TODAY and TOMORROW

By WALTER LIPPMANN

Congress and the Management of Money

By a vote of nearly five to one the House has declared that it desires that the credit and money of the United States should be managed to accomplish a certain definite object. The object specified in the bill is the elevation of the average price of wholesale commodities by about 50 per cent and then its maintenance at that level. This declaration is contained in the so-called Goldborough Bill.

If the injunction contained in this bill is taken literally, the bill is inherently absurd and impossible. For wholesale commodity prices are for the most part world prices, and it is inconceivable that the Federal Reserve System, which controls neither the volume of the world production nor the volume of world credit and currency, can by its own action determine the world price. Only a world control of credit could conceivably maintain an average wholesale price of world commodities.

Even if such a world control could be set up it would be extremely undesirable. It would be grossly unjust to maintain an average price level of wholesale commodities. For among wholesale commodities there are a large number, such as wheat, cotton, corn and other agricultural products which vary in amount from season to season owing to changes in the weather. Suppose then that in one year the world had a big wheat crop and a short cotton crop. Wheat prices would tend to fall and cotton prices to rise. What would the credit managers do? Would they try to raise the price of wheat to the normal level? If they did, they would raise the price of cotton to abnormal levels.

But suppose this difficulty were gotten over. Suppose we had a year in which the principal agricultural crops were all excessive. Then, according to the sponsors of the Goldborough Bill the managers of credit would have to force agricultural prices up. But while they were doing that, they would also be forcing all other prices up. The prices of manufactured articles, of real estate and of securities would rise with the result that soon there would be over-production of goods. While the managers of credit were trying to raise agricultural prices, they would, by an inflation, be throwing the business of everybody else out of balance. Suppose then in another year that the prices were short. When prices rose, it would become the duty of the central banking authorities to deflate them. But in deflating them they would deflate business as well and so bring on a depression.

The fallacy of the Goldborough Bill, taken literally, is that it proposes to do an impossible thing which would be undesirable even if it could be done. Specifically, its fallacy lies in selecting one comparatively small group of prices, namely wholesale commodity prices, and forgetting all about the other prices which constitute the great bulk of the nation's trade. If the committee had studied the problem more thoroughly it would have selected a general price level which, because it is composed of a much larger group of transactions, is in the first place more just, and in the second place more nearly under control of the American banking system. For a general price level, which took account of all kinds of prices, would not fluctuate so wildly under world influences. If everything were taken into account, and not merely the commodities which sell in world markets, the task of managing such a general price level might be within the realm of the practical possibilities.

In any event the experiment of managing the general price level, and not the wholesale level alone, is what the Federal Reserve System is now engaged in. It is one of the most interesting, and potentially one of the most important, ever undertaken in the conscious control of human affairs. No one knows whether it will succeed but there are impressive theoretical reasons based on a certain amount of experience which warrant the hope that a success is possible.

What the Federal Reserve System is attempting to do is to recreate some considerable part of the lost credit which the furious liquidation of the last two years has destroyed. If this can be done then the general level of prices should rise, the burden of debts be reduced, the prospect of profit restored, and the unemployed should begin to be called back to work.

This banking policy, though it makes bankers brought up in the orthodox schools feel uncomfortable, is not altogether new in the principle. It has been put into effect on a smaller scale and somewhat less consciously two or three times in the past. Except in France, where bankers are excessively cautious, the policy now under way in the United States has been favorably discussed almost everywhere for nearly two years. There is good reason to believe that British opinion understands it, approves of it and will support it. Certainly, the debtor countries of the world cannot help wishing fervently that it will succeed. Even in France the time would seem to be ripe for a change of opinion. For France is nearly suffocated with gold and credit, and fairly soon French business and labor, which now feels the depression must come round to despairing what all the rest of mankind desires—that credit should be put to work and that prices should rise.

World conditions are such, therefore, that in view of the underlying strength of the American position the experiment we are making can be pursued resolutely. There is no reason to become timid for fear of anything that Europeans can do.

The only things we have to fear are things within our power to Clarence Fieber, 18-year-old freshman pitcher at San Francisco university, has been signed for the Chicago White Sox. He stands six feet four inches and weighs 190 pounds. He's left-handed.

We have reason to fear a demoralized Congress. We have reason to fear a failure to move towards a balanced budget. We have reason to fear things like the bonus, which in a blundering effort to achieve the objects which every one desires, will so confuse and alarm the people as to defeat an intelligent effort to accomplish these objects.

This, too, is the vice of the Goldborough Bill. It is not merely technically absurd and literally impossible. That could be passed over with the recognition that the Congressmen who passed it had their hearts in the right place even though they had lost their heads. The ultimate objection to the Goldborough Bill is that a politically-minded legislature cannot be trusted with the power to determine the general price level. It is the feature of the bill, not its blundering attempt to express an intention, which makes it highly desirable that the bill should be defeated.

For if the Federal Reserve System can manage the general price level—that is to say, if the present experiment succeeds—a power over human affairs will have been demonstrated to exist which calls for the utmost wisdom and disinterestedness by those who exercise it. It is too great a power to be entrusted to a legislature.

Those who look ahead would do well to consider this problem.

John W. Brady Soon To Finish Sentence

AUSTIN—John W. Brady, former Austin appellate judge, will walk out of Texas prison during the week of July 16-22, his sentence completed, according to records of the prison system, if he continues to receive overtime credits for work such as has accumulated up to now.

He entered the prison July 16, 1931, under a three-year sentence for the fatal stabbing of Lehigh Highsmith, supreme court stenographer.

His conviction was for murder without malice aforethought.

Up to May 7, he had accumulated one year, three months and 13 days of his term by service and the fixed commutation credit. In addition, he had accumulated 31 months and 28 days of overtime, by reason of his clear record and the work done in the prison. Based on his overtime up to that date his record showed him scheduled to be discharged next Oct. 7. He has been accumulating overtime at 100 per cent of time served, so that this would have the remaining five months of his prison term.

He went to Huntsville and voluntarily surrendered July 16, 1931. He has worked in the prison, first on abstract papers, then as teacher in the prison schools on several farms, then back in Huntsville on paper work.

BY RAYMOND BROOKS

AUSTIN—Numbers of county fee officials, who have gone back and made painstaking and conscientious search, since the fee investigations started, have been able to find items, mostly small, about which they were in doubt. These doubts have been resolved in favor of the state.

The result is that several hundred items, aggregating probably $10,000 or $15,000, have been found, and the money remitted to the treasury, which never would have been looked up on old accounts, except for the fee inquiry.

The same attitude toward new fee items have caused officials to pay over to the state small amounts that likely otherwise would have been retained by the officers.

These sums in general are not those whose holding would involve criminal proceedings; but mostly are such as are doubtful in their proper destination, and such that being remitted to the treasury make them more likely to escape criticism or controversy.

Here is one advantage of a department's having fuller control over its revenues and disbursements than granted the usual agencies of the state. The game department, foreseeing a shortage of $49,000 in its customary revenues from hunting licenses, tightened up on its expenses to the amount of $50,000. It did this by dropping 38 employees, by cutting down travel expenses accounts, and by reducing salaries.

Its traveling deputies get three cents per mile instead of the five cents allowed by law.

Executive Secretary Will Tucker hasn't made out an expense account for his own travel since last fall.

It is the only department so far as known that had cut its salaries before this present agitation for budget-trimming got under way.

Senators Walter C. Woodward and Walter F. Woodul, General Jacob F. Wolters and Governor Ross S. Sterling were members of a group reaching Austin together during the past week.

Senator Woodward, another of the group who will run for governor, if Mr. Sterling doesn't, reaffirmed that he has not the slightest inkling of Governor Sterling's plans.

Woodul and Woodward were at work on the growing boom, for Speaker John N. Garner.

If Mr. Garner is elected, it will be easy to find in Texas the four or five men who will stand close to the throne.

The civil judicial council is going to find out just how long the average case requires for final disposition in supreme court.

Members A. E. Johnson, Carrizo Springs, and R. W. Stayton, Austin, have begun an analysis of the time that each case stays on the docket of the court, and this will be published to the legislature and the state as part of the work of the civil judicial council, along with another table that exploded the theory that district judges are overworked.

One of the cases they will encounter is the Fred Turner case, which has tied up about $50,000,000 of payments in its own outcome, and has dependent cases which Attorney General Alfred said involved that much more. This case has been on supreme court's docket three years and three months.

And then it will find Tom Love's suit against the democratic party... settled in 10 days.

In former days the plainmen assembled every spring and staged their annual "Roundup." Every thickset and gully for miles around were searched by the keen-eyed riders to make sure that every animal of value was brought into the herd and properly branded.

And now—years later—a different kind of "Spring Roundup" is being staged by L. C. Burr & Co.—A Roundup of Greater Values. Our buyers, like the riders of old, have searched, not the thickets and gullies, but the markets of the world, and have rounded up and assembled in our store in Big Spring the greatest assortment of outstanding values ever assembled under one roof.

Promptly at 9:00 a. m., Friday morning, May 13th, the doors will open on the greatest demonstration of unusual values and low prices ever shown in West Texas.

We invite you to visit our store during "Our Spring Roundup of Greater Values."

the MAN HUNTERS BY MABEL McELLIOTT

SUSAN CAREY is in love with BOB DUNBAR, millionaire's son. DENISE ACKROYD, society girl, tries to break up the attachment and succeeds at a house party which she gives. ERNEST HEATH, Susan's employer, happens to be passing when Susan and Bob quarrel and takes her home. His wife threatens to sue for alienation of his affections but changes her mind when JACK WARING, Heath's assistant, produces an incriminating letter. RAY FLANNERY, stenographer in the next office, confides to Susan her distress on hearing that "BIXY" WEBB has married another girl. Ben and Susan quarrel on Christmas eve over some covers Heath sent her. Waring, meeting Denise, learns of her interference in Susan's affairs. Heath asks Susan to be his wife when his divorce decree becomes final. She hesitates. Her aunt undergoes a serious operation and Susan decides to marry him for the sake of security. Ben follows Susan and Heath and shoots at the latter, wounding him slightly. Then Ben turns the gun on himself.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXXV

When Jack Waring took Denise Ackroyd away from the Glendling's party on New Year's eve he had formulated an exact plan. He was by nature a meddler and his quick, prying mind had seized on the little drama as something entertaining. He could see the triangle: Susan, the poor working girl; Denise, the spoiled child of fortune; and young Robert Dunbar, whom each hoped to win.

The visit to Tony's proved rather dull. There had been too much noise and the overheated place had made them both ill-tempered without quite knowing why. The man had seemed little more of the story. He was determined, however, to know the rest. Driving back in the cold air he said lastly to the girl, "When shall I see you again?"

The pale, petulant face stared straight ahead. The childish, fretful voice answered sleepily. "Don't know, never, probably, the way I feel now. That champagne Laura fed us must have been poison. I feel wretched."

"That" countered Jack Waring easily, "was the lobster you insisted on having at Tony's. And the ice cream."

"It was the champagne," Denise insisted solemnly. "That's my story and I'll stick to it."

"You're a little mule, aren't you?" asked the man, laughing.

Denise drew her wrap around her regally. "We Ackroyds have wills of our own," she said so pompously that Waring could scarcely manage to maintain his gravity. More than ever now he was certain she had been reading Michael Arlen.

"And do you always get what you want?" He was very grave.

"Yes, we do." She eyed him suspiciously. "Why do you want to know?"

"Oh, I was just wondering." He stored the talk into other channels.

It was a week later that he met Bob Dunbar in the drawing room of the Ackroyds' apartment in row morning to look at those things?" Bob asked him at parting. "About 11?"

"Not at all. That will be splendid," Waring told him heartily. As he went back to the hotel where he lived he felt a glow of conscious righteousness.

"I was a Boy Scout, before," he reflected. "Now it looks as though I am going to be a Blooming Cupid."

But Bob Dunbar did not come to the office the next day. He telephoned to say that the doctor had self. After he had given Susan's address to Dunbar he felt better. The boy would go to see her and everything would be made right.

"I've spiked that young lady's guns all right," he muttered, thinking of Denise. He looked with distaste at the girl who had come from the agency to fill Susan's place. She was tall and thin with a pink nose and pale blue eyes which looked as if she might have been crying.

"I'll miss that kid," Waring told Pierson confidentially a few minutes later.

Almost Unbelievable

Bob Dunbar, at home, raged and tossed about like a caged lion. Of course he could telephone Susan or write her a letter but he did not want to do either of these things. There had been misunderstandings enough between them. Bob felt he must see her face to face. What an idiot he had been all along! He must see Susan face to face and then there would be no more of this nonsense.

When Denise telephoned Bob told the Chinese boy to say he was too ill to speak. She must not come over because the sore throat was

QUEEN OF THE APPLE BLOSSOMS

Marguerite Frawley, high school girl of Wenatchee, Wash., was named as queen of the apple blossoms even though the Wenatchee valley did not celebrate its apple blossom festival this season.

HELENE SHOWS HER POWER IN OLYMPIC POOL

This striking picture of Helene Madison of Seattle, Wash., applicant for 16 world freestyle swimming records, shows her plunging through the waters of the new Olympic pool in Los Angeles. Helene splashed victoriously through the national A. U. women's indoor championships and then turned her attention to trout for the Olympic games to be held in Los Angeles this summer.

Joins Insurgents

Nancy Carroll, screen red-head, joined the ranks of filmdom's unemployed. She has been off the payroll several weeks because of a disagreement with studio executives. The nature of her difference was not disclosed.

OUR CHARLIE GOES JAPANESE

In Egypt he trotted around the pyramids on a camel and in Japan, Charlie Chaplin, the film comedian, settled down to a banquet served in the best Japanese manner. Picture was made on the liner on which he and his brother traveled from Europe to Japan. The film actor is on the left with his brother seated opposite. Other members of the party are Captain Shioyoshi of the liner and Mrs. Haruko Mogi, wife of a Japanese millionaire.

CHAMPION IN NEWEST SWIM SUIT

Eleanor Holm of New York, one of America's swimming champions, appeared in this new low-cut swimming suit at the Olympic pool in Los Angeles. Miss Holm, a leading candidate for the United States' Olympic swimming team, is in training for the National Amateur athletic union indoor championships.

Queen Of Health

Ratings of a perfect physique, ideal carriage, and best posture won for Dorcille Wyrick, 14-year-old Leavenworth, Kas., school girl, the title of "queen of health" at the annual University of Kansas playday.

ROOSEVELT'S SON CAMPAIGNS

AL'S MOODS VARY ON PRISON TRIP

His "last ride" actually under way, Alphonse Capone was by turns chatty and soberly contemplative as the train carrying him to the Atlanta penitentiary rolled south from Chicago. He was snapped in these contrasting moods as he sat in his compartment with United States Marshal H. C. W. Laubenheimer.

Wins Coveted Award

James Owen Mahoney, 24, of Dallas, won the coveted Prix de Rome, one of the highest awards in American painting, for a scene called "Sunday Afternoon."

ROOSEVELT RESTS IN GEORGIA

Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York, Mrs. Roosevelt (center), and their daughter-in-law, Mrs. Elliott Roosevelt, are shown in front of their new cottage at Warm Springs, Ga., where the candidate for the democratic presidential nomination has gone for a few weeks' rest.

WHEN MRS. MASSIE WENT TO COURT

Lieut. Thomas H. Massie is shown with his wife, Thalia, leaving the courtroom at Honolulu where he and his mother-in-law, Mrs. Grace Fortescue (behind him), were on trial for the "honor slaying" of Joseph Kahahawai. Albert O. Jones, seaman (with Mrs. Fortescue), and another seaman, E. J. Lord, were co-defendants.

Farmers' Goddess

Lela Sharp Kidwell of Montgomery City, Mo., reigned as "goddess of agriculture" at the annual farmers' fair celebration at the University of Missouri.

WHERE GANG LEADER WILL SERVE PRISON TERM

This air view of the federal penitentiary at Atlanta, Ga., shows the cell houses in which "Scarface" Al Capone has lost his notorious identity to become a numbered convict as he serves his 11-year sentence for income tax law violations.

FAIR ROOTERS BACK BALLOONISTS

Omaha society girls will act as sponsors and rooters for individual entries in the national balloon races to be held from the Nebraska city Memorial day. Left to right: Alice Foy, Jane Bliss, Clyde Butler, Jean Redick and Alice McDermott.

Farmer-Labor Choice

For the second straight time Frank Elbridge Webb of San Francisco will carry the presidential banner of the farmer-labor party. He was nominated at Omaha, Neb., convention.
