by F. V. CLARK, Sec'y

records of our office indicate each year the performance of some major work in the interest of the community taken alone would well justify that year the Chamber of Commerce.

A major accomplishment for the year and county and for other adjoining counties was the Soil Erosion Camp. The matter that likely would secure this camp was brought to the attention of the Chamber of Commerce at the meeting of its directors in January. It was the judgment of the board of directors that the present and importance of soil erosion in our community would be of great value.

The same our principal objective was followed through at the office of no effort or expense until we were happily able to secure our files, with the work done and the soil erosion reality by early fall of the year.

For years there have been major achievements of this nature in behalf of the industrial and cultural welfare of our county and trade territory.

The board of directors is composed of twelve business men, representing the different fields of business activity. Splendid and unselfish service is rendered by this group in behalf of the growth and development of our county and trade area.

Another part of our continuing program for the year has been that of cooperation with other counties in behalf of various work projects of our county either now in progress or to become operative soon. It is our privilege during the year to give our active support to a number of civic projects to assist in their success in a manner helpful to the county. Our highway committee has been active and prospective in the opening of new and old highway travel to and from the community soon are very in the direction of our president R. Fultz, and Dean J. Hamilton, chairman of our membership committee, it was our aim to enroll quite a few members the past year which will materially strengthen our Chamber of Commerce for the future.

As a continuous program, we are working in process of securing the work in other work up from time to time; at the same time emergency work is always part of our duty. We are working with the West Texas Chamber of Commerce, and co-operating with it in matter that we deem to be helpful to the community as also to the state. We participate with other towns in assisting with and development of the county.

"Now Get in There and Win," Coach Matty Bell Tells His Champs

Keyed to the highest pitch were these husky Southern Methodist gridiron warriors as they intently listened to the final words of advice from Coach Matty Bell before they entered the fray with Stanford in the Rose Bowl classic. In tiptop shape the Mustangs just had completed their last limbering-up on Occidental College field, turned over to them for pre-game practice.

ROTARY IS HOST TO COLLEGE GIRLS AND BOYS

Twenty-seven Local Lads and Lassies Are Honor Guests

College students home for the Christmas and New Year holidays were feted yesterday noon by the Memphis Rotary Club at the club's yearly banquet for the students.

Twenty-seven young men and women who are attending various colleges this year attended the annual feed.

Dr. J. A. Odom, president of the club, and Carl Harrison, guest, made addresses, encouraging the students to continue their studies in school. Mary Ellen Hamilton and Royce L. Brooke entertained with songs.

The number of students to attend was cut down considerably as several had already returned to school. Those attending were: Edward L. Bost, Trinity University. (Continued on Page 8)

NEW DISTRICT COMMANDER

Local Lieutenant to Be Relieved from Duty January 13

The Lubbock District CCC, with headquarters at Lubbock, of which the local camp is a part, is now under a new commanding officer. Capt. Francis O. Wood, 82nd Field Artillery (Fort Bliss, Texas), assumed command of the district December 20, relieving Major J. F. Roehm, 15th Field Artillery, who has returned to duty at Fort Sam Houston.

Captain Wood came to Lubbock from Albuquerque, N. M. (Continued on Page 8)

The Weather

With the thermometer hovering just above the 40 degree mark this morning and cloudy skies, indications are that rain may fall within the next few hours.

One of our best operatives has been very busy the past few days, snooping around and learning the New Year's resolutions of a lot of our citizens. He reports the following as among the best of the lot.

Henry Boyd Newman—"I shall raise three more hairs on each side or shave off my darling mustache."

Raymond Powers—"I resolve to write my name in more public places this year than last and in larger letters—and also to keep my curls in place."

Mrs. Mollie Wilson shall try to attend more picture shows during the coming year than ever before."

Dan Clinton—"I resolve to never again let the We Saw editor catch me hugging my wife in public, like he did yesterday."

Mrs. O. V. Alexander—"I shall devote a great part of my time during the coming year to an effort to have a law passed providing for bigger and better olives in Dr Peppers."

Mamie Bakke—"I resolve to pay off for all my magazines during the coming year, and save myself embarrassment."

Henry Bird—"I shall take up boxing as a profession during the coming year."

Jack Sittön—"On account of my poor dogs, I resolve during the coming year to dance on somebody else's feet whenever possible."

Bil Alexander—"I resolve to quit playing penny-ante during the coming year."

Audre Lofland—"I resolve to move to fourteen different towns during 1936."

Fred V. Clark—"I propose to wear my present hat throughout 1936."

W. R. Cabnes—"I resolve to quit swiping apples from Roper at the City Grocery."

Bud McAbee—"I resolve to attend school as little as possible during the balance of the term."

Pegleg King—"I hereby take a paralyzed oath to make my present car last until next January first."

Herbert Estes—"I resolve to take a healthy swing at the next guy that speaks of me as 'that old man at Kings.'"

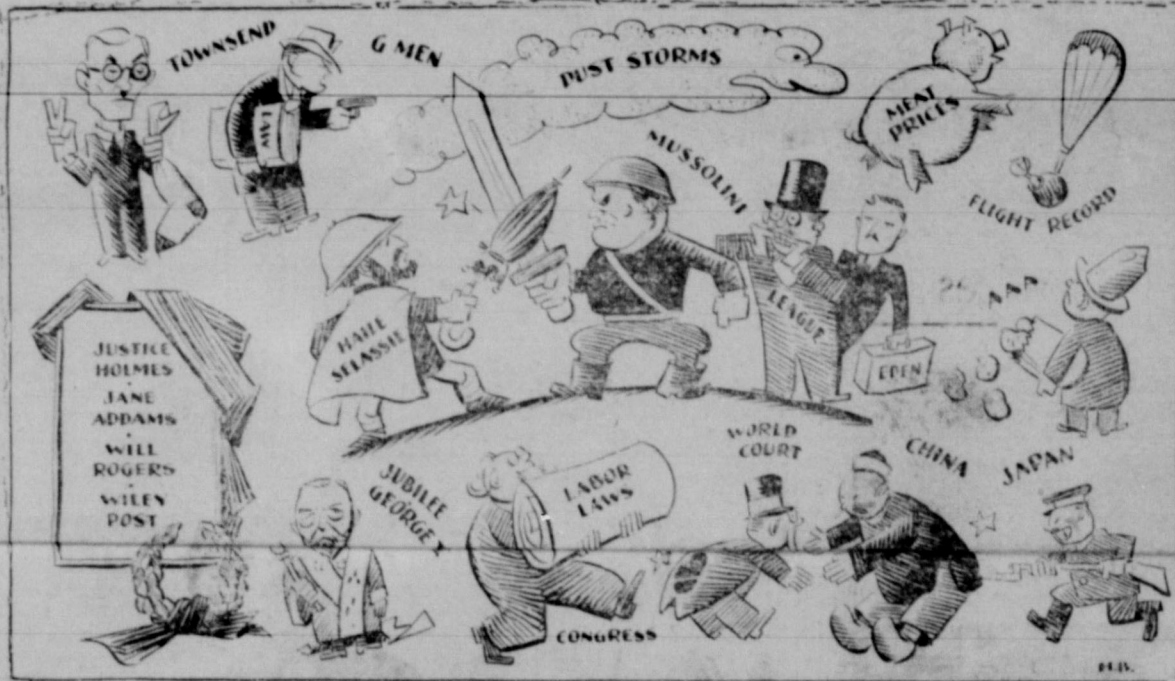

Dave Fitzgerald—"I resolve to make my car last at least one year longer . . . and maybe two."

Chesty Walker—"I resolve to scout all the Estelline games next season . . . we might have to play 'em again."

All Our Customers—"We resolve to make the We Saw editor 'hard to catch' during the coming year."

WE'LL GET WHAT WE DESERVE TO GET

By BRUCE CATTON

PROBABLY there is no better proof of the fact that man in an incurable optimist than the ancient custom of saying "Happy New Year."

That phrase represents a little more than just a pious hope that things will go well in the next twelve months. It springs from an uneasy realization that we somehow didn't manage to do quite as well with the last twelve as we hoped to do, and that once a year is by no means too often to take stock of past mistakes and get a new grip on the future.

From the lowly mortal who swears off cigars to the world statesman who resolves to give his people a slightly better break henceforward, we all come up to the start of a new year with a feeling that it is up to us to take a brace. If a glance at our past makes us pessimistic, we can at least be hopeful again by looking forward.

So we make our New Year's resolutions and set out to run one more lap against the old gentleman with the scythe and the whiskers; and if our performance never quite comes up to what we expect of it, we at least do edge ourselves forward a little bit . . . which, in an imperfect and sinful world is something.

And if we took time to sit down and think about it, we might discover that that, after all, is the way the world as a whole makes most of its progress . . . by slow, painful inches, with many a back-sliding and many a skinned knee and bruised foot, and not by sudden, spectacular leaps.

The painful truth is that there is no short cut to blessedness. The new year will bring us just about what we have coming to us, as individuals and as a world.

BEHIND THE SCENE IN WASHINGTON

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON — Soon congress will resume debate on neutrality legislation and you notice that many are saying things about the cause of a can entry into the World which would have put the prison had they uttered opinions while the war was on.

One thread of the argument which men who were important at the time have participated centered on what Woodrow Wilson himself finally thought all. Since probably only a minority of readers have felt it, your correspondent takes to trace its outline.

On Oct. 18, Thomas W. of Morgan & Co. write the New York Times protesting a review by Robert L. Duffus suggested that the Morgan "helped" get the United States to war.

Lamont admits "we were Ally by inheritance, by opinion," but denies any German propaganda or press war.

William Floyd, director of Peace Patriots, shoots back the famous telegram Ambassador Page at London, March, 1917, to the effect this country would have been unless it hastened to support Allies.

Floyd then quotes Wilson as saying: "This industrial and commercial . . . Lamont replies that like Senator Nye and other individuals," he quoted in 1919 St. Louis speech.

"If we are going to our deceased presidents, let us do them correctly and justly. Lamont, and quotes what the context from a 1916 St. Louis newspaper, in which Wilson told how Germans moved Belgian factory machinery because they hated Belgian superiority in textile industries.

Next comes Newton D. Wilson's secretary of War letter Nov. 13, saying he heard Wilson or any say we must go to war unless any commercial or financial interest would be promoted going in.

Oswald Garrison Villard, Wood Brown, and others suggest that "we all" did the job at it and that it's better never heard of the famous Lansing-McAdoo policy reverse the Bryan neutrality barring flotation of war here.

Then certain New York Washington newspapers for Baker and Lamont of degrading "cruel aspersions" the memory of Woodrow by the ignorant and the "intolerably insulting" founded allegations of a committee . . . and so on.

Stephent Raushenbush, investigator of the committee, is good and this time and writes another to the Times, quoting the authorized text of Wilson's St. Louis speech.

some time." "I'm sorry to hear it, sir. When did it happen?"

Early this morning. The worst of it is there's a ticklish operation somebody's got to perform."

Scott sat down. A ticklish operation somebody had to perform. Dana had left him. She'd gone back to her grandmother after writing something nonsensical about dignity.

He brought his wandering attention back to find the older man regarding him anxiously. "You're not looking so fit yourself, Stanley."

"I was out late last night. Had an emergency call." "That's bad." Dr. Osborne was tapping the edge of his mahogany desk with a nervous hand. "You see, Stanley, I had made up my mind to ask you to perform this operation for me."

Scott's pulse leaped. It was the professional instinct, savoring opportunity and battle. "I'd be happy to do it."

"Are you sure you're up to it?" As a matter of fact, I have already recommended you to these people, who are perfectly willing to put the case in your hands. It's a ticklish job though."

Scott asked quickly, "What's the operation?" "A boy, fine young son of a friend of mine, shot himself accidentally while hunting. The bullet lodged. It's within a fraction of the heart. A man who didn't know exactly what he was doing, and didn't work with the utmost surgical precision — well, you know, the bullet might just as well have knocked off the youngster."

"They are bringing him by plane. If you feel you want to tackle it, go ahead. But if you have any doubt of your fitness today, be honest with me."

"I'll do it," Scott said. "I'm all right. Don't worry."

That reservoir of vitality which could always be tapped for emergencies already was giving him new strength.

Dr. Osborne, watching Scott saw the somber, strained look drop from his face and the calm professional mask take its place. He nodded with satisfaction. "Go on out to St. Armand's. The boy will be there in half an hour."

Miss Paine related the story to an eager listener. "It was exciting, Edith. First about Dr. Osborne having the accident, and then the news that they were bringing the little fellow home in a plane."

"And the most exciting thing of all was when Dr. Stanley walked in, white as a ghost. He looked as though he didn't know or care where he was going. I thought that if I ever saw a horrible hangover, he had it."

"I felt so sorry for him, having an opportunity like that and having to pass it up. But when he came out of Dr. Osborne's office, he didn't look like the same man. His voice was steady and he said, 'Get St. Armand's on the phone and tell them to get an operating room ready for an emergency.'"

"It's ready now," I told him. "Dr. Osborne took care of that." "Then he dashed off. He still looked white and worried, but different, somehow."

There was the smell of ether in the spotless, white-walled room. Nurses moved swiftly, soundlessly. Grave eyes stared at Scott's hands while he worked.

There was that ugly bit of lead lodged in some fatty tissue. So close, so perilously close to that throbbing, pulsing oval. One slip of the knife, one fraction of an inch closer as his instrument moved toward the deadly leaden bit, and it would be all over for the slim, blond-haired youngster whose life had been entrusted to Scott's hands.

Strange that one could go about such business with unemotional detachment. Scott felt the tension lift. It was that psychological moment when the worst of a critical operation is over.

The rest was simply a matter of tying up the job, regarding steps with sure, steady fingers. It had been a long time, but it seemed only a matter of seconds now. They were wheeling the little chap away. The boy was going to be all right.

Scott was, all at once, the center of a group, talking in the vibrant, but muted tones doctors use in an operating room. "It

BABSON'S INDUSTRIAL REVIEW

BUSINESS OUTLOOK FOR 1936

For the past two years government and other high-grade bonds have enjoyed a bull market. Interest rates have tumbled to the lowest level on record and bank reserves have hit new highs. As recovery continues, however, demand for money is sure to increase. So gilt-edge securities have probably now reached a ceiling. The day is coming—probably not during 1936, however—when the price of high-grade bonds will decline as money rates advance. Medium and second-grade issues—more dependent upon business profits—are still on the up-grade. Investors should continue to own a backlog of good bonds for the foreign outlook is spotty and there may be renewed deflation abroad with its repercussions here.

CANADIAN TREATY HOPEFUL

The foreign problem has troubled me greatly for the past two years. I cannot picture any extended period of domestic prosperity unless there is a general recovery overseas. The core of the trouble has been a mad desire for self-sufficiency and the erection of impassable trade barriers. The recent United States-Canadian reciprocal trade pact, however, is significant. It marks the first real move toward trade restoration in a decade. I believe it will aid the business of both nations to a marked degree next year. In fact, I look for an increase of 10 to 20 per cent in foreign trade in 1936 with the gains well distributed on both the import and export sides of the ledger.

The outlook for various world markets is mixed. Japan, now paving the way for control of the Pacific, will steal more of our Chinese trade. Our business in Europe will suffer from unsettled conditions there although the Italian-Ethiopian dispute will not lead to a major war in 1936. The economic crisis in France, Holland, and Switzerland will result in currency devaluation sooner or later—probably this year. This would break the path for international currency stabilization and improve the chances of a real business revival in all nations. At present writing, Latin America, South Africa, Canada, Australia, the Near East and Scandinavia would seem to offer the best markets in early 1936.

CONCLUSION

So now in retrospect: This is the third December since recovery set in, but I can safely say that it is the first year-end when the majority of people admit that business has shown marked progress. Back in 1933 a consumer goods boom gave us the first boost from the depths—10 per cent; in 1934 we enjoyed another advance as the automobile industry pushed us upward 8 per cent; this past year, the heavy goods industries moved us ahead 9 per cent. Now, as we stand on the threshold of 1936 we are only 10 per cent below normal. The tide of recovery is running strong and I look forward with confidence to progress in the big majority of industries this coming year. Hence, I predict that when the curtain falls on 1936 the great depression of the thirties will be fading into memory!

PECAN PROFITS

SAN SABA.—Nine pecan demonstrators in San Saba county report 777 budded trees from which they harvested 7055 pounds of nuts worth $1,030, or a profit on their budding operations of $680 more than they would have received from the native pecans, according to N. E. Scudder, county agricultural agent. Scudder estimates that 60 per cent of the budded trees reported are less than five years old and hence bore a very small crop. Approximately 30 pecan demonstrators have, so far, failed to report their crops.

J. M. Ferrel Announces

The Democrat is glad to announce J. M. Ferrel as a candidate for the office of Hall County Tax Assessor-Collector, subject to the action of the Democratic Primary in July.

Mr. Ferrel is a Hall County boy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Murf Ferrel of Parnell, was born and reared in the county, and really needs no introduction to our people. He is a graduate of Memphis High School, and following school here, he completed a commercial course at Fort Worth, specializing in accountancy and book-keeping.

Returning from school at Fort Worth, Mr. Ferrel accepted a position with the Cicero Smith Lumber Company, which place he held until 1930, when he entered the office of the Tax Collector as assistant.

Since December 20, 1930, Mr. Ferrel has been employed as Deputy Tax Assessor and Collector, and he is asking election as a well merited promotion, to which he believes he is entitled.

Mr. Ferrel feels that his years in the office as a deputy fits him for the place, and pledges his best efforts, if elected, to an efficient administration of the activities of the office.

We submit Mr. Ferrel's name to the voters of the county and bespeak for him their earnest consideration when they go to the polls in the July primary.

where he was executive officer for that district. He takes over one of the most far flung districts in the Eighth Corps Area, with ten camps scattered from Perryton and Sweetwater, Texas, to Tucumcari, N. M.

According to orders from district headquarters, 2nd Lieut. Stratford B. Duke, Cavalry Reserve, who has been assigned to the local camp for some time, will be relieved January 13, due to expiration of his tour of duty.

Mrs. W. R. Cabaness and son, Ralph Jr., returned Monday from a visit with her mother, Mrs. E. Ford and other relatives at Cisco. Mr. Cabaness went to Cisco Sunday after Mrs. Cabaness and son.

capper, and Jack Sitton, score-keeper.

A committee composed of Kenon Hillyer, Jack Sitton and Jack McLaughlin was appointed as a rules committee, to draft rules for the league.

Eight teams of five or more men each will constitute the league. Team captains named are: Bob Seyfarth, Jake Webster, Ed Foxhall, T. J. Martin, M. E. McNally, Jr., Weldon Massey, H. H. Lindsey, and Jack Borne.

The first scheduled game of the season will be played this Friday night, when the V-8s, under the leadership of Ed Foxhall, play the Musicians, under Captain Jake Webster.

League play will be each night in the week, except Saturday and Sunday.

Miss Florence Lockey, student at T. W. C. returned to Fort Worth Monday to resume her studies after spending the Christmas holidays here with her mother, Mrs. A. T. Lokey. Miss Lockey will be among the graduates at T. W. C. at the close of school in June.

Mr and Mrs. T. J. Cope were Memphis visitors from Parnell yesterday.

Four Teachers—

W. B. Funk and Mrs. Robert Duncan, Memphis; Mrs. Grace Wise, Estelline, and Mrs. C. B. Case, Turkey.

Three additional adult instructors will be given appointments in Hall County as soon as the district supervisor gives local heads the authority. Several applications for the positions have already been received.

A new salary schedule for all adult teachers will be announced by the WPA shortly, and local instructors are awaiting the action with bated breath. It is not known whether the wage scale will be hiked or cut.

With the addition of the four women on the teaching roll this week, there are now 49 teachers of adult education in the county. The instructors have their positions until July 1, when the WPA teaching project will end.
