Estelline Is Host To Many Hundreds On July Fourth

LAST RITES FOR MRS. WEATHERLY HELD YESTERDAY

Funeral services for Mrs. Garland Weatherly, 29, of Weatherly, who died early yesterday in a local hospital following an attack of pneumonia, were held yesterday afternoon at Hulver, with interment in the Hulver cemetery.

Survivors are her husband and two young daughters, her parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. D. House, six brothers and three sisters.

Major Repairs Are Made at Hightower Greenhouse Lately

The Hightower Greenhouse has been undergoing considerable repairs and changes lately. The office has been modernized, and a second-story added which affords a very convenient storage room.

The roof was renewed and the office, inside and out, has been given a new coat of paint, giving the quarters a new and attractive appearance.

Mr. Hightower reports the greenhouse business has been very satisfactory so far this year.

Button, Button! Who Has the Button?

Who has the contract? That's what Memphis people are trying to find out.

Contract for the construction of the CCC camp was supposed to have been let Tuesday.

The Democrat wired Major Beezley at Oklahoma City for information in that connection.

His reply was "no bids received for construction of camp at Memphis."

What does it mean? The Democrat knows that several local contractors submitted bids on the job.

There have been some rumors that letting of the contract has been delayed until July 10.

But your guess is as good as mine.

Estelline was host yesterday to hundreds of people from all over the Upper Red River Valley—and a gracious host, too.

The large crowd—largest in Estelline in many years—began forming early yesterday morning and stayed throughout the day to enjoy the varied entertainment that was provided.

Free barbecue was served at noon on the public square. A parade, led by the Memphis Gold Medal Band, followed. For the next two hours a baseball game between Estelline and Memphis occupied the attention of the throng and a rodeo—completed the daylight events.

A dance last night on the square was the final event of the three-day celebration.

Estelline citizens who promoted the celebration announced it highly successful in every respect.

QUIET FOURTH IN MEMPHIS

It was a quiet Fourth in Memphis.

Only one drunk was arrested. He was picked up by city officers. No disorders at all were entered on county records yesterday.

There were no serious accidents to Memphians yesterday, either, so far as could be learned today.

Most local people celebrated at Estelline where a free barbecue, rodeo and baseball game were the order of the day.

DICTATOR BILLS URGED BY HUEY

BATON ROUGE, July 5.—With Senator Huey Long at its helm, the Houses Ways and Means Committee today gave speedy approval to 26 new and, in many respects, most stringent "dictator" bills he has yet conceived. One of the two bills revealed was interpreted to give Long's administration control of all municipal, parochial or state officers not elected by the people, but Long denied that it was that far reaching.

'Left Wingers' in Conference Today

CHICAGO, July 5.—A national conference of self-styled radicals opened today with leaders predicting they would put the "left wing" third party into the political field next year, with a "new social order" as its platform. Sponsors of the movement said that 200 conferees gathered at a Chicago hotel at the call of an initiating committee composed of five members of congress.

PRESIDENT SIGNS WAGNER LABOR MEASURE

Says It Is Important Step Toward Labor Regulations

WASHINGTON, July 5.—Signing the Wagner labor bill, President Roosevelt today described it as "an important step toward achievement of just and peaceful labor regulations in industry."

Among other things the measure guarantees labor the right to bargain collectively, gives a labor organization chosen by a majority of employees in a plant the right to speak for all the employees, forbids employers interfering with self-organization of employees.

In an accompanying statement President Roosevelt explained the new national labor relations board legislation provided to serve purely as a quasi-judicial body.

No Cash, but We'll Pray for You, Irked Pastor Tells Thief

QUANAH, July 5.—Thrice burglars crept into the study of the First Christian Church.

Twice they emptied the birthday offering container.

Once it was empty so they smashed it to pieces.

The Rev. Charles A. Chasteen, exasperated, inserted the following advertisement in the local newspaper Tuesday:

"To all thieves and burglars: Inasmuch as the study of the First Christian Church has been broken into three times in as many months, we wish to inform you that we keep no money there. If you will come to see us during the day we will read the Bible to you and pray for you."

Youth Confesses Murder of Child

The mystery of the torturing and murder of Helen Glenn, 9-year-old daughter of a Greenville, N. Y., minister, is reported by police to have been solved with the confession of Albert Velckmann, 18, grocery clerk.

ETHIOPIA ASKS U.S. FIND WAY FOR PEACE

Kellogg-Briand Pact Cited as Instrument for Act

ETHIOPIA'S appeal to the United States to find a way to keep peace in East Africa under the Kellogg-Briand pact, reached Secretary Hull today. He declined to comment.

Emperor Haile Selassie in a statement to the Associated Press, today asserted that Ethiopia will collaborate with any nation for peace as long as her independence and integrity are not threatened. A spokesman for the Italian government asserted in Rome that the appeal will not change in any way Italy's attitude toward her border controversy with Ethiopia.

"I have confidence in the future of Memphis and am pleased with my new location," Mr. Mundy stated.

Mr. Mundy and family have moved to Memphis and will make their home at 608 South Eighth Street.

SIX KILLED IN PLANE'S CRASH

BERLIN, July 5.—A pilot and five mechanics were killed today when a trial plane crashed through the roof of a house at Britz, Berlin suburb near Templehof air-drome.

Cause of the crash was undetermined.

Panhandle's Oldest Citizen Dies at Hereford; Lived Through Four Wars

HEREFORD, July 5.—Death has removed the Texas Panhandle's oldest citizen, Nancy Julia Ann Sams. If she had lived five days longer she would have been 104 years old.

Born June 24, 1831, at Bluntsville, Tenn., Mrs. Sams and her husband, James Sams, whom she married in 1853, came to Texas in 1870.

Mrs. Sams outlived her husband and four of her five children. Only one daughter, Mrs. J. S. Smith, who lives 12 miles south of Hereford, survived. Her two eldest sons, Thomas Alle and William, were slain by highwaymen in Hill County.

Mrs. Sams voted for the first time in 1930. Texas won its independence and the United States fought four wars—the Mexican conflict of 1846, the Civil war, the Spanish-American war and the World War—during her life-time.

Mrs. Sams disapproved of bobbed hair and smoking for women. She said, however, that the practice of women smoking was not modern, recalling that the corn cob pipe once was a household necessity for many women.

Mrs. Sams remained on a small farm in eastern Tennessee with her three small children while her husband fought in the Civil war. He died at Hillsboro in 1896.

Safe and Sane Fourth of July In Memphis

Independence Day was a quiet affair in Memphis yesterday.

The streets were almost deserted—most of the citizens going to Estelline, some to Childress and others to Clarendon to help celebrate the grand and glorious Fourth, while others went fishing and on picnicking trips to the country. A number spent the day at home.

It certainly was a safe and sane July 4 so far as Memphis was concerned. No casualties have been reported here.

Summer Sweethearts

CHAPTER XLVIII They had heard about Isabel...

"My ideal, pursued Isabel, running a wet comb through her wavy and narrowing her eyes...

"Sez you?" Daisy was setting the table now, snapping forks and knives, all hopelessly mismatched...

"Canned beans? I know it," she slammed into the room she shared with Daisy and Mary Maud...

"Oh, sis, a box came for you today," Mary Maud, gawking and pale at 11, in a gingham dress...

"A box? How? By parcel post?" Hundreds of any sort were an event in this family.

Practically Isabel tore at the string, ripping it off. Under folds of tissue paper lay a white and silver frock...

creamy envelope. There was a signature. Sally Moon... Why, of all things...

"Dear Isabel: I'm going to Paris for a year. You said something the last time you did my hair about getting married...

"Well, I never thought she even liked me," marvelled Isabel. Casual, careless Sally had sent her the wedding dress!

"Try it on, sis. Try it on," Both dingy little girls were hopping about in an ecstasy of excitement.

They forgot about time, forgot about food. Isabel emerged from the scrubby cubicle which served as a bathroom, her arms and face gleaming from recent scrubbing...

"Ooh! Ooh, don't you look nice?" Even, Daisy said it, reluctantly but convincingly.

"You mind your own business or you'll be sorry," Isabel advised heatedly. "Tell you one thing—when Bill and I step off, we'll have a slicker looking place to live in than this dump...

"You're tellin' me?" Bill demanded truculently. "You're my girl, aren't you? And we're gettin' married soon, aren't we?"

"First I heard of it." "Well, you know it now," said the man. He was staring at her as if he had never seen her before.

Katharine and Michael did not go to England at once, after all. Michael took Katharine back to Silencia where Miss Daisy and Miss Roxana and Miss Vincent fussed over her...

He was still unable quite to believe that this delicate, golden-haired girl was really his wife. He had nearly lost her—and all along the way their path had been tangled with briars...

One day about a week after their return to Silencia Michael had left. He came into his room, almost blinded by the glare of the patio, and found the interior dark and cool...

sitting in his one deep chair. Katharine, dressed in a green linen frock with delicate hand-work on it...

"Darling! You're really feeling better?" He raised her hand to her lips. He felt, reverentially, that he was literally worthy of her...

"Some of this he said, haltingly and slowly. When he looked up at his amazement he saw she was laughing at him.

Was it true then—this thing he had long suspected—that the girl had regarded her impulsive bargain with him, that she was certain she did not love him?

"Michael, you great fool!" Her melodious voice pronounced the words lingeringly. "Don't you love me any more?"

"I thought you were ill," he began. But she was in his arms 'till very moment; she was half-laughing, half-crying against his stalwart shoulder.

"It's a great scandal, really, when a girl has to woo her man in this shameless fashion." Michael stopped her mockery in the only possible way—with a kiss.

They sat side by side at the long dark dinner table that night, and held hands shamelessly, after the fashion of lovers...

"Did you ever see anything so lovely?" The gnarled tree in the courtyard made a stark shadow on the flags...

"What sort of perfume is that?" he crushed her to him, this creature of light and air and indescribable sweetness.

"I—I can't remember," she said vaguely. "It's very nice," he told her in-eloquently. Her fair hair was loosened about her face...

Three weeks later they were in London, to all eyes the usual, good-looking young American couple in well cut tweeds...

He told his wife at tea that evening.

"She doesn't talk like an American," he said. "That is, I can understand every single word she says."

Katharine said he was an old lamb, and Michael agreed moderately. After a brief stay at the Savoy the two were to go to Ireland to see the castle which had come to Michael from his father's people.

"It probably has 87 rooms and one bath," he told his bride. "And old retainers in hunting coats jumping out of the hedges."

"Oh, Michael, we must do some riding there. They say the horses are marvelous!" He smiled at her glowing face.

"A letter from John Kaye," she said. "Oh, darling, I am sorry about John. He was so sweet to me... and I let him down, didn't I?"

"Dear Kitey," she read. "Best of luck and all that. Ted Michael Heatheroe for me that he'll have to use a whip hand on a stubborn girl. Or don't. That sounds flip-pant. I'm just trying to be funny."

"You're not going to lose me, my sweet. Not if I can help it." Their big, luxurious room darkened as night fell.

"And tomorrow," said Katharine dreamily. "We take the Channel crossing. Ireland then, my darling. And the place your father was born. And all the rest of our life together..."

"You're already a match-maker," Michael shouted in rich amusement when she told him. A severe-looking man servant came in with the tea at the moment, interrupting their idyll.
