Funeral services for Rev. James Thomas Hicks, 71, pioneer Panhandle minister, will be held this afternoon at the First Methodist Church at 1:30 o'clock, conducted by Rev. J. O. Haymes, of Amarillo, presiding elder of the Amarillo District, and assisted by Rev. T. J. Rea, pastor of the First Methodist Church here.

Interment will be in the Restland Memorial Park Cemetery, Dallas, Monday morning at 10 o'clock. The body will be taken to Dallas by King's Mortuary.

Rev. Hicks, retired from active church service for the past eight years, died Friday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock at his home, 719 South Seventh Street, following an illness of two weeks.

To Lie in State
The body will lie in state at the First Methodist Church from 12:30 until 1:30 o'clock this afternoon.

Pallbearers will be D. A. Neely, John T. Bishop, C. W. Broome, R. L. Madden, N. A. Hightower and T. T. Harrison. Honorary pallbearers are F. N. Foxhall, J. H. Read, Roy Guthrie, the entire board of the First Methodist Church and all ministers of the city. The choir will sing "Amazing Grace," "Must Jesus Bear the Cross Alone" and "The Old Rugged Cross" during the services.

Rev. Hicks was one of the Panhandle's pioneer religious leaders and church builders. He held pastorates in a number of Panhandle cities during his 27 years of active work. He was a former pastor of the Methodist Church here, and he was serving as pastor of the Pampa church at the time he was forced to retire by failing health.

In addition, he served as presiding elder of the Amarillo, Clarendon, Plainview and Stamford Districts and was pastor of the First Methodist Church at Lubbock in 1918.

Native of Missouri

Huey was recently acquitted of killing Ace Borger.

Memphis employees of the West Texas Utilities Company Friday night attended a "safety meeting" at the district offices at Childress. Local employees attending the meeting included W. R. Cabaness, manager of the local office, Jim Fullingim and Charles Davlin.

Mr. Fullingim took part on the program and gave a 10-minute discussion of the possible hazards to employees and the public due to improper lighting standards. Others taking part on the program included P. W. Cambell, of Abilene, general safety chairman, N. C. Huston, of Childress, Oran Starkey of Wellington, C. C. COUNTY SCHOOL CENSUS SHOWS DECREASE

Four Rural, Turkey
Independent Districts Increase

A decided decrease in the number of scholastics in Hall County for the 1935-36 school term was indicated in reports of county school census enumerators filed Saturday with Miss Vera Gilreath, county school superintendent.

A loss of 183 school students was shown in the report of 21 out of the 23 rural school districts in the county. Four of the districts showed slight increases, one listed the same number of students attending schools, and the balance showed decreases.

Increase at Turkey
Only one of the four independent school districts had reported completed census enumeration Saturday. An increase of 10 students in the Turkey independent school district was reported by J. R. Browder, enumerator at Turkey. A total of 340 scholastics were listed in the district for the new term, as compared with 330 for the past term.

The 21 rural districts in which enumeration had been completed (Continued on page 4)

Rural Schools May Have County-Wide Graduation Event

The possibility of a county-wide graduation exercise for all rural grammar school graduates this spring, will be discussed at a meeting called by Miss Vera Gilreath, county school superintendent, for Tuesday evening of this week.

Co-operative exercises have been held successfully in many counties and it is probable that such a plan can be worked successfully in this county, Miss Gilreath explained. She has invited principals and seventh grade school teachers in all rural schools in the county to attend the meeting to be held in the superintendent's office at 7:30 o'clock.

WHERE DENVER FREIGHT CARS PILE UP, BURN

Twisted, broken steel and smouldering flames were all that was left of 16 Fort Worth and Denver freight cars when the above pictures were taken, after the cars had derailed and burned at Lelia Lake Wednesday night. Above is pictured two sections of the wreckage, showing how the cars were piled up, twisted and broken. The lower photo also shows huge piles of gravel dumped on the right-of-way. Railroad traffic was delayed between six and seven hours while the side track, at left of wreckage, was being cleared. Damages were estimated at over $16,000.

Seven Injured in Crash of Autos

Four Wolf Flat youths were seriously but not critically injured and three others sustained cuts and bruises in an automobile accident at Turkey late Friday night.

Woodrow, Delton, Glenn and Lewis Yarbrough, sons of Roy Yarbrough, of Wolf Flat, were the four receiving injuries of a more serious nature. Woodrow received a broken collar bone, while Delton, who was the driver of the car, had a finger severed in the wreckage. They received treatment at a Turkey hospital. Glenn and Lewis received emergency treatment, although their injuries were not severe.

The other three boys were only slightly injured. The accident occurred in the east section of Turkey at a street intersection on Highway 18. The automobile in which the seven youths were riding collided with a truck driven by John Lewis, of Memphis, who operates a truck for G. H. Garner of this city. Lewis was not injured. Both the car and truck were demolished.

Hamilton Escapes Huge Police Trap

MEMPHIS, Tenn., March 30.—Raymond Hamilton, brazen Texas gunman, eluded capture today as practically every federal and police officer in the south sought him in the government's latest "shoot to kill" man hunt.

Department of justice agents veiled their movements in secrecy but police officials felt that the desperado and his badly wounded gangster confederate left a cold trail since they disappeared from here yesterday after dumping two terrorized hostages in the heart of downtown Memphis.

Police believed the pair headed into Arkansas yesterday, possibly hoping to reach the Arkansas-Oklahoma hill country without further brushes with the law such as marked their wild ride through Mississippi Thursday night following the looting of the Prentiss Bank of $1,100. Two women companions believed with the bandits in the robbery are held here.

DISCUSS PLANS FOR PARK IN SECTION

Quitaque Association
Directors In Meeting at Floydada

Will the southern Panhandle have in state park wherein the people of this section may escape the blight of sandstorms?

This question was discussed at length Thursday in Floydada at a meeting of the Quitaque Canyon Park Association board of directors—the same group that attempted a short while ago to establish a park in beautiful Quitaque Canyon, only to be blocked by the owners of the land, Howard Prothers, of New Orleans and Philadelphia, who refused to give up any of their colorful holdings in the shadow of the cap rock, west of Memphis some 50 miles.

At the meeting Thursday several new sites were discussed, including spots designated as the Hall Creek site in the northeast part of Floyd County, the Tule Canyon site in southwestern Briscoe County southeast of Silverton, the Holmes Creek site in southeastern Briscoe County and the Stokes Ranch site in southwestern Motley County.

Forces of War, Peace Move in Europe Today

By Associated Press
Forces of war and forces of peace moved confusedly over Europe's face today, producing a new scare into the tense Italo-Ethiopian situation and inferentially drawing the United States into the Anglo-Russian conference at Moscow.

Ethiopia suddenly severed direct Italian negotiations, sent a note to the League of Nations, taking precautions meanwhile for the safety of foreigners in Addis-ababa, while Rome, denying rumors of war, said conciliation is the next step.

In Moscow, the Russian press launched what many believed to be a frank bid for United States co-operation in preservation of European peace.

ELECTION WILL BE HELD HERE TUESDAY

Action Follows Circulation of Petition Yesterday

J. A. Whaley yesterday was placed on the ballot in the city election here Tuesday as a candidate for mayor, and the four aldermen were named for re-election.

The names were placed on the ballot after petitions were circulated and signed by numerous citizens.

The aldermen placed on the ballot for re-election were C. W. Kinslow, Ward 1; J. E. Reed, Ward 2; T. H. Deaver, Ward 3; and N. E. Burk, Ward 4.

Last night these candidates were unopposed. If additional candidates are placed on the ballot for any of the positions, they must be sought by petition and entered early tomorrow morning, since the ballots will be printed tomorrow.

If the candidates are unopposed, the voting is expected to be extremely light, since there will be no doubt as to the outcome and interest will not be aroused.

Voters will cast their ballots by wards. All boxes will be stationed at the City Hall. Polls will be opened from 8 to 6 o'clock.

Memphis was without a candidate for mayor until late yesterday afternoon. With the announcement that Mayor Bascom E. Davenport declined to be a candidate for re-election, a group of citizens, wishing to assure the city of a capable, far-sighted and worthy administration, circulated the petition placing Mr. Whaley's name on the ballot.

Although Mr. Whaley has never been elected to the city office, he has served as mayor pro tem on more than one occasion and is well acquainted with city administration and its problems.

Owls To Open Season This Afternoon at Wellington

PRACTICE GAME STARTS PLAY FOR LOOP

Initial Contest Here Is Slated for Next Sunday Afternoon

The Memphis Owls journey to Wellington this afternoon for their first practice tilt of the year, preparing for their initial entry into an organized baseball league.

Manager Jack Boone plans to take a squad of about 17 players to Wellington. Probably every one of them will see action in the bout. Wellington also plans to use its complete line-up, as each manager is seeking to determine the ability of numerous prospective leaguers and to locate weaknesses.

To Return Game
On next Sunday, Wellington returns the visit to open the local season at Fair Park Stadium. The league season opens on April 14.

Before that time, local fans are expected to get a line-up on the chances of the Owls in the Western Division of the Red River Valley League. No one has any idea right now just how the Owls will stack up with the other nine. The team is composed partly of players who have seen action in these parts for a number of years, but several new faces also appear in the line-up. Too, it is impossible to determine the strength of opposing clubs until a little later in the season, but Wellington is likely to be one of the strongest.

In such a loop, in which only one game is played each week—on Sunday afternoon—a great deal depends upon two or three hurlers who can work in almost every tilt. Buck Whitfield, big righthander, who led the Owls to numerous victories early last season, will be one of the mound aces for the Owls. He is slated to start this afternoon.

Teamed with Whitfield, probably will be Clifford Stewart, another fast righthander well known locally, and one southpaw. Boone has not determined the latter candidate.

The Owls are expected to have plenty of hitting power, what with such players as Marcum, Stewart, Simms and Moore in the line-up, and others who are touted as excellent baseballers but whose exact ability is not known here. Two, McIntosh and "Chief", shortstop and third sacker, respectively, are believed to be of more than ordinary calibre and are expected to enhance the chances of the club considerably.

Dodgers Still Dodgers-- Circus of National Loop

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is another of a series of articles on the big league training camps. It tells of the prospects of the Brooklyn Dodgers.

By HARRY GRAYSON
(Sports Editor, NEA Service)
ORLANDO, Fla., March 30.—

I landed at Orlando with a great deal of apprehension. There were unmistakable signs late last season that the Brooklyn Dodgers were out to violate all the fine old traditions of Ebbets Field in 1935.

What would baseball do without its Daffiness Boys? But Casey Stengel quickly allayed our fears.

The Dodgers are still the Dodgers. Stengel got a new three-year contract and a substantial raise for finishing in sixth place.

That could happen only in Brooklyn.

"Casey Stengel belongs to the Brooklyn fans," said President McKeever, like a true Brooklynese. "He may have to do it without too much pitching or any other one thing, but he'll manage the Dodgers as long as I am president."

Brooklyn won more games in the National League than the pennant-gathering Detroit Tigers grabbed in the American during the last month and a half of the 1934 campaign. The stretch-burning St. Louis Cardinals copped only two or three more engagements than the Dodgers during the same period.

Stars Stud Daffy Roster
The Dodgers have one of the great right-hand pitchers of the business in Van Lingle Mungo. They possess one of the game's brilliant young shortstops in Linus Frey. Lon Koenneke established a major league fielding record with only two errors, both debatable, in center field. Ralph Boyle led senior loop flycatchers in assists, although limited to 120 contests.

With all this going on there appeared to be real danger of the Dodgers sacrificing their entertaining qualities for baseball.

What would the national game on the banks of the Gowanus be without Daffy Vances, Chick Fewsters, and Babe Hermans sliding into third base in a body, and Hermans spearing fly balls with their noggin's?

Stengel's cap was a bird cage during his playing days across the bridge. Casey is the noblest Dodger of them all—has been on and off since 1912. It was difficult to believe that he would do

NOT SO DAFFY

Casey Stengel, manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers, has something up his sleeve this year, as he intimates with that wink in the photo at lower left. Van Lingle Mungo, above, one of the greatest right-hand pitchers in the National League, is one of the aces Casey is counting on, and Stanley "Frenchy" Bordagaray, right, a young ball hawk brought up from the Pacific Coast League after being returned by the White Sox last season, is another.

NEW YORK, March 30.—How to keep eating and still reduce the waistline is divulged by Chick Meehan, football coach at Manhattan College. Here's his advice:
Ten times a day for ten days, either while walking or standing, throw back your shoulders, contract abdominal muscles as far as possible and take ten deep breaths slowly. Your feet should be spread in a square stance and hands placed behind your back.

TIGERS' INFIELD CLOUTING MAKES UP FOR WEAK OUTFIELD HITTING

LAKELAND, Fla., March 27.—Rounding the bases with the Detroit Tigers:

Mickey Cochrane refuses to worry about a comparatively light-hitting outfield when he has infielders who drive in runs as flycatchers are supposed to. Marv Owen was the only Detroit infielder who hit in less than 100 runs in 1934, and he swatted 96 across the plate. Seldom has any major league infielder equaled that performance. Hank Greenberg accounted for 139 markers, Charley Gehringer for 127, and Bill Rogell for 109.

The Tigers hope to have the last laugh on Dizzy Dean in the world series next fall. They can't forgive him for laughing at Greenberg after striking out the big first baseman in the final game of last autumn's show. Greenberg brought a group of his friends from the Bronx to a Broadway theater to see Dizzy and Daffy Dean last October, only to find Dizzy still guying him from the stage.

Gehringer is the hottest fan following the Detroit Red Wings, of the National Hockey League, but didn't have much to get excited about during the season just closed. George M. Cohan regards Rogell as the most under-rated shortstop in baseball. Cohan deserted the Giants with the death of John McGraw, by the way.

He finishes a theatrical tour in Atlanta, and plans to return to New York with the Yankees. The Tigers consider Ray Hayworth the best second-string catcher in the majors. The North Carolinian has acquired confidence under Cochrane. He is a splendid right-hand hitter against left-hand pitching.

Palm for Bridges
Firpo Marberry is one of the wealthier ball players. Mrs. Elton Hogsett says that her southern husband is not an Indian.

Coach Cy Perkins, who caught many a bum prowler in working 1500 games for the AAAAAA's while Connie Mack was conducting noble experiments, rates little Tommy Bridges among the hurling greats.

Schoolboy Rowe stands 6 feet 4 1/2 inches. The Arkansas is an inch taller than Greenberg. Most baseball men expect Greenberg to battle Lou Gehrig of the Yankees for the long-distance hitting championship of both big wheels. You wouldn't know Vic Sorrell, the bespectacled right-hander whom Cochrane and his coaches predict will stage a neat comeback. Cochrane is banking heavily on Elden Auker, who won 15 games after making his first start in June. Mike also points to the fact that Rowe was another who didn't get going until June last season.

General Crowder is the proprietor of a restaurant at Winston-Salem. The Tigers have an idea the Yankees will miss Babe Ruth, particularly in the early going. The Babe delivered not a few games and hit .330 in the first 75 engagements of 1934, during which the Yanks twice took the American League lead, and won 10 straight contests. Clet Morgan, the left-hand hitting outfielder who topped Texas League batsmen with .342, is a sweet hitter like Earl Averill of the Indians. Morgan is not Leonard, Ray Benge, and Johnny Babich, but I'll farm out Tremark if it takes all summer.

Yes, sir—The Dodgers are still the Dodgers.

Fair Fighters Take a Dive

Fighters taking a dive in the prize ring have given Fla., bathing beauties an idea for the novel sport picture. Boxing gloves are tied at the ends of long poles, and fence with each other until a stiff sock on the jaw sends them for a dive in the briny. The last one on her feet wins the course.

DO YOU REMEMBER

One Year Ago Today — Henry Picard, Charleston, S. C., golf pro, led going into the last round of the North and South Open championship at Pinehurst, N. C.
Five Years Ago Today — Paul Runyan won the North and South Open golf title at Pinehurst, N. C.

Ten Years Ago Today — Young Stribling defeated Tommy Loughran in a 10-round bout in San Francisco.

An extra-base hitter, however, and his fielding is questionable. He hit as many as 159 singles in 1934, 40 doubles, 11 triples, and only 6 home runs. For all his .342 average, he drove in only 87 runs. Cochrane intends to string along with Gerald Walker, realizing that he will be quite an outfielder if he ever settles down.

All-Round Goslin
Goose Goslin believes that his 20-year-old brother, Jim, eventually will crash the big show. He pitches, plays third base, and does outfielding chores in semi-professional circles around the Goslin home at Salem, N. J. Pete Fox has a mental complex that he cannot hit well until June. The Evansville, Ind., athlete hits around .210 until June 1, and about .340 thereafter, with the result that he wound up with a mark around the .285. Fox has rare judgment, a keen eye, and there is a fielder on defense. Luke Hamlin will be the result of breaking two places in an accident. No one knows whether it was his pitcher Clyde Paw up from Louisiana to be dubbed.

anything tending to make the citizens of Brooklyn take baseball seriously.

And good old Casey has no intention of letting his public down.

"The main show may not be as sidesplitting as it has been in years gone by, but the sideshows will be up to the old standard," explains Manager Stengel.

"Take Frenchy Bordagaray, for example. Bordagaray can out-talk everybody in baseball except Dizzy Dean and myself.

"Bordagaray has outrun race horses at county fairs in California, and is further qualified to be a Dodger. For instance, the last place Chicago White Sox returned him to the Pacific Coast League last June because he had never hit under that figure anywhere.

Added Attraction
"We also have the smallest outfielder in captivity, and offer him to the public at one and the same price. He is Nick Tremark, 5 feet 5, and, believe it or suspect me of fibbing, too small to be farmed out.

"We sent Tremark to Buffalo last summer, and Ray Schalk, who isn't so large himself, shipped him back. Schalk couldn't believe that Nick was big enough to play ball even after he hit a home run.

"Then we sent Tremark to a New York-Pennsylvania League outfit managed by Elmer Yoter, who once played third base for Cleveland. Yoter is a little, bald-headed bloke, but he wouldn't even give Tremark a uniform.

"When Tremark returned to Brooklyn, there was a new cop at the players' gate. The cop mistook Nick for one of the neighbor's children, and refused him admittance.
"Tremark rushed up to Business Manager Bob Quinn in high dudgeon, and hit the rafters when old Bob failed to recognize him out of uniform.

In spite of this fact, she has been given a place of birth. It is generally held that the dance originated in the state of Jalisco and called the Jarabe Tapati.

One watches with interest the intricate steps of the waltz and the Argentine thrills to the Argentine music. The colorful dances of Spain, the Jarabe Tapatio, which fascinates the mind's eye, one can almost feel in a real sense intoxicated by the music and the Sonoritas, the Jarabe Tapatio, which was ordered direct from Mexico City and is the Mexican national dance.

College Girls To Have Part On Program

One of the many entertaining features of the Junior Carnival, which is to be held in the High School Monday, will be the appearance of five guest entertainers from W. T. S. T. College.

These five talented girls, Hazel Kirby, Mary Louise Mulker, Polyanna Pitts, Royce Park, and Frances Holman, will be under the direction of Mrs. Wallace O'Keefe, Physical Education instructor at W. T. S. T. C. These entertainers will be accompanied by Miss Frances Ubery, of the Music Dept. George Brewer will also accompany the group, and act as stage manager for the Carnival.

The five girls are among the best dancers in the college. They will appear in the Nighthawk Club, which will open immediately following the play. These girls will do soft-shoe and chorus numbers, waltzes, and tap dances.

It is believed that these entertainers will add greatly to the entertainment value of the Carnival, and everyone who desires an enjoyable evening is urged to attend.

Spanish, American Music Is Featured

At the Junior night club on Monday evening, visitors will be entertained by music—some of typical Spanish nature, and others of the American type.

An orchestra composed of G. W. Smith, saxophone, Iris Bradshaw, violin, J. C. Webster, drums, Bob Hamilton, cornet, and Billy Hamilton, piano, will take part in the entertainment of the evening. Their numbers will include the following: "Alla en el Rancho Grande", "La paloma", "I Only Have Eyes For You" and "El Jarabe Tapatio", which was ordered direct from Mexico City and is the Mexican national dance.

While real Spanish food is being served, visitors will be entertained by Spanish dances and the music of the orchestra. Much time and attention has been spent on the preparation of these musical numbers by members of the orchestra.

When Betty finally finishes and gives Teddy a chance to wash, Johnny comes to tell them that his dress suit has not come. He plans to wear Teddy's suit and talks in such a way that Teddy can't refuse. Then Teddy pretends that maybe Johnny's suit has been sent to another address in order that Johnny will put his suit down for a moment. When Johnny returns, angry at what Teddy has done, Teddy is fully dressed, ready to go. Then—

But come and see for yourself the ending of the preparation for this wedding. You will get a surprise, and like it!

The characters for this play were selected from the Junior class, each one being well suited to his part. Altogether the play is satisfactory, entertaining throughout, short enough to be interesting, long enough to be valuable as entertainment, and the whole filled with comical situations.

'Plastered' Car Uses Newspaper Ads

One of the most unusual and dramatic ways ever conceived to exploit the use of newspaper advertising has been adopted by the Continental Oil Company. A novel contest has been inaugurated whereby during the coming Spring months cars and trucks will be seen on the streets and highways of some 40 states plastered in hodge-podge compelling fashion with reprints of Continental's newspaper advertisements.

In addition to the circulation of ten million that Continental Oil Company gets for its advertising by using 1,363 daily and weekly newspapers, Continental's advertisements through this unique stunt will do double duty this Spring.

The unique appearance of Continental cars and trucks not only serves to call attention to the Conoco campaign now running in newspapers, but also reminds Conoco salesmen of the tremendous number of car owners who read about Conoco products throughout the year in their newspapers.

It is estimated that more than 2,000 cars and trucks will participate in the stunt. Aside from these company-owned and operated vehicles, it is expected that a good percentage of the 22,000 Conoco dealers will likewise participate.

Continental is one of the country's largest users of newspaper advertising and gives this medium a large share of the credit in achieving an increase of 60.4% in sales of Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil since April, 1934.

'Special Purpose Life Insurance'

By C. F. O'Donnell, President, Southwestern Life Insurance Company

Since 1928 one hundred billion dollars of life insurance has lapsed or otherwise terminated in the United States. This is the amount of life insurance that was not continued until death or until maturity of the endowment policies. The lapse figure can be compared with the amount of life insurance which is now in force in the United States which amounts to ninety-eight billion dollars. The comparison suggests the possibility that people might use more care in buying life insurance.

Life insurance companies have a selfish purpose in trying to reduce the high lapsation of life insurance. It is also true that a reduction in the lapses of life insurance would be beneficial for the insurance buying public.

Life insurance companies have found out that insurance which is bought for specific purposes stays in force better than life insurance which is bought without a specific purpose. Life insurance may be designed for three principal purposes:

- 1. To provide an income to a family during the period which is necessary for the rehabilitation of the family following the removal from the family circle of the principal income producer.
2. To provide a monthly life income for a designated person. This designated person may be the widow of the insurance buyer, or the life income may be for the insurance buyer if the insurance buyer lives beyond the working years of life.
3. To provide educational funds for the higher education of children.

The Southwestern Life Insurance Company reports that during the last six years there has been a tenfold increase in the use of life insurance for special purposes.

The argument for special purpose life insurance is not only that it will reduce the lapses of life insurance but also that it will conserve the proceeds of life insurance that have been accumulated from savings resulting from the unselfish sacrifices of many

By Dan Thomas

A MILLION-DOLLAR bet soon is to be decided by the movie-going public of the entire world. This is the amount which has been gambled by Hollywood film producers on what kind of reception the public will accord screen versions of old literary classics.

Marking the completion of the most gigantic task since the advent of talking pictures, "David Copperfield" now is ready for Mr. and Mrs. Public. And Hollywood is sitting back on its haunches to see what will happen. Will it be received with the same enthusiasm that greeted "Little Women" a year ago, or will theater patrons turn across the street to see a modern story flashed upon the silver screen?

That is the prime question with which our film generals now are concerned. And the answer is of vital importance, not only to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer executives who invested a million dollars in the picture, but to every producer in the movie industry. The success or failure of this production will determine the course they should follow during 1935 and perhaps for several years to come. From the frequency with which nickels, dimes and quarters trickle into the box office will come the answer as to whether movie-goers want classics for their fare.

David O. Selznick, producer of "Little Women" and "David Copperfield," believes the public does want them . . . provided they are handled as classics.

"I am firmly convinced that the public finally has decided to accept the classics for its screen entertainment," he declares. "This, I believe, has been brought about through the exhaustion by producers of almost every possible slant on the few basic sex and other modern situations in current films.

"I DO not for a minute pretend that the public isn't interested in modern and original stories. Whenever a modern story comes along that can give an audience something new, it will be just as successful as in the old days when everything was new. However, since the hope of getting such new and modern stories in any quantity is very remote, producers may be grateful for the classics."

It was in the fall of 1933 that Selznick definitely made up his mind to tackle the monumental task of bringing "David Copperfield" to the screen—monumental because, being the most popular of all Charles Dickens' novels, it has been read by millions who revere it and regard its characters almost in the light of living persons.

Although there is no accurate record on the sales of this book, they are known to run into the millions. That means that Dickens lovers would scream protests from the four corners of the earth, should the slightest change be made in transferring this novel to the silver screen.

His decision once made, Selznick lost no time in dispatching a telegram to the studio legal department in New York asking it to look into the availability of the screen rights.

Learning that "David Copperfield" now is in the public domain, all copyrights having expired, Selznick immediately set to work making preparations for the filming of the classic, preparations which were to consume a year's time before actual shooting of the picture could get under way.

THE story of what transpired during the year prior to the actual shooting of this widely read novel is equally as fascinating, if not more so, than that of the filming itself. Preparation of a scenario, the tremendous amount of research necessary to ensure authentic settings, the long search for a cast that would resemble Dickens' characters, and be able to enact them, comprise a story almost as interesting as the novel itself.

Although it was essential that the novel be condensed to fit the maximum footage allowed in any film, Selznick was determined that none of Dickens' flavor or spirit be lost. He made a trip to England, accompanied by George Cukor, director, and Howard Estabrook, scenarist.

DAVID COPPERFIELD Goes HOLLYWOOD

A bright interlude in the wanderings of David Copperfield, shown below, wherein little Freddie Bartholomew, as David, is bathed by Edna May Oliver, as Aunt Betsey, and Renee Gaad, as Janet, the maid, while Lennox Pawle, as Dick, blows bubbles for the boy's amusement.

Together the trio visited all of the Dickensian shrines. They followed the wanderings of David, as set forth in the novel, from the time he was sent down to London by his cruel stepfather right through to his middle age.

While in England, Selznick also managed to obtain the services of Hugh Walpole, prominent British author and a vice president of the International Dickens Fellowship. Walpole returned to Hollywood to act as dialogue adapter and give whatever other assistance he could in preparing the screen play. Together he and Estabrook turned out seven scripts before one was pronounced acceptable.

Only 68 of Dickens' original 92 characters remained, but those who had been eliminated were minor personalities who really played no part in furthering the story. The actual story of David, from before his birth, through his unhappy childhood, his experiences in London, his running away to Dover, his life with Aunt Betsey and the Wickfields, his love affair and subsequent marriage to Dora, her death, and realization of his love for Agnes, is followed closely.

WHILE preparation was going forward on the story, the studio research department was leaving no stone unturned in its attempt to learn everything pertaining to the period and locales in which this novel is laid. With scores of persons working on both sides of the Atlantic, an entire studio staff was kept busy compiling and filing information as it poured in.

One photographer spent eight months taking pictures of everything which might have possible value in keeping every phase of the picture authentic. Musty interiors of old houses, fantastic wall paper, old fireplaces, rare books, locales mentioned in the book, paintings and scores of other objects became marks for his camera. In all, some 73,000 photographs were sent back to the studio to be filed for reference.

In addition, hundreds of volumes of old books containing illustrations of costumes, people, buildings and furniture of the Dickens era were brought and shipped back to the studio. Among these books, 219 in all, were original copies of three books used extensively by David in the novel. Printed in ancient script, they included a geography, an English grammar and a quaint book named "The Instructor, or Young Man's Best Companion."

As soon as sufficient information and photographs had been received by the studio, work was started on the sets and costumes. Even the gigantic M-G-M studio being too small to hold the 79 sets necessary for this picture, they were constructed in various spots within a radius of 70 miles from Hollywood. Most important among these sets were those of London streets of 1810, the Wickfield home, Blunderstone Rookery, Aunt Betsey's home on the cliffs of Dover and the seaside pier from which the Micawber family embarked for Australia.

Transferring the Dickens classic to the screen was a man-sized job ---and one of the most interesting ever undertaken by the film mog-

ONCE construction of the sets was under way and the wardrobe department had started making the necessary costumes, Selznick and his staff turned their attention to engaging the proper cast for the picture. From the moment it first was an-

Lionel Barrymore was cast as gotty, Edna May Oliver as Aunt Stone as Mr. Wickfield, Ma Agnes, Roland Young as Uriah, reen O'Sullivan as Dora, Elizabeth the young Mrs. Copperfield, Ba as Mr. Murdstone, Hugh Will Steerforth, Herbert Mundin as B Cadell as Mrs. Micawber, Lennox Mr. Dick, Elsa Lanchester as C Una O'Connor as Mrs. Gummidge.

However, more trouble was experienced finding the right persons for Mr. Micawber, the Vicar of Blundstone and David, both and man. Finally Hugh Walpole consented to play the role of the Vicar. Charles Laughton, though he did not feel quite right for the part, permitted himself to be cast as Micawber. Then Director George Cukor found Frank Lawton, young British actor, playing in "The Wind and Rain" on the New York stage. Lawton was arranged immediately. Lawton was signed to portray grown-up David.

That left only the boy David to be found. This presented a real problem. Studio scouts searched throughout the United States, Canada and England for the right youth. Suddenly, one morning, 10-year-old Freddie Bartholomew appeared at the studio.

Having done a few things on the London stage, he had been brought to Hollywood by his agent on the chance of getting the part. Although Selznick recognized him as a boy for whom he had been searching, but exhaustive tests were made and the lad finally was signed.

BY this time nearly $500,000 ready had been spent, including the cost of sets constructed, and not a foot of film had been shot. However, everything now was ready, so on March 11, Cukor issued the first order to "roll over."

Everything moved smoothly for a day, but on the second trouble developed. Try as he would, Laughton could not feel at ease in the role of Mr. Micawber, so he asked to be released. "I can't do justice to the part," he said.

Two days later W. C. Fields stepped into the role and production started once more. Only once did a really upsetting incident occur. That was when Freddie Bartholomew turned from lunch one noon minus a few minutes and was pressed into a motorcycle. A motorcycle was used and Freddie was rushed to a dentist. Two days later he was back at the studio with a perfect smile.

A classic romance that has lived through almost a century is that between David and Agnes, two cherished Dickens characters, re-enacted in the new movie, "David Copperfield," by Frank Lawton and Madge Evans, as shown above.

nounced that "David Copperfield" was to be made, thousands of letters had poured into the studio suggesting various players for the leading roles. Every one of these letters was filed for reference and many of the suggestions were followed.

For the most part little difficulty was experienced in lining up the proper players.

the house and suddenly caught her breath with a throbbing intake of quick hope.

There was a separate building at the back, the lower floor of which was used as a storage place for the gardener's tools. The upper floor was occupied, and she remembered hearing someone say it was where the chauffeur had his quarters.

Lights glowed from the windows of the upper room, and Millicent suddenly remembered Norman had told her Jarvis Happ had commissioned his chauffeur to shadow the woman in the black ermine coat when next she came to the house.

Harry Felding, then, must have been the one who drove that cabriolet. He had shadowed the woman in the black ermine coat, and doubtless knew where she lived. Perhaps Felding would give her the information. Perhaps he could let her into the house or find some place where she could spend the night—some place where she could divest herself of her wet garments.

She crossed the strip of yard, climbed the stairs which led to the upper room. Her knuckles knocked gently against the door. When there was no answer she knocked more loudly, and then, still receiving no response, she twisted the knob of the door. The door was unlocked. She opened it and took a step through the doorway into the room.

The light streamed upon her features. For a moment her eyes were dazzled by the brilliance. Then they came to focus upon the room.

A startled scream was wrung from her pallid lips as she which met her eyes. (To Be Continued)

BEGIN HERE TODAY MILLICENT GRAVES, secretary to GEORGE DRIMGOLD, finds her employer in his office dead. In panic she rushes away and registers at a hotel under an assumed name.

JARVIS HAPP, distinguished-looking stranger, recognizes Millicent and offers to help her. He sends her to a beauty parlor where she is transformed into a brunette. Happ takes her home, introduces her as his secretary. His son, NORMAN HAPP, warns Millicent against his stepbrother, ROBERT CAISE, and tells her a mysterious woman in black ermine has some power over his stepmother.

Millicent falls asleep. A noise awakens her and she finds a note under her door reading, "The woman in black ermine is here." Millicent dresses, sees the woman in black drive away in a sedan. Millicent, in the garage, hears a noise and the electric lights flash on.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XIII

Millicent, holding herself flat against the floor boards of the automobile, trying to make herself as nearly invisible as possible, held her breath and listened.

She heard someone moving about, heard the sound of a starting motor whirring into throbbing life. Then a car swept out in a streak of fast motion. She heard the clash of gears as someone shifted hurriedly from reverse to low, then the roar of the motor and the car swept on down the driveway.

Lights were still on in the garage, but Millicent took a chance on discovery to find out who had taken out that car.

She jumped to the cement floor of the garage, ran to the door and looked down the driveway.

A cabriolet, very-racy and stylish, which had been in the garage and which she had intuitively placed as belonging to Norman Happ, was gliding smoothly down the driveway. As it turned into the street Millicent noticed that it was running without lights.

Evidently someone else had decided to follow the woman in the black ermine coat.

Millicent ran to the two remaining cars—a big sedan and a coupe. There were ignition keys in the coupe, and she jumped behind the wheel, turned the switch and pressed the starter. The motor throbbed to life.

So nervous with excitement that her hands were trembling, Millicent backed the car out of the garage, put it in gear and raced out of the driveway.

After she hit the street she ran for several blocks without lights, trying to keep the cabriolet ahead of her in view, but she was unable to do so and finally switched on the lights.

With the headlights she was able to pick up the speeding cabriolet. Occasionally the tail light reflected a red gleam, or her headlights glittered back in dazzling brilliance from the windshield. Once or twice she glimpsed the big sedan ahead, which the cabriolet was undoubtedly following.

The cars were traveling at high speed and Millicent was forced to use all of her skill as a driver to keep in the procession. She wondered if the driver of the cabriolet suspected that she was following him, wondered if that driver were, perhaps, Norman Happ. With the thought she felt once more that strange pounding of the pulse in her temple, a sudden surge of emotion which seemed to choke up her blood stream.

Whether he knew he was being pursued or not, the driver of the cabriolet did not deviate from his course.

Suddenly Millicent caught her breath with a gasp of apprehension.

The motor coughed, sputtered, died, coughed to life again, ran smoothly, then missed and stopped.

She depressed the throttle and got no results. She pulled out the choke and, for a moment, the car responded. Then once more it died. Her eyes rested apprehensively on the gasoline gauge. It showed that the tank was empty.

The car was barely moving now, and Millicent kicked out the clutch and piloted the car into the curb. The big sedan and the speeding cabriolet had swept on out of sight.

Millicent was so mad she could have cried with sheer anger. The idea of leaving a car in a garage with an empty gasoline tank—of all the fool things for a person to do...! She supposed that would be Robert Caise, brilliant, irresponsible, flighty. She looked at the registration certificate and found her surmise had been right. The car was registered in the name of Robert Caise.

Millicent found herself thinking that Norman Happ never would have done anything like that. Norman Happ had a sense of responsibility. His car would have been filled with gas, oil and water. The tires would have been in perfect condition—but the ignition key wouldn't have been in the lock. The very break that gave her an opportunity to use the car in the first place was in one way directly connected with her inability to accomplish anything with it after she had borrowed it.

Millicent switched off the lights, hesitated a moment, then locked the car and slipped the key container into the pocket of her fur coat.

It was a leather key container and there were seven or eight keys or it.

"Well," she said to herself, "I presume I've got to get back, and I guess there's no way for me to go except to walk."

There were no cabs cruising along these streets and, even had she encountered one she had no money with which to pay for it.

With dogged determination she started walking back down the deserted avenue, her little heels click-clacking spiritedly upon the echoing cement.

Rain fell intermittently—at times in hissing torrents, at times in a cold drizzle. Millicent's skirt, ankles and shoes were soaking wet. Her fur coat glistened with moisture.

At length, weary, tired and chilled, she saw the big house looming before her. It was now only about 75 yards away and so tired was she that she was counting the steps.

Automobile headlights danced along the wet pavement, sending reflections shivering against the sides of the building. Instinctively she stepped to one side, flattening herself against a wrought-iron fence.

The machine, a cabriolet, passed her, this time running with lights. She could see the form of the driver, noticed that the collar of his overcoat was turned up around his neck and a soft felt hat pulled low on his forehead.

She heard the hiss of the tires on the wet pavement, then saw the red lights on the rear glare into brilliance as the driver applied brakes. The car swung wide for a turn and entered the driveway of Jarvis Happ's house.

Millicent forgot that she was tired. Whoever had followed the woman in the ermine coat had returned, and she wanted to talk with him. She stepped up her steps.

She was still in the driveway when she heard the sliding doors of the garage roll shut. After that there was no sound save that of her own feet on the wet driveway. She reached the garage and found the door was closed and locked. She looked up at the house. It was dark and somber, except for the dull brilliance of the hall windows in which the night lights were still burning.

It was then that Millicent realized the full extent of her predicament. She was locked out. It would be necessary to arouse someone in the household in order to enter the house.

She tried the garage door once more, then walked wearily around the house, wet feet squishing moisture, at every step. She tried a side door. It, too, was locked. She tried the front door with no more success.

A wicker chair offered her aching feet some respite, and she dropped wearily into it, surveying the gloomy darkness of the porch, listening to the steady drip, drip of the rain as it dropped down from the eaves of the porch. She sat there for several minutes and then realized that she was taking cold. Somehow she must effect an entrance to the house.

She had circled around one side of the house. She wondered whether, perhaps, there might be a door on the other side. She was cold and cramped now, and fully appreciated the extent of her predicament. She walked around the house. There was one door and she tried it, but it, too, was locked. She came to the back of

Baptist WMS Has Monthly Social Meeting

"Lifting the Banner Through Christian Education" was presented in an unusual and comprehensive manner Monday afternoon when the Baptist W. M. S. enjoyed the monthly social meeting held in the Educational building at 3 o'clock.

Preceding the program a group of Sunbeams entered and gave quotations on "Christian Education in American Life" by Woodrow Wilson. Senator Morris Shepherd and Senator George. The leader, Mrs. R. C. Parks, took charge of the meeting which was opened with song and scripture reading. Commenting on the topic, Mrs. Parks pointed out that Christian education has an unmeasured influence on the forming of American ideals of life and the building of American civilization.

Mrs. W. Wilson, costumed in the pioneer style, brought to her listeners an enchanting story of pioneer Baptist education. This was followed with a prayer given by Mrs. George Thompson, giving thanks for the contribution of Christian education to American life.

Mrs. Henderson Smith, representing the Baptist Students Union, in college cap and gown, made an instructive talk on college Y. W. A.

Mrs. O. K. Webb's subject was "Baptist Schools in America," presenting some very interesting facts in regard to Baptist schools in America. Continuing the subject, Mr. W. W. Williamson, dressed in the style of the nineties, talked on education in foreign fields. Mrs. W. L. Wheat took her hearers on an imaginary trip to visit the four home mission schools fostered by the home mission board.

Mrs. Joe Chitwood made an informative talk on "Trained Leaders." The program was closed with a prayer given by the president, Mrs. Byron Baldwin, after which refreshments were served to 35 ladies by the hostesses, Mrs. E. H. Wherry, Mrs. H. H. Lindsey, Mrs. W. P. WE'RE BECOMING LAND OF RENTERS

A SITUATION which should cause congressmen and state legislators to sit up and think a bit about the future, if they are at all interested, has just been brought to our attention by a few statistics.

America is getting away from the "fine old tradition of the typical American as a sturdy, independent yeoman, living happy and secure under his own vine and fig tree." The average citizen is forsaking his own "fig tree" to make his home where some one else must bear the expense of pruning.

The census of 1930 shows that 52 per cent of the American people, both urban and rural, have not a cent of ownership in the land on which they live or the houses that shelter them. In addition, hundreds of homes are mortgaged beyond hope of redemption.

The first farm census, taken in 1880, showed that only 25 per cent of the farmers were tenants. By 1920 the figure had grown to 38 per cent, and in the next decade rose to 43 per cent. There is no telling how much higher it has gone since 1930.

Who is gaining possession of the farm land? Why is it that farmers are unable to hold on to their farms? Or do not want to keep them? How is this situation going to be remedied to keep us from finally returning to serfdom?

The farm problem is more baffling than the city question. No doubt the farmers are partly to blame. They mortgaged their homes and crops in order to buy automobiles; rented their lands and moved to town. But placing the blame does not solve the problem.

In the cities and towns, one thing alone seems to stand in the way of home ownership and to increase the demand for "rent houses". That is the usual expense attached to the owning of a home. Utilities rates are so high and taxes so burdening that to the average young couple owning a home—just a modest house sitting in the center of a small, out-of-the-way lot—is out of the question.

This is a tide that should be turned as quickly as possible. The government seems to be the only agency that can cope with the situation. Unless it sees the trend and takes steps to alter cases, America may eventually become a land of poorly constructed, dull, unkempt houses—rented homes.

LITTLE NEEDED TO ROUSE MOB SPIRIT

THE human race has to cope with many enemies in its long struggle to work out a scheme for peaceful living, but the greatest enemy of all is the mob.

For a perfect picture of the way the mob acts, consider the riot that swept up and down the streets of New York's Harlem the other day.

A colored boy tried to pinch a 10-cent knife from a store counter. A floor-walker collared him and the boy, naturally enough, set up a holler. An excitable woman saw and heard just enough to touch off her motor reactions, and she ran out into the street yelling that the boy had been killed.

Up and down the streets went the cry. Out of pool-rooms, lunchrooms, and workshops came angry men, milling in the streets, yelling, looking for someone to fight, afraid, suspicious, and angry. A crowd of a thousand men and women swept into the store, turning things upside down, breaking things, yelling, hitting, fighting.

Police reserves came, by the hundreds. There were dozens of fights. Scores of men were cut, beaten, or slugged. More than a hundred were arrested. Thousands of dollars' damage was done to property.

And the juvenile knife-stealer who unintentionally started it all managed to jerk away from his captors during the melee and vanished, utterly unharmed.

You could search the world over without finding a better example than this of the blind, panicky insanity of the mob spirit. Here was a riot of major proportions, an ugly welter of fights that spread all across a populous section of a great city—and all for what?

Not one of the rioters knew. They could not possibly have hoped to know. It started, literally, from nothing at all; and because men and women were jittery, and gave way to the combined emotions of anger and fear, there was merry Ned to pay.

Now you don't need to think very hard to draw the needed moral from all this. The mob spirit that can seize a few thousand people in one city is the same spirit that can and frequently does seize whole nations, when hatred and panic get together.

HEALTH

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygeia, the Health Magazine

Blood is the most important material in your body. Not only must your tissues be supplied with blood, but the blood must be sufficient in amount, contain enough oxygen, and carry enough antistances to infection to keep the body free from disease.

Because of this, you should consider the circulation in planning any program of hygiene. For instance, poor posture crowds the heart by adding the pressure of the chest wall and that of the organs to the burden which the heart has to bear, and in this way poor posture is bad for the circulation. Insufficient exercise results in poor muscle tone and poor muscle tone increases the burden of the heart, because it results in congestion in the tissues.

The heart must be a well-functioning organ or it cannot propel the blood in circulation. When it weakens in its work, fluid accumulates, congestion increases, and the burden becomes increasingly great.

One of the first signs of a deficiency in the blood is appearance of anemia. This means that the blood doesn't contain enough red blood cells and hemoglobin, or red coloring matter, or else that certain portions of the body are not sufficiently supplied with blood.

One of the most common causes of anemia is the loss of a good deal of blood from the body following a wound, or disturbance of the periodic functions in women. The blood cells also are destroyed by chronic infections and by invasion of parasites such as occur in malaria. There may also be a failure in the diet of substances necessary to stimulate formation of red blood cells.

When any part of the body becomes suddenly white, it is a sign that the blood vessels have become constricted and that the blood is not going suitably to that part. If a sudden stoppage of the flow of blood to the brain occurs, dizziness and faintness occur, and then loss of consciousness.

TEN YEARS WITHOUT LENIN

The Tombs of Lenin at Moscow

No country ever before glorified a man in postage as has Soviet Russia in one of its latest issues. Usually a country's hero is portrayed on one particular stamp, but Nicolai Lenin, former dictator of Russia, is presented in a series of six stamps on the tenth anniversary of his death. These stamps reveal six stages of the man's life, from childhood up, ending with one illustrating both Lenin and Stalin, his successor.

The U. S. S. R. has named this issue "Ten Years Without Lenin," commemorating the decennial of the man's death in 1924. During his dictatorship Lenin had refused to permit his portrait on a postage stamp.

To build up proper blood, certain substances are important. In the diet, liver and lamb kidneys are essential, because these stimulate the formation of red blood cells better than almost any other foods. An extract which is known to have this power has also been prepared from the wall of the stomach.

Iron is of exceeding importance as a drug for overcoming various forms of anemia and is especially necessary in development of the red coloring matter in the blood. The vitamins also are known to be useful.

Finally, one of the most significant features of proper formation and maintenance of a good blood supply is rest. In fact, many of the leading authorities emphasize a great deal of rest in bed as the most significant factor in overcoming anemias.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

British Envoy and U. S. Bank in Tight Spot on Munitions Probe . . . 1936 Candidates Hot on Job . . . Inside of Switch on Work-Relief Vote Bared.

WASHINGTON, March 30.—Pity the poor British ambassador! The specter of an imminent new European war and ghosts of the last great world conflict are worrying him simultaneously.

Investigators for the Senate Munitions Committee are closing in on the House of Morgan, chief wartime bankers and agents for England in this country. Certain committee members suspect that international bankers, their loans undangered by threat of allied defeat, were a factor in getting us into war with Germany.

The investigators began by approaching the "small fry." They sought wartime records of a big, nationally known New York bank, one of the British government's minor fiscal agents.

The big bank stalled. It took the matter up with Britain's embassy here.

Sir Ronald Lindsay, the big six-foot-six ambassador, stormed down to the State Department for a secret huddle with Secretary Hull. He protested vehemently.

The State Department has advised the committee of the protest, but has brought no pressure to stop its activity. The bank will capitulate—or there'll be a hot, interesting fight.

Of course if the smaller bank can avert inspection of its files, so can the Morgan firm. And senators will still be left guessing as to what extent, if any, foreign governments pumped in war propaganda through their American bankers.

So many yarns have been told to explain the switch of certain senators—especially concerning Bob Wagner and Bob LaFollette and usually reflecting on their good faith—from aye to nay on the McCarran "prevailing wage" amendment to the works bill that it's in order to tell the inside story.

The amendment passed Feb. 21, by a one-vote margin, made possible by an absurd combination of progressives, who wanted the president's next year four billion dollar work-relief program with the assurance that its proposed subsistence wages wouldn't break down wage rates in private industry, and conservatives—mostly Republicans—who hoped to wreck the program.

Four men who had voted for the amendment—Black, Wagner, and Costigan, Democrats, and LaFollette, Progressive—went into secret conference. They agreed it was vital to pass the bill, that they had voted in concert with enemies of labor

The double variety, Golden Clean, created a sensation when it first appeared, and double flowered varieties can now be obtained in a wide range of colors and types are now resistant to wilt.

Similarly other annuals are constantly being improved. Snapdragons, for example, may now be obtained in varieties that are resistant to snapper rust, and China asters in a wide range of colors and types are now resistant to wilt.

A very fine, yellow cosmos is on the market, and the feathery daintiness of this plant in the white, crimson and pink varieties makes it excellent cutting material. Improvements in the old-fashioned zinnia and marigold also are noteworthy.

TEXAS IN LEAD IN CORN-HOG PERCENTAGE

Supplements Mailed To Washington Yesterday

COLLEGE STATION, March 30.—Texas is the first state in the United States to report as many corn-hog applications signed in 1934, according to E. M. Regenbrecht, Extension swine husbandman. Thirty-three thousand applications have been signed to date and more will be signed before the closing date of April 1. Of this number, 3000 of the 1935 signers did not take part in the 1934 program, Regenbrecht said.

Young county has completed tabulating and adjusting final contracts. These contracts are now before the State Review Board for final checking and will then be sent to Washington. Young County is the first county in the state to reach the Review Board.

Disbursement of the third and final instalment of benefit payments due under the 1934 corn-hog contracts began last week. Claude R. Wickard, chief of the corn-hog section in Washington, has announced. A total of $905,810.22 was disbursed in the first set of checks sent out.

The balance of the final payment of approximately $80,000,000 representing the last two-fifths of the total hog adjustment payment will be distributed as rapidly as possible, Mr. Wickard said. He pointed out, however, that before final payment can be made to a producer, his pro rata share of the local administrative expenses pertaining to the hog part of the contract must be deducted.

"Therefore the speed with which checks can be sent to a county will depend upon the receipt of the certifications of total administrative expenses from the county control association. Benefit payment checks cannot be issued until these expense certifications are received and audited," he said.

CLEANLINESS IN HANDLING OF MILK AND CREAM

BY BYRON A. BASSEL, State Department of Agriculture, J. E. McDonald, Commissioner

The importance of keeping all food products as clean as possible is universally recognized, and this applies particularly to milk and cream, as either of these affords one of the best media for the development of bacteria, or germs, which are ever present in the milk. For that reason it is absolutely essential that any utensil or receptacle which is used in handling milk be absolutely clean.

All utensils such as milk pail, strainer, separator, and holding can should be thoroughly cleaned after each use with a stiff bristle brush and an alkali washing powder. Soap and rags should never be used on a piece of dairy equipment, as they will inevitably leave a "dish rag" flavor and odor. The soap forms a greasy film on all of the utensils and this film will give an off flavor to the milk which is placed in that utensil. Rags used either by themselves, or with soap soon develop an old and rancid smell, and when used for wiping the pieces of equipment leave that particular odor thereon. After scrubbing with brush and washing powder a plentiful use of boiling water is necessary to finish the cleaning and to insure sterilization. After using boiling water the cans, pails, etc., should be stored upside down in the sun, but protected from dust, dirt, etc., because the sun is a good sterilizing agent. Then before using any of the equipment again it should be rinsed with cold water to remove any dust which might have settled in it.

In the above paragraph the strainer was mentioned, and should have further discussion. The best type of strainer to use is the one with the perforated bottom using a cotton disc for the filtering surface. These discs should be used but once and discarded, thus obviating the use of a rag which is used over and over again. Rags should never be used for straining because they do not filter efficiently, and because it is extremely difficult to wash and sterilize them. These cotton pads for use with the type of strainer mentioned above cost but very little, approximately 1-3 of a cent apiece, and the strainer itself is available at a cost of around $1.00. Considering the small cost, and the amount of good which it will do, it should be in use on every dairy farm in the state. There are a few pieces of equipment which we recommend to be used, and this is one of them, as it will go further in insuring high quality milk and cream than any other.

In cleaning the separator it is important that the separator be taken down and every part scrubbed with the brush and washing powder and then scalded with boiling water. The cleaning of the separator is very important for two reasons: first, an unclean separator will not separate efficiently causing a loss of milk which was left from the previous skimming will have developed to the point of causing a bad off flavor and odor, and of contaminating the fresh milk and cream which passes through. Therefore, you are losing money in two ways by skimming in an unclean separator—by the loss of fat in the skim milk, and by the lower quality product caused by off flavors and gross contamination with bacteria.

In discussing cleanliness of equipment the physical condition of that equipment should not be overlooked. Utensils or cans having rough or corroded surfaces should not be used as it is impossible to completely clean these rough surfaces. Also, all seams in the utensils should be flush, that is, the seams should be filled with solder so that a crevice will not exist which will hide particles of milk or moisture containing bacteria. It is important that all pieces of equipment afford a smooth surface which can be easily and completely cleaned.

The next article of this series will discuss cooling of cream on the farm and will appear in this paper in the near future.

Over 3,000 Acres In Oldham County Terraced in Year

VEGA, March 30.—More than 3,000 acres of land in Oldham County were terraced during the past winter in an effort to prevent wind erosion, according to J. F. Ford, county agricultural agent. Other methods of control consist of listing, drilling, and plowing.

Continued crop destruction by wind erosion constitutes one of the major problems of agricultural interests in this section of Texas. In many instances this year's wheat crops which are underlain by sufficient moisture to carry the crops for weeks are being destroyed by scouring top soil, the county agricultural agent reports.

SUB-IRRIGATION GAINS FAVOR IN COUNTY

Several Farmers Are Placing Tile in Gardens

Considerable local interest is being shown in sub-irrigation for gardens by many farmers. Several farmers have already made their tile and laid them in the garden. These tiles may be made at home by and member of the family at a cost of about one cent per tile. One sack of cement will make approximately 120 tiles.

The only ingredients needed are cement and sand, approximately one part of cement to four parts of sand are used in making the tile.

The tile furnishes a means of using "gyp" water in irrigating gardens in this territory. If properly installed and used, a garden may be sufficiently irrigated for years without causing any accumulation of "gyp" at the surface.

Each hen produced an average of 53.7-18 eggs at a cost of 7.15-56 cents per dozen.

'Gallant Lady' Stars Ann Harding

"Gallant Lady," the 20th Century Picture starring Ann Harding which shows at the Texas Theatre today, presents one of the most poignantly dramatic and appealing stories which has come to the screen this season.

Noted for her understanding portrayal of feminine character, in this picture this capable star has a unique opportunity to exercise to the fullest her ability to rise to emotional heights. The story deals with a young woman, mother of an illegitimate child, who is forced to assign the child for adoption immediately after its birth, agreeing never to see it again.

As the years pass she becomes a phenomenally successful business woman, and at the height of her fame accidentally meets again the child whom she had counted lost to her. The story brings her to the point where she is forced to choose between being reunited with her child under the penalty of remaining silent regarding her true identity, and playing fair with the man she loves and running the risk of wrecking the boy's future.

The play is climaxed in a tense, dramatic scene which gives full play to Miss Harding's histrionic capabilities.

'Carnival' Is Fast-Moving Comedy-Drama

"Carnival," a fast-moving comedy-drama featuring Lee Tracy, Sally Eilers, Jimmy Durante and a new little screen star, Baby Dickie Walters, will head the new program at the Ritz Theatre starting Friday.

Lee Tracy is seen in the role of a spellbinding barker with a carnival show who finds he can't talk the police out of taking away his infant, motherless son. He changes his name and chases around the country to prevent losing the child. Then romance comes into his life, and with it the solution of all his woes. The role is Tracy's most important since he appeared in "Blessed Event" and "Washington Merry-Go-Round." More recently he has been seen in "Lovelorn" and "The Lemon Drop Kid."

Sally Eilers is romantically cast as the girl whose love appears to be a lost cause—until the final fade-out. She is "Daisy," the pianist at the carnival puppet show. Her more noteworthy film appearances include "Bad Girl," "Dance Team" and "Disorderly Conduct."

The beschnozzled Durante, a burlesque version of Cyrano de Bergerac, is seen as "Fingers," a kleptomaniac, or just plain pick-pocket as he would ruefully admit. He is more happily cast here than in any of his recent films, among them "Student Tour," "Strictly Dynamite" and "Hollywood Party."

Viennese Star—

Topping the list is Jean Parker, whose work in "Have a Heart" and "Little Women" has made her one of the most popular of the screen's younger actresses. In the leading male role is Charles Bickford, recently seen in "Little Miss Marker," and remembered for his outstanding work with Garbo in "Anna Christie."

Frigidaire Offers New Purchase Plan

For the first time in West Texas, Frigidaires are to be sold in Memphis under a new plan by which no down payment is necessary and daily deposits of as little as 10 cents, may be made.

W. R. Cabaness, manager of West Texas Utilities Company here, announced yesterday. The plan will be inaugurated Monday.

The Frigidaire will be placed in the home and the payments started by use of a "meter-ice" device, Mr. Cabaness explained. Into the "meter-ice" each day, the user deposits the required amount of money, on the order of gas meters used in a number of cities. Once each month a representative of the company collects the deposits and the purchaser is given credit. When the complete payments are made the meter is removed.

According to Mr. Cabaness, the offer is available for a limited time only. It includes 1935 Frigidaires in several models and sizes. The payments, as small as 10 cent a day, are set according to the price of the Frigidaire purchased.

Mr. Cabaness stated that this plan has been used in other sections of the country with exceptional success, but has not been available to West Texans heretofore.

Box has surrounded the star with one of the most distinguished supporting casts in years. Conchita Montenegro, who appeared with Baxter in "The Cisco Kid," is again his leading woman. Russell Hardie, seen recently in "Pursued" and "As the Earth Turns," has an important juvenile role.

Other members of the cast are Herbert Mundin, Andy Devine, Ralph Morgan, Vince Barnett, William Stelling, J. Carol Naish and Johnny Arthur.

Large Lawn Adds To Home's Beauty

WAXAHACHIE, March 30.—Knowing that a spacious lawn makes a more attractive setting for a house than a small crowded one, Mrs. O. P. Claunch, yard improvement demonstrator for the Maypearl Home Demonstration Club in Ellis County, has moved her fence back to add 21 feet to one side of her yard and nine feet to another, according to Miss Irma Ross, home demonstration agent.

The yard has sufficient space at one side of the lawn for a rose garden and space at the back for a planting which will form a background for the house and lawn and serve as a screen to hide

Hansford County Turns to Tiles For Irrigation

SPEARMAN, March 30.—Sixteen contracts for the laying of concrete subirrigation tile in Hansford county gardens were signed by farmers of the county during February, according to G. L. Boykin, county agricultural agent.

These gardens will be tiled through a cooperative agreement whereby the relief board furnishes the labor for making and installing the tile and the farmer furnishes the material.

In addition to these 16 farmers, 10 others have installed tile. These either made their own tile or had them made locally at two and one-half cents each. Sixteen of the 26 tiled gardens will be used as demonstrations located in various parts of the county.

GUM-DIPPED TIRES are BEST"

"I'm just an average filling station guy, but I've handled tires enough to know what it's all about.

"I suppose I've repaired flats on every known make of tire and it's my business to observe to what extent the casing is injured when a customer with tire trouble drives in.

"Surely it doesn't just 'happen so' that Firestones are damaged less when they are mistreated than any other tire that I repair. It can't be just a coincidence that a BLOWN-OUT Firestone is something I rarely ever see.

"It simply means that there's more good mileage and service in Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires than any other kind, that's all."
