Governor Submits Acreage Reduction Measure.

Austin, Oct. 5.—Governor Colquitt today submitted to the legislature the question of enacting a law limiting the cotton acreage for the next year. Accompanying his message was a bill drawn by Attorney General Looney, providing that no "one household or corporation shall plant more than twenty acres in cotton next year, the penalty for violation to be from one to five years imprisonment or a fine not to exceed $5,000 or both. According to the estimate of the governor such limitation will cut down acreage one half.

New Christian Preacher Arrives.

The new preacher called by the Christian church at this place arrived in the city last Thursday and with his wife and children are domiciled at the parsonage on Main street. This is Rev. Austin's first call but he comes recommended as a man with much love in his heart for the work he has chosen for his life's work. He filled the pulpit at the church Sunday morning and evening and delivered two very interesting sermons to a well filled house. By a way of giving them a welcome the members of the church gave them "a pounding" Saturday night, filling their table with many good things to eat. The Democrat extends to him a warm welcome to our prosperous little city.

Salisbury Gossips.

Fire at the Rosamond Gin.

The fire company responded to a call from the Rosamond gin Monday afternoon. The fire originated in the air line or suction pipe and destroyed a Hart cleaner before it could be put out. The fire was probably started from a match in the cotton. The fire was extinguished before the fire company got there but it did a $300 damage before it was gotten under control. Mr. Rosamond phoned to Dallas and got repairs here by express Tuesday morning and was running again by Tuesday noon. It was very fortunate that they succeeded in putting out the fire as the loss of a gin at this time would be a calamity as it keeps all four gins running full time to take care of the cotton coming in.

After the license had been secured Mr. Kelly accompanied them to the Methodist parsonage and between the hour of 3:00 and 3:30 in the morning Rev. M. E. Hawkins pronounced the words that united in holy matrimony C. B. Gilley and Miss L. B. Jeter and J. C. Lamb and Miss Ora Jane Jefferson. All of the contracting parties live near Memphis. ## SOME GOWN WEIGHT 15 POUNDS.

Word comes to us of "some gown" purchased by Loretta Graham while in New York City last summer and which she wears in Oscar Graham's new production, "The Prodigal Son." It is described as an evening gown of golden yellow charmeuse, with an overdress of chiffon heavily embroidered in pink and blue rosettes. In the center of each rosette is a jewel set in a black background—the whole being surrounded with a mass of pink and white pearls, fish scale spangles and steel cut beads. The tunic is one solid mass of tiny white beads interspersed with jewels and has a six inch border of closely set rhinestones. Long strands of rhinestones from a fringe around the bottom of the overdress. The dress weighs almost fifteen pounds, is considered a marvel of the dressmaker's art and altho very elaborate is in perfect accord with harmony and good taste. It is truly "some gown."—At the Dixie Theater Tuesday, October 13.

You Can't Buy "South Bend" Watch by Mail

The manufacturers of this splendid timepiece know that no watch can stand the rough handling a package receives in the mails and give satisfactory service afterward.

They also know that the jeweler's adjustment of a watch to the buyer's personality is necessary if accurate service is desired.

So they limit the sale of the South Bend Watch to retail jewelers only.

In order that the country folks can have as much time at home on circus day as is possible, also that incoming excursionists can have the opportunity of witnessing the immense circus and wild west parade of Yankee Robinson and Texas Bill, the event does not take place until high noon. Promptly at that time the parade moves, then all the outside free exhibitions are given at the show grounds. HUSBAND RESCUED DESPAIRING WIFE

After Four Years of Discouraging Conditions, Mrs. Bullock Gave Up in Despair. Husband Came to Rescue.

Patron, Ky.—In an interesting letter from this place, Mrs. Bettie Bullock writes as follows: "I suffered for four years, with womanly troubles, and during this time, I could only sit up for a little while, and could not walk anywhere at all. At times, I would have severe pains in my left side.

The doctor was called in, and his treatment relieved me for a while, but I was soon confined to my bed again. After that, nothing seemed to do me any good.

I had gotten so weak I could not stand, and I gave up in despair.

At last, my husband got me a bottle of Cardui, the woman's tonic, and I commenced taking it. From the very first dose, I could tell it was helping me. I can now walk two miles without tiring me, and am doing all my work."

If you are all run down from womanly troubles, don't give up in despair. Try Cardui, the woman's tonic. It has helped more than a million women, in its 50 years of continuous success, and should surely help you, too. Your druggist has sold Cardui for years. He knows what it will do. Ask him. He will recommend it. Begin taking Cardui today.

Will Plant Less Cotton.

Paducah, Oct. 2.—The bankers and other business men of this city are encouraging and getting the farmers of Cottle county to promise to cut their cotton crop at least half into next year. All of the land owners are willing and anxious to go into such an agreement and the tenant farmers, so far as possible, will cooperate with the movement. Cottle county will have no more than half the acreage in 1915 that we have this year. Land owners are going to turn their attention more to feed crops. They say they are going to build more silos and do more stock-farming until the cotton conditions are relieved.

"Everything that a farmer can produce next year in the way of foodstuffs and forage will bring good money, more money than anything else will bring," editorializes the Waco Tribune. Colonel A. R. McCollum, editor of the Tribune, has been in editorial harness since 1872. He has been a Texas builder and developer and ever the friend of the producing classes. He advises a sweetening reduction in cotton acreage next year. It is up to the farmer. The man behind the plow is or should be master of the situation. If an 8,000,000 bale crop will supply the demand, then why should the cotton growers of the South flood the market with a 16,000,000 bale crop?—Fort Worth Record.

To those not familiar with the real value of a public library we wish to call special attention to the librarian's report in this issue and especially to the item giving the number of the student body using the reference department of the library. They use it in connection with their school work and while this is only the first month of school 149 have taken advantage of this department, 44 in one day, and it will become much more popular and useful as the school year advances.

The "Call of the Cotton Patch" is so strong these days that even the street loafer has thrown of yoke of indolence temporarily and joined the busy throng and is helping the farmer save the big crops of cotton and feedstuff. Not only has the call reach these but it has entered into the home and quite a number of good women of the town, with the children, joined the big army of gatherers of the fleecy staple. A few offices have been temporarily closed and the occupants have been absent several days, the school teachers with a large number of their scholars lend their assistance on Saturdays. One farm near town had about 40 pickers and all were women and children except one lonely man.

TO THE PUBLIC

On June 30, 1913, there were 15,283.57 miles of railroad in Texas. Very little has been added since that time. They have 69,259 employes at work every day in the year. These railroads have a capitalization (stocks and bonds) of $31,615 per mile. Their value for taxing purposes as found by the State Tax Board is $31,150.00 per mile. They are really worth more. The total cost of construction up to June 30, 1913, averaged $39,975 per mile as shown by Table No. 10, page 397 Annual Report Railroad Commission, 1913.

The capitalization of railroads in other countries and the United States as a whole, per mile of road, is as follows:

England.....	$269,496	Spain.....	$88,298
Belgium.....	189,023	Japan.....	84,301
France.....	133,435	Russia.....	83,496
Brazil.....	142,080	Holland.....	82,796
Italy.....	124,116	Servia.....	73,373
Austria.....	120,311	Hungary.....	69,084
Switzerland.....	117,953	United States.....	63,944
Germany.....	116,666	Texas.....	31,615

The capitalization of the railroads in the United States is less than in any of the above named countries, and in Texas it is a little less than half as much as the average for the United States.

The bonds of the Texas roads amount to only $23,212,000 per mile. As a rule, no dividends are ever paid on railroad stocks in Texas, and therefore the amount of stocks is without influence, so far as the financial condition of the roads is concerned. The interest on the bonds, however, must be paid in order to keep the roads out of bankruptcy, and as such interest is supposed to be paid out of earnings, the public is interested in knowing that the bonds do not exceed the value of the roads—in other words, that they are not watered. We are glad to be able to state, positively, that there are no watered bonds on Texas railroads. And the same is true as to stocks, taking the roads of the state as a whole.

It costs an immense amount of money to operate the 15,283 miles of railroad in this state, as as you pay the same, in freight and passenger fares, you, of course, are vitally interested in knowing whether the roads are collecting enough, or more than is necessary.

The Annual Report of the Railroad Commission of Texas shows that for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1912, the railroads of Texas lacked $3,282,493.51 of collecting enough to pay their operating and necessary charges and expenses. For the year ending June 30, 1913, they lacked $1,601,378.31 of collecting enough, and while the figures for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1914, are not all available, enough is known to make certain that the railroads of this state will have a net deficit or loss of about Eight Million Dollars.

In arriving at these deficits, or losses, no account is taken of permanent improvements and betterments. These, if considered, would add to the deficits, or shortages.

Thus it is plainly to be seen, and must be acknowledged by all fair-minded men, that the railroads of Texas are confronted by a serious and dangerous situation. Indeed, some of them have been unable to escape Federal Court receiverships, and none of them have the funds urgently needed, and which the interests of the public require.

Every railroad in Texas now in the hands of, and operated by, receivers, was valued and the amount of the stocks and bonds thereof approved and limited by the Railroad Commission under the Texas Stock and Bond Law. Therefore, it is certain, over capitalization is not the cause of their financial distress.

We think it is due to you, who pay the bills and need the service of the railroads, to show the above and actual condition of the properties devoted to your use.

We beg to assure you that we are doing our very best to give you good service.

We respectfully and earnestly ask, and desire, your help and assistance in keeping down and preventing all useless and unjust expenses and charges against the railroads. We do this for the reason that you pay the expenses, and suffer the loss of services necessary resulting when the expenses and fixed charges exceed the income of the roads. You therefore have a direct interest in the matter.

We respectfully submit that it is but fair and just that the railroads be permitted to earn what the law says they are entitled to,—a fair return on the value of the property devoted to your use.

Nothing more is asked nor expected.

Respectfully,

Cotton Drops 4 Cents in 30 Days.

Fort Worth, Tex. Oct.—The United States Department of Agriculture has just completed report showing the average price paid for cotton in the 14 states which produce the staple.

The price in only two states is lower than in Texas. According to the report, the Texas price is 8.3 cents; in Oklahoma 8 cents and Georgia 7.9 cents per pound. The average for the entire nation is 8.7 cents per pound.

During the past 30 days the condition of the ungathered portion of the Texas crop has improved 8 per cent, but the price per pound has decreased 3.7 cents. If the present price prevails and the yield is the same as that of last year, which is probable, the farmers of Texas will secure $80,000,000 less for this year's crop than was paid for the 1913 production.

John Temple Graves of New York is the president of a buy-a-bale club, John Temple was a Georgian before he became a New Yorker. He appointed sixteen subcommittees composed of New York business men to sell bales of the fleecy staple. This buy-a-bale movement is as broad as the continent. Now for a 50 per cent acreage reduction movement that will win the support of the farmers in all the cotton states. The surplus should be stored to await the revival of business in Europe, and the reduction movement should be pushed vigorously. There is a way to make speculators and spinners pay a fair price for the fleecy staple. Cut the acreage in half. Instead of a 16,000,000-bale crop give them an 8,000,000-bale crop. Business is business and this cotton reduction movement is a business proposition. —Fort Worth Record.

Cotton Drops 4 Cents in 30 Days.

Fort Worth, Tex. Oct.—The United States Department of Agriculture has just completed report showing the average price paid for cotton in the 14 states which produce the staple. The price in only two states is lower than in Texas. According to the report, the Texas price is 8.3 cents; in Oklahoma 8 cents and Georgia 7.9 cents per pound. The average for the entire nation is 8.7 cents per pound.

During the past 30 days the condition of the ungathered portion of the Texas crop has improved 8 per cent, but the price per pound has decreased 3.7 cents. If the present price prevails and the yield is the same as that of last year, which is probable, the farmers of Texas will secure $80,000,000 less for this year's crop than was paid for the 1913 production.

John Temple Graves of New York is the president of a buy-a-bale club, John Temple was a Georgian before he became a New Yorker. He appointed sixteen subcommittees composed of New York business men to sell bales of the fleecy staple. This buy-a-bale movement is as broad as the continent. Now for a 50 per cent acreage reduction movement that will win the support of the farmers in all the cotton states. The surplus should be stored to await the revival of business in Europe, and the reduction movement should be pushed vigorously. There is a way to make speculators and spinners pay a fair price for the fleecy staple. Cut the acreage in half. Instead of a 16,000,000-bale crop give them an 8,000,000-bale crop. Business is business and this cotton reduction movement is a business proposition. —Fort Worth Record.

Crude Thoughts From The Editorial Pen

YOUR MISERY IN YOUR MIND.

It is a habit of men and women to decry the present and extol the past. Things were never quite so bad with them before. They never before had such sufficient cause for being ill-tempered, morose and despondent. They never before met with so many and such sore disappointments; they never before were deprived of so many things they wanted, or prevented from doing so many things they desired to. The wife or the husband, as the case may be, was never before so neglectful of their welfare and so indifferent to their wishes and their peace of mind and happiness; and they sulk and pine and brood and grumble.

The fact is, that in regard to the happiness you enjoy or the misery you undergo, the majority of men and women are like the spendthrift, who each day squanders every penny he can get, but is going to become saving and commence getting rich at some future time. So with the majority of men and women. In relation to their emotions. They have so much to worry, vex and torment them today that they will be just as miserable as they can, but are fully resolved to be happy at some future time. With them experience does not lead them to reflect that, on the average, one day is much like another, and that if they are ever to be happy, they had best be happy today. Neither do they ever seem to discover that misery or contentment is almost entirely a matter of temperament or as you might say, of opinion. The discontented and repining always assign this or that as the cause of their discomfort, or the lack of this thing or that thing as the source of their tribulation and wretchedness. And the fact that a neighbor possessing those very things seems even more disconsolate and rueful than they, never seems to suggest to them that their misery is all in their mind.

The man of very limited income can scarce meet the expenses of his family and hear their fretful complaints because they are not better dressed, or more expensively housed, and he feels dejected and discouraged and thinks the addition of a few hundreds to his income would remove all his troubles; and yet, next door, or on the next block is another man with five times his income is precisely his fix and in the same state of mind.

In choosing a vocation, do not ask yourself how you can make the most money or gain the most notoriety, but choose the work that will call out all your powers and develop your manhood into the greatest strength and symmetry. Not money, not notoriety, not fame even, but power in what you want. Manhood is greater than wealth, greater than fame. Character is greater than any career. Each faculty must be educated and any deficiency in its training will appear in what you do. The hand must be educated to be graceful, steady and strong. The eye must be educated to be alert, discriminating, and microscopic. The heart must be educated to be tender, sympathetic and true. The memory must be drilled for years in accuracy, retention, and comprehensiveness. The world does not demand that you be a lawyer, minister, doctor, farmer, scientist or mechanic; it does not dictate what you shall do but it does require that you shall be a master in whatever you undertake. If you are a master in your line, the world will applaud you and all doors will fly open to you. But it condemns all blotches' abortion and failures.

Can there be a being so vile and odious, so dead to nature's impulse, who in return for constant care and such unvarying kindness, can willingly or heedlessly wound the heart that cherished him, and forsake the lonely one who nursed and sheltered him, who can madly sever the sweetest bonds of human union and bring down the gray hairs of his parents in sorrow to the grave who can leave them in their old age to solitude and poverty, while he wanders in the pride of undeserved prosperity?

A normal boy is mentally active. He must ask questions. His mind needs food as much as his body. Give him noble books to read. Fill his mind with the great thoughts of the largeminded men of all ages, and you give him an inheritance of more value than money. Teach your boy to read good books by buying them for him. History, science, the best fiction, poetry, essays—a boy need never be lonely when he may have as friends the entertaining and large-hearted men of all nations and of all time.

"Tis said if you improve not today you will grow worse tomorrow.

If you would have a clean hearted boy you must teach him to keep his body clean and vigorous. Give him wholesome food and conveniences for bathing. The body is the temple of the spirit. A boy's clothes may be of the roughest, but if he brushes his teeth and takes a cold plunge of a morning he is a gentleman and he will not find his mouth stained by foul words nor his body capable of evil deeds.

If there is a bucking horse in your neighborhood that no one can ride, bring him in on Yankee Robinson circus day, and Texas Bill and his band of rough riders—some of the best in the world—will see what can be done about handling him. Sometimes they buck over ten miles of territory, yet in the end the cowboys seem to handle them. The bucking contest in the Wild West department is without a doubt the most amusing sport known. Texas Bill and his cowboys, cowgirls, Mexicans and rough riders of the world, are with Yankee Robinson circus and they will ride any bucking horse you bring them. Memphis, October 8.

AWARDS BEGIN IN COUNTY EXHIBITS

Deaf Smith wins Free for all and Crosby wins on Irrigated and Non-Irrigated Products.

The judges report a splendid display of farm products, with Deaf Smith county in the lead in the free for all exhibit, where counts were made on both irrigated and non-irrigated products and Crosby count first in the dry land products.

There was pretty close competition, but there was always enough distinction to enable the judges to be sure of their decisions.

In the free for all Crosby county won second place, and Hall third. Both counties had splendid displays. In the non-irrigated contest Hall won second place, and Randall county came in for third.

While Potter county does not claim any special merit in her exhibit, she does not know where she stands, because the judges had instructions to pass the Potter county exhibit. This was for the reason that Potter county does not want to win this contest at any time, but would rather leave the contest to the visiting counties.

Certainly, the judges say, their is a fine exhibit of farm products in the agricultural building. They are of the opinion that it was well worth the time and expense of coming to the Fair to get such a collection together.—Daily Panhandle.

away from them in her thoughts.

The conference between the leaders dragged on and messengers came and went with the news—then, after hours of debate, it broke up suddenly in a row and the emissaries came back on the run. Even at that they narrowly escaped, for the rebels opened fire upon them from the ridges, and before they could get back to cover the dandy, Manuel del Rey, received a bullet hole through the crown of his hat.

A grim smile flickered across Bud's face as he saw the damage it had wrought, for he knew that Amigo was in the hills—and a bullet shot down hill goes high! Some trace of what was in his mind must have come to Del Rey as he halted in the shelter of the house, for he regarded the American sternly as Aragon spoke rapidly in his ear. But if they planned vengeance between them the times were not right, for a rattle of arms came from the lower town and the captain was up and away to marshal his men to the defense.

So far in the siege Del Rey had kept under cover, patrolling the streets and plaza and letting the volunteers fight, but now the war had shifted to his territory and his rurales were running like mad. For, matching treachery against deceit, the rebel leaders had sent men around to slip up near the town and at the first fusillade from the hillside they came charging up the creek.

Then it was that the ever-watchful rurales proved their worth. As the rebels appeared in the open they ran to the outlying houses and, fighting from the flat roofs, checked the advance until the miners could come to their aid.

But in the confusion another party of rebels had rushed down the gulch from the west, and while the fight was going on in the lower town they found lodgment in a big adobe house. And now for the first time there was fighting in earnest—the house-to-house fighting that is seen at its worst in Mexico. While women screamed in the casa grande and the Americans paced to and fro on the hill, the boom of a dynamite bomb marked the beginning of hand-to-hand.

If there was to be a casualty list in this long-looked-for battle of Fortuna, the time was at hand when they could begin counting the dead.

With a fearlessness born of long familiarity with explosives the Sonoran miners advanced valiantly with their hand grenades—baking powder cans filled with dynamite and studded with fulminating caps. Digging fiercely through wall after wall they approached unperceived by the enemy and the first bomb, flung from a roof, filled the adobe with wounded and dead.

A dense pall of yellowish smoke rose high above the town and, as bomb after bomb was exploded and the yells of the miners grew louder with each success, the stunned invaders broke from cover and rushed helter-skelter up the gulch. Then there was a prodigious shouting from the Sonorans and swung his can of giant powder by the sling and let it smash against the hill in a terrific detonation.

In the big house all was confusion. Soon the cheers of the defenders heralded victory and, in spite of all efforts to restrain them, the wives of the miners rushed into the open to gaze upon the triumph of their menfolk.

On the hilltops the ineffective rebel riflemen rose up from behind their stone wall to stare, until suddenly they, too, were seized with a panic and ran to and fro like ants. Then, around the curve below the concentrator, a tall man came dashing up on a pure white horse, and behind him, charging as he charged, came the swarthy Yaquis of Alvarez, their new rifles gleaming in the sun.

Up along the hillside and after the fugitives they ran with vengeful eagerness, racing each other for the higher ground and the first shot at the rebels. First Alvarez on his white horse would be ahead, and then, as they encountered rocks, the Yaquis would surge to the front. It was a rout, for, at the first glimpse of that oncoming body of warriors, the cowardly followers of Bernardo Bravo took to their heels and fled.

But over the rocks so Chihuahuan, no matter how scared, can hop to outdistance a Yaqui, and the pop, pop of rifles told the fate of the first luckless stragglers. For the Yaquis, after a hundred and sixty years of guerrilla warfare, never waste a shot; and as savage yells and the crash of a sudden volley drifted down from the rocky heights the men who had been besieged in Fortuna knew that death was abroad in the hills.

Fainter and fainter came the shots as the pursuit led on to the north and as Hooker strained his eyes to follow a huge form that intuition told him was Amigo, he was wakened suddenly from his preoccupation by the touch of some unseen hand. He was in the open with people all about him—

Spanish refugees, Americans, triumphant miners and their wives—but that touch made him forget the battle above him and instantly think of Gracia.

He turned and hurried back to the corral where Copper Bottom was kept, and there he found her waiting, with her roan all saddled, and she challenged him with her eyes. The sun gleamed from a pistol that she held in her hand, and again from her golden hair, but he saw only her eyes, so brave and daring, and the challenge to mount and ride.

Only for a moment did he stand before her gaze, and then he caught up his saddle and spoke soothingly to his horse. They rode out of the corral together, closing the gates behind them and passing down a gulch to the rear. All the town lay silent below them as they turned toward the western pass.

The time had come. Well he knew the dangers that lay between them and the American line. Dangers not for him but for her. In the hills and passes and on the cactus-covered plain were thousands of men with whom she would not be safe for an instant, and against whom he must guard her that she might be delivered safely to Phil. And he loved her then as he had not believed it possible to love a woman. He loved this woman that he was attempting to save for another man, a "partner" who had at the best been reckless of every promise. And across the border this man was waiting for the woman Bud Hooker loved. That he take her to him was a more severe test of his manhood than any to which he had before been subjected. That he be untrue to the trust she reposed in him never entered his mind for a moment. With a strong man's love for her he thought only of how he was to conduct her safely out of the dangers which surrounded her.

Soldiers, miners, and refugees, men, women, and children, every soul in Fortuna was on the hill to see the last of the battle. It had been a crude affair, but bravely ended, and something in the dramatic suddenness of this victory had held all eyes to the close. Bud and Gracia passed out of town unnoticed, and as soon as they had rounded the point they spurred on till they gained the pass.

"I knew you would come!" said Gracia, smiling radiantly as they paused at the fork.

"Sure!" answered Hooker with his good-humored smile. "Count me in on anything—which way does this trail go; do you know?"

"It goes west twelve miles toward Arispe," replied Gracia confidently, "and then it comes into the main road that leads north to Nogales and Gadsden."

"That sounds about right for us," replied Bud. "Gadsden's the place we want to head for, and we want to get there mighty quick, too, if them rebels will let us, and I guess that's what they'll have to do whether they want to or not."

They rode on together for some distance, the girl seemingly oblivious of the dangers which surrounded her, and Hooker watching carefully for every sign of difficulty.

"What is there up here?" inquired Bud, pointing at a fainter trail that led off toward the north. "This country is new to me. Don't know, eh? Well, if we followed that trail we'd run into them rebels, anyway, so we might as well go to the west. Is your saddle all right? We'll hit it up then—I'd like to strike a road before dark."

They hurried on, following a well-marked trail that alternately climbed ridges and descended into arroyos, until finally it dropped down into a precipitous canon where a swollen stream rushed and babbled and, while they still watched expectantly for the road, the evening quickly passed.

They had no opportunity for conversation, for the trail was too narrow to permit of their riding side by side. Bud was thinking not only of the dangers that surrounded them, but of this errand on which he was engaged, and what the end of it meant to him.

First the slanting rays of the sun struck fire from the high yellow crags, then the fire faded and the sky glowed an opal-blue; then, through dark blues and purples the heavens turned to black above them and all the stars came out. Thousands of frogs made the canyon resound with their throaty songs and strange animals crashed through the brush at their approach, but still Hooker stayed in the saddle and Gracia followed on behind.

If she had thought in her dreams of an easier journey she made no comment now and, outside of stopping to cinch up her saddle, Bud seemed hardly to know she was there. The trail was not going to suit him—it edged off too far to the south—and yet, in the tropical darkness, he could not search out new ways to go.

At each fork he paused to light a match, and whichever way the mule-tracks went he went also for mules would take the same trail. For two hours and more they followed on down the stream and then Hooker stopped his horse.

"You might as well get down and rest a while," he said quietly. "This trail is no good—it's taking us south. We'll let our horses feed until the moon comes up and I'll try to work north by landmarks."

"Oh—are we lost?" gasped Gracia, dropping stiffly to the ground. "But of course we are," she added. "I've been thinking so for some time."

"Oh, that's all right," observed Hooker philosophically; "I don't mind being lost as long as I know where I'm at. We'll ride back until we get out of this dark canyon and then I'll lay a line due north."

They sat for a time in the darkness while their horses champed at the rich grass and then, unable to keep down her nerves, Gracia declared for a start. A vision of angry pursuers rose up in her mind—of Manuel del Rey and his keen-eyed rurales, hot upon their trail—and it would not let her rest.

Nor was the vision entirely the result of nervous imagination, for they had lost half the advantage of their start, as Hooker well knew, and if he made one more false move he would find himself called on to fight. As they rode back through the black canyon he asked himself for the hundredth time how it had all happened—why, at a single glance from her, he had gone against his better judgment and plunged himself into this tangle. And then, finally, what was he going to do about it?

But he knew what he was going to do about it. He knew he was going to take this girl through to Gadsden and to Phil, and his loyalty was such that he would not admit, even to himself, that Phil did not deserve her.

Alone, he would have taken to the mountains with a fine disregard for trails, turning into whichever served his purpose best and following the lay of the land. Even with her in his care it would be best to do that yet, for there would be trailers on their track at sunup, and it was either ride or fight.

Free at last from the pent-in canyon, they halted at the forks, while Bud looked out the land by moonlight. Dim and ghostly, the square-topped peaks and buttes rose all about him, huge and impassable except for the winding trails. He turned up a valley between two ridges, spurring his horse into a fast walk.

From one cow trail to another he picked out a way to the north, but the lay of the ground threw him to the east and there were no passes between the hills. The country was rocky, with long parallel ridges extending to the northeast, and when he saw where the way was taking him Bud called a halt till dawn.

By the very formation he was being gradually edged back toward Fortuna, and it would call for fresh horses and a rested Gracia to outstrip their pursuers by day. If the rurales traveled by landmarks, heading for the northern passes in an effort to out-ride and intercept him, they might easily cut him off at the start; but if they trailed him—and he devoutly hoped they would—then they would have a tangled skein to follow and he could lose them in the broken country to the north.

So thinking, he cut grass among the rocks, spread down their saddle-blankets and watched over the browsing horses while Gracia stretched out on the bed. After a day of excitement and a night of hard riding there is no call for a couch of down, and as the morning star appeared in the east she slept while Bud sat patiently by.

It was no new task for him, this watching and waiting for the dawn. For weeks at a time, after a hard day's work at the branding, he had stood guard half the night. Sleep was a luxury to him, like water to a mountain-sheep—and so were all the other useless things that town-bred people required.

People like Gracia, people like Phil—they were different in all their ways. To ride, to fight, to find the way—there he was a better man than Phil; but to speak to a woman, to know her ways, and to enter into her life—there he was no man at all.

She trusted to his courage to protect her, and that he could do, but it was to a man such as Phil she would give her love. Phil could not love her more than he did, but Phil's ways could be more attractive to her. His adventurous life with his father had not been such as to cultivate the little niceties that appealed to women. It was only his privilege to serve, but he gloried in that privilege now as he watched beside her as she slept, and his vigil but strengthened his resolution to see her safely through to—Phil.

He sighed now as he saw the first flush of dawn and turned to where she slept, calm and beautiful, in the solemn light. How to waken her, even that was a question, but the time had come to start.

Already, from Fortuna, Del Rey and his man-killing rurales would be on the trail. He would come like the wind, that dashing little captain, and nothing but a bullet would stop him, for his honor was at stake. Nay, he had told Bud in so many words:

"She is mine, and no man shall come between us!"

It would be hard now if the rurales should prove too many for him—if a bullet should check him in their flight and she be left alone. But how to waken her! He tramped near as he led up the unwilling mounts; then, as time pressed, he spoke to her, and at last he knelt at her side.

"Say!" he called, and when that did not serve he laid his hand on her shoulder.

"Wake up!" he said, shaking her gently. "Wake up, it's almost day!" Even as he spoke he went back to the phrase of the cow-camp—where men rise before it is light. But Gracia woke up wondering and stared about her strangely, unable to understand.

"Why—what is it?" she cried. Then, as he spoke again and backed away, she remembered him with a smile.

"Oh," she said, "is it time to get up? Where are we, anyway?"

"About ten miles from Fortuna," answered Hooker soberly. "Too close—we ought to be over that divide."

He pointed ahead to where the valley narrowed and passed between two hills, and Gracia sat up, binding back her hair that had fallen from its place. "Yes, yes!" she said resolutely. "We must go on—but why do you look at me so strangely?"

"Don't know," mumbled Bud. "Didn't know I was. Say, let me get them saddle-blankets, will you?"

He went about his work with embarrassed swiftness, clapping on saddles and bridles, colling up ropes, and offering her his hand to mount. When he looked at her again it was not strangely.

"Hope you can ride," he said. "We got to get over that pass before anybody else makes it—after that we can take a rest."

"As fast as you please," she answered steadily. "Don't think about me. But what will happen if—they get there first?"

She was looking at him now as he searched out the trail ahead, but he pretended not to hear. One man in that pass was as good as a hundred, and there were only two things he could do—shoot his way through, or turn back. He believed she would want to turn back.

GOVERNORS TALK COTTON REDUCTION

Washington, Sept. 28—Curtailed of cotton production next year because of the huge amount of the 1914 crop remained on hand through the suspension of the European market was discussed today by governors and congressional delegates from the South. A preliminary conference committee consisting of a senator and two representatives from each state were selected to meet with the governors later in the day and devise a formal plan for accomplishing crop curtailment.

The morning meeting showed there is some difference of opinion as to whether legislation should be state or federal.

Senator Hoke Smith of Georgia and several other congressmen held that each state should act for itself, passing laws that would limit next year's crop to 50 per cent of the 1914 yield.

The preliminary conference was expected to complete its work in time to present a plan to the open meeting tonight, which will be attended by all congressmen from the cotton states, officials of the department of agriculture and other government representatives. A plan for federal taxation already has been formulated by some Southern congressmen which would fix a tax of 10 cents a pound on all cotton produced in excess of half the 1914 crop. Another proposal was a tax of $20 on each acre planted in cotton in excess of 50 per cent of the 1914 acreage. Both proposals have many supporters, but it was not indicated at the preliminary which would be favored in the final plan.

WANT POLICE PROTECTION.

Circus People Want Police Protection When Kongo, Big Elephant, is Unloaded.

The circus people have requested the mayor, chief of police and city council to give them police protection during the unloading of Kongo—the huge elephant just imported from India. He is unloaded about six o'clock each morning. Is considered very dangerous, and if proper officials are present there will be no danger of anyone being injured. They have also requested that all traffic upon streets of the circus grounds, over which "Kongo" will have to travel, will be suspended during the hours of six and seven in the morning. In the event the big beast would meet a team of horses, a cow, a dog, or some animal not known to him, he might prove too much for the ten keepers who are employed to guard and fight him. He is heavily chained and every precaution is taken with the big beast. "Kongo" has elephant instinct, however, and will accept peanuts from menagerie patrons and is seemingly very happy when in the menagerie tent with the other animals. Memphis, Thursday October 8.

HAS THREE RINGS FULL OF ACTS.

Under the Largest Tent Ever Constructed, Yankee Robinson Presents Great Performance.

The Yankee Robinson circus is just as big as it can get. It has three rings and two elevated stages—and that is as large as any circus can grow in this day and age. The entire performance is given in the three rings and the stages—is presented in such a manner that no matter at what angle you are seated in the canvas you can see every act—sometimes fifteen of them on at one time—with perfect ease. The Wild West performance takes place on the race track, so that every part of this performance passes you from two to three times.

The big show will appear at Memphis October 8.

PROSPERITY SALE

The weight of cotton's low value should not fall on the farmer alone. All business should put a shoulder to the wheel just as the producer; it divides the load. The cotton raiser has cotton to sell; we have merchandise to sell. Why should he be compelled to sell without profit and buy our merchandise "loaded to the guards" with profit to ourselves? Justice demands the sacrifice of our profit too; in this way we carry our part of the burden.

By reducing the price of our big $30,000 stock of General Dry Goods, Shoes, Hats, etc., a fifth we contribute some $6,000 to the general prosperity of the community. Buy now and secure your share in MONEY KEPT AT HOME.
