Want A New Iron? Consider These Points Before You Buy

If you're in the market for an electric hand iron, you might take and some specialists at A&M.

Most homemakers, when buying an iron, will lift it first to test its weight and ease of handling. An iron weighing no more than four pounds saves energy in lifting and will do the work as well as a heavier one. The handle should be shaped to fit the hand comfortably and made of a heat-resistant material, such as plastic or wood.

A power rating of about 1,000 watts is desirable for fast heating the specialists say. A dial to con-trol heat is desirable, located where it is easy to read and move when ironing.

A beveled or slanting edge is useful for ironing around buttons. A large sole plate saves time when family ironing includes consider-able flat work, although a smaller narrower iron is sometimes more convenient.

Look the cord over, the special sts suggest. It should be well-insulated, with a secure, flexible connection where it is attached to the iron. The Oregon Experiment Station recently conducted a time and motion study, in which it was proved that a side support, heel support or a flat, heat-proof pad to set the iron cn proved equally good as time and energy savers. However, the metal stands that are relics from the days of stove-heated irons waste both time and energy.

It is a well-known scientific fact that the lack of only a small amount of the B vitamins and certain minerals in your system will cause certain bodily disorders such as nutritional neuritis, which causes the aches and pains commonly known as rheumatism, and there is no known cure for the ailment except the administration of the needed vitamins and minerals. This is why people who suffered for years and years never were able to obtain any relief until they took the vitamins and minerals the lack of which was causing the disorders.

HADACOL does not contain only one but has five of the B vitamins and four necessary minerals. It comes to you in liquid form so that it will be easily absorbed by the blood and, therefore, carried to the parts of the body which need them most.
