WHAT HAPPENED TO MR. GANDHI'S SPEECH?

If further evidence of the unfairness of the wet press were needed, it has been furnished by the treatment accorded the report of that part of Mahatma Gandhi's speech relating to the liquor evil broadcast over the radio from London, on Sunday, September 13. The virtual ignoring of that feature of his address by the Boston papers is called to your attention by Zion's Herald, which says the Boston Globe had a very short paragraph on the Mahatma's denunciation of the liquor traffic, that it was completely cut out of the report in the Boston Herald, and the Boston Post's story had no reference to Gandhi's discussion of the liquor inquiry. The New York Times had a very few lines of what the great Hindoo said on that particular subject. The same thing is true of the other metropolitan newspapers.

The situation is summed up by Zion's Herald in these words: "Mahatma Gandhi's strong opposition to the whole liquor business voiced in his radio address which reached millions upon millions of listeners is news of the utmost importance, particularly here in the United States where prohibition is today one of the most important issues before the public. Why should this pronouncement from one of the world's foremost leaders be either ignored or only lightly touched upon by the daily press and its news-gathering agencies?"

If the metropolitan press cannot be trusted to be decently fair in quoting a statement concerning the drink evil in faraway India uttered by a man of world-wide fame, how can they expect the public to place reliance upon their accuracy in reports of lesser matters relating to the wet and dry question?

GEN. SMEDLEY D. BUTLER'S DRY PRESCRIPTION

Prohibition is a necessary measure for America's economic supremacy; the prohibition law can be enforced; and the methods which he used in Philadelphia, if rigorously carried out everywhere, will make the law 90 per cent effective, asserts General Butler in an article in the October Christian Herald. What is needed is less patience with political bosses and office-holders, and more activity at the polls and in the offices of those charged with law enforcement, according to General Butler.

He threw the paper at her feet and pointed at it. "If you've read it when I come back and haven't changed your mind, why that will be that. I'll get on of here, and this time it will be for good. I can promise you that I won't be forced to spend any more nights in ga-rages. Not exactly!"

He put on his hat and coat and went out the front door without another word.

HOW'S your HEALTH

Nightmares
Some years ago the comic pages of our papers displayed the amusing and highly imaginative adventures of a boy named Nemo. Nemo would go through many experiences, not a few of which were in the nature of nightmares, or night terrors, and the last box in the series would show Nemo waking from his dreams while his parents chided him for having eaten Welsh rabbit.

Popular fancy, not without some warrant, ascribes nightmares to late suppers made up of indigestible food.

Modern psychology, however, has added to the probable causes of disturbing dreams a number of other factors, some of which are purely psychological.

The mental mechanism, relieved from the restraints and counterbalancing impressions received in the waking state, runs riot, so to say, during sleep, and experiences the very conditions or others similar to those the individual fears.

Adults so affected require the help of an understanding physician, and in the more serious conditions, treatment by a trained specialist, a psychiatrist.

In children night terrors may be caused by irritating physical disabilities, such as enlarged tonsils and adenoids, constipation, intestinal parasites (worms), or dietary defects.

Not uncommonly, however, the night terror represents the child's elaboration of an equal and frightening experience.

It may be that the child has been attacked or hurt by some animal or has witnessed some painful experience undergone by another.

Death, birth, sex and things the discussion of which adults forbid, or studiously avoid, often mystify children and their secret pursuit of these subjects gives rise in the mind of the child to disturbing thoughts and fancies.

Children affected with night terrors should be encouraged to discuss them. A clue to their cause may thus be found. Stubborn cases require close and expert study.

WASHINGTON DAYBOOK

By HERBERT PLUMMER

WASHINGTON—You'll probably hear a great deal in the coming months from that good-natured senator from Missouri—Harry Borow Hawes.

HARRY B. HAWES

Started Young
His friends ascribe what they term a genius for organization as the reason for his success in politics and in the numerous civic enterprises with which he has been identified in St. Louis.

At 29 he was head of St. Louis' police organization and ever since has been prominent in public life. He served three terms in the house, before entering the senate, from a

Of course the press of business facing the coming Seventy-second session may interfere, but persistence on the part of independence advocates will in all probability bring the question out in the open.

Senator Hawes stands in the front rank of those in favor of independence for the islands. He was in Manila during the past summer. Filipinos were stirred to wild "Mahabays!" (Long lives!) by his speeches to them.

Ready for The Battle
Hawes long has been interested in independence for the Philippines. The most casual reference to the question in the senate will send him scurrying from his office to the chamber. In fact, senate attaches have a standing order to notify him the instant the subject is mentioned on the floor.

The fact that he is the last rank-member on the territories and insular affairs committee — that body which must report the question to the senate proper—falls to dampen his enthusiasm. At all public hearings thus far he has taken a leading part.

This is not the first time Hawes has been found on the side of insular possessions of the United States. Before he was 30 years old he had an important legal assignment as one of the counsel during negotiations for the annexation of Hawaii to the United States. He represented the islands.

Age Of Confusion

THE Episcopal church's house of bishops, remarking in its recent pastoral letter that we are living in a time of extraordinary confusion and strain, will find a whole host of people, church members and otherwise, to add a fervent "amen!"

Indeed, there are times when it seems as if this confusion were the heaviest of all the loads this post-war generation must carry.

The war did a great many highly damaging things to the world, but nothing was ultimately more damaging than the way it knocked the old certainties on the head.

In the old days as at present, depression, and hunger and unrest visited us ever so often; but no matter what happened we felt that we knew exactly where we were going and why, and we were always sure that if we hung on tightly things would get better at last and our troubles would be forgotten.

But today, as the bishops point out, we are extraordinarily confused. The slogans that used to cheer us have lost their magic. We can no longer accept our great men on faith; instead we examine them cynically to see just where and how each one gets his percentage. The old confidence in national destiny has faded; the most forthright patriot wanders now and then if these infamous Russians may not conceivably know something that it would be good for us to know too. Having lost our belief in a great many things, we have lost much of our belief in ourselves and it is bad for us.

That, very likely, is why we are taking this depression so much to heart. Visitors from Europe have wondered why we feel so badly; our depression they say is nothing compared to what the British and the Germans are putting up with, but we are more vocal about it than all the European nations put together. The answer probably is that we are feeling the reaction from the high hopes we used to have.

We are, in other words, badly confused about everything. Being badly confused, we can't see through the clouds anywhere. We can't make ourselves believe that hard times will ever end. We cannot realize that ultimately we shall get back our lost self-confidence. We are paying, perhaps, for the cockiness with which, we accepted our years of good fortune.

OPINIONS OF OTHERS

At Pollution

THE work of the smoke abatement committee has in one year shown fine results. Health Commissioner Fynde says it has cleared the air by 60 per cent.

Its airplanes have spotted "volcanoes." Its campaign of education has taught citizens the folly of waste in burning coal and oil. Its drive has greatly lessened the $100,000,000 smoke damage bill that New York is said to have footed annually.

Yet much remains to be done. The Academy of Medicine says that worse than smoke are the sulphur dioxide, arsenic, the monoxides and nitrogen gases found in the street atmosphere.

These fumes breed no less than 20 distant maladies, from asthma to conjunctivitis. The auto is to blame for much of them, it seems. And how about the nicotine fumes arising from the now prevalent custom of flappers smoking in taxicabs and limousines? Chauffeurs might help in fighting the menace by keeping the windows closed.

The Modern Girls

Altogether, in London Graphic, I find things go on like this, there will soon be either nothing left or no polite society left in which we can mention it. Nowadays, it is almost as difficult to believe that girls ever blushed as that they ever swooned. Which reminds me

SAM BY FREEMAN LINCOLN

Chapter 19
FOURTH ALDERSEA'S SECRET
Fourth was not alarmed. To the contrary, he was enjoying himself thoroughly. He put an arm before his face in a mock gesture of defense and cried: "Don't beat me, Jean! Don't beat me! Think of my gray hairs and feeble state."

Sam clenched her fists. "I have an idea that a beating is just about what you need!"

"No, not that! Wait!"

He handed an oblong box to Sam with a deep bow, lying in state upon a cushion of white satin was a long string of beautiful crystal beads. She gasped. "What—?"

He made an elaborately careless gesture. "Just a small gift, that's all."

Sam gazed at Fourth, in complete bewilderment. "But—but where did the money come from?"

"Money?" Fourth groaned. "I'm interested in knowing if you like the crystals I have given you."

Sam closed the jewel case with a snap. "They're beautiful, Fourth, but we'll have to talk about them later. I want to know about Nelson and Martha. Where have they gone? Did you tell them that they had to leave this house?"

Fourth sighed. "I merely suggested that it might be better for all concerned if they moved out."

"You suggested that they move out?" Sam was dazed. "Even after what I told you about who owned this house you had the effrontery to tell Nelson and his wife to get out into the streets?"

Fourth drew himself up with dignity. "Nelson and his wife are wandering the streets. To the contrary, they are lodged in a small but very comfortable city apartment." He nodded. "Two bedrooms, a bath, a living room, and a combined dining room and kitchenette. I believe there is electric refrigeration."

"Electric refrigeration?" Sam murmured weakly. "Do you mean to tell me that Martha and Nelson have an apartment?"

of a colonial friend who went to a dinner party and found himself next to a strange young lady with whom it was his duty to make polite conversation.

As we walked home afterward, I asked him how he got on with his neighbor and what she was like. "Oh," he answered, "she was splendid—simply splendid. Completely frank and straightforward, and really—well, you know, ready to talk about absolutely anything, in fact," he added, confidentially, "between you and me, I couldn't get her to talk about anything else."

Could you sum it up better than that?
