Normandy, France

The world remembered D-Day Monday as the 50th anniversary of the Normandy landings was marked by huge ceremonies. President Clinton represented the United States at the occasion. Queen Elizabeth II and Prince Philip were on hand as Britain's heads of state while French President Francois Mitterand hosted the activities.

The International Ceremony was conducted on Omaha beach with the dignitaries watching re-enactments of the landing and airborne drops from a gigantic reviewing stand constructed especially for the occasion.

American memorial ceremonies were conducted in the American cemetery at Colleville-Sur-Mer where President Clinton spoke to a crowd that included many D-Day veterans. He told them, "We are the children of your sacrifice," and ended his remarks by stating "the battle for freedom continues...the longest day is not over yet."

Washington, D.C.

Representative Sam Gibbons (D) of Florida was named Chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee this week. Gibbons a long-time member of the legislature was appointed to take the place of Dan Rostenkowski (D) of Illinois who was indicted last week on fraud and corruption charges. Gibbons promised to continue the fight for President Clinton's health care package which is currently under consideration by the Ways and Means committee.

Beijing, China

Chinese officials notified US diplomats this week that China will not support economic sanctions against neighboring North Korea. Clinton administration officials have indicated that Chinese cooperation is essential if economic sanctions are to be effective in forcing the Communist regime in North Korea into allowing inspections of their nuclear facilities.

Nations weighing in on the side of sanctions this week were France, Russia, Saudi Arabia and India. The United States and Great Britain have long held that international sanctions would be necessary to force the North Koreans to comply with international monitoring treaties.

Centennial Park Awarded Grant

Word was received Tuesday, May 31, 1994 that the new Centennial Park will receive a cash grant in the amount of $4662.00 for the planting of trees and the installation of a "bubbler" irrigation system. Schleicher County Judge, Johnny Griffin received the notification and explained that the grant is provided by the U.S. Small Business Administration and is administered by the Texas Forest Service at Texas A&M.

Grants Administrator Peter D. Smith of College Station said that the planting of trees may be done at any time after November 1st, in consultation with Eldorado's area forester, Mark A. Peterson of San Antonio. Mr. Peterson came to Eldorado Feb. 28 of this year at the invitation of the local Centennial Park project team and met with Holly Brame, Pat Sykes, Hawley Wolfe and Loraine Hamilton. Lori Williams of Odessa with the Texas Department of Transportation provided valuable advice in landscape architecture.

The Centennial Park is a three acre parcel of land adjacent to the hospital and the school practice field on west Murchison Street; we sometimes refer to it as "the lake", because it is a natural drainage catchment area. Holly Brame gave the land to the county last December on the condition that it be transformed into a landscaped park for the enjoyment of all the citizens of Eldorado. Many people have already gotten involved in support of the project. District Soil Conservation agent, Carol Green and Ken Forester, SCS Engineer, completed a topographic survey of the lot to determine the best way to re-route the runoff. Local attorney, Marian Bland Overstreet provided legal assistance. County Extension Agent Jerry Swift has agreed to serve as project supervisor for the tree planting.

Schleicher County Commissioners agreed to truck in caliche and black-dirt for fill during the next several months as equipment and manpower are available. Mayor John Nikolauk and the Eldorado City Council agreed to close the street right-of-ways that cross the land to clear the way for it's declaration as a park. The Chamber Pride Committee have agreed to supervise ongoing care of the plantings.

The grant will pay for 74% of the direct cash costs of the tree-planting project. The remaining $1600.00 in direct cash match funds is being raised by the Centennial Park Committee. Anyone interested in helping should contact Holly Brame.

"This is a very exciting project for our town," Holly Brame stated, "We think of the donation of the land as our 'Christmas Present' to the whole community. Some Mesquite thicket will be left in the park and Purple Sage and Sumac shrubs will be planted to give some seasonal color. Our forester, Mark Peterson recommended a range of tree species, blending evergreens like the Live Oaks and Montezuma Cypress with broadleaf deciduous trees like Pecan and fruitless, non-bearing, Cottonwoods. Our plan is to provide an attractive fence around the park and to make it a pleasant place for everybody. we love our community and we think this is a great way to celebrate the 100th anniversary of the founding of our town."

City Council Meets, Discusses Sidewalk

The Eldorado City Council met Monday evening, May 6, 1994 in regular session and heard from Harris and Jackie Napier concerning the Pioneer Family Memorial Tree Project slated to begin this year. The Napiers told the council of a plan to replace portions of the sidewalk on the east side of South Main Street in connection with that project. The council agreed to assist in removing 157 feet of sidewalk in two sections so that commemorative pavers or engraved granite blocks could be installed while the tree planting was underway. Currently the plan would see individuals or businesses purchase a paver or an engraved granite block which would be inscribed with that individual's or business' name.

In other business, Kim Thackerson and Susie Richters with the Schleicher County EMS met with the council and requested emergency funding to help meet a shortfall in the services budget. Ms. Thackerson told the council that membership in the service is down due to several people dropping out or moving away. She indicated that new volunteers were being trained and that they would need uniforms, pagers and a series of Hepatitis B vaccine. The council agreed to provide $1200 to the ambulance service.

Dahlberg Running For State Rep.

Schleicher County farmer, Lester Dahlberg was notified by the Secretary of State that he will be placed on the November ballot as an Independent candidate for State Representative, District 73. Dahlberg received notice on June 2, 1994 that his petition for a place on the ballot, which contained over 1000 signatures had been accepted.

Dahlberg warned in a press release of a pending financial disaster triggered by the "unregulated derivatives" market. "This isn't going to be something you read about in the newspaper!" stated Dahlberg, "Sometime in the coming months, in the next 12-18 months, it will hit. You won't be able to write a check or use a credit card at that local store. The reason will be that your bank has folded. The check you get paid won't be cashable either."

Dahlberg went on to state that during the disaster he predicts we will need a President prepared to act independently. He labeled the "Whitewater business" as "virtually treasonous."

Dahlberg, a wheat farmer, moved to Schleicher County in 1973 from Tom Green County. He and his wife, Mary Louise have two grown sons and just recently became grandparents for the first time. They will celebrate their 35th wedding anniversary this year.

of Lyndon LaRouche failed in his last attempt to win State office. In 1990 he was the Democratic nominee for State Representative in District 67, losing to Republican, Harvey Hilderbran.

The D-day presentations on television were for the most part pretty informative. Even my children watched many of them with me. Maybe because Maxine's uncle from Odessa had been in the invasion it put a personal stamp on something that to them happened so long ago. Many of the shows included personal recollections and after fifty years these now aging men (and a few women) could still recall details clearly. The historical commentators tried to put different spins on what D-day really meant but I was most impressed with one historian who through his study of the event attributed its success not to the planners but to the junior officers and non-commissioned officers in the invasion force.

As a student of history I was ignorant of the fact that Hitler had thought that his Nazi troops would easily send the allies back into the sea. He saw the undisciplined nature of democratic governments and societies not creating an atmosphere in which young men would be willing to follow their leaders to their very probable death. He was wrong! This historian felt it was the very nature of men from democratic backgrounds to take the initiative. The junior officers and NCOs saw the plan not work and they improvised not so much because they had any great desire to die but rather a great desire to live and to end the kind of totalitarian state that smothers life.

Another commentator called WWII the "Last good war" if any war could be called good because the objective was clear and right. It seems to me that the lesson from all of the history of the last week is that we, America, should not commit its young men to die unless the objectives are clear, attainable, and right. There were protestors against WWII but the consensus was that fascism had to be stopped. The Gulf war showed that today the machines of war are even more devastating than they were fifty years ago. Caution, clarity, and commitment should be even more important today.

Over The Back Fence

by Randy Mankin

This past monday, the world remembered D-Day. President Clinton represented the United States on the beaches of Normandy where leaders from around the world assembled to pontificate on the price of freedom. Many of the D-Day veterans who made the trip back to France were displaced from their hotels by the French government in order to house all the visiting dignitaries. One more time, these men who took those beaches by the sheer strength of will were forced to fend for themselves at Normandy.

French President Mitterand expressed his sorrow at having to turn the heroes out on the street but said that it would have been a diplomatic embarrassment to not provide rooms to all the foreign officials. Bill Radley of Wisconsin was among the hundreds of veterans that turned up on television being interviewed by the army of reporters on hand. He was asked if he was insulted by the actions of the French government. "I don't know why I should be insulted," responded Radley, "the reception was better than the first one I got here."

"When I came ashore at Omaha, most of the first wave was dead on the beach or in the water," continued Radley. "I could see only a handful of men who had made it to the first dune. Three fellows directly in front of me fell at the same time. I think they were all hit by the same round. Two of us were all that made it in my group and we were hiding behind anything we could find. By noon, I had been hit twice. Once in the right ankle, then in the right thigh. I thought I was going to bleed to death before a corps man pulled me into a shell crater and bandaged my wounds."

Radley, a nineteen year old Pfc at the time recovered quickly from his wounds and a few days later took part in the battle of St. Lo where he was wounded yet again. Two months in a London hospital saw him recovered sufficiently to return to his squad. While his unit was bogged down in heavy snow in Belgium, the last German offensive of the war rolled right over them. During that fight, the Battle of the Bulge, Radley was wounded a fourth time and taken prisoner by the Germans. When General Patton's 3rd Army liberated Bastogne, a small group of prisoners led by Sergeant Radley managed to escape and reach allied lines. This time Radley was sent home. Bill Radley was awarded the Purple Heart, Bronze Star, Silver Star, Distinguished Service Cross and the Congressional Medal of Honor for valor above and beyond the call of duty.

I know a lot has been made of President Clinton going to Normandy. One side says that he was a draft dodger and shouldn't have been there on the same ground where brave men fought and died. The other side points out that Bill Clinton is our President and as such is the Commander-in-Chief of our armed forces and that he rightly went to pay tribute to the fallen on our behalf. "After all, didn't Lincoln go to Gettysburg?" they ask.

Are we supposed to expect politicians to ever seek the limelight if even among the dead? Laying my personal opinion of our President aside for a moment, I must say that I think it was proper for him to have gone. It was proper for him to see row after row after row of white crosses. It was proper for him to get a first hand look at the obstacles that had to be overcome. It was proper for him to be exposed to and come to grips with, if only on an elementary level, the price of freedom.

The question of whether we as a nation were well represented at Normandy by our President is irrelevant in my view. Bill Radley was there. That was good enough for me.

Letters To The Editor

Dear Editor:

The letter Jim Martin wrote to the Editor of the Standard Times is one that we should all participate in. Every citizen of Schleicher County should write their Senator or Representative, both state and national, and express outrage at the high-handed tactics of the Fish and Wildlife Commission and the Environmental Protection Agency.

We all want a decent environment to live in, but we also want to be able to make a decent living. The Taung Ming-Lin incident is by no means an isolated one. Speak now or forever continue to lose your property rights!

I for one am going to write every State Senator and Representative and all of Texas' Representatives and Senators in the U.S. Congress.

Elton McGinnes
Eldorado

Editors note: Jim Martin's letter to which Elton McGinnes referred is reprinted here for our readers consideration.

Editor:

According to a recent news story, Taung Ming-Lin, the owner of 720 acres of land in southern California, prepared 719 acres of his property in cultivation to grow and sell vegetables to people in his area.

Before he could plant his crop, U.S. Fish and Wildlife agents showed Lin a dead Tipton Kangaroo Rat and accused him of violating the Endangered Species Act by knowingly destroying its habitat. Even though Lin protested his innocence, the federal agents confiscated his tractor, which halted his operation.

Does anyone realize that when the federal government confiscates property, it does not have to prove it's case to keep and sell that property? If Lin is to get his property back and avoid a fine and possible imprisonment, he has to, at his expense, "prove his innocence."

Did you ever try to prove that something did not happen or that you did not do something? It is not possible to prove a negative supposition.

How do you think the architects of our Constitution would view this event? When our lawmakers enacted the Endangered Species Act, was it their desire that U.S.

Fish and Wildlife officials be able to circumvent the Constitution and the courts in their arrogant zeal to see that justice is meted out to the citizenry?

What terrifies me the most about this is that I have not heard a single outcry from a citizen or a legislator, and our silence gives tacit approval of what these federal officials are doing.

Is it because it is not happening to us? Do we really believe, given the federal government's ever increasing thirst for power and revenue, that the eventual loss of all our freedoms is not a real probability?

If we do not make ourselves heard when others' freedoms are seized, who will be heard in our defense when our rights and freedoms are taken away? each generation must "re-win" its rights and freedoms.

Jim Martin

Dear Editor:

From 1950 to 1957 Texans in all walks of life experienced the worst drought in the state's history, a phenomenon whose effects surpassed those of even the Great Depression and the Dustbowl. For the past seven years while completing my masters and doctoral degrees, I have studied those years and have increasingly come to appreciate the unique ability of Texans to cope with such environmental disasters.

Our best coping mechanism is laughter. Growing up in Junction, Texas on the edge of the Hill Country, I've heard the stories that circulate the local cafes, feed stores, race tracks and rodeo arenas. Where ever Texans gather someone has a joke. The laughter those jokes bring helps us deal with life in a state where extremes of climate are the norm.

Now I'm collecting drought humor to preserve this special aspect of the Texan character and culture. By sharing with me their own drought jokes or funny real-life anecdotes. All contributors and localities will be acknowledged. Please send your stories to:

Clinton's War Against the American West

Led by Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt, the Clinton administration appears to be waging an all-out war on the American west.

Their weapons of choice: bombarding property owners with onerous regulations, blockading public land use, and besieging ranchers, miners, property owners and their communities -- all in the name of environmental activism.

At its core, the Clinton agenda really targets private property in general. And their extremist environmentalism tends to have a disproportionate effect on the west.

The administration's land use reform agenda includes dramatically increased grazing fees, radically restricted federal policies on logging, mining and water use, and the protection of endangered species at any cost.

Private property rights, not to mention economic development, are not on the administration's list of priorities.

The controversy over grazing fees is a powerful example.

The White House and Mr. Babbitt have forcefully lobbied for dramatically higher fees, to take effect immediately, on ranchers whose herds and flocks graze on federally-owned land.

Your Voice
In Washington
Congressman
Lamar Smith

This effort is based on the myth that livestock grazing damages public lands. In fact, scientists and range experts agree that public lands are now in the best condition they have been in this century. The 1990 public Rangelands Report concluded that the current trend is "stable to improving" on cation growth and helps prevent fires.

The administration also buys into the fiction that low grazing fees are a subsidy for wealthy ranchers.

In fact, although federal land maintenance does cost more than the fees generate, ranchers pay out of their own pockets more than 87 percent of the public range-land.

Like mowing a lawn or pruning a bush, controlled grazing promotes plant vigor. It aerates the soil, scatters seeds, spurs vegfor many land improvements and water developments that benefit wildlife. Moreover, many of the government's maintenance costs would exist with or without ranchers.

And the "wealthy rancher" stereotype is completely false. Nearly 90 percent of ranchers on public land have fewer than 500 head of cattle and net incomes of under $28,000 a year.

Finally, the administration's claim that grazing is not an efficient use of public land simply does not square with reality.

Of the roughly 1.1 billion acres of territory in the U.S. classified as grazing land, more than 85 percent are not even suitable for crop production.

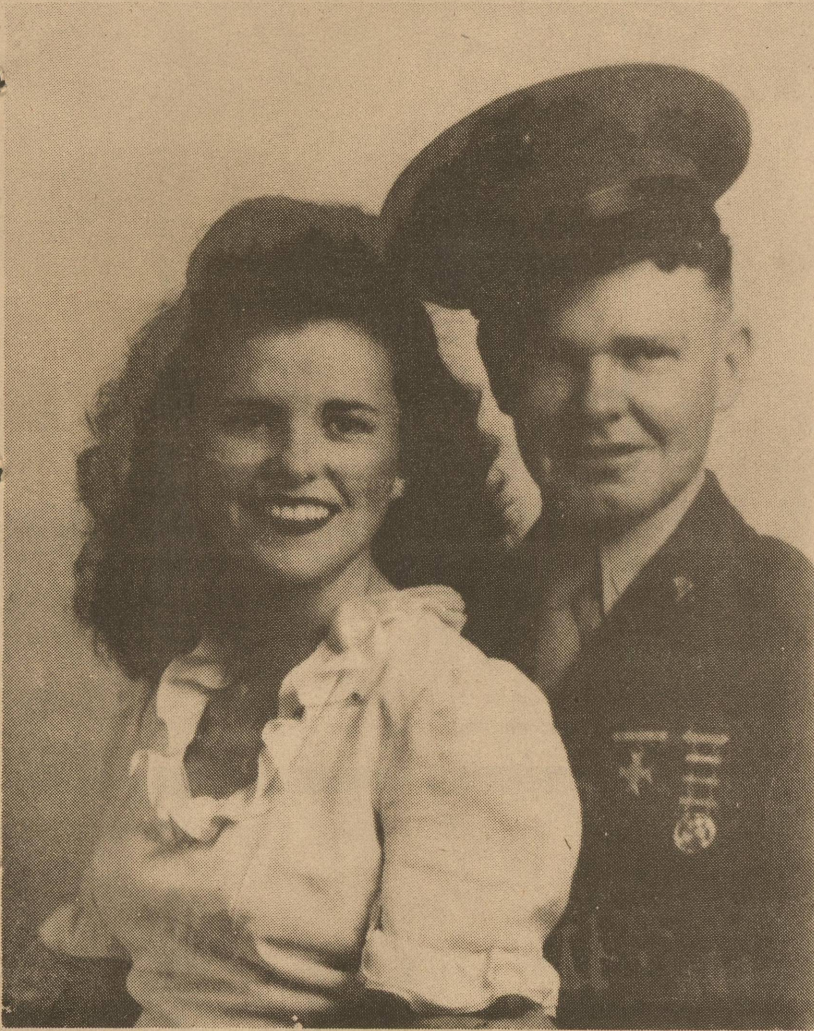

An Interior Department memo, written by a member of Mr. Babbitt's staff, admitted that their own data showed "the range is in better shape than at any point in this century."

However, to justify the administration's policies, the memo recommended that the White House "make deliberate and public attempts to prove how bad the conditions are."

Looks like the administration has decided to add misinformation to its arsenal in the war against the west. But ranchers know the truth will win out in the end.

My office in Washington is here to serve the needs of the 21st District. Please don't hesitate to call at 202-225-4236.

Golf Play Day

by Mabel Freitag

On Sunday, June 5th we had 31 golfers for our regular once a month Play Day. We always enjoy our youths joining us. There were 28 adults and three youths; Casey Snelson, Rocky Meador and Lewis Martinez.

We finished 18 holes about 4:30. The weather was "hot" and we had four teams that were playing "hot", they each came in with a score of 58. after some discussion, we have some "dyed in the wool golfer" who insisted on playing it off on the course. We finished after four extra holes at 6:30 p.m.

1st: D. Halbert, R. Meador, G. Jones, and T. Hunley.

2nd: S. Snelson, K. Nance, Victor Belman and M. Freitag.

3rd: M. Rathbone, E. Price, C. Snelson and B. Pay.

Our next Play Day will be on July 3rd, 1994. Our golf course is in great condition.

Sheriff's

Report

Schleicher County Sheriff, Richard Harris' monthly summary indicated a total of 164 complaints received in May. A total of 24 persons (20 male; 4 female) were arrested, 28 civil process served for Justice, County and District Court, 3 out of county warrants were served. Two fires were reported in Eldorado, 1 in the county and 8 controlled burns.

A breakdown of the 164 complaints follows:

Fuel efficient cars save money and help the environment.

Say hello to the fuel efficient home.

Don't settle for an energy guzzler. Consider energy-saving Good Cents instead.

Good Cents homes need less energy for heating and cooling. So you save money on utility bills year-round. You stay comfortable. And you help the environment, too.

Conoco Makes Local Donations

Conoco made donations to the Schleicher County Chamber of Commerce and the Schleicher County ISD this week. Bill Whitley and Dan Jenkins, representing Conoco delivered checks to each in the amount of $250. Ronnie Sauer was on hand to accept the Chamber of Commerce's check and express his gratitude to Conoco. "Conoco is an outstanding corporate member of our community," said Sauer. "They have always gone out of their way to help Eldorado and we are grateful to them," Sauer concluded.

In previous years, Conoco has donated money to various groups and agencies around Schleicher County, including the Eldorado Volunteer Fire Department.

Conoco employees Dan Jenkins (L) and Bill Whitley (R) present a $250 check to the Schleicher County Chamber of Commerce. Ronnie Sauer accepts the check on behalf of the Chamber.

One Million Pages = Schlitterbahn!

"Schlitterbahn or bust!" was the slogan for students at Eldorado Middle School this year. The students were challenged by the staff of EMS to read one million pages of library or subject matter books in order to take a one-day trip to the water park in New Braunfels.

Spearheaded by Betty Robinson, the purpose of the project was to motivate students to enjoy reading more.

Students were given goals by reading teachers Mrs. Robinson, Glenda Nix, Jill Preston and Kay Creek. The class reading the most pages in one six weeks won a Coke party during their reading class. Adults in the school system and the community also contributed to the million page mark, which was reached shortly after spring break.

On May 26, eight buses left EMS at 6 a.m., taking about 250 students and numerous faculty members on the four hour drive to the park. Since most schools were still in session, the EMS students almost had the park to themselves. They were seen going full steam trying to get in all the rides before departure time. In fact, it was noted not many stopped to eat until it was time to go home.

The eight buses arrived back at EMS about 10:00 p.m. with 250 happy but elated students.

Was it worth reading all those pages? The unanimous answer from all eight buses was YES! And we want to go again next year.

Dorothy's Movie Time

by Dorothy Dacy

Hi Everyone! Last week I had my grandson staying with us for a few days, so I have only one movie to review for you. Keeping up with a 21 month old is a story all it's own, but let's talk about the film.

A Home of Our Own is rated PG and stars Kathy Bates, academy award winner for best actress in "Misery", and Edward Furlong who appeared in "Terminator 2".

This is a true story of one mother's strength and determination to fulfill a dream. When Frances Lacey finds nothing left for herself and her six children in Los Angeles, she quits her job, packs up the family and sets off to find a place they can call their own. This movie is set during the early 1960s. Francis is a widow with a house full of kids, the oldest being 15. They are a truly poor family by material standards but rich in love for one another.

Driving through Idaho, Frances suddenly pulls the car over when she sees the house of her dreams. It is basically a shell without a roof, doors, windows or even an out-house! She negotiates with the owner, promising her family's labors in exchange for living in the "house". So, Frances begins to build, barter and borrow her way towards reconstructing the house. This is one tough, hard-working lady who believes in doing things on her own and not accepting charity of any kind.

But in the face of natural and unnatural disasters, and through tender tears and a lot of laughter, the Lacey tribe is unstoppable when it comes to building their dream. Please check this one out and I think you'll agree with me that sometimes life is hard but you take what you've got and try and make it better. A Home of Our Own is currently available at Perry's.

Until next week remember, if you want to be a good wife, always do everything your husband says. But, you don't have to be a good wife.

Irrigation Pipe: A Deadly Diversion

Irrigation pipes spread the flow of needed water through croplands, but they may also divert a deadlier current - electricity! The mishandling of irrigation pipe is a major cause of accidental contact with overhead electric lines in farming areas.

Several factors may set the stage for a tragedy:

- When not in use, pipe is often stored at the edge of the field - the most likely location for overhead lines.
- An irrigation pump motor may be electrically powered, requiring an overhead service line from the distribution line.
- Most power lines are easily within contact range of the 30' sections of pipe.
- Irrigation pipe is made of aluminum, which is one of the best conductors of electricity. Most new distribution lines are made of aluminum.
- The pipe is often used by small animals as a refuge or a nesting place. Hunters or children may turn the section on end to dislodge game.
- Workers may upward sections to relocate them or clear them of debris.

Any contact with an overhead line may prove fatal, whether that line is an insulated service conductor at 480 volts or an open-wire distribution conductor at 7,200 volts. Always remember to look before you lift.

There are times in life when it becomes difficult to avoid discouragement. Martin Luther, the champion of the Reformation also knew deep times of depression. He was besieged by threats, enemies and excommunication. No one seemed able to help him remove the cloud of gloom which darkened his soul.

One day he came home to find his wife, Catherine, dressed in the black of mourning, weeping sorrowfully. Luther asked her in compassion who had died. "God is dead," she answered, "and I can't bear it, for all his work is overthrown!"

Luther was shocked at this seeming blasphemy from his wife and told her so. "Well," Catherine replied, "you have been going around acting as if God is dead, as if God is no longer here to keep us; and so I thought I ought to put on mourning to keep you company in your great bereavement." Luther quickly changed his outlook.

Jesus told us "Peace I leave with you; my peace I give you. I do not give to you as the world gives. Do not let your hearts be troubled and do not be afraid." There is a power available from God to each of us who seek in faith. God is in control and able to save. Regardless of our circumstances or problems, God has the power and compassion to enable us to endure. We can have peace and assurance in all of life--even in the darkest hours. When discouragement comes, turn to the God who will never leave you or forsake you.

Public Notice

On March 23, 1994, GTE and Contel ("The Companies") filed applications with the Public Utility Commission of Texas ("PUC") to restructure the Companies' Switched Transport rate category and reduce the Carrier Common Line (CCL) charge of its Switched Access Service. The tariff sheets in GTE and Contel's applications, if approved, will bring the Companies' state access tariffs into structural parity with their interstate tariffs for the Local Transport rate category, which became effective on December 30, 1993.

GTE and Contel propose to implement the new tariffs on a revenue neutral basis. The Local Transport category of GTE and Contel's Switched Access Service is primarily for interexchange carriers.

Persons who wish to intervene should file a motion for intervention with the PUC by June 17, 1994 with reference to Docket No. 12866 (GTE) and/or 12865 (Contel). Requests for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757, or call the Public Utility Commission Public Information Office at (512) 458-0223 or (512) 458-0227 or (512) 458-0221 teletypewriter for the deaf.
