AS JOHN DILLINGER FALLS

The United States' public enemy No. 1 is pictured above as he lay dead after being shot down by a squad of department of justice marksmen in Chicago. Fifteen federal officers, aided by several Chicago police, lay in wait for John Dillinger, notorious outlaw, to come from a small theater on Chicago's north side Sunday night, after the robber, murderer and bandit had been recognized when he entered the picture house accompanied by a girl and the federal men notified. When he came out he was shot down almost without warning. (Additional pictures on the killing of Dillinger, printed in The Democrat before any other newspaper in this territory, may be found on page 8.)

HAMILTON, PALS OBLITERATE TRACKS

Clues as to Whereabouts of Trio Are Lost

HUNTSVILLE, July 24.—Raymond Hamilton, "Blackie" Thompson and Joe Palmer, the first trio ever to escape from the state penitentiary death house, today had obliterated their tracks, and watching officers throughout the Southwest had no reports as to their whereabouts.

Prison authorities are endeavoring to establish the identities of confederates who waited outside the prison in two automobiles and whisked the desperadoes away.

It is understood that authorities are making some progress but they refused to give any information.

Prison officials said today that Charlie Frazier probably would recover unless complications arise. Frazier was injured during the attempted break, in which the trio escaped and "Whitey" Walker was killed.

Members of the prison board came to Huntsville today for a special meeting to make a searching investigation into Sunday's break.

It was rumored that former ranger captain Frank Hamer has entered the hunt. Prison officials and state authorities refused to comment.

John Dillinger is Ready for Return To Native Indiana

CHICAGO, July 24.—The body of John Dillinger, whose career as a desperado was ended by bullets Sunday night, was ready for return to his native Indiana today in a dingy, dust-covered hearse.

Federal authorities, meanwhile kept a guarded secret the name of the man or men whose pistols felled Dillinger.

Published reports that the "purger" was Samuel A. Cowell, first assistant to Melvin Purvis, head of the department of justice bureau of investigation here, was denied by Purvis.

Seeking Dillinger's hideout, 200 federal agents and city police engaged in a house to house canvass of the Lakeview district on the city's north side.

Purvis refused to discuss reports that a woman dressed in red lured the desperado to his end. He said probably the person who gave the tip would never be known.

Two thousand, 848 persons paid their poll taxes in Hall county this year, which is said to be considerably above normal.

The above figure does not include "unders" and "overs"—those who are 21 and are getting their first vote free, or those beyond the age limit.

How'd you like to drop like a bullet through space for about five miles? That's what Nikolai Evdokimov (above), Soviet flier, did near Leningrad when he bailed out at an altitude of 26,775 feet and hurtled to within 650 feet of the earth before pulling the rip cord of his parachute. It is believed to be a new world's record for delayed parachute jumping.

THREE-QUARTER INCH RAIN AT HEDLEY

Giles Gets .13 Inch; Only Slight Trace Here Yesterday

Rain clouds that tantalized Memphis and western Hall county for three hours yesterday afternoon finally skirted to the northwest and dropped their precious liquid to the extent of .75 of an inch at Hedley.

Giles reported about .13 of an inch.

Good showers were also reported at Brice.

Only the barest sprinkle fell in Memphis, no trace of which could be found a few minutes later.

Hedley's rain extended 10 miles north and at least three or four miles south. Water flowed over the highway between Giles and Hedley at several points and a number of cotton fields held almost unbelievable puddles of water late last night.

No rain was reported at Lelia Lake and Clarendon.

Badly needed rains alleviated the drought to some extent in sections of West Texas over the week end and the forecast indicated showers might benefit crops and ranges in other parts of the State soon.

1,200 Socialists Are Arrested in Vienna Round Up

VIENNA, July 24.—Twelve hundred socialists were arrested today in connection with an alleged plot to overthrow the Dollfus government. It was the biggest roundup of political prisoners since the February civil war.

Political police were gathering evidence which they said indicated socialists, as communists and Nazis merged into a common front for a huge campaign of terror against the fascist government.

A government spokesman explained most of the arrests as "preventive" pending a search of the suspects' homes for explosives and incriminating documents.

Government circles suggested the new "terroristic front" had a common source of money and explosives in Germany.

Amarillo Barber Charged in Death of CWA Worker

AMARILLO, July 24.—Murder charges were filed yesterday against John Ash, 61-year-old barber and father of 10 living children, who is alleged to have shot and killed Frank Lanning, 28, CWA worker and ex-convict.

Lanning, according to a statement signed by Ash, intervened in a family quarrel at the Ash home involving a son-in-law, also an ex-convict. Ash said Lanning struck him over the head with a partly filled bucket.

Ash went into the house and obtained a 22-caliber rifle. When he walked back into the yard, he said Lanning hurled a brick, and he threw the gun to his hip and fired. The bullet passed through Lanning's heart.

Lanning was unmarried. Funeral services will be held tomorrow.

SOPHIE KERR'S SUPERB LOVE STORY "STAY OUT OF MY LIFE!"

By Sophie Kerr

BEGIN HERE TODAY

JANE TERRY comes to New York determined to show her home town and especially AMY JACKSON that she can make a success of her life. Amy had been her best friend until Howard Jackson broke the engagement Jane forced on him and married Amy. Unable to bear the sight of Amy's happiness, Jane obtains a job in a New York real estate office.

Jane is clever and soon is making an excellent salary. She has an affair with ROGER THORPE, a business acquaintance who is married. Later she tires of him, and when he offers to bear the expense of their child she dismisses him contemptuously.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XV

No, Jane reassured herself, she didn't regret Thorpe. "I can get through by myself better than having him whimpering about," she thought angrily. "Afraid that he'll be found out and disgraced!"

She tried to think of someone she could tell. There was Miss Jardine, but she wouldn't be able to bear Miss Jardine's questions and her possible satisfaction that Jane was in such distress. Miss Jardine had disapproved of Jane's apartment. She had, Jane was sure, been a thought envious of Jane's quick success. As an aid in trouble Miss Jardine would not do.

And there were no girls or women in the Kandel organization to whom Jane could turn. They'd talk. They'd be sure to find out about Thorpe and the scandal would go through the office like rot in wood.

The only person in the office who seemed at all possible was Kandel himself. Jane knew that he, rough, bullying, powerful, would understand. She could be blunt and straight with him, and he with her. But there again, if she talked to Kandel, Thorpe would be implicated. And whatever happened Jane meant to keep silent about Thorpe. It was not so much to protect him as to protect herself for the future. She had learned the hard lesson that every person let into a secret increases its shares by ten.

Of course, there was Aunt Rosa. "But I'll walk straight into Hades before I tell her," Jane said aloud. "She'd go off her head and she'd drive me crazy, too. The preaching I'd have to stand, and the way she'd carry on! Aunt Rosa's out, once and for all."

Thinking of Aunt Rosa brought back Marburg, its quiet streets and quiet shaded houses. And then, suddenly her dream came back, two girls walking under the elm trees as in a high green tunnel, two things, anything! Jane brushed gether—why, of course—Amy! Amy would stand by, Amy would not preach, Amy would hold her tongue.

She could trust and depend on Amy as on no other person in the world. There was relief in the very thought of her. Jane's quick advantage-seeking mind added the weight of Amy's promise—Amy had said that she was always her friend, that she would do anything, anything! Jane brushed aside as nothing the cruel stabbing things she had said and written to Amy. They had no bar to her appeal. Amy did not nurse old grudges. Amy always kept her word. She would write to Amy today, this very minute.

It was more difficult than Jane had foreseen to make contact with her friend. Amy could not come to her at once, as Jane demanded. She couldn't, it seemed at first, come to her at all. Jane realized the justice of this. She knew that Amy couldn't dash off alone to New York at a moment's notice without giving Marburg an adequate reason, and Jane had no intention that Marburg gossip should lay hold of her name.

But presently to opportunity came in an easy way. Old Professor Ellert was suddenly seized with a longing for one last visit to the scenes of his student days in Germany, one last pilgrimage to the Kaiserstuhl, the Hohentwiel and the Eifel crater lakes, Eschbach and Oeningen, all the spots where he had so happily collected his first geological specimens, and it was obvious even to himself that he could not go alone. Naturally he turned to Howard. He would pay all expenses. He would make the trip short—this last apologetically to Amy—but he did want powerfully to go and to have his young aide with him. It was impossible to refuse the old man.

They rushed their preparations and sailed on the sixteenth of July, and Amy came to New York to see them off. It was a fiery steaming day, and when the shipyard pulled away from the pier Amy did not wait to watch it down the river. She was tired from the stifling heat, and distressed at this parting from Howard, for though she was used to his field trips, this was different. He was so much farther away, and besides, they had been planning to go abroad together in another year. It was all disappointing and stupid and nothing to be done about it. And now she must hurry to see Jane and find out what her mysterious, disturbing, unhappy letters meant.

Amy hailed a taxi and gave Jane's address and tried to wrench her thoughts from her own feelings and get them into a proper state to meet Jane and whatever her difficulty might be, but it was almost impossible. "If she's simply acting and working herself into one of her states as she used to do," Amy said to can write. They'll certainly see her flat. I don't want to hear any nonsense from Jane."

All the same, it was exciting to think of seeing Jane again, of seeing where and how she lived, and perhaps being friends once more. Maybe Jane had repented the way she had behaved about Howard and her wild accusations against both him and Amy, but that seemed unlike Jane. Maybe she simply wanted to show off to Amy, and maybe—Amy sat back in the cab and mopped her face and stopped guessing.

She wished the interview over. The real reason for it she never once suspected. With her eyes still dazed from the outside glare she walked hesitantly into the shadowy salon of Jane's apartment, and a shadowy, mishapen figure came hesitantly to meet her.

"Is Miss Terry—" began Amy. And Jane's voice, shrill, trembling: "Amy—Amy!"

Then Amy knew why she had sent for her. She was so struck with horror and amazement that she could not speak, but she held out her hands and the two women clung together in silence, which presently broke into a chaotic murmuring, half-speech, half-incoherent wordless exclamation.

"I knew—I knew you'd come. There was nobody but you." "Jane—oh poor Jane!" "Amy—Amy! I'm so afraid—it's all so dreadful—"

"But Jane—tell me—" And Jane told. Not very much, not very clearly, but enough for Amy to understand the folly, the danger, the pity of what she had done. Amy understood something more—that for once Jane was not acting, not shamming. For once Jane was honest with herself and her audience.

"If you'll only stay with me, Amy. That's what I mind, being so utterly alone. If I only felt well I'd get through it by myself, but I feel so strange. Sometimes I think I might die here without a soul around. You will stay with me, won't you? You won't leave me?"

"But how can I stay Jane? I only came on to see the boat sail. I didn't even close the house or make any arrangements. I haven't even any clothes with me except what I need for these two days." But already she was planning. Her mother would take care of the house, send her something to wear. And Howard was gone, would be gone for weeks. She might, somehow manage it.

Jane felt her weakening. "You can telegraph that you've decided to make me a little visit. Then you can write. They'll certainly see nothing odd in that. No one will think anything odd of whatever you do anyway, Amy. Oh, stay with me! It's only another month. You couldn't go away and leave me now you've seen me."

The two girls looked at one another. Amy lovely as she had always been in her fair serenity, her fair life; Jane tumbled and swollen and hollow-eyed, aged and ill. It hurt Amy unbearably to see her so. And Jane, half glancing toward the nearest mirror said, with a twist of wry humor, "I look like the wages of sin, don't I! Oh, and I meant to be so free, so glorious. I ought to be shot for a fool."

"Don't! Jane dear, don't! I only wish it was my child." "I'll give it to you, if you like. I'm going to send it away to be adopted as soon as it's born. I'm not going to keep it."

"Jane, you don't mean that. That's the wickedest thing I ever heard of. You wanted to have this child and now you're not going to take care of it! That's horrible. I—you musn't even think of such a horrible thing."

Jane's great mournful eyes gazed at her friend in utter disillusion. "Amy," she said, "do you really think I'd make a good mother? Wouldn't any child be better off with someone who wants it? This child, if it lives—it ought never to know who its mother is." (Copyright, 1934, by Sophie Kerr) (To Be Continued)

Four-fold Service Offered by Texas Service Station

Modern service stations often have one or two services that are outstanding and account for their popularity and volume of business, but the Texas Service Station in Memphis goes the average station "one better" and features a four-fold service—each important in its field. In inviting their customers to trade with them, they offer Texaco Fire-Chief gasoline as their outstanding product, coupled with a Certified Greasing service, quick and accurate tire repairing service, and Goodrich Silvertown Safety Tires.

Each of these four services are of prime importance to the motorist who would get the utmost of his car. Goodrich tires are featured at this station because of their safety blow-out proof qualities featured in their "Golden Ply" construction.

The Texaco Service Station is located at the corner of Main and 10th Streets in the western part of the city.

Odorless Cleaning Is a Feature of Lindsey Tailors

"Odorless dry cleaning" is the claim made by many cleaning and pressing plants, but few of them are able to actually clean clothing in gasoline and return them the same day absolutely odorless, according to H. H. Lindsey, proprietor of the Lindsey Tailor Shop. Mr. Lindsey's plant is capable of putting out clothes without the slightest gasoline odor, he states.

To make odorless dry cleaning possible, an air-tight steam room is included in his set-up of modern equipment. After clothing has gone through the cleaner and a high speed "extractor" which leaves them dry, they are then hung in the "steam room" until every trace of gasoline odor is gone.

Mr. Lindsey's shop is located on the north side of the square, where he has been in business for over ten years. Mr. Lindsey has been in the tailoring business in Memphis longer than any other tailor in the city. He began tailor work here in 1919, and opened his own shop over ten years ago.

Years of experience and training, together with the best of modern equipment make possible the high class of work he puts out. He specializes in all kinds of cleaning and pressing work, hat cleaning and special made-to-measure clothing for men.

Are You Fair to your home town Merchants?

WHEN money is slack: when crops fail: when credit is needed it is the home town merchants whom we seek for friendly service. He tides us over with credits; he charges no interests, he provides us with reliable, guaranteed merchandise fairly priced.

In short, he "holds the bag for us." That is why he deserves all our patronage in times of plenty as well as in days of stress.

And isn't it a pity that there are many who use him only as a leaning post—to tide them over the slack days and use their cash to fill the coffers of the big town mail order houses who wouldn't trust them over night—with, or without, interest.

We all need that merchant—we need his confidence, his friendship. Our town needs his enterprise—the service he renders in handling only guaranteed, first grade goods that he is here to stand back of day in and day out.

Let's give him our cash when we have it. Let's pay his bills as promptly as we can. Let's earn and merit, the confidence he has placed in us and in our community. Let's support him—we need him and he needs us, our trade, and our unselfish good will.

Presbyterians Cop First Tilt of Championship Series

DOWN BAPTISTS, 10-4 TO TAKE EARLY LEAD

Second Game of Title Round is Scheduled For Tomorrow

Driving terrifically in fifth and sixth-inning rallies, the Presbyterians too the first of the Sunday School Softball league championship series games yesterday, downing the Baptists, 10 to 4.

Threatening rain did not keep enthusiastic backers from the contest.

The victors hit right lustily despite the absence from their lineup of the star sluggers, Lampkin and Melear.

Lead Until Fifth

The Baptists pushed over all their runs in the first two innings, leading until the fifth. Chauncey Thompson, portainer, led the attack by the home team. He doubled three times consecutively. The attorneys, John Deaver and Allen Grundy, also contributed largely to the fight, as did J. P. Godfrey.

Baptist miscues in the fatal fifth and sixth innings did much to help the cause of the Presbyterians.

The defensive play of "Dirty" McCool and Thompson was especially flashy.

What offensive there was to the Baptist play was led by Brewer, outfielder.

Second Game Tomorrow

The second game in the series is scheduled for tomorrow. The first team winning three games of five will be champions, and will play the young Loafers in a series to determine the championship of the city.

Talk has been circulated to the effect that after the latter series, a group of games would be played between the winner and an Estelle softball team, for the county title. This has not been confirmed, however.

HARRY GRAYSON

CHICAGO, July 23.—Mrs. Isabel Dodge Sloane was mighty proud of Cavalcade when the great colt added the Arlington Classic Stakes to his mounting chain—one that includes the Kentucky, American, and Detroit Derbies. But there were several "owners" of Cavalcade who were immeasurably more vociferous concerning the matter than Mrs. Sloane.

As Cavalcade swung into the back stretch ahead of no horse save his stablemate, Good Foods, half a dozen stable boys—owners everyone in a horse which is giving them reflected glory—looked momentarily sick about the gills.

And then, as the Derby winner began to move up the whole group literally exploded in glee.

"Hyah he come! Hyah he come!" they exulted. "Gangway ole Discovery. Brown hoss burn up that ole stretch!"

And when the thoroughbreds had crossed the finish line, half a dozen dusky sons of Africa dashed across the track to welcome back the dark brown son of the English Lane-gaye.

"Come on, Saratoga!" "Whad he do? Whad he do? they shouted the question, chanted it back and forth until the crowd caught it up, echoing it back to them. The official time was posted, 2:02 4-5, only a second off Sun Beau's track record, although Cavalcade got away last. Dark boys and white shouted the figures proudly, as 30,000 spectators cheered the well-managed 3-year-old.

"Boy, git ready wid dat sheet!" "Looky old stretch burner nod dat haid. He know he gave Discovery another beating."

No happier stable boys in America. To them "Brookmeade Stable" means more than a name de course for Mrs. Sloane's string. It means Cavalcade, and the glory of feeding, rubbing, bedding and handling a champion.

Proudly, reverently, they led Cavalcade away, repeating their exultant chant, "Come on, Saratoga! Give ole Discovery another dose of stretch burning!"

Discovery Also Waits
 And in the stable of Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, a sportsman who knows no defeat, even as his dauntless Discovery continues to wage a losing fight against the champion, another group of stable boys, less happy, but unyielding still, also wait for Saratoga.

They remember that the Spa traditionally is the downfall of champions, that Reigh Count and Gallant Fox there met defeat, and that there a maiden bested Mate, a horse fresh from outrunning Twenty Grand in the Classic Stakes. They, too, are waiting for Saratoga, and another chance at the "stretch burner."

But the Arlington Classic also was supposed to be a hoodoo to favorites, with Gallant Fox the only one of them to get there first in past years.

Cavalcade, with $126,965 to his credit, probably would have had a clean sweep this year had Mack Garner urged him a second sooner in the Preakness, in which he was nosed out by his running mate, High Quest.

It takes more than a jinx to trim a stayer with the powerful hind legs of Cavalcade.

from automobile accidents, which last year took a toll of 30,000 lives; or we might think the greatest danger is in not getting a good rain, but I incline to the opinion as expressed by the Detroit newsboy.

"It is so darn easy for us to be going along at the same pace, keeping in the same rut, just about asleep and not getting anywhere. I am reminded of the expression that 'we don't know where we're going, but we're on our way.'"

"There are four essentials necessary in order to get ourselves out of a rut; to think, to love, to act from honest motives and to trust in God, but I shall only concern myself with the first, second, and fourth motives."

Mr. Jackson then discussed these motives in detail, bringing out salient points in each instance and saying there are two ways of putting these suggestions into action: by beginning in the home and in trying to keep awake instead of going to sleep.

"I think the fine and challenging thing about this club is its ability to put such suggestions as these into practice," Mr. Jackson concluded.

Petersburg received an inch and a half and Hale Center an inch. South of Slaton rainfall was reported at more than an inch. Stricken crops and pastures were irrigated.

The Davis Mountain area of extreme Southwest Texas was soaked by good rains. Heavy rains broke the drouth in parts of Reeves, Pecos, Jeff Davis, Ward, Brewster and Culberson Counties. Between Kent and Van Horn the downpour was so heavy it washed out the highway in places.

Profit Taking and Short Selling Are Wheat Price Curbs

CHICAGO—The Chicago Tribune said today that intermittent profit taking and short selling in wheat proved too much for the market to absorb yesterday and prices moved fractionally lower, after staging an advance of two cents early in the session.

Trade was rather narrow and nervous throughout the day. With great destruction of wealth because of drouth and discouragement in Wall Street, it is believed that it will be difficult at advanced levels to raise the prices higher.

News Affecting Cotton Market Is Scarce Today

NEW YORK, July 24.—News affecting the market outside of weather details was scarce and of little effect in today's trading.

Southern reports said that Senator George of Oklahoma had appealed to the Secretary of Agriculture to lift the Bankhead bill on excess quotation cotton due to the drouth and suggested a bounty as crop insurance to growers not making their quota.

The administrator had been working on plans for growers not making their quota to sell tags to growers who do.

Oklahoma reported 90 per cent of weevil grubs and fallen squares dead from the heat, reporting weevil investigation spotted and ranging from three to 64 and one-half per cent, an average of 21.1 per cent in 18 examined fields.

Complaints of leaf worms appeared in Texas.

WASHINGTON — Secretary Wallace is expected to announce shortly the continuation of the cotton pressing tax at the same rate during the past year—4.2 cents.

NEW ORLEANS—Realization by the cotton trade that the Texas drouth has not broken and that there are no real indications that it will be in the immediate future is causing a recovery in cotton prices in the future market.

WASHINGTON—The farm administration yesterday added Arkansas to the list of states eligible for drouth relief. Four counties in that state—Benton, Carroll, Fulton and Izard—were placed on the emergency list. About eight others are being shown consideration.

I'm back from the furniture market and I didn't buy any junk

—but I did buy the very newest things in bedroom suites, living room suites and dinette suites, as well as numerous attractive occasional pieces and novelties. Everything I bought is high class furniture, which doesn't necessarily mean that it is high priced. The point I want to make is simply this. If you want to buy really good furniture you can buy it at home—in Memphis—because King's has not resorted to stocking shoddy merchandise simply because the demand for quality furniture has not been so great in the last few years. We will continue to offer our customers only quality furniture—and at prices that are reasonable and fair. I want you to be sure to see the new things I've bought. They'll begin to arrive about August 15th.

WE CAN FORGET ABOUT DILLINGER

JOHN DILLINGER took the final trail of all outlaws Sunday night when he fell in a Chicago alley mortally wounded by fire from the guns of department of justice marksmen.

Only a few hours earlier, "Whitey" Walker, who created some furore around Borger, Pampa and Amarillo in the boom days, made good his escape from the state penitentiary at Huntsville—he was shot to death while attempting to scale a prison wall.

Today thousands of editorials will appear in newspapers, commenting on the fate of these men—the kind of end every person who follows such a trail must eventually find waiting for him at some unexpected turn.

If Dillinger is able to look back on his life on this earth, the end must be humiliating, to say the least. He relaxed his vigilance for just a moment. In that moment he met the same fate as did Billy the Kid and Jesse James.

After shooting his way out of police traps and bluffing his way from jails, to walk peacefully from a motion picture theater into the arms of men who craved a chance to kill him—his natural enemies—the law—must have been a wee bit embarrassing.

At the same time Walker was killed, Raymond Hamilton, Joe Palmer and Blackie Thompson made a successful dash for freedom from the Texas prison. This break released men upon this part of the state who are likely to become second Dillingers. They have been bad enough before, but now they are likely to run wilder than ever.

There are still a number of first-rate public enemies at large somewhere in this part of the country. Besides the ones who just escaped are "Perch Mouth" Stanton, a killer, and "Pretty Boy" Floyd, who has become almost a mythical character.

The federal "Dillinger detail" stated the search would not end until every member of Dillinger's gang is brought to justice. It should go farther than that. The federals should not be withdrawn until every desperate character in the country is accounted for.

WE MUST SOLVE GENERAL STRIKES

A GENERAL strike is a fight in which labor transfers its efforts from the economic to the political field.

It is a fight in which the original issue has become transformed into a symbol, so that men whom the original issue in no way concerns become ready to go into action for the sake of an abstraction. Ultimately, the thing at stake is a thing ordinarily sought at the ballot box.

These things being so, the general strike becomes a fearful phenomenon—a development which below the surface. It is industrial warfare transformed into something perilously like class war. Push it far enough and you get to the very edge of revolution.

Looking at the San Francisco dispute, therefore, is like gazing into a microscope in which some of the major social maladjustments of our time are magnified on one slide. What we are seeing is no longer a disagreement between employers and employes about one particular point, but a knock-down struggle in which all kinds of unmentioned grievances are operating, on both sides, to produce determination and bitterness.

And it becomes, for the moment at least, relatively unimportant who "wins" in this fight—for, as a matter of fact, nobody can really win, and the general public is bound to lose.

The important thing is that all of the complex issues which combined to make such a disaster possible shall be passed in review and straightened out; all of the things which made organized labor, on the one hand, ready to go to almost any extreme in order to gain its point and which made the employers, on the other hand, ready to fight to the last ditch before surrendering.

For a disaster of this kind does not burst on a community out of a clear sky. Employers don't forgo dividends in order to win a labor dispute out of pure cussedness; workingmen don't quit their jobs and get out on the picket lines just because the cool breezes off the Pacific have gone to their heads.

Somewhere underneath the attractive surface of San Francisco's civic life there have been very deep and serious maladjustments. The general public into determination to find out precisely what those troubles were and get them set right.

These Things Are Always Settled With The Pen, Anyway

HEALTH

BY DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygeia, the Health Magazine

It is now well established that your size depends to a considerable extent on the activity of your pituitary gland, the small ovoid body at the base of your skull. In other words, you are largely what your glands make you.

Since it is also well known that the glands control to a considerable extent the activities of the human body and the chemical changes that go on within it, some studies recently made in Boston of the metabolism or chemical changes going on in the bodies of five midgets, a giant and a fat lady are exceedingly interesting.

Dr. A. W. Rowe, who made these studies, checked them also with studies made recently of an abnormally fat boy and two women with retarded physical development. All of the dwarfs were normal at birth, weighing about seven pounds, but all failed to grow after the ages of six or seven. None of them has seemed to have matured sexually.

The fat lady had a father who weighed 235 pounds and a mother who weighed 400 pounds. She was the only child. She weighed 16 pounds at birth, and at the time of the examination, when she was 24 years old, she weighed almost 400 pounds.

The giant had a number of tall ancestors, but nobody as tall as he was. He was of average size at birth. At the age of 26, however, he was 7 feet 8 inches tall, and weighed about 358 pounds.

Most of these people had a fairly good mentality. When the chemical changes going on in their bodies were studied, they were found to reflect to a considerable extent the condition of the glands.

The dwarfs tend to have a low blood pressure. The fat people and the giants tend to have a higher blood pressure.

The temperature of the giant was slightly below normal at all times. Thus the chemical changes in the bodies reflected the physical condition associated with the abnormality.

This type of study establishes again the importance of the glands of the body as the regulating mechanism for its activities. We are what the glands make us.

New discoveries made in medicine are developing substitutes for glands which fail to function satisfactorily. Other techniques permit the removal surgically of portions of glands when there is overfunction. Of the greatest importance, however, is having a clear understanding of the extent to which the thyroid gland, the parathyroids, the pituitary, the adrenal glands, and the pancreas are performing their work. These measurements may be made and frequently yield information of the greatest value for controlling not only the size and shape of the body, but also for maintaining it in health.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
The Democrat's Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON, July 23.—There's a man here who worked long and conscientiously to settle the Pacific coast longshoremen's strike.

He came here a while ago to report an agreement—arriving almost simultaneously with telegram from San Francisco showing the agreement had broken down. He is a good man just the same, and now has another important government job. As the general strike was declared, he commented: "You can't mediate a revolution!"

Why The Bitterness
He didn't want his name used, but he gave me some background that may interest you, too. He named the three chief causes of the existing situation as:

1. A long history of suppression of labor unions by employers, resulting in bitterness and complete distrust of employers.

2. The calling of troops against the longshoremen, which created such resentment as to make mediation impossible.

3. Insurgency of large rank-and-file groups which howled down conciliatory proposals from conservative A. F. of L. officials and mediators.

Both employers and employes were determined to make a closed shop-open shop finish fight issue. Employers weakened first, but too late.

Mediators found the hardest steamship companies to deal with were those which drew the most money from the government in ocean mail subsidies—the Dollar and Matson lines.

When Fore is Tired
Although Roosevelt was deep-sea fishing as the strike broke, many of his aides here were scared stiff. The whole administration labor policy, which once seemed strong but broke down many months ago and has wiggled and wobbled ever since, was involved.

The possibility of being forced to use federal troops in a labor dispute came to officials already badly worried by the dangerous potentialities of clashes between militia and mobs.

It is pointed out that, aside from the fact no one knows what a large angry mob will do, National Guard operation against strikers in large cities are likely to do more harm than good. In smaller communities stern militia measures may avert trouble.

But after militia was used in San Francisco a waterfront strike became a general strike. In Minneapolis, where militiamen were called out, an agreement has broken down and the situation is more serious than ever. In Toledo, despite troops, strikers were

Reporter Finds Saloons 'Wide Open' in San Antonio

BARMEN AFRAID SMALL WILL INTERFERE

Star-Telegram Writer Hears Liquor Vote Going to Allred

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Checking on the "open saloons" of San Antonio, so often attacked by Senator Clint Small in his campaign for governor, a Fort Worth Star-Telegram reporter was sent to that city. Bryon C. Utecht, Star-Telegram political writer, the reporter, found the saloons wide open, no attempt at law enforcement regarding the sale of liquor and the liquor element of the city strongly opposed to Senator Small and afraid of what will happen to their business if he is elected governor. Utecht tells of his survey in the following interesting story).

BY BYRON C. UTECHT (Fort Worth Star-Telegram Political Writer.)

SAN ANTONIO, July 24.—The white-washed, well-groomed bartenders in the fancy saloons here are advising customers to vote wet. But if there is further interest manifested by the customer, and if he seems regular, they hint it would be a good idea to vote for Allred or McDonald, with an occasional word dropped for Hughes. They do not advise to vote for Small, who also is for repeal. But then Small has been attacking saloons for selling liquor, in violation of the law, so likely will not get much of the saloon bloc support. A canvass of these luxuriously furnished saloons demonstrated this.

The writer assayed such a canvass, but was unable to complete the tour of 40 or 50 drinking establishments, because even a little at each place taxes the capacity, and to get into conversation with the generalissimo presiding necessitated sampling the wares.

There always were young women in these saloons, drinking beer, whisky, gin and puffing cigarettes, and they were all nonchalant, nice appearing, sipping and giggling. There are bars as well as comfortable booths in all places, and at times the girls would stand at the bar with one foot resting on the rail, just as mere man did in the old-fashioned saloon days. The new freedom!

Bartender Questions Himself
At one place the bartender apparently got to worrying over the questions, came around from the bar and put questions himself, evidently suspicious. He wanted to know the writer's business, where he lived and how business was going. But he was too late.

At another place the polite and polished bartender answered questions, and volunteered other information to his midnight visitor.

"Why, we're going to operate election day as usual," he said. "It is in violation of the law, but no one bothers about that now. There are also legal closing hours, but no one pays any attention. Have another beer? Say, where did you say you were from?"

At the third saloon no time was wasted on ceremony.

"Here's your beer Allred will carry Bexar."

The fourth place was the most ornate of all, just a block off the main traffic artery, but the young folks had no trouble locating it. Back of the expensive bar there are concealed lights that throw a soft glow on the glassware. At the side was a string Hawaiian orchestra, with tables strung down the middle of the room, and most of the customers were young women. Four young chaps, no more than 20, were lined up in front of the bar as the writer approached. Then a bevy of girls and their escorts all under 25, came in to dance and drink, then drink and dance. One of the bartenders was preparing two mint juleps, and they sure did look inviting.

Salesman Loses Sale

Some of the places sell whisky at 10 cents a drink, minimum, but they also sell it at 15 and 25 cents a drink. All sorts of liquor are on sale by the bottle.

At the fifth saloon, or palace, the major domo offered that he will vote for McDonald, and— "Did you say beer?"

The sixth stop came, but the chap in charge was incorrigible. He had salesmanship qualities, and insisted on selling me a bottle of whisky, so I didn't linger there long enough to discover how he intended to vote. Besides, there were some young women present, and I didn't want to be seen purchasing a bottle of liquor, making an expense and hurried away.

These handsomely equipped saloons surround the hotel system as well as political headquarters of various candidates. A few are in
