SEIZED IN RAID ON HIDDEN ARSENAL

Although you've read the murderous record written by America's criminal gangs, you probably have never seen an entire gang before. The eight men at top comprise the gang seized, together with an amazing arsenal, at Mountain View, N. J., when police swooped down on their hideout while they slept. Among them are two men whom police have linked to the sensational $427,000 armored car holdup in Brooklyn. Left to right are, seated: Frank Fox, John Hughes, Arthur Gaynor; standing: George Maiwald, James Bell, Joseph McCarthy, Louis Balner and Ed Gaffney. Below are the arms which include tear gas rifle and bombs, .32 calibre rifle, a variety of automatics, long-barrelled revolvers, and deadly, stubby pistols.

LOYAL CHINESE TROOPS SMASH UPRISING

Peace Follows Night Of Terror at Ancient Capital

PEIPING, China, June 28.—Loyal government troops today repulsed a force of mutinous Manchurian soldiers who attempted to seize the "forbidden city," dispersing the rebels after a night of terror and fighting. Martial law was declared throughout the ancient one-time capital of the Chinese empire, but peace preservation force. The city gates, at which the invaders were turned back, remained closed, however, and traffic was suspended throughout the city. The uprising began at the Fengtai Railroad division point under the leadership of Pai Chien-Wu, mentioned recently as the possible leader of a North China self-government move.

Oklahoma Woods Searched for Boy

MALESTER, Okla., June 28.—A party of more than 100 men and women searched the rough, densely wooded country south of Pittsburgh for 7-year-old Frank Marker, adopted son of George Marker, a farmer. The boy disappeared from his home three miles south of Pittsburgh Sunday noon. The child was reported last seen near by Mrs. Alex Staples, residing near by. She said the boy told her he was going after horses. More than 100 men from the McAlester transient relief camp began a search Tuesday. The searchers walked about 30 yards apart.

Oil Wells 'Go to Town,' Menace City's Skyline

With a complete "right of way" won in a recent election, oil wells are invading the downtown section of Oklahoma City, creating a new type of civic skyline. In this unusual picture, several of the city's finest buildings, endangered by the feverish hunt for "liquid gold," overlook the encroaching web-like structures which menace their existence.

Keys Flying On To New Laurels

French Leaders Prepare To Duel

Godin Chiappe All France was tense with interest as it was learned that preparations were being made for Pierre Godin, 60, former municipal council president and Jean Chiappe, 57, former Paris prefect of police, to meet in a duel. Chiappe made the challenge as a climax to a political fight, outgrowth of the Stavisky riots. The two once were warm friends.

By Associated Press
MERIDIAN, Miss., June 28.—Invigorated by a night of cool, smooth flying and with the world's official endurance flight record safely under their belts, Al and Fred Keys, flying brothers, today piloted "Ole Miss" on toward new laurels. The Keys were in the air 24 days for a total of 573 hours at 9:30 this morning. They broke the official record of 553 hours. They are seeking to smash the unofficial record of 647 hours set by Jackson Obrine at Chicago. The fliers reached the official record at 3:13 1/2 p. m. yesterday. As the timers watch ticked the 554th hour, 41st minute and 30th second that the little silver-coated monoplane had been aloft since it left the run-way at Municipal Airport here June 4, a huge crowd roared its congratulations. "Boy, are we happy," were the first words from the brothers as they exceeded the five-year-old record established by another brother team, Kenneth and John Hunter, at Chicago in July, 1930. While there was a little doubt the new mark will be accepted by officials of the National Aeronautical Association, flight records must wait the indorsement of that organization.

Taxpayers who made the first half payment last November have until Sunday to make the last half payment without penalties and interests, according to information from the county tax collector's office. If the last half payments are not made before July 1 and if the full payment has not been made previously, both penalties and interest will be assessed starting Monday, it was stated.

Labor Measure Is Finally Enacted

WASHINGTON, June 28.—Congressional action on the long disputed Wagner-Connery labor disputes bill was complete yesterday when the Senate approved the conference report on the measure. It now goes to the White House.

MINERS START RIOTS

By Associated Press
JOPLIN, Mo., June 28.—Rioting broke out today between striking miners and workers in the Tri-State lead and zinc field 24 hours after national guardsmen had withdrawn. The sheriff's office said the miners, reportedly armed with guns, clubs and stones, attacked men going to work at Galena, Kan. The riot occurred at the Eagle Picher Lead Company, which was to have reopened today. Several workers were hurt. At Topeka, Kan., Sheriff Earl Neely of Cherokee County requested Governor Alf Landon to order troops back into the mining area. The governor conferred with Adjutant General McLean on the action to be taken.

GOLD MEDAL BAND'S SERVICES IN DEMAND OVER ENTIRE AREA

The Memphis Gold Medal Band is being anything but idle these days, when everyone usually is taking things more or less easy. The musicians played two concerts last night, at Hedley and at Clarendon, and have another Saturday night and an all-day assignment July 4. Saturday night the West Texas champions go to Childress for an open-air concert to be given on a roped-off downtown street. They will arrive in Childress at 8 or 8:15 o'clock. On July 4, Cisero Milam will take his musicians to Estelline to take part in the final day of a mammoth holiday celebration that starts on July 2. They will remain throughout the day, after arriving at about 10 o'clock in the morning. An invitation to play at Borger on July 4 was rejected. Last night the organization presented a short concert at Hedley, while enroute to Clarendon for a joint concert with the Clarendon band. About 250 persons heard the concert at Hedley. Later in the evening, the two bands played before more than 1,000 listeners at Clarendon. Director Milam and Gus Stephenson, former director of Clarendon, divided time directing the massed group.

BEGIN HERE TODAY KATHARINE STRYKHURST, 26 and beautiful, allows her emotions to rule when the married MICHAEL HEATHEROE, young riding instructor who comes into a title and fortune...

CHAPTER XLIII Zoe stared at Clarence. The elderly colored man shifted his gaze easily. "I thought to myself," he said, "that fore I go back to Hartford I better take this to Miss Zoe. She'll know what to do with it. Seems like I tried to do the best I could, takin' it out of the drawer when that Miss Moon was lookin' ever'where."

lain these circumstances painted him? Zoe trembled for Katharine. No wonder the girl had drooped, turning pale and wan. This was her secret. Zoe went back into the house, unaccountably depressed. If Katharine had not managed her affairs better than this, what could one expect of the world at large?

Zoe's heart began to beat faster. This man was extraordinarily keen. Would she be able to keep silent—she who had always been such a babbling? She began to chatter about nothing at all. The tennis finals, and the last dance of the season at Wissinmackon, and whether Denny Raeburn's yacht would win the race. John listened, watching lazily the play of sunlight and shadow on the animated face. Zoe had taken on a new prettiness since her wild outburst of despair, ending in her tussle with death. She was, John Kaye reflected, a delightful companion.

Zoe. She was lovely to look at, intelligent, womanly (in the old-fashioned sense, in spite of her modern setting). Any man but himself, that is. His affections were placed elsewhere. "You're not listening," the girl pouted. "I can tell."

Her little Scottish terrier, Jock, came wandering in from the garden and sniffed in friendly fashion at the table holding the tea tray. Dr. Kaye rubbed the dog's ears, and Zoe told Jock sternly to keep away from the cakes. "I met a friend of yours at lunch the other day," he man said lazily, in the silence. "Young Corliss. Said he'd come back on the boat with you in June."

Babson Attacks Chain Store Taxes as Short-Sighted

SAYS 'SOAKING' MEANS BLOW AT POOR

Property Target of Politicians Despite Progress

BABSON PARK, Mass., June 28.—After a mediocre spring season, retail sales are finally responding to the warmer weather of the past two weeks. Mail order and chain store sales are showing the greatest improvement over last year. In fact, the chains have had an enviable record not only during the recovery period but throughout the depression.

The most unfortunate development in the chain store situation has been in the matter of special taxes. Twenty or more states have placed such taxes on the chains within the past year or two. There has been a rising wave of antagonism against the big retail groups which has swept from coast to coast. In spite of the progress which the chain store has made in reducing the cost of distribution, its prosperity has made it a target for the politicians. Just as in the case of the public utility industry, short-sighted persecution has been the reward for capable and progressive management.

FLORIDA PASSES TAX ON GROSS SALES OF CHAINS

The most drastic chain store tax which has come to my attention is the one recently passed by the Florida legislature. The bill levies an annual occupational tax on retailers ranging from $10 plus 1/2 of 1 per cent of gross receipts for single stores to a $400 license and a 5 per cent tax on gross receipts each for chain stores operating as many as sixteen or more units.

Hence, this bill imposes more than a five per cent sales tax on those necessities of life sold by the big chains. In those states which levy fixed annual taxes according to the number of stores, the chains have been able to offset the added burden by increasing their volume. Under the Florida system, however, the tax grows as business grows so the chains will have no alternative but to pass the tax along to the consumer in the form of higher prices.

FLORIDA TAX FALLS HEAVIEST ON POOR

Many economists feel the best way for the treasury to get out of its present dilemma is to pass a general sales tax. I am inclined to feel that this is the right course. The enemies of such legislation, however, have a very strong argument in their favor—namely, that a general sales impost would be very hard on those in the lower income brackets. A general sales tax would not only mean a duty on luxuries but a levy on the necessities of life. In fact, those in favor of such a measure have strongly advised the exemption of the necessities of life from its provisions.

Florida, however, in her hostility toward chain retailers, has gone to the other extreme. She has passed a sales tax which is not a general sales tax, but is in reality a duty only on the necessities of life. The brunt of this assessment must be carried by the poor people. While the average family in modest circumstances does not spend as much for food and other basic necessities as a family of considerable means, it certainly does pay out a larger percentage of its income on these items than the well-to-do family. Hence, soaking the chain stores in Florida or any other state through a gross sales tax simply means soaking the poor.

SUPREME COURT SHOULD PASS ON THIS LAW

I assume that this new tax on chain stores' gross will be carried to the Supreme Court. It will be a healthy development to have a test case on this question not only to clear the air in Florida but in every state where similar proposals may arise. From a practical standpoint such a decision would be more important than the recent rulings on the NRA and on gold. In the latter two instances the High Court's decision did not change anything. Naturally, I hesitate to make any prediction as to what the Supreme Court will rule on this retail case, but I believe that if it is upheld it will be very detrimental to the nation for the following reasons:

1. A tax on chain store sales unfortunately is an "easy way" for politicians to raise money. It is similar to the tax on gasoline which has been an excellent revenue raiser. The chain stores, like the oil companies, will prove to be good tax collectors and the tendency will be for politicians to constantly boost the tax.

OUR BOARDING HOUSE

By Ahern

2. It unwise pleases the local merchants as the politicians well know. Most readers realize that the growth of the chain store has ruined many a corner grocery and has seriously cut into the other independents. Hence, any proposal which hurts the chains gives the politicians the backing of the local merchant.

3. It places a burden on the people in the lowest income brackets whereas most sales tax proposals exempt foods and certain other necessities. Over the long run it also tends for more unemployment and lower wages.

4. It will be hard on owners of merchandising stocks. A gross sales tax on big retail groups will have the same effect on merchandising stocks as the various utility taxes have had on power company stocks in the last three years.

EVERYBODY SHOULD SHARE COST OF GOVERNMENT

On the other hand, if the tax proves to be legal, it will be a big pain to the man who has all his money in real estate and other investments. Owners of property, both tangible and intangible, today bear more than their share of the cost of government. That is one reason why I favor a general sales tax on all articles except food and other necessities. Such a sales levy will give every voter a direct financial interest in economical government, and it should cause an improvement in the character of the men who are elected to public office. I feel very strongly, however, that an assessment on gross sales of chain stores is the wrong way to go about either clipping the wings of the chains or raising public revenues.

These taxes on chain stores will probably run their course. The antipathy toward big retail groups today is very similar to the hostility toward the power companies. It is only another card in the redistribution of wealth deck. But in the long run the people pay the taxes in both cases. Constitutional or unconstitutional, ultimately, the people of Florida and every state that tries this system of taxation will have their eyes opened. Sooner or later they

'M' SYSTEM

THE VOICE OF THE UPPER RED RIVER VALLEY

THE 'BLACK WIDOW CRAZE'

WE just have to have a craze of some kind going on all the time. Even before we had forgotten being stung by the chain letter bug, we began to be bitten by black widow spiders. And like the chain letter, we hope the black widow has a very short life.

The spider was a very rare species until we started looking for them. Now they are everywhere. Likewise, as a rare creature its bite was sure death. Now everybody gets over it. All we have to do to cure an ill is get used to it.

But honestly, this black widow craze has gone too far already. Besides, a Dallas doctor has discovered that the black widow doesn't bite at all. She stings. He says the sting is seldom fatal.

Because many people so abhor the sight of spiders or snakes (we are among this group), some newspapers prohibit the printing of their pictures altogether. It should be universal.

We've been frightened out of our wits a dozen times or more during the past few days. Several newspapers carried pictures of the insects or animals or whatever they are. Every time we reached for the telephone, we caught sight of one of these and jumped half way across the office before remembering it was only a picture. Finally, we gathered up all papers that carried the picture and maliciously destroyed them.

We were bitten by the chain letter and stung by the black widow, or vice versa. Now let's start a nice, enjoyable craze like slapping sunburned backs or eating ice cream cones—at any rate, forget about the black widow.

EXAMPLE OF CONNING LAWYER

ONE of the most significant moves in the government's fight with the underworld took place almost unnoticed at Oklahoma City the other day, when a lawyer was convicted in federal court of sharing in money that had been paid as a kidnap ransom.

The lawyer was Ben B. Laska of Denver, and his conviction represented one more offshoot of the famous Urschel kidnaping case, in which 19 other persons have already been convicted. And the significance of this last conviction lies in the fact that it begins a campaign by the government to teach attorneys that they must not share in the illegal profits of gangs.

Laska's case is instructive, as an example of the way in which it is possible for a lawyer to overstep the bounds of proper procedure in defense of a gangster.

Retained as counsel for Albert Bates, one of the leaders of the kidnap ring, Laska was accused of having received $10,000 in cash from Bates' stepson, Edward Feldman. This money, according to Feldman, was part of the Urschel ransom money.

In addition, Feldman testified that Laska directed the hiding of Bates' share of the ransom money, and gave instructions which enabled Feldman to evade arrest for 15 months after Bates had been captured. Feldman's mother testified that she had wished to surrender, but that Laska had told her she would "get her throat cut" if she did.

All this, presented to a federal jury, resulted in a speedy conviction for one of the most prominent criminal lawyers of the west.

Charting a proper course for a lawyer who defends a crook is a delicate matter. Any man accused of crime has the right to hire counsel, and his counsel has the right to put up the best kind of fight for him that he can. Yet there is a dividing line between ethoical practice and outright criminality which an over-zealous attorney can easily cross.

Against the lawyer who puts up an honest fight for a client there can be no quarrel. But the lawyer who takes that one extra step, and gets over the dividing line, becomes an outright accomplice of the gangster.

He profits by the fruit of the gangster's crimes, in a direct and unmistakable way; he helps his client avoid arrest, as well as conviction, and by the direction and advice he gives, he becomes a silent partner in the crime ring.

Nothing would help more, in our fight against crime, than an effective campaign to punish such lawyers. The Oklahoma trial ought to remind "border line" attorneys that it isn't healthful to overstep that dividing line between ethoical practice and criminal conniving.

HEAVY, HEAVY, HANGS OVER EVERYBODY'S HEAD

HEALTH

BY DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN

The craze for speed and more speed gives rise to the question of how much of it living tissues can stand, without serious or fatal results.

Human hands guide automobiles moving over Daytona Beach sands at more than 200 miles an hour, airplanes that have attained speeds of 400 to 500 miles an hour; and new types of locomotives that are setting records in cross-country runs.

Moreover, we read constantly of speculation about development of rocket types of vehicles which will attain unheard-of speeds, such as 1,000 miles an hour.

What is the limit which a human being can stand?

Col. H. V. Wurdemann of the United States Army Medical Corps and Major Simpson of the Air Corps point out that the extreme speed that can be reached by airplanes at sea level will probably be 600 miles an hour.

The high roaring sound of an air plane is said to be due to the contact with the air of the ends of the propellers, which travel at the rate of 1250 to 1500 miles an hour. Once a tremendous speed is attained, the impact on the tissues of the human body would be similar to this impact.

Living tissues cannot stand this strain and it seems doubtful that human beings can safely stand a speed of 600 miles an hour, and certainly not of 1000 miles an hour.

Colonel Wurdemann feels that some of the fatal accidents that have occurred have been due to changes in the blood supply of the brain, associated with the pressure on the body involved in sudden banking. Even a momentary loss of consciousness might be sufficient to cause disaster to an airplane.

Medical authorities associated with the flying corps are convinced that speeds of 500 to 1000 miles an hour may be mechanically possible in the future, but they are equally convinced that it is very doubtful whether a human being will be able to stand such speed.

This kind of speed straight ahead causes less effect than turning at the same clip. Colonel Bauer of the United States Army Aviation Corps says that it is impossible for a human being to stand a speed of much more than 300 miles an hour on sharp turns.

Besides these theoretical considerations there are the statements of competent fliers who have reported that, in making rapid turns, they suffer in their bodies and in their senses, in their times lose consciousness when submitted to these conditions.

Moreover, there seems to be good evidence that the internal organs have been dislocated from their positions in some cases. A few pilots have been found incapacitated from hemorrhages into the brain and abdomen, and hemorrhages into the back of the eye, in connection with attaining terrific speed in descent or in making sudden turns.

I believe Mae West cleaned up the screen. She took the very thing of which the nastiest sex films were made, and then not only laughed at it herself, but made the public see the joke also. —Sir Cedric Hartwicke, English actor-writer.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

McCarl Shows Symptoms of White House Ambition Who Can Be 'Impersonating' Senator as Utility Counsel?

WASHINGTON, June 28.—Those who see most of Comptroller General John R. McCarl these days are sure he is preening himself for the next Republican presidential nomination.

A movement for McCarl has begun in his home state of Nebraska and the atmosphere around the comptroller general's office is laden with more than a faint political odor.

Some of his friends are talking as if he already were an avowed candidate. They take pains to say that, if nominated, he would be a safe and sane "middle-of-the-roader," an opponent of such projects as TVA and the Tree Belt—but by no means all the New Deal—and a devout defender of the Constitution.

Also, it is revealed, McCarl has been making an intensive study of economics and the problems of government.

The comptroller general is on intimate terms with several Republican leaders in Congress. He was once secretary of the G. O. P. congressional campaign committee and was appointed by President Harding to his present 15-year term, which expires next year.

Stirs New Dealers' Ire

As "watchdog" of expenditures, McCarl has aroused bitter antagonism of New Dealers to the extent that some have urged that Roosevelt dismiss him.

His rulings have hampered slum clearance, low-cost housing and other projects. He has tried to bring the TVA and the $5,000,000,000 work-relief program under his jurisdiction.

Recent attack of his auditors on TVA brought a denunciation of McCarl from Senator Norris of Nebraska, whose secretary he once was.

To date, at least, McCarl's presidential hopes are not to be taken very seriously.
