

Bus Overturns, Five Passengers Injured

HOME TOWN TALK

By BEDDY

Our friend Bill Cushing has one of the most comfortable ranch homes in this part of Texas. He has electric lights, radio, electric refrigerator and most everything you can use in the household if you can get the "juice." He gets along fine down there at home.

But Bill and a number of his neighbors are out of sorts, and rightfully so. They want daily mail service between Sterling City and Big Spring revived. Practically all mail sent to and from Sterling City would be routed this way. It takes a letter mailed in Sterling City as long to get to Big Spring as it does for one to reach Chicago.

Not only that, but Bill and the other ranchmen down in the Garden City-Sterling City country want things fixed so that they can ship their cattle from Big Spring instead of other points. Less shrinkage of weight is suffered when they are sent from a T&P point directly to the Fort Worth market instead of being routed all the way down to Temple then on to Fort Worth all via the Santa Fe.

These needs of the people south of here should be given attention. We fear the interests of cattlemen and sheep men have been neglected.

Since Big Spring has grown streets paved, traffic become thicker, and the Benton street viaduct built it is practically impossible to get a herd of cattle through town from the south to the T&P pens. We believe the railway officials would be anxious to operate if proper data were brought to their attention. Let's fix things so the cowman can drive their stuff in here for shipment, as they wish to do. It is an important matter.

To let you know how Sterling City feels about dropping of daily mail service between the two towns we reprint the following article from the pointed pen of Uncle Bill Kille, the Sterling City News-Tribune editor.

HAMSTRUNG IS

Mail to a town or community is the life blood of business to that town or community. A route over which mail is carried is to a town or community what the arteries are to the body. Cut one of these and the body suffers injury, but all are not equal.

One of the main arteries thru which mail has been coming to Sterling City has been cut and it is bleeding because of it. The mail route between Big Spring and Sterling City from a cause unknown to us has been discontinued. A letter addressed to Big Spring before this route was discontinued would be in transit less than two hours before it reached its destination. A letter today addressed to that city will be in transit from two to three days before it is delivered.

We never have learned why this mail was discontinued, but whoever caused it struck Sterling City a staggering blow because this route was of as much importance as the present one to San Angelo. In fact the heaviest part of the outgoing mail was routed by the way of Big Spring.

There has been some effort to restore this route. We learn that the postoffice department has offered us a tri-weekly mail to Big Spring. Sterling wants a daily mail and nothing less. We want and are entitled to have an east and west daily outlet for our mail.

We have been told there has been trouble in getting someone to carry the mail to Big Spring because the business insists on a monopoly of carrying the passengers, and refuses to carry the mail at a reasonable rate.

No. 4 To Depart Thirty Minutes Earlier Beginning Sunday

Changes in schedules for three Texas & Pacific passenger trains were announced Friday through Agent R. H. Jones.

Train 4, the eastbound "2-cent fare" train, will leave here at 7 p. m. instead of 1:30 p. m. effective Sunday. It will reach Sweetwater at 2:30 p. m. instead of 3:05 p. m. and in Abilene at 3:30 p. m. instead of 4:05 p. m. Arrival in Fort Worth will be scheduled for 8:05 p. m. instead of 8:40 p. m.

Train No. 7, westbound, will arrive here at 7:30 a. m. as it now does, but will leave here at 7:30 a. m. instead of 7:40 a. m., reaching El Paso at 3:10 p. m. mountain time instead of 3:30 p. m. as it now does.

Train No. 2, the westbound "2-cent fare" train, which operates between Fort Worth and Big Spring, will reach here at 4:40 p. m. instead of 3 p. m. It will leave Fort Worth at 9 a. m. as at present.

Other trains will remain unchanged. No. 1, the Sunshine Special, leaving at 9:15 p. m. for the west; No. 16, the Texan, arriving from the west at 6:20 a. m. and departing at 6:55 a. m. and No. 6, the eastbound Texas Ranger, arriving at 11:25 a. m. and departing at 11:45 p. m.

Continuation for train 253 will leave Mineral Wells at 8:25 p. m., arriving in Millspic at 6:45 p. m., leaving Millspic at 6:55 p. m. and arriving in Mineral Wells at 7:15 p. m.

Texans Comment On Texas Guinan Episode In France

DALLAS, June 5 (UP)—Texas Guinan will get a great big hand if she comes home to the state whose name she bears.

This much was assured today by a group of civic, religious and patriotic leaders who spoke in behalf of the Guinans after Governor Sterling refused the former Wagoner's exclusion from France.

The French government's action was characterized by some as effrontery, while a small minority felt that the proper thing had been done.

Chief among Texas' champions was Dr. J. R. Cranfill, prominent Baptist preacher, who knew the Guinans in Wagoner when Texas was a kid. Her real name is Mamie, said Dr. Cranfill.

"I think it is an outrage," he declared. "I hope all true Texans will resent this piece of French effrontery with more than words. Our people should carefully avoid visiting France in the future, and I know I will not go there."

Gypsy Queen To Be Buried

Barefoot Mary Wandered Around World; Subjects Mourn

OMAHA, Neb., June 5 (UP)—The body of Mary, barefoot queen of the gypsies, the heavy necklace of 20 gold pieces still around her neck, and her choicest possessions left behind here will be buried tonight within the tent from which she ruled her wandering people for nearly fifty years.

Within the Gypsy encampment, held today as Queen Mary's followers gathered to do her honors, will rise the solemn chants of the mourners as a two-day period of funeral rites is begun.

The queen, 60-year-old mother of 18 children, died last night in an Omaha hospital as six specialists sent over her bed, seeking to save her from brain fever. Resulting, it is believed, from the drinking of infected water.

Outside her window, as she died, were gathered nearly two hundred of her subjects. Denied by police the privilege of encouraging their queen with the music of the tribes, they stood silent through her last hours.

The funeral services will not be confined to the simple rites of the Gypsies. Queen Mary wandered barefoot around the world, but her people have money, and nothing will be spared to do her honor.

After a night of mourning, a Catholic priest will visit the encampment, will enter the royal tent to speak a funeral service.

Then the body will be borne to Holy Sepulcher Cemetery here, and the choicest possessions of the queen placed beside it in the grave. Her jewels, her most expensive clothing, the trinkets she valued will be beside a hermetically sealed vial containing her blood, which, drawn from the body immediately after her death.

Additional Item Leads To Veto Of Bollworm and Tick Measure; Governor Says $300,000 Justified

AUSTIN, June 4.—Governor R. S. Sterling vetoed three bills, including the bill to appropriate $1,000,000 to reimburse farmers for pink bollworm eradication expenses and the counties for cattle tick eradication work.

The $1,000,000 appropriation bill appropriated $300,000 to pay the pink bollworm claims of West Texas farmers for 1929 and 1930; $200,000 to pink bollworm claims of North Texas farmers incurred in eradication work in 1923 and 1924 and $500,000 to reimburse counties for tick eradication.

In vetoing the bill, Governor Sterling stated: "The appropriation in this bill relative to refund on the pink bollworm quarantine probably is justified. However, I feel that there could be no justification for the $500,000 appropriation for refunding counties the money expended in tick eradication. I think it would be wrong to make any such refund."

"Inasmuch as these different appropriations are included in the same general bill, and in view of the fact I cannot approve the last mentioned item, but am vetoing it, I must veto the bill itself."

Governor Sterling vetoed two other bills, one to prevent the state highway commission from routing a designated highway so as to miss a town of 100 or more population without consent of the commissioner's court and the other to give independent school districts the right of eminent domain.

Waiting for More Opportunity Time To Make Improvements Dangerous Declares Stripling

"Most of the citizens of other towns in Texas have more confidence in Big Spring than Big Spring citizens have," declares Fox Stripling, pioneer resident in a statement issued Friday by him in support of the $200,000 bond issue to be voted upon June 16 for construction of a city hall, fire station, auditorium building.

Mr. Stripling's statement followed: "I believe that Big Spring has reached the point where it needs a city hall, fire station and auditorium. I feel sure that in the near future, we will build something keeping with this growing city. Now is the time to build, too, while we can get material at a big reduction, and can put local people to work, and help the unemployed situation."

"I firmly believe that Big Spring will make a city. But if it does, it is necessary for us to do our part in the way of promoting growth and development. We cannot be too conservative, and hold back the town. We have already passed up many golden opportunities. For instance, we could have secured the West Texas Chamber of Commerce convention for 1932, if we had but asked for it. We didn't even put forth the least effort to

Insurance Of Employees Is Topic of API

DALLAS, June 5 (UP)—Workmen's compensation laws requiring employers to insure employees were denounced as injurious to the cause of accident prevention by George F. Prussing, Los Angeles, in a speech before the convention of the American Petroleum Institute here.

Edmond S. Cole, Tulsa, urged greater care in the disposal of waste matter by well operators to prevent suits by land owners over pollution of streams.

Cole said that "oil operators who produce salt water and other polluting substances are held responsible for damage."

Pollution can be prevented by care but no practical method of disposing of large quantities of salt water has yet been discovered, he said.

Lightning Has No Peril If You See The Flash

BY WALTER MALONE
KANSAS CITY, Mo.—The world war veteran will tell you that it was the shell that he could not hear that did all the damage and meteorologists assert that it is the flash of lightning that you do not see over which concern should be manifested.

The Month In The Skies —JUNE: Summer Constellations

By ROBERT H. BAKER
(Professor of Astronomy, University of Illinois)
URBANA, Ill., (AP)—Have you noticed the Northern Crown and the Northern Cross in the eastern sky in the early evening? The "butterfly" of Hercules can be seen above, and the V-shaped head of the Dragon.

These famous starry configurations are as easy to find as the Great Dipper.
After dark on some clear evening in June when the moon is not too bright, look toward the east.

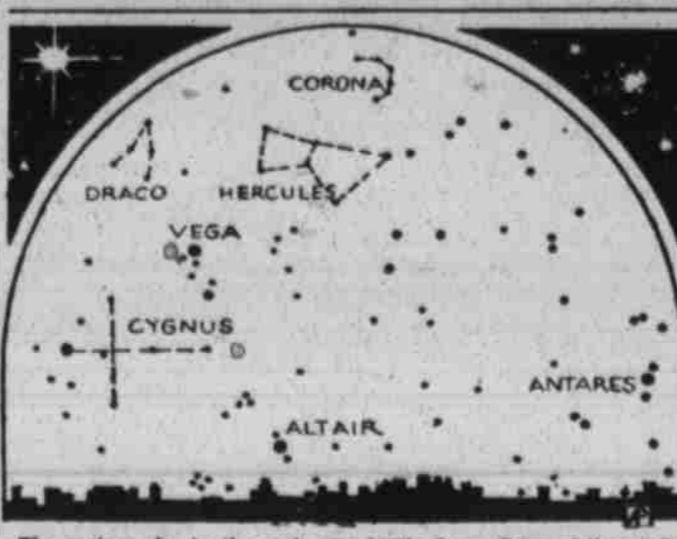

Almost overhead there is a semi-circle of stars. The separate stars are not extremely bright, but the figure that they form attracts the attention. It is Corona, the Northern Crown.

Vega is the brightest star in the eastern sky at this season; it is slightly north of east and well up above the horizon.
"Butterfly" of Hercules
Halfway from the half circle of Corona toward this star is the "butterfly" of Hercules. It is not difficult to imagine here in the sky a butterfly with outstretched wings.

With the telescope directed toward this constellation the observer can view its most interesting feature, the great cluster in Hercules.
It is a ball of tens, and probably hundreds of thousands of stars at the distance of 24,000 light years, among the nearest of the globular clusters which inhabit the outskirts of the great system of the Milky Way. The eye alone sees little or nothing of this cluster.
Vega is a white star and one of our neighbors. Its relatively small distance of 26 light years partly accounts for its brilliancy in our skies, but not entirely. For if our sun were placed beside this star it would be only faintly visible to the naked eye.

Shooting of Summer
The constellation Lyra contains Vega and the stars around it. Its ring nebula, quite visible to the eye alone, appears in the telescope somewhat like a luminous globe to take to sleep from being kind by it.

Not all the lightning flashes that are seen on stormy days ever strike the earth, say the scientists. In fact, only a small percentage of them hit the terrestrial neighbor.
So if you are one of those individuals who goes to the cellar or hides his head under the quilt when the lightning flashes, you may console yourself with the thought that the chances are about 100 to 1 against the bolt striking even the earth you are living on, much less singling out yourself.
If you are stricken with fear every time you see a flash of lightning, you are being just as silly as the small boy who is afraid of the dark when he knows there is nothing there, except the dark, say the experts. For if you see the lightning flash, all well and good. It has already gone to its destination and you are still in good health.
Just figure it out. You see the flash—the light impulse is being carried to your sensory brain center. The thought goes to the reasoning center of your brain and you think something should be done about it. You decide to cry out. From the motor center of your brain the impulse goes to your larynx or voice box to make the cry.

The eastern sky in the early evening in June. Some of the configurations for the season have been shown: Corona, the Northern Crown, the "butterfly" of Hercules, the V-shaped head of Draco, the Dragon, and others. Vega is the brightest star.

Saturn, in Sagittarius, rises in the southeast before midnight.
Venus is a morning star, rising in the northeast an hour and a half before the sun.

These are among the summer constellations which will be visible throughout this season. With these for a beginning and a simple star map it is easy to recognize the others.
Aquila with its bright star Altair is found rising directly in the east as the sky grows dark. In the southeast Scorpio is coming into view with its bright red star Antares.

In Western Skies
The planet Jupiter, in the constellation Gemini, is the brightest object in the western sky in June. Mars is farther east, in Leo.

All that takes time and if you had been hit, you would have been unable to accomplish more than about half of the necessary motions.
And then there is the thunder proposition. Usually it is the thunder which causes persons to jump especially at a particularly loud clap.
If you wish you can determine the distance from the lightning flash to yourself in this manner. Light physicists tell us, travels approximately five times as fast as sound. If you count the seconds between the time you see the lightning flash and the time you hear the thunder and divide that by five you will get the approximate number of miles the lightning flash was from you.
Another worry is dispelled by biochemists who tell us that thunder has nothing whatever to do with the souring of milk. The belief that thunder caused milk to sour arose before the days of artificial refrigeration when the humidity and the heat which accompanied or preceded a thunderstorm affected milk in that way. Superstitious housewives thinking in terms of black magic laid it on the thunder, which they did not understand.

Canning of Meats and Vegetables Started As State Prison Economy

HOUSTON, June 5. (AP)—A thin, tireless man was explaining how one of the state's biggest "industries" was "living at home" and making it pay.

"By producing and canning most of the food consumed by prison inmates we hope to effect a tremendous saving in grocery bills," said Lee Simmons, general manager of the state prison system. He was speaking to members of the Fort Bend county Master Farmers' council and Houston business men, who were guests at the Central Prison farm.

"Eventually," Simmons went on, "we hope to be able to raise and preserve vegetables, fruits and meats for all state institutions."

The manager told how the installation of a meat plant at the central unit was expected to save a big meat bill that had piled up in the past. The system bought last year, he said, $140,000 worth of meat and lard and $123,000 worth of bacon.

W. A. Paddock, chairman of the state prison board, told of progress being made in reducing operating expenses.

"Critics sometimes ask," he said, "why, with free labor available, we are unable to make the prison system pay. They forget that we have approximately 300 prisoners who are unable to work, that nearly 40 per cent of the inmates are needed to 'keep house,' and that we must support a large number of guards. It costs approximately $2,000,000 a year to operate the system."

HOW'S your HEALTH

Dr. Iago Goldstein, Academy of Medicine
SEA BATHING

Set a time limit to your dip in the ocean and let that limit be before you become chilled, for chilling lowers the body's resistance to disease.

When properly employed sea baths are stimulating and invigorating.

The lower temperature of the water and the consequent loss of heat from the body accelerate metabolism and promote the elimination of wastes.

When one first enters the water there is an energetic reaction of the blood vessels in the skin, giving what is termed the "first shock," but also suffers all over the body of a tonic effect.

This is desirable for its effects, principal among which is a marked increase in the white cells of the blood.

If, however, one remains too long in the water, and thereby suffers a second chill, one not only loses the benefits of the "first shock," but also suffers all over the body of a tonic effect.

It is in this manner that "beach colds" and a variety of conditions affecting the nose, throat, sinuses and ears have their beginning.

One authority on the subject has this to say:

"Today children will spend the entire morning in an indoor swimming pool or else play around in their wet bathing suits, during which time they are not exposed to the sunbath."

The chilling of the body lowers their resistance and makes them more susceptible to pathogenic organisms present in the water or already harbored in the upper air passages.

"This is a different problem from that of the days of James Whitcomb Riley's 'Old Swimmer' who, when we were old in Nature's care and the body surfaces were kept warm and dried almost immediately in the sunshine.

Sea bathing is generally not advisable for those suffering from heart disease, rheumatism, kidney disease, bronchitis or asthma.

thing of her expectancy and youth touched Jon.

"It's a long time since I've seen you," he said.

"It has been long. Twelve days!" Nora flashed, then to hide her confusion she began to tell him breathlessly about Aunt Em and Fran and Halle, the struggles and small triumphs of every day.

"I must be very dull for you."

"No, it's exciting in a way. Each one is so ambitious, Halle is writing and Fergus more hopes to specialize some day and I am working for the first time in my life."

"That's what I do and I don't find any excitement in it. I'd like to get away. The places I'd like to see, the things I'd like to do!"

"What places, Jon?"

"I'd like to climb the Andes with a pack mule. I want danger and fighting, and to come upon an old lost city."

As he talked on strangely excited, she found herself sharing the bitter trek with him. She was beside him as they came to the gates of the lost city.

But what was it Jon was searching for?

She asked him, "Why do you go seeking strange places when in the end you never find anything but yourself?"

"You're a funny child, Nora. That's what Damon said about you."

"Damon!" Nora cried, "he doesn't like me. I saw that at once!"

She rose suddenly to face him. Their eyes met and reached the end you never find anything but yourself?"

"You don't understand her, she is hard to know."

"Perhaps Damon doesn't understand me?"

The air between them quivered with unspoken things. Jon was cool and arrogant; Nora was suddenly passionately angry. She knew that Jon thought she was jealous of Damon, she told herself fiercely, unless she were jealous of her world that was Archie's and brave, aware of prerogative. And there still smoldered the memory that Jon had told Damon these things she had confided to him alone.

The magic of the afternoon was gone. They drove silently along a dreary river road and reached the old city. Jon's face was pale and proud; Nora sat with clenched hands. She did not want him to come to dinner. But Jon went stubbornly up the steps beside her. She could not bear it. Jon would see the confusion of a Saturday night supper; he would criticize her people.

Once came to meet them at the door. Nora began to talk nonsense breathlessly before Aunt Em came in, her best gray crepe de chine donned. Nora knew, for the occasion. The shabby old back parlor had on its summer dress of flax flowery chintz and looked cool and pleasant.

Aunt Em led the way to the basement dining room. Something began to soothe Nora's feelings.

Perhaps it was because they had worked so hard to please her, the best white damask cloth was on the table and Fran had filled a blue bowl with buttercups and the candlesticks from the back parlor mantle gave a mellow glow that transformed the mean small room.

Fran came in from the kitchen with a plate of hot biscuits, her cheeks flushed, looking like a dark rose. And as she took Jon's hand something of her spirit seemed to enter the room, to force Nora to glance at Jon and see his eyes on hers begging her for forgiveness.

They were so simple and gracious, making this Saturday night dinner by their very ease and pleasure in Jon's company, something of an occasion. The dinner itself was delicious.

Fergus came in to join them over after-dinner coffee. He and Jon were congenial at once.

"I hope you'll ask me again," Jon said; "you don't know what a good time I'm having!"

Nora's spirits rose so fast they smiled at her brilliant, glowing face.

They were interrupted by the furious ringing of the bell. Nora sprang up and ran up the basement

Romania's Queen

THE PRESENT status of Helen of Romania is not clear, but it is apparent that this Greek princess is having plenty of troubles of her own.

From being Queen Mother, with absolute control over the infant King Michael, Helen is now in process of being exiled. She has lost her queenly role, the possession of her son, and is soon—if rumors are correct—to be exiled from the land.

The queen's picture have been ordered taken down from the walls of public buildings. Traffic police in the capital have been ordered to cease the practice of stopping traffic as the queen's car approaches. King Carol's red-headed charmer is reported to be enjoying full power.

The wonder is not that the royal family has been broken up, but that the country itself has managed to maintain a semblance of unity.

Those Romanians must be gluttons for punishment to put up with the diodes of the reigning family.

Mad Pursuit
BY JESSIE DOUGLAS FOX

SYNOPSIS: When the little son of Nora Lake's cousin Francis badly hurt, Nora defers her plan to move to the family home of her husband, Nicholas Trayner. That Damon, Nicholas' step-sister, and Jonathan his brother, have invited her from a sense of duty is evident, but she longs for the stability such a home will afford. From Italy comes news that her father's marriage plans have been abandoned. When Nora helps Dr. More, whose office is in her aunt's house, pull the child through, he calls her a "brick," but she rebuffs his compliment with an ungracious reply. Meanwhile her hopes crumble on receiving from Damon a letter saying that she and her father have gone away on a trip.

Chapter 21
IS NORA JEALOUS?

WHILE her thoughts turned to the old Dutch house on the river, still Nora found enchantment in these June evenings under the horse chestnut tree on Doye Street.

They were all young and hopeful, not ashamed to fling out their proudest dreams. She learned that Fergus More was bent on further study in Germany. But how this was to be done on the precarious salary that he now made, no one tried to answer. Aunt Em had a splendid idea of securing their fortunes by raising violets. Halle admitted she was writing a story.

"And you, Fran?" Nora asked.

Fran's eyes sought Fergus. They had been laughing and murmuring together.

"The thing Fran has to do," Fergus said with authority, "is to get her own story."

"On that point is nothing," Fran said humbly.

As she leaned in their laughter, Nora's old fierce rebellion against life rose in her. She would not be a part of this precarious life, waged in this narrow middle-class house.

And now Nora had spent her last cent. She must find work. It was Fran who solved the difficulty. One of the girls in Fran's office was to be married in June; perhaps Nora could do the work.

"If you want to try it, Nora, I'll help you. The work itself is mere routine. The main thing is to get up with Mr. Dusenbury's temper."

"I'll do anything," Nora said humbly.

There began for Nora days of long hard work in the office. At the end of the week Mr. Dusenbury said grudgingly that she might fit in.

On Saturday she came home when the bell rang she remembered that Fran had taken the children to the park. She leaned over the banisters to hear Aunt Em talking with Jon.

"I'd like to take Nora for a drive," she heard him say.

"You'll come back and have dinner with us?" Aunt Em asked.

If only he would refuse, but Nora could not hear his answer. She could see that Saturday night supper with his beans and brown bread and weak hot tea. Fergus coming to join them. He must refuse!

She slipped into the white crepe that Fran had made so exquisitely and ran down stairs.

Where have you been all this time? Jon greeted her pleasantly. To think of Jon was to distrust him. But to see him face to face was to be swept along on the tide of his restless vitality.

As they drove down Dove street, Nora longed to say the most arresting things, but instead she talked of the weather.

"Damon was disappointed that you wouldn't come to us," Jon said casually.

"I couldn't leave them when Dickie was in danger," Nora explained.

"He's all right now?"

"Oh yes, he's well now," Nora admitted.

"You mustn't treat us that way again. We felt that you would rather stay with your own people."

She saw how easily he had put her in the wrong.

"Where has Damon gone?" she asked.

"They've gone to a camp near Lake Placid. Mr. Van Vorst needs a change of air."

"I suppose you'll go soon?" Nora asked, trying to keep the anxiety out of her voice.

He said it would be able to get away. He was afraid. But as soon as they come back you are to come to us." He was surprised when he turned to her to see her eyes were dancing.

Jon drove along the river road. Nora knew where they were going now. They drove down a winding lane to the old Trayner house, sunning themselves on the lawn.

Leaving the car in the driveway, they walked toward the river and sat down at last with the river washing against the pebbly shore.

She leaned back against a tree trunk, her dark head bare. Her eyes were on the river and some- thing began to soothe Nora's feelings.

OPINIONS OF OTHERS

Home Building Boom In Prospect

St. Worth Star Telegram.

THE United States Building and Loan League, after a survey to determine the degree of depression in its own field, finds to its own surprise that borrowers are meeting their installment payments on home mortgages as promptly as in some of the so-called boom years. In addition, the league finds an increasing amount of funds seeking investment in the building and loan field, and increased interest in the purchase of homes.

From these facts, the league judges that the depression probably was never as bad as some imagined, and that hereafter it might have been it is now passing.

The conditions are favorable for a spectacular revival of business in the construction and sale of residences. It is true that values, once considerably swollen in some areas, have been trimmed back to below normal. There are actually many genuine bargains in homes to be picked up now, and there are funds available for loans for purchase.

The home building and selling industry is in a healthy state to support a great increase in its business volume.

With plans and movements designed to facilitate the purchase and ownership of homes, now in progress, the remainder of 1931 should be a big year in the building industry.

BY ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—The girl who was Joan Crawford before she settled down to love and marriage was not the actress that Joan Crawford's name has become.

The Joan who used to be gay and paddy and voluble a h o u t the set has become a young lady who sits quietly on the sidelines or in her dressing room, sewing, reading, or studying.

She has become, with the change, a better actress.

Which brings us to the point, which may be of at least casual interest, that most of Hollywood's big dramatic stars are those who live more or less within themselves, generating their own artistic energies, rather than mingling constantly with the throng, drawing stimulation from crowds.

As she leaned in their laughter, Nora's old fierce rebellion against life rose in her. She would not be a part of this precarious life, waged in this narrow middle-class house.

And now Nora had spent her last cent. She must find work. It was Fran who solved the difficulty. One of the girls in Fran's office was to be married in June; perhaps Nora could do the work.

"If you want to try it, Nora, I'll help you. The work itself is mere routine. The main thing is to get up with Mr. Dusenbury's temper."

"I'll do anything," Nora said humbly.

There began for Nora days of long hard work in the office. At the end of the week Mr. Dusenbury said grudgingly that she might fit in.

On Saturday she came home when the bell rang she remembered that Fran had taken the children to the park. She leaned over the banisters to hear Aunt Em talking with Jon.

"I'd like to take Nora for a drive," she heard him say.

"You'll come back and have dinner with us?" Aunt Em asked.

If only he would refuse, but Nora could not hear his answer. She could see that Saturday night supper with his beans and brown bread and weak hot tea. Fergus coming to join them. He must refuse!

She slipped into the white crepe that Fran had made so exquisitely and ran down stairs.

Where have you been all this time? Jon greeted her pleasantly. To think of Jon was to distrust him. But to see him face to face was to be swept along on the tide of his restless vitality.

As they drove down Dove street, Nora longed to say the most arresting things, but instead she talked of the weather.

"Damon was disappointed that you wouldn't come to us," Jon said casually.

"I couldn't leave them when Dickie was in danger," Nora explained.

"He's all right now?"

"Oh yes, he's well now," Nora admitted.

"You mustn't treat us that way again. We felt that you would rather stay with your own people."

She saw how easily he had put her in the wrong.

"Where has Damon gone?" she asked.

"They've gone to a camp near Lake Placid. Mr. Van Vorst needs a change of air."

"I suppose you'll go soon?" Nora asked, trying to keep the anxiety out of her voice.

He said it would be able to get away. He was afraid. But as soon as they come back you are to come to us." He was surprised when he turned to her to see her eyes were dancing.

Jon drove along the river road. Nora knew where they were going now. They drove down a winding lane to the old Trayner house, sunning themselves on the lawn.

Leaving the car in the driveway, they walked toward the river and sat down at last with the river washing against the pebbly shore.

She leaned back against a tree trunk, her dark head bare. Her eyes were on the river and some- thing began to soothe Nora's feelings.

Heat can't break down 997's Friction - Fighting Molecules

Overheated motors are one of the prime causes of inflated repair bills. But what can heat do against 997? Heat and friction can't get in their deadly work till the motor oil thins out, breaks down.

And Humble 997 Oil, true to its name, has registered a new high in boiling points—997° Fahrenheit. So every 997 user is now guaranteed a protection heretofore unattainable against heat and loss by evaporation. This means lower oil consumption. Humble has made that possible by selecting only 2% of the crude—the part that contains friction-fighting molecules only.

Then special refining gives them an extra fighting edge, so they won't break down.

Let the thermometer go up. Get your Humble 997 Oil at the nearest Humble dealer's, and then smile with the sun.

Above all else, you want one thing in a motor oil

Hundred Million Excise Stamps Ordered For Cigarette Tax Work

AUSTIN, June 5 (INS)—State Treasurer Charles Lockhart expects one hundred million packages of cigarettes to go up into smoke in the next few months.

His expectations are reflected in a recommendation to the board of control for the purchase of that many excise stamps, which will denote payment of the three cent per package tax on the smoking.

The recommendation was made to the board of control, which body will receive bids on printing the stamps June 9.

The cigarette tax stamps will bear the seal of the state of Texas. Lockhart having decided against using the picture of General Sam Houston, or other Texas heroes on the stamps.

The right to the bill, voted by the last legislature, will go into effect August 1.

James Dennon of Austin has been appointed supervisor of the new cigarette tax division in the state treasurer's department, Lockhart announced.

The new supervisor was at one time secretary to the state industrial commission board.

Hills Bros. Follow Similar Rule by Roasting Coffee a Little at a Time

By adding the halves of fruit to the hot syrup a few at a time, the boiling temperature is maintained and the fruit cooks to firm, tender goodness.

This principle is apparent in Hill Bros. process of roasting coffee and the result is a uniform, delicious flavor no other coffee has. A constant stream of expertly blended green coffee is introduced into the roaster in automatically measured lots of about three pounds. As it passes through, uniform heat roasts it a little at a time. When the operation is over, every berry is roasted to an even degree that could never be secured by any bulk method of roasting coffee.

This process is fittingly called Controlled Roasting. It was originated and patented by Hills Bros. and develops a savory, delicious flavor that no other process can equal.

Because Hills Bros. Coffee is packed in vacuum, it is always fresh. By this process, air, which destroys the flavor of coffee, is taken out of the can and kept out. Ordinary cans, even if air-tight, do not keep coffee fresh. Ask for Hill Bros. Coffee by name and look for the Araba—the trade mark—on the can. Sold by grocers everywhere.

Home Building Boom In Prospect

St. Worth Star Telegram.

THE United States Building and Loan League, after a survey to determine the degree of depression in its own field, finds to its own surprise that borrowers are meeting their installment payments on home mortgages as promptly as in some of the so-called boom years. In addition, the league finds an increasing amount of funds seeking investment in the building and loan field, and increased interest in the purchase of homes.

From these facts, the league judges that the depression probably was never as bad as some imagined, and that hereafter it might have been it is now passing.

The conditions are favorable for a spectacular revival of business in the construction and sale of residences. It is true that values, once considerably swollen in some areas, have been trimmed back to below normal. There are actually many genuine bargains in homes to be picked up now, and there are funds available for loans for purchase.

The home building and selling industry is in a healthy state to support a great increase in its business volume.

With plans and movements designed to facilitate the purchase and ownership of homes, now in progress, the remainder of 1931 should be a big year in the building industry.

Miss Alma Rueckart Provides Original Scenic Effects With Silver Moon As Setting For Surprise Shower

Miss Alma Rueckart was hostess to the friends of Miss Elizabeth Crain for one of the loveliest bridal showers of the season Thursday evening.

The living room was decorated with streamers of pink and green, the bride's colors; and the dining room with bouquets of roses.

Everyone was asked to register in the bride's book, which was then presented to the honoree.

An archery contest preceded the bridal shower. After several guests had made attempts to shoot the moon motif, in the moon guessing game, Miss Charlotte Moseley won first prize.

As she wound the ribbon she drew into the living room a large pink and green slip laden with gifts.

The beautiful and useful gifts were unwrapped and displayed by Miss Crain.

At the refreshment hour the guests were served cake with pink and green icing.

Ray Simmons, the director, says that Bill is handling the comedy like a real showman.

AUSTIN, June 5. (AP)—Students at the University of Texas are not as bad as they used to be, if reports of Austin police are accurate. The number of student law violators has decreased despite a substantial increase in enrollment. Traffic and liquor laws were the ones most violated by students, according to police, with few students involved in felony cases. The records show the same student has not been required to appear in court a second time and that policemen on the university beat have no more trouble than policemen in other sections. Failure of the students to observe the traffic lights was criticized by police.
