I've liked you since Fourth made his money. I suppose it's because we're equals now. When I look at you now I don't see money. I see you, and I like what I see. Last night you kissed me. I found that I wanted you to kiss me, and that I wanted to kiss you in return. Why?"

"No." She interrupted when Peak would have spoken. "Let me finish this, please. At lunch today Freddy asked me another question that I haven't told you about yet. He asked me if I was positive that I did not love you. I couldn't say yes. I tried but I couldn't. Why not?"

"Sam!"

"Wait a minute, I'm not quite through. Ever since luncheon I've been wondering why I couldn't say yes to that question of Freddy's. I've been wondering why I wanted to kiss you last night. I couldn't find the answer. At the moment I'm wondering something else."

"What?"

"Nothing much. I'm just wondering why I want to kiss you now."

"Sam!" He turned swiftly and pulled her into his arms. Her face, a small, indistinct white blur was very close to him. "Do you know what you're telling me?" he demanded fiercely. "Do you know what you're saying? You're saying that you love me!"

"Am I?" She lay very still in his arms. "I hope I am. I think I am. I've been thinking about it and thinking about it till my head hurts. I'm tired of thinking now. Kiss me, Peak."

He kissed her.

Considerably after Sam informed Peak that it was time he went home. "It must be past midnight," she said dreamily, looking up into his face, "and you're tired. We really should get some sleep."

"Sleep?" Peak laughed. "What is sleep? What is time? What more-over, is fatigue? However—Do you really want me to go?"

"No." She shook her head. "I don't. I just thought—"

"There you go, thinking again! Why think? Relax!"

"It's a grand night," Sam said. "As a matter of fact, it is the only night that has ever really happened. It's so real."

"Are you happy, Peak?"

He sighed. "The girl has the supreme effrontery to ask me if I'm happy!"

"I take it that you are." She nodded. "That's good, because I'm happy too."

There was a pause, and then Peak said suddenly: "I have a feeling that something is going to happen. It's more than a feeling; it's conviction. It grows upon me."

This And That

By Mark

For a consideration of the old long green the Midland Doggies will leave their kennels Saturday to romp with the Angelo Bobcats on the Concho eleven's home lot. The proposition of changing the place of the game was put to a vote of the Midland student body and met with favorable reception. This will be the only conference game away from home for the Pups.

First hand information is that the Mustangs shot their last Friday to down the Colorado entry. Such being the case the Wolves have evidently shown a world of improvement since their season opener. We repeat that the game Friday is due to be the best seen by local fans this season. The idea that the Mitchell county boys will prove to be a setup in all. The same idea, if we remember correctly, was in the minds of players and fans last year as the Steers journeyed eastward. The result is well known without any repetition. Just a little over-confidence on the part of the team may ruin a fine record for the locals.

Three more steps remain between the Steers and the District title. A fall on any of these and our championship hopes will go glimmering. The Steers will have to settle down to real work from now on and take the games as they come. We can't beat Sweetwater or Angelo this week by loafing with Colorado.

We remember hearing from the Breck scribe that the Clisco game would be a setup for the Buckaroos and it so happens that the fans around Breckenridge are still trying to figure out just how it all came about. The charge of Coach Jeffries practically booted the Bucs out of the championship picture with their 12-7 victory. We trust history will not repeat itself.

In perusing the list of games for the week-end we have decided to cast our vote for the first school mentioned in each game whether you like it or not.

Notre Dame vs. Carnegie Tech, Yale vs. Dartmouth, Harvard vs. Columbia, Army vs. Colorado College, Pittsburgh vs. Penn State, Navy vs. West Virginia Wesleyan, Northwestern vs. Illinois, Purdue vs. Chicago, Wisconsin vs. Minnesota, Stanford vs. U.C.L.A., California vs. Nevada, Tulane vs. Miss. A.M., Tennessee vs. Duke, Georgia vs. Florida, Auburn vs. Spring Hill, Vanderbilt vs. Georgia Tech, Alabama vs. Kentucky, Texas Aggies vs. Centenary, Nebraska vs. Missouri, TCU vs. Arkansas, SMU vs. Texas, Baylor vs. Texas Tech.

In the high school division we see some tight scraps coming up and again we pick the first named school to cop the fray.

Big Spring vs. Colorado, Sweetwater vs. McCamey, San Angelo vs. Midland, Pampa vs. Lubbock, Abilene vs. Eastland, Breckenridge vs. Greenwood, North Side, Ft. Worth vs. Mineral Wells, McKinney vs. Gainsville, Marshall vs. Sulphur Springs, Corsicana vs. Waco, Cleburne vs. Temple, Tyler vs. Palestine, Austin vs. Main Avenue, Harlandale vs. Del Rio, John Reagan vs. Jeff Davis (Houston), San Jacinto (Houston) vs. Bryan, Port Arthur vs. Goose Creek, Alice vs. Kingville.

We notice the Steer mentors working desperately to perfect a passing defense and offense. We brace mightily to see a passing defense second to none. The air route, though, is liable to prove dangerous to the Steers if they are forced to go aloft during the Armistice day game. Big Hop seems to be on the receiving end of a great many big heaves at the present time. The big fellow should be able to go up among the best and come down with the hide. We sincerely hope we never again see a Steer drop a pass after he once gets his hands on the hide.

The Ponies. It seems, draw a guard out of the line to go down and pull the oval from the air as it is sent spinning on its way by Sam Baugh. This same guard is no slouch when it comes to snaring passes if we are to credit the record of the Pony attempts during the past.

We talked to the Angelo golf pro who was over yesterday in the interest of the municipal golf course. He is of the opinion that grass greens should be ready for play in about three months. The course, according to Mr. Tabor, is going to be a sportsy one and will take the best of golfers to negotiate the distance in par.

It has been officially announced that the first golfer to turn in par on the course will be formally presented with the club house.

The green will be visible from only two tees. Other tee shots will find the driver gazing off over rolling hills and cedar trees just hollering that the pig goes true. Number 4 will be a 466-yard dog leg.

This new course will add greatly to the enjoyment of local golf lovers who are unable to enjoy the privileges of the country club course, and the Junior Chamber of Commerce is deserving of the thanks of the city for sponsoring such a move.

In our ramblings around over the city during the afternoons we find pigskin antics, in the making, on every vacant lot. Some of the little fellows are not much larger than the ball but they know what it is all about and some of their tickles would bring envy in the heart of a few Class A players we have seen this year. The only way to insure a football team in the future is to

Junior Chamber's Golf Course In City Park Laid Out By San Angelo Professional; 2,888 Yards, Par 35

Frank Tabor, golf professional of the San Angelo Country Club, was in town yesterday and assisted A. E. True in locating the greens and staking out the fairways for the municipal golf course to be constructed in the city park by the Junior Chamber of Commerce.

"The park location is admirably suited for a golf course. The natural rolling terrain will require little work on the fairways, and the course when completed will be one of the sportiest in West Texas," Mr. Tabor said.

The longest hole will be Number 4, 465 yards, par five. The most difficult hole on the course promises to be Number 8, which is perched right on top of a hill in the southern part of the park. All approach shots will have to stick on the green or the golfer will find himself in trouble as his ball rolls down the hill into a deep ditch.

Construction on the course started today, and those in charge of the work indicated that it would be open before Christmas.

The greens as located yesterday called for a total distance of 2,888 yards for a par 35 course.

Contract Carrier Law Not Enforced By Highway Forces

The state highway department has nothing to do with issuance of special permits to truck operators under provisions of the new truck law, Edward Lowe, district highway foreman, pointed out here Tuesday.

"The highway department is being given some strenuous 'canning' by truck operators who are under this mistaken impression," Lowe said. "As a matter of fact the railroad commission is responsible for enforcement of this law."

Lowe said some trucks had been deliberately beaked into direction signs of the highway department to destroy them in 'reprisal' for a law believed entrusted to the department for enforcement.

The state highway patrol has charge of the enforcement of regulations on length, weight and width of trucks. Mr. Lowe, as for man, is authorized to issue special permits in emergency cases. But the new contract carrier law is not enforced by any branch of the highway department forces.

'Life Of The Party' Girl Does Not Make Good Wife, Prof Says

HAMILTON, N. Y., Oct. 30. (UP)—A young manhood never marry the girl who is the "life of the party," if he wants a wife of a "lively personality," according to Dr. Ronald A. Laird, professor of psychology, at Colgate college.

For in 10 years or less, Dr. Laird told the United Press, the personality-plus, much-sought-for butterfly will have changed to a dull, steady, seemingly unattractive wife, and the young man will be in for a great deal of disappointment.

"Experiments with hundreds of married couples," Dr. Laird said, "have shown that the girl who in her late 'teens and early twenties reaches the peak in her personality, slowly burns out the activity of the thyroid gland, which directly controls such activity."

In cases where the girl's activity has been abnormal and she was the much-sought-for co-ed "loved by every campus boy" Dr. Laird said, the services of a physician may be required when the reaction sets in.

Dr. Laird also refuted the popular belief that opposites make the best marriages.

"Experiments in our laboratories and question of married couples have proved definitely that compatibility of personality means, generally, compatibility in marriage."

Jim "Moon" Mullen, Duke quarterback, does not call signals.

Large Crowds Go To Womanless Church Wedding

More than four hundred onlookers assembled in the church parlors of the First Baptist church Tuesday evening to view the womanless wedding which the Fellowship and Leaders Classes put on for a good time.

The bride was Dallas Whaley arrayed in 14 1-2 yards of white wedding dress and train and a blonde wig and looking like a dainty bride on stilts, was the report.

Earl Furr was declared to be the cutest bridesmaid, although it was close choice between him and any one of the others, Larson Lloyd, W. D. Cornelson, Norris Curtis, Ferrell Squires and S. R. Whaley.

H. C. Jenkins was the preacher who presided over the nuptials and B. E. Ivie was the groom, with Bruce Frazier as the noisy rejected suitor.

The groomsmen were W. H. Shaw, J. A. Coffey, G. F. Williams, Reuben Creighton, Harold Wade and Hull. Travis Reed, concealed under a huge mustache, was the father.

The wedding solo, "Sweet Adeline," being the favorite song of the soloist was sung by R. L. Gomillion, with E. F. Houser at the piano.

W. C. Blankenship as aunt of the bride accompanied by his (or her) two small bad boys, W. A. Bass and Mr. Harris, was the riot of the evening, although more necks were strained probably for the petite flower girls, J. C. Douglass and E. J. Heywood, than anything else.

George Gentry was master of ceremonies; Wayne Matthews, best man; R. E. Blount the tearful mother; Homer Wright, the bride's sister; Berry Duff, maid of honor; G. H. Hayward, matron of honor; W. D. Cornelson, Jr., and Jack Aderholt, the train bearers.

'FIRST AID' FOR TIRED EYES REKINDLES SPARKLE

EYES are to be seen as well as to see. Why not, then, asks Dorothy Tree, film player, make them worth looking at?

Here's the system she uses:

To begin with, she bathes her eyes daily with a warm solution of boric acid, applied with an eye cup (left). This relieves eye strain or irritation due to dust.

WHEN eyes have lost some of their color and sparkle, a quick massage of the upper lids with ice is an excellent treatment (top center).

The ice—a smooth piece so that it will not cause bruises—is quickly brushed over the lids until the eyes feel fresh and alive.

Anyway, it's a quick pick-up for sleepy eyes.

TO remove traces of fatigue from around the eyes, cotton pads, moistened with an eye tonic solution, are placed over the closed eyes for about ten minutes (bottom center).

The best precaution against lines beneath the eyes is a daily tap massage (right). Using the forefinger, start tapping lightly at the inner corners, traveling to the outer corners.

Bexar County Suit Given Condemnation

SAN ANTONIO, Oct. 28. (UP)—Condemnation of Bexar county's suit in attacking validity of the apportionment provision of the automobile license law was voted by county judges and commissioners today. They pledged an attempt to have the annual convention of Texas county judges and commissioners meeting in El Paso Saturday also to condemn Bexar county's action.

About 50 judges and commissioners, here for trial of Bexar county's suit, voiced their condemnation in resolutions. The resolution asserted that if the county is successful in its suit, the sponsor will be asked to call a special legislative session to enact a motor license fee law that will do justice to small counties.

Bexar county won its first victory in the suit when Judge Frederick Stevens yesterday reserved ruling on a demurrer and general denial filed by the state and proceeded to take evidence. The county is seeking a permanent injunction prohibiting the county tax collector from paying automobile license money to the state highway department. It contends the law providing for such payments is unconstitutional because it discriminates against larger counties.

Marlene Plays Lead In Court Drama As Trial Of Alienation Suit Nears

By ROBBIN COONS
HOLLYWOOD (UP)—The eyes of all Hollywood are turned to New York courts as the climax approaches in a legal contest involving the most intriguing triangle the screen city has known in years.

The principals are Marlene Dietrich, exotic German screen actress; Josef von Sternberg, the director who "discovered" her, and Mrs. Riza Royce von Sternberg, who has twice married and twice divorced the picturesque director.

On the sidelines in Europe, stands Rudolph Sieber, husband of Miss Dietrich and himself a film director abroad, affirming his faith in his wife and in his friend, Von Sternberg.

On October 5, in New York, hearings began on Mrs. Von Sternberg's damage suits against Miss Dietrich, one of which asks $500,000 for the alleged alienation of her former husband's affections. The other asks $100,000 for libelous remarks the actress is alleged to have made against the plaintiff.

Miss Dietrich, who was selected by Von Sternberg for "The Blue Angel," a picture he made in Germany last year, and who subsequently came to Hollywood and became a star almost overnight, characterizes Mrs. Von Sternberg's allegations as ridiculous, unfair, and unjustified.

Her husband Sieber, came to Hollywood recently, he said, "To testify by my presence and in any other way that I can testify that I know that these charges against her are utterly unfounded." Now he has been called back to his work in Europe.

In her alienation of affections action, Mrs. Von Sternberg charges that the director furnished an apartment for Miss Dietrich and allowed her to use his charge accounts.

In the libel suit she alleges that the actress, in an interview printed in a European newspaper, said Mrs. Von Sternberg was an "undutiful wife," and that the director had planned to divorce her if she, Mrs. Von Sternberg, had not divorced him first.

Hollywood has watched the drama brewing ever since Miss Dietrich arrived in this country, to continue in films under the tutelage of her discoverer, and to be seen with him constantly at the social functions. Hollywood regarded their companionship as merely an outgrowth of their professional connection as master and pupil, for Von Sternberg is admitted to have given Miss Dietrich the screen personality she possesses today.

Papers in the damage suits were served on Miss Dietrich last April 17 when she returned from a visit with her husband, bringing her daughter, Maria Sieber, aged 5, to Hollywood with her.

Existence of the suits, however, was not revealed until July.

Wolters Pleads For Conservation Of Natural Resources Of State At Convocation Of Episcopal Church

LONGVIEW, Oct. 25 (UP)—Brisson General Jacob J. Wolters, peace-time lawyer and martial law commander-in-chief, in an address at the concluding banquet of the Episcopal convocation for the northern district of Texas made a plea for the conservation of the state's natural resources and for the relief of sufferers in East Texas.

The general remarked, "It seems as if martial law will last in East Texas for many months to come, and if it takes that to conserve this great field, it is well worth while."

"In the East Texas oil field today we have the most serious, most stupendous and the most unusual situation the world has ever known," continued the general. "Our timber resources in the forests primeval have been exhausted; plains formerly full of buffalo, deer and antelope are now barren of wild life; streams that abounded with fish are now but mere water."

"Devastation has reigned on Texas' natural resources from pioneer days. In 1901, the Spindletop field came in as the world's greatest gushing field at the time, but in a few months it had ceased to gush, such were the devastating methods used."

"Then followed field upon field, Humble, Electra, Goose Creek, the Panhandle, Ranger, Burkburnett,

Precise Roasting Gives Coffee The Perfect Flavor

Bulk Methods Can't Equal Flavor That Patented Process Develops in Hills Bros. Coffee

The perfect flavor of coffee is indeed a delight to the taste. But you don't get the perfect flavor, unless your coffee has been roasted evenly. Hills Bros. Coffee always is. It's roasted by the patented, Controlled Roasting process and kept out of the sun. As the accuracy of the hour-glass depends upon an even, continuous flow... a little at a time... so the uniform flavor of Hills Bros. Coffee is produced by this patented process that roasts evenly, continuously... a little at a time. Each berry receives an even roast. None is underdone, none overdone.

Such uniformity is not the case with coffee roasted by ordinary bulk methods. For big batches can't be exactly controlled. The coffee may be roasted a bit too much, or not enough. If either happens, you don't get the perfect flavor that Controlled Roasting never fails to achieve.

Hills Bros. Coffee is strictly fresh, because it's packed in vacuum cans. Air, which destroys the flavor of coffee, is removed and kept out of these cans. Ordinary, "air-tight" cans won't keep coffee fresh. But Hills Bros. Coffee can't go stale! Order some today. Ask for it by name, and look for the Arab trademark on the can.

"Under proper production methods it may last 10 years."

Turning to philanthropy, General Wolters cited instances of distress in which he and his troops had come in contact with deplorable conditions where women and children, in many instances deserted, were suffering.

He challenged the church and the community as facing a problem that called upon Christianity for action.
