Local Organizations Pledge Council Co-operation in Traffic Regulation

Swift New Destroyer to Join Fleet Soon

Launched at Kearney, N. J., as president Roosevelt was indicating that the United States would not be permitted to lag behind should other nations build beyond Washington treaty limits, the U. S. S. Flusser, pictured floating on the Passaic river, is expected to be ready to join the fleet within 60 days. The destroyer is one of sixteen provided in the 1933 building program.

ACTION URGED IN TRAFFIC MATTER

Committee Reports on Projects Submitted to the WPA

That the people of Memphis are directly behind the City Council in its drive for improved traffic conditions in the city was evidenced at last night's meeting of the body, when representatives of nine local clubs and organizations were present, to pledge their support in the enforcement of traffic regulations.

Organizations who were represented at the meeting were the Memphis Insurance Exchange, Senior P.-T. A., Junior P.-T. A., West Ward P.-T. A., Rotary Club, Chamber of Commerce, Junior Chamber of Commerce, American Legion and the Priscilla Club. Short talks, pledging the co-operation of the organizations were made by J. F. Watson, Fred V. Clark, Supt. Davis, Mrs. H. B. Estes and Mrs. Clyde Milam.

Mayor Whaley thanked the representatives, and citizens present for their interest, and assured them that the Council would use every effort in the control of the local traffic situation.

During the business session of the Council, the traffic situation was discussed at length. It was decided that no more warnings would be given drivers at fault, but that traffic violations would in future bring complaints and fines.

Chief of Police Huddleston was instructed to file complaints against violators, and, if necessary, it was decided to put on extra traffic officers for a concerted drive against traffic evils.

WPA Projects
The committee in charge of WPA projects made its report to the Council at last night's meeting. This committee was composed of Temple H. Deaver and Chas. Kinslow.

In the matter of the project for graveling the streets of the city, the committee reported that an application had been made to the WPA for funds for this work, and that W. A. Thompson had been engaged to prepare plans and specifications for same. Mr. Thompson, according to the committee, took the plans to Lubbock, where they were submitted to the district officials, seemed well pleased with the project and believed the application and plans amply complete for action.

In the Broome Park project matter, the committee reported that they had secured an option (Continued on Page 8)

Public Address System to Arrive Soon is Believed

May Be Ready For Friday Game

An order has been placed for a public address system for Memphis by the local Chamber of Commerce, and the equipment is expected to arrive within a short time. It is thought that it might be available for use at the Memphis-LeFors football game here Friday night.

The set, which will consist of a "mike" and two loud speakers, is modern and should take care of a crowd up to 5,000. The Chamber of Commerce will be custodian for the public address system, and Si Wood will be technician.

The address system will be supplied free for use as occasion for need may arise at gatherings at the courthouse, about the square, the Cyclone Stadium, high school and the American Legion Hall, it was said.

It will be available for private entertainments and to other towns and communities of the county when needed at a small rental cost. It will not be used for commercial purposes, Chamber of Commerce officials stated.

Two Conferences . . . Same Situation

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

By WILLIS THORNTON
 NEA Service Staff Correspondent
 WASHINGTON, Oct. 2.—In a rather quiet way, something happened the other night which may have far-reaching effects.

The American Federation of Government Employees slid an amendment into its constitution. This empowers the AFGE to organize all city, county, and state employes throughout the country.

This has never been tried before. Since there are estimated to be perhaps 4,000,000 such employes, you can see that the possibilities are without limit. If successful, this move might well create an organization as strong as to have a definite direct influence on government itself.

Since 1932, when the AFGE was established, there have been two union organizations competing for the 717,812 employes now on the federal payroll.

The National Federation of Federal Employees is the older, founded in 1918. It claims 44,000 members.

The AFGE, started in 1932 with American Federation of Labor backing, has something more than 20,000 members.

Between the two, with some 65,000 members, they have succeeded in organizing fewer than 10 per cent of the federal government workers. There is growing bitterness between the two organizations, and recent proposals to merge them were turned down with fierce decision.

But now the AFGE turns from the purely federal field to all employes of all government, local as well as national. If it succeeds in building a board national organization among them all, it would be by long odds the greatest "white collar" labor organization, and would command great influence.

That influence could be for good or evil, according to the leadership.

It could, for instance, be a strong influence against the spoils system and local corruption. And it could also build up the "vested interest" of government employes in their jobs to the point where reductions and economies in government payrolls would be forever impossible.

You read about the impressive tributes to General Pershing in Europe on the occasion of his 75th birthday recently. But you didn't see the informal greetings that came flooding into his office at the War Department.

Yes, the general still keeps an office there, a big, old-fashioned room with a sign above the door which says, "The General of the Armies."

Some of those greetings were really touching, cheap little pennon postcards with a spot of blue ribbon, like one "From a mother who has a son in the service in the Philippines." Or the letter "Ten years ago you had your picture taken at Bahia, Blanco, Argentine, holding a baby in your arms. Since my birthday falls on the same day as yours, I want to send you best wishes. . . I am very proud of that picture and also of the one of you which you autographed. . ."

All such are gathered together by Capt. George E. Adams, QMC, who has served as the general's secretary since Mexican border days of 1916.

He acknowledges them as best he can, and forwards them to Pershing. More than 400 of them came this year.

beat rapidly. She remarked, with a confidential smile, "I think he's even more attractive now than he used to be at 16, Susie!"

"Seem like he think the same thing 'bout you," Susie stated.

Elaine said, "I'm awfully ro—" (Continued from page six)

FIRE PREVENTION

THE coming of Fire Prevention Week, which will be observed over all the nation next week, makes it worthwhile to meditate on what fire prevention means to you as an individual, a taxpayer, a homeowner and worker.

Fire prevention saves . . . yours and your loved ones. Thousands of people are now cremated each year . . . because someone was careless.

Fire Prevention is the friend of the home. Without it your home may be turned to ashes . . . and insurance can never replace the many intangible values each home represents. Money cannot compensate for everything.

Fire prevention tends to keep taxes down. Each time a fire destroys taxing property, thus removing it from the taxbills, higher taxes must be paid by all other property within the community.

Fire Prevention keeps insurance rates down. Over a period of years, the rate for each locality is based upon fire loss . . . many fires mean high rates.

Fire prevention is the friend of employment. When a fire destroys a business, jobs are lost, and thousands of dollars in purchasing power is lost with them. Untold privation and misery can result.

Fire prevention means progressive towns and cities. Cases are on record here a single fire, destroying a town's main industry, has resulted in permanent retrogression, at the expense of property and other values in the community.

Prevent fires . . . and save lives and money. Do your part during

The BLUE DOOR

By Rachel Mack © 1935 NEA Service, Inc.

BEGIN HERE TODAY
 RUTH WOODSON, pretty, high-spirited girl of 19, in search of work, seeks refuge from a storm in an old stone house with a blue door in the little town of Worthville. The queer old caretaker, BERTHA GIBBS, also known as PENNY, mistakes Ruth for ELAINE CHALMERS, whose grandfather built the house. Ruth falls in love with JOHN McNEILL, the young man next door, and resolves to stay on a while, posing as Elaine.

Elaine Chalmers, at Graycastle College, vows in a sorority meeting to win the love of her childhood hero, John McNeill. She plans to go to Worthville. John receives a letter from her and realizes that the girl in the old Hunter house is a fake. He loves her and decides to tell her so. He is called out of town and leaves a note of explanation for Ruth, but old Bertha does not deliver it. Ruth believes John has gone away in disgust. That night she saves from suicide DUNCAN HUNTER, Elaine's uncle, who has escaped from an asylum where he has been unjustly detained. She persuades him to prove his sanity legally. As Ruth is leaving for good, Elaine arrives and discovers that Ruth has used her name. She talks cruelly and Ruth leaves. She is picked up while hitch-hiking and given a job as maid in Cleveland.

John, meanwhile, is hurrying home to see Ruth.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXIX

Elaine, hatless, her hands in the pockets of her sports coat, went through the althea hedge into the McNeill estate. She noted with approval the perfect condition of the grounds, the almost smart charm of the Victorian house, which had been altered just enough for modern comfort and yet had been left carefully in character.

She thought, "Not half bad! If I should decide to do over the Hunter place the estates would look rather neat together. A good landscape artist could arrange a uniform planting. Maybe a swimming pool halfway between and a sunken garden somewhere in the rear. I could have lots of guests from the east. Higate could arrange for a private car when I needed it."

She rang the bell, and presently was admitted by Susie.

Elaine said, "Do you remember me, Susie? I used to visit next door at my grandfather's house—"

Susie beamed with interest. "Yes'm, I shore does, Miss Elaine! I's been wantin' to see you ever since you been ovah there. Me an' Ebe, we been watchin' for a glimpse of you for a week."

"Oh, have you?" replied Elaine. She had forgotten for the moment about the other girl. Should she tell old Susie of the creature's hoax, or not? Perhaps John would admire her the more for being generous. She decided to let it pass.

Susie said, "Sunday night when you come for tea, me an' Ebe was off."

Elaine forced herself to smile. She thought, "So the little devil's been here for tea!" She asked Susie, "When do you expect Mr. John home from Washington?"

Susie brightened. "We done had a special delivery lettah from Mrs. McNeill 'bout a hour ago. It seem like Miss Florence's husband an' little girl is goin' to get well. Praise de Lawd. We shore has been in trouble since dat nasty-lookin' telegram done come Monday."

As Elaine Chalmers looked infinitely interested and sympathetic, she continued: "Mrs. McNeill say it was a mighty bad accident. A truck hit de car an' bashed it in. Mr. Burr's hurt worst. He's a great help to de president, Mr. Elwell Burr is!"

"Oh, yes," agreed Elaine, very willing to cater to Susie's pride in her family. "I often read about him in the newspapers. I remember when Miss Florence married him, too. I was about 8 years old that summer and I went to the wedding at St. Stephen's church with my grandmother. It was the first wedding I'd ever seen."

Susie was charmed by these recollections, and continued to be expansive. "Mrs. McNeill done say in her lettah she think Mr. John'll be comin' home any day now. Mr. John's a mighty smart business man, Miss Elaine. When he was jus' 21 years old he finish' college. For three or four years now he's been helpin' to run his papa's factory an' doin' fine with it. Seem like he 'herited his papa's judgment."

"No wonder you're proud of him," Elaine said. As she talked to Susie she strolled about the wide hall and living room, casually glancing at book titles and framed photographs. She noticed that the McNeills read the same books and magazines which the people in New York were reading. On one of the bookcases was a silver-framed photograph of the most interesting young man she had ever seen. She knew at once it was John McNeill. Her heart

How Calotabs Help Nature To Throw Off a Bad Cold

Millions have found in Calotabs a most valuable aid in the treatment of colds. They take one or two tablets the first night and repeat the third or fifth night if needed.

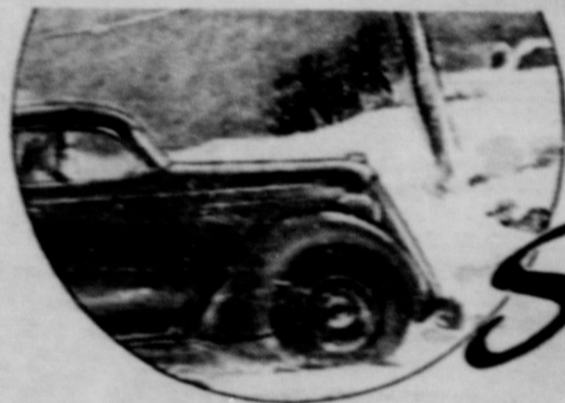

How do Calotabs help Nature throw off a cold? First, Calotabs is one of the most thorough and dependable of all intestinal eliminants, thus cleansing the intestinal tract of the germ-laden mucus and toxins.

Second, Calotabs are direct kidney promoters, promoting the elimination of cold poisons from the system. Calotabs serve the double purpose of a purgative and diuretic, which are needed in the treatment of colds.

Calotabs are quite economical—only twenty-five cents for the package, ten cents for the package. (Adv.)

SKIP COLD-WEATHER RISK...MAKE SURE YOUR ENGINE

stays oiled

Conoco is not the only oil refined by modern methods. But notice what all the usual processes are said to take out. Then notice what the exclusive Germ Process—fully patented—PUTS IN.

Nothing vague about this process.

It tops off everything else known to Refinery Science, by putting in the Hidden Quart which makes your engine stay oiled.

You can park your car for hours in blizzards; stand for days in a cold garage. But you cannot make a dragging, expensive, engine-eating start.

Unlike other oil, no matter how free-flowing, Conoco Germ Processed Oil needn't wait for your starter or oil pump. The Hidden Quart is up on guard in advance. It hasn't drained down because it can't. The Germ Process has let it "marry" into the inner surfaces of your engine for good... a strange though natural "affinity" well known to scientists.

Even the new copper-lead, high-lead and cadmium-alloy bearings, as well as conventional babbitt bearings, are far better protected by Conoco Germ Processed Oil than by plain mineral oils. Scientific tests have proved this.

But millions whose only laboratory is under the hood, can tell you a lot about the Hidden Quart and Germ Processing. They'll tell you the battery stays up, the oil level stays up, the old winter worry and expense stay away.

Detroit Owes the 1935 Pennant to Cochrane

FIERY LEADERSHIP DRIVES TIGERS INTO LEAD SECOND TIME

By LESLIE AVERY

United Press Staff Correspondent

DETROIT, Oct. 2, 1935.—The best investment ever made by Frank J. Navin, president of the Detroit baseball club, was the $100,000 he paid Connie Mack for Gordon Stanley Cochrane in the latter part of 1933.

Cochrane, the name by which he is better known, today is Navin's judgement in both the system of managing and the managerial ability which led the Detroit Tigers to their second consecutive American pennant.

In two full seasons at the helm the fiery Cochrane has induced a group of youngsters—many of them with a few veterans—into the best balanced club in the league. Last year he brought the pennant for the first time in 25 years when at the beginning of the season his club wasn't even in a first division berth.

Seasons Dope Upset

Many observers and writers have predicted Detroit's '34 campaign would be a fluke evidenced by the early picking of Cleveland, Boston and Boston to end this season above the Tigers.

Cochrane, friendly and confident off the field, didn't argue with the working. And when at the beginning of the season it began to look like the dopsters were just right, he kept on working, changing positions, benching players who were not hitting and re-former starting hurlers to work.

There is a serious business man in Cochrane, who celebrated his birthday last April. He wants to win and there is no alibi for him. High-strung and a bundle of nerves when losing, Cochrane is kind and affable when his team is winning. It is said he rarely eats after Detroit wins a ball game. He goes back to work, play by play, pick the places where the team is bad, and sometimes broods over them all night.

Consistent .300 Hitter

Catcher Cochrane is one of the best in the business. He has a lifetime batting average of .321, and continued the pace this year. In his 12 years in the American League he has failed to better the .300 mark only three times. His high mark was .357 in 1930.

Next to Roger Bresnahan, Cochrane is considered the fastest man ever to catch major-league baseball. He attributes his speed to the fact he once aspired to be a track athlete, and spent long hours running before he ever thought about baseball.

He is a deadly thrower. His peg to second base has no superior in the game today, and players hesitate to attempt to steal when he is behind the plate.

Long known as the most able handler of pitchers in the league, Cochrane is also adept at "keying" up his players before a game. His dressing room inspirations are not lengthy, but sometimes sharp. Always he seems to have the right word for the particular moment.

Attended Boston College

After starring in football and baseball at Boston College, Cochrane broke into the professional ranks in 1923 with the Saranac, N. Y., club. When it went bankrupt he moved over to Dover, Del., in the Eastern Shore League. At the end of the season he was sold to Portland in the Pacific Coast League. Mickey had ambitions to be an outfielder, and threatened to quit baseball if Portland didn't change his position.

But when Cochrane got with Connie Mack in 1925, he went on catching. In 1928 he was adjudged the most valuable player in the American League.

Chief Hobby Is Music

Outside of baseball—which to him is a business—Cochrane's chief hobby is music. He likes jazz bands and his favorite instrument is the saxophone. He can play one expertly, and his favorites are the

STAR — Charley Gehring, second base, is game's greatest keystone.

POWER — Hank Greenberg, first sacker, is Tiger punch at plate.

Trio of Bengal Bombers hot blue tunes. Aviation fascinates him and clothes are a passion. He always is dressed in the latest fashion. His reading tastes run to mystery novels.

But once he walks on the diamond, he forgets all of those things. He is a mar of baseball, driving and fighting until the last out. That owner Navin thinks he got his $100,000 worth is evidenced by the $10,000 check he presented Cochrane at the end of the 1934 season.

Four Regulars Out Of Cyclone Lineup

Coach Chesty Walker was again singing the blues yesterday as he made drastic changes in his plans for this week's work, in preparation for the first home game of the year against the LeFors Pirates here Friday night, and he evidently had good reason for his pessimistic attitude.

Four regular members of the Cyclone football squad may be out of the game Friday night with injuries. Casualties have hit the local squad so hard this week that the Cyclone mentor has changed his plan for the week of stiff scrimmages and hard blocking and tackling sessions to a week of comparatively easy work-outs.

Fred Sanders is the latest casualty for the locals. He has a twisted knee. Ligaments were torn loose yesterday afternoon when Claud Ferrell, halfback, blocked the big 190-pound tackle during blocking practice. Sanders witnessed the work-out from the side lines yesterday and was not in uniform. It is problematical whether or not he will be ready for action against the highly touted LeFors team.

The sorest spot in the Cyclone line-up and the one that is causing Coach Walker the most worry is the fact that the two regular ends are on the bench with injuries. Malone, 130 pounder who holds down the right end position, has been out for a week with an injured shoulder. Ben Scott, regular left end, received a hurt leg in last Friday's fracas with Wheeler. He was in uniform yesterday afternoon but took no part in the more rigorous work.

In an effort to bolster the flanks, Coach Walker has shifted Dennis Walker, flashy halfback, to left end. Walker handles the ball better than any other man on the team and should be well qualified to fill the shoes of Scott. Garvis Davis will ably hold down the right flank post. The only two men held in reserve for the end positions will be Bruce Sitton and

JUNIORS MEET ESTELLINE CUBS

First of Number of Games Scheduled This Fall

A squad of 22 football players will depart this afternoon at 4 o'clock in cars for Estelline, where they will tangle with the Estelline Cub's second team. The local players are men who came out for the Cyclone squad but were turned back by Coach Walker because of their size and inexperience.

Arthur Howard, heretofore assistant football coach, is coaching the crew which will go to form a major portion of next year's Cyclone squad. The squad will play regularly matched games almost every week, Coach Howard said.

Jim Colvin, a couple of rookies, Colvin has been ailing all year with an injured shoulder.

Raymond Powers is the fourth member of the first team on the injured list. He received a severe kick in the groin in yesterday's practice session which may prove more serious than was at first thought.

"Despite our crippled team, we'll be in there scrapping Friday night, and the LeFors bunch will know they've been in a ball game before it's over," the Memphis coach said. The boys chorused their answer by running through a peppy practice session yesterday.

Mrs. L. L. Moses, who underwent an operation at the Odon Sanitarium a week ago, is still very ill.

leaved to hear how well things are going in Washington. Have Mr. John come over to see me the minute he gets back, will you Susie?"

When she entered the Hunter hall she saw a telegram lying on the table. It was addressed to Miss Elaine Chalmers.

She opened it and read John's message, intended for Ruth.

Elaine's emotions were mixed. She was elated to know that she would be face to face with him in the morning, yet she was angered to think of him sending an affectionate telegram to "that nifty little tramp."

She sauntered into the dining room and was surprised to find the table set for two. Chrysanthemums were in a vase in the center, and at each end of the table was a cover, neatly laid for a three course meal.

"Penny" she called, hearing her moving around in the kitchen. "Have you invited somebody to dinner with me?"

There was no answer from the kitchen, but behind her someone entered the room from the hall. Elaine turned and faced a tall, distinguished-looking man of about 50 whose lean face wore a quizzical expression. They looked at one another.

"Uncle Duncan!" Elaine said in a queer voice.

"Elaine," he replied, taking her hand and patting it.

He said, "Dinner isn't ready. Come with me to the library. We can talk there."

He led the way and she followed. This took a certain amount of courage, but no one had ever accused Elaine Chalmers of lacking courage. Having so recently heard Duncan Hunter's story from her mother's hysterical lips, she did not relish this unexpected encounter with him.

They sat down and faced each other. The girl said to herself, "Steady, Elaine. Maybe he's not as normal as he looks. He tried to kill a man once. He's been locked up. They're looking for him now."

He seemed to read her thoughts, for he said, "You've heard about my walking off from the asylum, of course. It's not been in the newspapers, but I suppose they informed your mother—"

He said, "I pulled it off rather neatly. Since I've regained my sense of humor I've had some good laughs over it."

Elaine smiled sympathetically. "They told Gwen about it in the letter, and she told me. You were clever!" (She was thinking, "Can he be as sane as he looks, or will he go off presently?")

Duncan Hunter said, "I'm going back to give myself up tomorrow. Then I'll get a sanity hearing and win my freedom. I've not tried that process before because I was under the impression I'd killed a man. Your parent, my dear niece—" his voice and face became bitter—"permitted me to think my victim had died."

Elaine flushed. "It was rotten of them!" she admitted. "But don't blame Gwen too harshly, Uncle Duncan. She's under Higate's thumb. She's been awfully cut-up about you, really, but hasn't had backbone enough to stand up against my stepfather and clear things up for you. Besides, it seems she believed you insane and thought you'd be better off confined."

"She could have come to see me," said Duncan Hunter bitterly. Then, seeing his niece's discomfort, he dismissed the past with a gesture and began to question her about her college life. By the time Bertha came to call them to dinner Elaine was convinced that he was entirely sane, and had resolved to take a stand beside him against her stepfather.

Old Bertha, finding them thus engaged in friendly conversation, felt a vast relief.

Mrs. Jones telephoned from the beauty parlor to say she was going to a movie after work and would not be home before 12 o'clock. She felt safe about the girls, she told Ruth, since she was with them.

Ruth was rather glad. It meant she would not have to discuss Maude and Gracie Louise and the house and the work with Mrs. Jones before morning. Such of the evening as remained would be her own.

She got the two protesting children to bed, saw that they were properly covered and turned out the light. Their vicious quarreling went on and on, but she knew that she lacked the authority to put a stop to it. She would simply have to ignore it.

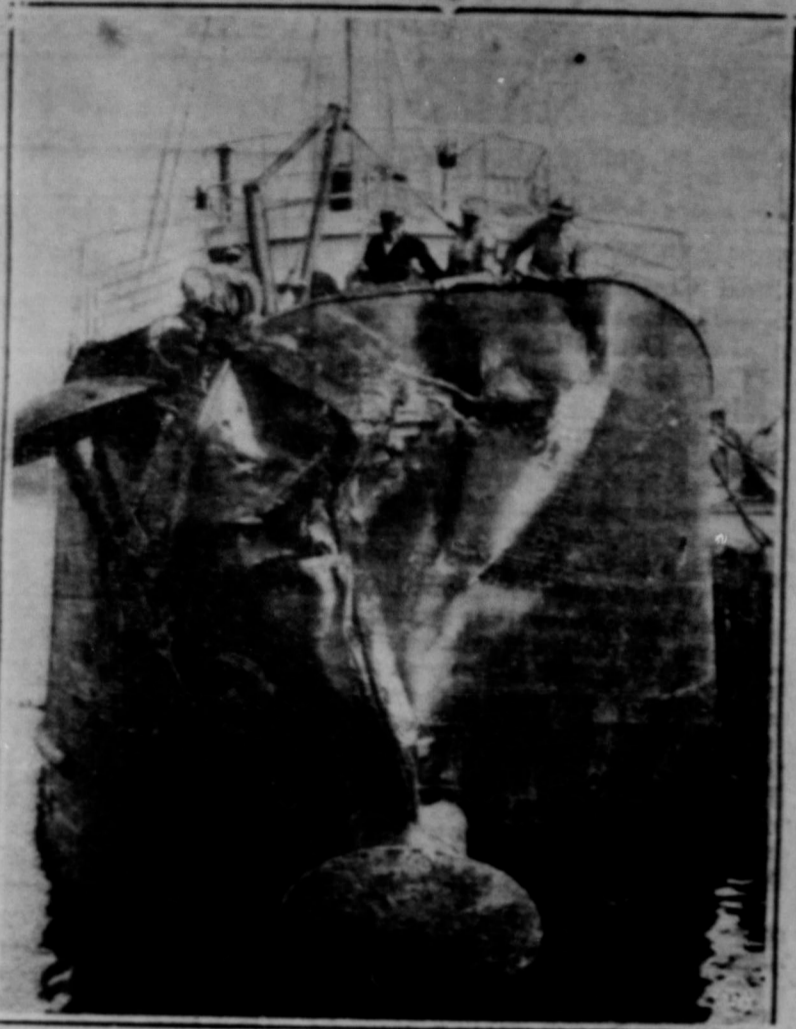

She wanted to read, but the two "property" books she had brought with her were an advanced algebra and a Latin grammar. Neither seemed readable. Mrs. Jones' house held no hint of a library—no books, no periodicals save a few coiled movie magazines stamped "Ella's Band Box."

Ruth went upstairs again to the little room that she must now call home. She thought she would suffocate with a dread of the future. She thought, "I must get myself a card from a public library. I must find things to do here in my room, because I'll be here all winter. . . . It can't be as bad as I think it is tonight—or can it? I suppose there're thousands of girls just as dreary as I am, just as lonely and bored—"

There was a stubby pencil in her purse. She fished it out smoothed a piece of wrapping paper and began to write an imaginary letter to John McNeill. She wrote:

"Dearest John: I wonder if you'll care when you come home and find me gone? Or is that what you wanted to happen? I know it was dreadful for me to pretend to be what I was not. But the thing just happened. I suppose Elaine Chalmers will fascinate you when you see her. I think, dearest, she's come out to Ohio for that very well and I mean to make very purpose. I called her a wasp and she called me a tramp. We were both right. However, I have a job now and have stopped wandering for a time. I'm taking care of a woman's house and two per-

This Is What She Wrote---

Dear Girls:

Maybe some of you think that marrying a boy you've known all your life, and settling down to keeping house, isn't very exciting. Especially when you're only 21 and want to have a good time while you're young.

I thought that. And then I met another man who had been lots of places and had a line almost any girl would fall for. He had plenty of money to spend, too, though he never would tell me just what his business was.

Pretty soon I broke with the boy I'd known so long. I'd made up my mind to marry this other man. I was sure I was in love with him, but—oh, I can't tell you all the rest. I want you to read my story in the new serial "The Golden Feather". Maybe you'll blame me for being a silly little fool. I blame myself enough—now. Anyhow, please read "The Golden Feather".

Yours very sincerely,
Jean Dunn

THE CAPITOL JIGSAW

AUSTIN, Texas, Oct. 1. — The Rangers have a new captain, but he won't wear a six-gun, tenguillon hat or other accepted paraphernalia of the famous man-hunters.

He is Major Edward Bowes, an announcer of amateur radio programs. Governor Allred recently made him an honorary "Centennial Captain of Texas Rangers," adding "I am not seeking an audition."

Major Bowes, accepted the appointment, said an honorary captain of Texas Rangers, "certainly rated higher than the colonels most governors appoint."

Jesse Jones, head of the reconstruction finance corporation and Mrs. Jones will be guest of Governor and Mrs. Allred at the mansion when Jones visits Austin Oct. 7, for the hanging of his portrait in the Senate chamber.

"All Texas is proud of the splendid record you have made which has attracted the admiration of the nation," Allred telegraphed Jones.

The State paid $500 for the portrait.

Committeemen who have had experience with House action on bills they have prepared, do not attach great importance to precise figures.

A sub-committee preparing a pension bill blocked out general provisions and instructed Chairman Bob Calvert to write the final draft. There was discussion about the salary of pension board members.

"Put down $10 a day," someone said. "It doesn't make much difference. Everybody in the House will have his own ideas."

"Make it $4,000 a year," a member suggested. "OK. Here she goes."

Governor Allred declined to comment on the announcement for re-election of Ernest O. Thompson, chairman of the railroad commission. He also refused to discuss his own intentions.

from Mr. Broome on either 30 or 50 acres of park land, agreeing to pay $1000 for 30 acres, or $30 per acre if 50 acres were needed.

The city has made a proposition to the Commissioners Court for county participation in the matter, and it is believed sure that the county will do its part toward the park, if a PWA grant can be secured. The city is to furnish the ground and the county will furnish engineering supervision and labor. It is believed that about $18,000 can be secured from the WPA for this project if it is approved.

The city has been notified that their application for funds from the PWA for refinishing the City Hall has been approved and will be available at once. As soon as the money is here, work on repainting both the interior and exterior of the building will be begun.

The water company applied to the Council for permission to cut the paving on the north side of the square for the installation of a larger water line to the courthouse.

After quite a bit of discussion, the matter was passed until a later date, due to the fact that the body felt that the pavement should not be tampered with and the street blocked until after the busy cotton season is over. This will perhaps delay the granting of permission for this work until about the first of the year.

The Council voted to affiliate with the League of Texas Municipalities for the coming year, as a member.

A report was heard on the progress of the sewage disposal plant improvements, and this work will probably be completed within the next two weeks.

A request for a raise in pay for the librarian at the Carnegie Library was passed until later, as was the request for a donation for the Memphis Gold Medal Band.

Bills for the past month were read by the secretary and ordered paid.
