WILENTZ AND REILLY MATCH WITS IN BATTLE OVER HAUPTMANN'S FATE

The clash of legal skill and wit between opposing counsel in the trial of Bruno Richard Hauptmann at Flemington, N. J., for the murder of Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr., is being watched from one end of the country to the other by legal experts, as well as the public, and furnishes many of the highlights of the sensational case. Above are camera close-ups of the two principals in the opposing legal batteries—David T. Wilentz (left), dark, dapper attorney-general of New Jersey, and Edward J. Reilly (right), ruddy-faced and sometimes pugnacious veteran of many a murder trial, who is determinedly fighting for the life of the German carpenter. In the center is a picture taken at an intermission in the trial when Wilentz (left) and Reilly posed together on the steps of the Hunterdon county courthouse. (Associated Press Photos)

WOMAN IS SURPRISE WITNESS

Testifies She Saw Hauptmann In Telegraph Office Watching Condon

FLEMINGTON, N. J. (AP)—Bruno Richard Hauptmann was identified Monday by a surprise witness as the man who shadowed Dr. John F. Condon in the Bronx prior to payment of the $50,000 Lindbergh ransom.

The witness, Miss Hildegarde Olga Alexander, resident of the Bronx, said she saw Hauptmann watching Condon in a telegraph office in the waiting room of the Fordham Station of the New York Central Railroad.

She fixed the time as somewhere between the time she learned Condon was the ransom intermediary and the time it was announced the money had been paid.

Edward J. Reilly, chief defense counsel, questioned her about railroad lines running through the Bronx, asserting:

"I want to prove she was never there."

Miss Alexander's testimony was a surprise to the defense after Albert S. Osborn, Sr., handwriting expert, testified that handwriting evidence against Hauptmann is "irresistible, unanswerable and overwhelming." Eldridge W. Stein, New York, handwriting expert, added his opinion to Osborn's that Hauptmann was the writer of the fourteen ransom notes.

Auto Mishap Early Monday On Scurry St.

Monroe Ashley, 18, Companion In Car, Is Not Seriously Hurt

Russell Washburn, aged 25, formerly of Kilgore and Longview, but for the past few months residing in Big Spring with his sister, Mrs. L. H. Dudley, at Camp Dixon on South Scurry street, was killed instantly, and his friend, Monroe Ashley, 18, residing 311 Fourth street, received lacerations about the neck and body bruises when the open model T Ford touring car in which they were riding, overturned in the 1000 block on South Scurry street at 12:30 Monday morning. It was not known late Monday afternoon whether the car struck another, or overturned after striking an object.

HEARS CRASH—J. P. Utley, residing at 1608 Scurry, told officers he was awakened by a crash in front of his home around 12:30 and later Ashley knocked on his door to tell him of the accident. He immediately called the officers and notified an Eberly ambulance, who responded quickly. Upon reaching the scene, attendants said they found Washburn's body near the overturned car, and was partly covered with shattered glass. It was believed that Washburn was thrown through the windshield of the car, and struck the pavement violently. His face and head were badly mangled. His neck was broken.

Doesn't Remember—Ashley, who was not seriously injured, told a Herald reporter Monday morning at his home that he didn't remember anything about the accident. He appeared dazed and suffering from shock as he talked to a reporter early this morning. Ashley was treated at Big Spring hospital soon after the accident. Two stitches were required to sew up a scalp wound. Dr. M. H. Bennett, who attended him, reported. The doctor said the injuries were not serious.

"I don't remember a thing about the accident," Ashley said. "I don't even remember who was driving, or how we were going. I do remember going to church earlier in the evening with my friend Washburn in Jones Valley. We stayed at church only a short time, and then went riding in Washburn's car," he said.

Discovers Accident—Harvey Williamson, returning from work in the oil field early Sunday morning, discovered the accident before officers arrived. He immediately notified a doctor. Two stitches were required to sew up the area of the wreck. Mrs. A. M. Underwood, also residing in the duplex apartment at 1606 Scurry, said she was awakened by the crash. Mr. Underwood was not at home at the time.

Car Headed Toward Town—Officers, who said the two men had been drinking, believed the car was coming towards town, and either struck or sideswiped another car. The car's left hand front fender was demolished, indicating a collision of some sort. The windshield was shattered. The car was completely upside down on the east side of the road. Blood spots were plainly visible in the area of the wreck.

Officers were continuing their investigation of the crash late Monday afternoon. Funeral Pending—Washburn is survived by his father, R. J. Washburn, Longview, who was notified of his death early Monday morning, and who is en route to Big Spring; three sisters, Mrs. L. H. Dudley of Big Spring; Mrs. W. E. Johnson of Longview, who is expected here tonight; and Mrs. T. A. Mann, Phoenix, who will be unable to come here.

Funeral arrangements are pending arrival of relatives. The body is being held at Eberly Funeral Home.

Mrs. L. Y. Moore has returned home from Wink after visiting a few days with her daughter, Mrs. Carlton Sewell.

Royal Wedding Enacted Today In Rome Church

ROME (AP)—Prince Alessandro Torlonia, son of former Ebbie Moore of New York, and Infanta Beatriz, daughter of former King Alfonso of Spain, were married Monday in Rome's magnificent old Church of Jesus, surrounded by sections of Europe's proudest royal families. The wedding was performed by Cardinal Pedro Segura, exiled cardinal primate of Spain. The bride's mother, former Queen Victoria, remained in her hotel in London.

Verdict Of Not Guilty Is Returned

Jury Instructed In Griffin Case—Charged With Assault to Murder

An instructed verdict of "not guilty" was returned Monday morning in 70th district court in the case of J. C. Griffin, negro, charged with assault with intent to murder.

Griffin was indicted for an alleged attempt on the life of Clarence Shaw, negro, on September 22, 1934. Shaw testified that he and Griffin had participated in an argument and that on hearing a shot he ran to the back of his shop and fired a shot into the air to let Griffin know he was armed. When another shot was fired into his back window, he ran and hid in the front room.

Tommy Biggs, negro, testified to seeing Griffin in the street with a gun. Albert Fair, negro, said he saw Griffin stumble and fire a shot which hit a Mexican woman. He added that Griffin fired a second shot into the shop window.

Mrs. Cuca Sanchez said she was hit by the first discharge. Andrew Merrick, deputy sheriff, told, over objection of the defense counsel, of a statement which Griffin made upon arrest. He quoted Griffin as saying, "I won't give any of you officers trouble. I tried to shoot that negro's head off when he stuck it up to the window."

The court ruled that the state's case proved only malicious mischief and instructed a verdict of "not guilty." John Wesley Dillard, charged with Emmett Baker with car theft, entered a plea of guilty. He was to be sentenced during the afternoon.

The case of C. C. Silas, charged with burglary of the V. A. Gomez place, was to go on trial Monday 3 p. m.

J. L. Rush vs. Chemical Process company was continued. It was to have come to trial Monday morning.

Relief Payroll Nearly $4500

Relief payroll for last week amounted to approximately $4,500, including truck and team hire for the highway project, County Administrator R. H. McNew said Monday. The figure was considerably down from the previous week's high of $5,800. The sharp drop is due largely to a combination of two things, the federal government's attitude against assuming so much of the relief burden and the closing of the canning plant here.

The allotment for Howard county has been considerably reduced, McNew said. However, the administration here is able to meet requirements by reductions in its budget amounting to 1 day per week per family. The highway project continues as the major work item in the county.

Raven Shoot Held Sunday At Gun Club

Twenty Hunters Shoot Down 125 Birds During Gunshoot

Twenty hunters shot down 125 crop damage Sunday in the second of a series of raven shoots. The shooters blazed away from the gun club premises at 125 ravens and not one of the pests escaped. According to the U. S. Department of Agriculture, ravens wreak crop damage annually amounting from $3 to $18. Thus, taken at an average destruction of $10, well over a thousand dollars were saved farmers Sunday.

Encouraged by success of the raven shoots for the past two Sundays, the Howard county chapter of the Game and Fish Protective Association of Texas has ordered three additional raven traps built this week. Supply of birds has heretofore come from a solitary trap.

With sufficient trap accommodations, the chapter estimates that 1,000 ravens can be captured weekly.

Ravens trapped during the week are placed in a pit at the gun club on Sunday afternoon. The shooter stands 2 yards back of the pit. At the command of "ready," the raven is thrown into the air.

The shooter blazes away. If he misses, he fires again. If he misses the second time, the referee cries, "lost." Every other shooter then cracks down on the bird. No bird has yet escaped the barrage.

Sunday there will be a contest between 2 five men teams. Details of the contest will be announced later. While the chapter is interested in eradication of crop pests, it is chiefly interested in the protection of wild life. The raven, according to sportsmen, is the craftiest bird of this region.

He feeds on young fowls and game birds' nesting is a vain effort when ravens are abundant. He ravishes grain patches and it is almost impossible to keep flocks of the pests from destroying a crop once they start to work.

B. C. Rix Passes Away At Lubbock; Funeral Tuesday

B. C. Rix, 89, prominently identified with the early development of Big Spring, died early Monday morning at Lubbock.

He was stricken with paralysis here Thursday and was taken to Lubbock for treatment Friday. Mr. Rix was born in Cedar Creek, Wisconsin on April 14, 1845. He came to Texas in 1868 and settled in Colorado, then the thriving cattle town of West Texas.

After four years he moved his family to Big Spring where he lived until 1926 when he moved to Lubbock. He was in business here for many years, and in the early days of Big Spring he was identified with civic movements. His wife died nearly four years ago and was buried in Lubbock.

The Rix Furniture company, which later expanded to Lubbock and Lamesa, had its founding here by sons of Mr. Rix. Surviving Mr. Rix are three sons, Harvey L. Rix of Big Spring, Wallace W. Rix of Lubbock, and Jed A. Rix of Plainview, and one daughter, Mrs. Carl Svensen of Lubbock.

He leaves seven grand children, Mrs. G. C. Victory of Lubbock, Ralph Lewis, Paul, Lucille, and Eleanor Rix and Mrs. H. R. Pickett of Big Spring. Three great grandchildren also survive.

Last rites will be held in Lubbock Tuesday 3 p. m. Mr. Rix will be buried beside his wife.

I did not kill Osborne

By VICTOR BRIDGES

Chapter 37 DOG FIGHT

"Who are you," Gowland demanded, "and what the blazes do you want here?"

I looked him up and down with intentional deliberation.

"I wanted some milk," I said, "a pint, to be strictly accurate."

"Well, you've got it, haven't you?" He pointed toward the gate. "Now clear off, blast you!"

I could feel my temper beginning to rise. "Look here," I said, "you keep a civil tongue in your head when you're speaking to me."

"Tom, Tom," broke in his wife pitiously, "what's the road..."

He turned on her with a scowl of fury. "Shut your mouth," he roared. "I heard what he said to you. A friend of Osborne's, is he? Well, I'll past me from behind. It cannoned full into my assailant in mid-air, and the next moment, amidst a ear-splitting clamor, two frantic writhing bodies were locked in a life and death battle.

A foul oath burst from Gowland's lips, and stooping down he snatched up the broken handle of a pitchfork. Before he could properly straighten himself, however, I had leaped forward and gripped him by the wrist.

"No, you don't, quickly," I said. We swayed to and fro, straining and struggling, till with a savage wrench I tore the weapon from his hands. At the same instant his foot slipped and losing his balance he sat down heavily in the mud.

A little breathlessly I turned to see how matters were progressing elsewhere. I had just time to teach him to show his dirty face here."

He spun round unsteadily, and lurching across the yard, began to fumble at the door of one of the sheds.

Mrs. Gowland made an imploring gesture. "Go—go at once," she snaped. "He's letting out the dog, and it will kill you if it finds you here."

Whether I should have followed her advice or not I can't say; in any case it was too late. There was the rattle of a chain from inside the shed, and with a menacing growl the huge rough-coated brute that I had seen crouching on the bank that morning bounded out into the open.

serve that George was on top, his teeth buried in his enemy's shoulder, when with another and equally unprintable observation, my own adversary struggled to his feet.

"Better leave 'em alone," I said pleasantly. "You may get hurt if you try to interfere."

For a second he stood facing me, a glare of murderous hatred in his half insane eyes; then he took a pace backward and swinging round suddenly on his heel, set off at a shambling run in the direction of the house.

"He's gone to get his gun. For God's sake..."

Mrs. Gowland's frantic appeal was cut short by a shout from behind us.

"What the dickens—here, come off it!"

Racing into the yard, Jerry seized George by the collar, and releasing his hold the latter allowed himself to be pulled backwards. With blood streaming from his shoulder, the other dog retreated snarlingly against the wall.

"You got here just in time," I said, "at least George did. If he hadn't that brute would have chewed me to pulp."

Still keeping his grip on the collar, Jerry glanced inquiringly from one to the other of us.

"What's it all about?" he demanded.

"Mr. Gowland doesn't like my appearance," I explained. "He set his dog on me, and now he's gone off to fetch a gun."

"Oh, don't stop here—don't waste time talking. Go quick, all of you."

Swift as light a bristling mass of black fury launched itself towards me. I sprang back, and as I did so, something silent and yellow flashed

WITH exports of pork and lard from the United States still remaining at a low level, a large increase in hog production is not warranted at this time, according to officials of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration. Exports of pork from the United States showed a slightly upward trend in 1934, but this was offset by a decline in exports in lard. Annual shipments abroad remain at about three-fourths of a billion pounds, as compared with nearly two billion pounds in the early post-war period. The decline during the ten years from 1923 to 1932, as indicated by the above graph, has been equivalent to about nine million hogs.

Great Britain, the principal market for pork products, continues to restrict pork shipments from non-empire countries, including the United States, by means of import quotas. Germany, second ranking buyer of hog products, limited monthly lard imports in 1934 to 40 per cent of the volume imported during the corresponding months of 1931-32, and during the latter part of the year imposed restrictions on conversion of German money into foreign exchange that caused further reductions in lard imports.

The 1935 corn-hog production control program now being offered by the Agricultural Adjustment Administration is designed to help farmers keep hog numbers in line with the current low level of export trade.

better. What's more, if I'm any judge, he's on the verge of D.T."

Jerry picked up his pot of beer from the cabin floor, and took a long gulp. "Passionately for your wife! Good looking, too, in her way; bit of the gipsy about her, I should think."

"I wonder what made her marry him," I said. "He's old enough to be her father."

"Perhaps he didn't drink so much then. It's only quite lately that the place has gone to pieces like that. Last time I was here everything was as smart as paint."

"Well, there must be some reason for it," broke in Molly. "I believe Nick was right in what he suggested yesterday."

"You mean about Osborne?" She nodded. "I've been thinking it over the whole morning. Of course, I haven't seen Mrs. Gowland, but if she's as pretty as you say, it all fits together nicely. I expect she was rightfully for poor old married Gowland because he had a farm. As soon as she found herself shut up in that dismal place with a man who was twice her age I imagine she began to feel a bit sorry."

"It might be mighty lonesome here in winter time, and you can't get much company out of cows and pigs. As I see it, the poor thing must have had a pretty dreary time, and then, just as she was feeling bored stiff, who should come along but Osborne."

before he comes back."

I looked down at the half distraught woman, who had again clutched me by the sleeve. "We can't leave you alone with a homicidal lunatic," I objected.

"He won't hurt me. Go—go, I implore you. It's the only thing that will stop murder."

From somewhere close at hand came the bang of a door.

"Sounds sensible to me," observed Jerry. "He'd probably shoot George and then there'd certainly be a massacre. Any objection to beating it?"

"None," I said.

And without further ado we bolted ingloriously through the gate.

I lay on my back, gazing up at the glass skylight, against which the rain was still fitfully driving. "There's one thing dead certain," I repeated: "the man's as mad as a

RIDING CHOPPY SEA TO SHORE FROM STRANDED LINER

Exciting tales of their rescue were told by members of the crew and passengers of the liner Havana Florida coast. NRA "open forum" on price-fixing last week are still hot and boisterous. Most of them left town convinced they might as well have stayed home.

Blue Eagle Chairman S. Clay Williams advertised that all who wanted to be heard on the subject would be allowed 10 minutes. About 250 applied.

Most of the time was taken up by NRA officials, notably Leon Henderson and Blackwell Smith, in explaining what the government had decided on the subject of price-fixing. When the business orators finally got recognition the 10-minute rule went by the board. Every time one of these speakers made an observation that did not see with the idea of Henderson and Smith, one or both of the latter engaged him in debate. The outsiders had tough sledding.

Out—"new deal" is in order for the Army Air Corps. Higher-ups have decided there are about 70 chair-warmers in the Tactical Division. Half of them are being detached and sent to Langley Field to get some first-hand contact with tactics.

The remaining 35 are wondering what will become of them. Some of the smarter boys have packed their bags, however.

Thrift—The story is being revived in Washington about the man who spent his entire adult life in politics. When he died he was given a full funeral. On his tombstone was carved: "Here lies a politician and an honest man."

A cynic passed by the grave yard. "Times sure are hard," he observed, "when they bury two men in one grave."

Notes—Supreme Court decision against law-making by the president stiffens critics of New Deal, encourages court attacks, brings several leading emergency laws in question and insures more careful legislation.

Senator Burt Wheeler of Montana, as chairman of the senate Interstate committee, plans to summon all members of the communications commission and inquire into their fitness to hold office before recommending their appointments be confirmed. One of the questions Wheeler plans to ask is whether any commissioner holds stock in any telephone, telegraph or radio company. He probably will not turn up anything in this connection.

The commission plans to recommend a status quo for broadcasting. There may be a supplemental suggestion that the broadcasters and the educational, religious and labor organizations get together voluntarily and agree on a set number of hours for such programs over the air. It will NOT be proposed as a mandatory proposition.

Corralled—Senator Joe Guffey of Pa. has adopted the old Boss Penrose idea of iron-handed rule—the difference being only that Guffey is controlling Democrats.

The other day Pennsylvania's 23 Democratic congressmen held a caucus on a minor matter. During the session Rep. Harry L. Haines, of the 22nd district, produced a petition for the appointment of Rep. William M. Berlin, of the 28th district, on the all-powerful rules committee of the house. Haines got 19 signatures.

Guffey heard about it and let out an awful roar. Most of the 19 congressmen scrambled about to get their names removed from the petition. It was all a mistake. Haines himself, and not Berlin, was slated for the rules committee post, it developed.

Senator Guffey does not command 100 per cent allegiance in his state's delegation. Rep. Francis E. Walter, of the 21st district, who opposes the Guffey machine, thinks there are 14 in all who think his way. Impartial observers, however, are confident Guffey has all but 4—or possibly 5—of the lower house members in his corral.

area to the fatherland, Nazis felt Voting Peaceful

The council still has final say on how the Saar shall be governed—and if the minority is larger than 40 per cent, it may divide the Saar, returning only those whose districts which went overwhelmingly pro-Nazi to the Reich, and permitting the others to remain, as now, under the league.

Geneva indicated that the council wants to clean up the issue once and for all with the present plebiscite and if Germany has a majority the whole area will be given back to the Reich, with a provision guaranteeing the anti-Nazi minority against reprisals.

The voting was peaceful. Heavy patrols restrained anti-Nazi who were desperate at the prospect of being "railroaded" back to the Reich.

All factions worked to bring out a 100 per cent vote. The sick were carried to the polls over snow-clogged, slippery roads. No citizen was allowed to absent himself from the polls without giving a legitimate excuse.

Run On Saar Banks The United Press learned there was a run on the Saar banks Saturday. Clerical staffs had to be doubled. One Jew withdrew 3,000,000 francs, carrying his money across the French border in his pockets.

Most of this capital probably will return however. When the Nazis take over the territory on April 1, they will check withdrawals and if the depositor still is in the Saar they will "persuade" him to recall his money.

The post office will broadcast this plebiscite results early Tuesday, through stations in France, Italy, Luxembourg, England, Sweden and Switzerland. Major chains in the United States may rebroadcast them.

At dusk Sunday night, some 80 fires of joy were alight on the crests of the German frontier from Metz to Hanau, celebrating the "victory" of the Nazis.

Push—Apart from the public works projects mentioned in the president's message insiders learn that reemployment bill will be concentrated on four major fronts: housing, shipbuilding, railroad equipment and development of a power grid distribution system.

In each of these there will be a measure of coordination between private and public enterprise. There's a fair chance that Moffett's Housing Administration will stand on its own financial feet once it gets fully organized. But the railroads can only buy equipment if federal funds are provided for the purpose. Shipbuilding (largely for the Navy's benefit) and power grids will have to be heavily primed with government initiative—and money—to get going.

hand to spend is due to be routed through these channels. The free hand is needed to escape congressional debate on controversial details—which might easily hold the program up for months.

Note that all these phases of the big push are directly beneficial to heavy industry. Makers of steel, cement, locomotives, etc., will once again discover what it means to be really busy. Washington will be watching to be sure that employment keeps pace with activity.

Stabilizing—Nothing that FDR has said to congress caused such a buzz in Wall Street as what he did today about money. His failure to mention the subject at all was diversely interpreted as a sign that the dollar will be left alone and as an invitation to the inflationists to do their stuff.

The best informed sources take the omission as a strong intimation that definite but unreportable progress is being made toward international monetary stabilization. On that premise silence is rated wise. You don't let an obstreperous child play with a delicate watch. It will be time enough to give Congress a hand in the proceedings when the diplomatic job is finished.

France—The substitution of Jean Tannery for Clement Moret as governor of the Bank of France means two things. One is that the Bank is being forced to sacrifice its independence to play its part in the government's plan—just as our Federal Reserve System now takes orders from the Treasury. Moret wouldn't play this game so he had to go. Comment runs that he was too fond of sitting on his piles of gold.

The second is that France will try credit expansion in a big way in the hope of escaping the pressure for devaluation. By redrawing government bonds—which it has never done before—the Bank of France will make it much easier for the government to raise money.

Experts doubt that the maneuver will succeed. They claim the pressure of the cheaper dollar and pound can't possibly be offset by halfway measures.

Premier Flandin is officially committed to maintain the gold standard—but he has made a subtle move to weaken the peasant resistance to devaluation.

French farmers were protected against the effects of a high franc by a direct subsidy on wheat exports and a guaranteed price on wheat consumed at home.

Now the guarantee has been dropped by about 40 per cent and the farmers don't like it. But observe that 40 per cent devaluation—to a virtual new parity with the dollar—would put prices back where they were before in terms of francs. The French peasant is a stubborn soul but his pocketbook nerve is sensitive. Observers remark that Flandin's strategy is worthy of Machiavelli.

Accord—The Franco-Italian accord should promote recovery here as well as abroad. Restored confidence will free capital for bolder investment. The armament question is more clearly defined and both countries should be able to decrease their military budgets. This will release funds also. Astute New Yorkers expect some of that money to seek American trade and investment channels.

City—The elaborate new road system proposed for New York City fits nicely into FDR's public works plan—but it predicated further growth of the city and the informed doubt the soundness of that premise.

Wise opinion holds that the city has passed its peak and is more likely to shrink than expand from now on. Manufacturing plants are gradually moving away to escape high rentals, taxes and labor costs. In 1930 leading bankers were predicting New York's uninterupted growth at least until 1935—but the present state of real estate and mortgages indicates a slight error in the forecast.

The New Deal trend toward decentralizing population will affect all urban centers to some extent. New York must cope with the added factor of having lost its attractions for industry.

Ungrateful—Old Dad Farley has another first aid job on his hands. The New York State Democracy has broken out in a new rash of bad feeling.

Tammany is bogging the chairmanships of legislative committee and the upstate Democrats—led by the O'Connells of Albany—are sore as sunburn.

The O'Connells are especially annoyed because it was their move which kept John F. Ryan off last November's ballot and thereby helped elect Tammany Comptroller Taylor in the city. Such ingratitude!

Sidelights—It's reliably reported that the chief statistician of American Telephone insists that business is steadily improving all over the country. . . . The company builds on his figures and plans to spend $200,000,000 in 1935. . . . Not more than one-third of the 73 Class I railroads will earn their fixed charges in 1934. . . . British railroads should worry about bus lines—they owe them all.

Health Officer
Urges Sufficient
Cooking Of Meats

AUSTIN—Now that the winter season is here and pork and pork products are more freely used, warning against insufficient cooking of meats is given by Dr. John W. Brown, State Health Officer.

Trichinosis is caused by a parasite in the muscles of pigs. This parasite may occur in large numbers in infested meat.

The disease is rather extensively distributed among hogs, and all pork should be regarded with suspicion unless treated to kill the larvae. Freshly killed pork is more dangerous than meat that has been kept in cold storage for some time because parasites tend to die out during "prolonged storage at low temperatures. Other processes of preserving meat also tend to kill the trichinella larvae. No method of meat inspection will invariably discover the presence of this parasite. This safeguard against the disease must necessarily be taken by consumers of the infested pork. Thorough cooking may be counted upon to kill the parasite.

Trichinosis results from eating uncooked pork, usually in the form of sausage, that contains the larvae. There is often danger of not maintaining sufficient temperature to thoroughly cook the meat. Outer portions of the meat may appear well cooked while the inner part is quite rare and will retain the living parasites. Especially is this true if the piece of pork is quite thick. Cases of trichinosis have occurred from eating just such inner portions of undercooked pork. Pork with the slightest red tinge may contain the living parasites. Pork should be cooked until all color disappears through the piece of meat, this is the only safeguard against trichinosis.

Political Anvil

John T. Smith, tax expert, former Austin member of the legislature, won an unprecedented victory when his $70,000,000 bond assumption plan was officially adopted by the senate tax committee within three months after it was first disclosed.

It took nine years for the state to put into law the plan for state assumption of the $100,000,000 county and district highway bonds.

The biggest feature of Smith's plan is that the high-interest city, county, school and other district bonds issued for public improvements, may be brought within the state assumption plan only when the bond-holders agree to have the interest reduced to three per cent.

Tax reduction under the plan will run as high as 77 cents per $100 valuation—equivalent to the entire state tax levy at its constitutional limit.

The senate tax survey committee announced it will formulate a constitutional amendment to permit state assumption of these outstanding bond issues, and will propose to levy a temporary sales tax, not exceeding two per cent on final sales, to replace present ad valorem levies only in discharge of the bonds.

Mr. Smith has estimated that a 2-1-2 per cent sales tax would pay off the three-quarters of a billion dollars of bonds in five years. The two per cent levy would discharge all the bonds over a period of around seven to eight years.

The proposal has two main provisions:

1. When the bonds are paid off, the tax ceases.
2. When the state assumes payment, it also assumes control to prevent any further issues by the local authorities, except by permission of the state—which would mean no more local issues, and public developments financed only out of current revenues or by the state.

The plan is to avert bankruptcy of local districts and agencies, but Mr. Smith has pointed out, would represent average justice as between counties or cities or districts. It would be a fairer spread, he believes, than the assumption of road bonds was; and also a fairer distribution of the burden than now exists between different groups within one county.

Instead of the long fight over years, before getting such a far-reaching policy officially sponsored, Smith's plan was accepted by the first legislative group to consider it, and adopted for official sponsorship in this session of the legislature.

HAUPTMANN AND REILLY IN COURT

Testimony in his trial on charges of kidnaping and murdering the Lindbergh baby drew Bruno Hauptmann (left) into earnest discussion with his attorney, Edward J. Reilly, who failed to shake the story of Dr. John F. "Jafie" Condon that he paid $50,000 ransom money to the defendant. (Associated Press Photo)

SCOUT NEWS

The jamboree, put off until it has almost become a legend, is actually going to be held Friday. It so happens that Friday is a bad day due to mid-term graduations from the grammar grades, but scoutmasters expressed the belief that it was "now or never."

The same events are on tap—steak broiling, knot tying, tug-of-war, stew cooking, and fire building. The first event is open to any scout, the second to a team of seven, the third to a team of eight, the next to a team of two, and the last to a team of two.

One of the big events of the year is the annual scouters' meeting here. It draws men from Pecos, Bal-

NORTHFIELD, Minn. (AP)—Success for Leonard B. "Stub" Allison in his new post as head football coach at the University of California is predicted unqualifiedly by two of his former boon companions here.

They are C. W. "Ching" Lee and Claude J. Hunt, quarterback and coach respectively of the famous 1913-14 Carleton college teams on which Allison, a native of Anoka, Minn., played end and captained the eleven that defeated the University of Chicago, 6-0.

"Coach Hunt always said Stub would get to the top, and I believe he will stay there," says Lee. "Even as a player he was like a coach on the field, pepping up his team, diagnosing opponents' weaknesses and then tipping us off."

Lee, now a dentist here, is remembered as Carleton's greatest forward passer and Allison is unanimously voted Carleton's greatest end. The pair made a fancy passing combination.

"Come on, slip me a pass," Stub would say and then when I tossed to someone else he'd bolt. Dr. Lee recalls. "In one game he wanted all the passes so he could clinch a place on the all-state team. I didn't throw him a pass the whole first half as I knew he would make the team anyway."

In Hunt's opinion, the Carleton eleven of 1913-14 were stronger than the 1916 aggregation which tumbled Chicago. The line averaged over 190 pounds. The Carls frequently scored more than 60 points.

day in regular session. The meeting was devoted to reviewing scout work and practicing events for the jamboree. Five scouts, 6 visitors, and three new scouts who passed their tests, were present.—Reported by Frank Gaylor.

Troop No. 5—Because of the scouters' meeting on Thursday the troop met Friday with about 30 scouts and the scoutmaster and assistant present. Plans were made for attending the jamboree and it was decided to play overnight after campfire. Signaling was the theme of the evening. The scouts enjoyed a game of "foot hockey."

Allison entered the United States army after graduation in 1917, and after his discharge became assistant coach to Hunt, who was then head coach at the University of Washington. He was appointed head coach after Hunt's resignation in 1920.

He served as head coach until 1922 when he left to accept a similar position at South Dakota university; was line coach at the University of Wisconsin under Glenn Thistlewaite and when "Navy Bill" Ingram was appointed head coach at California, Allison was made line coach there.

Wimbledon Starts Early
Preparing For '35 Meet

WIMBLEDON (AP)—Extensive improvements are being made on the spacious plant of the All-England Tennis club in preparation for next summer's big fortnight of play and Davis cup matches.

A lounge, card room, rest room, restaurant and bar are being installed for competitors under the south stand, and a new passageway will be cut through on the east side of the center court to enable spectators to reach the bar with greater speed and facility.

Huge tarpaulin covers are being prepared for the No. 2 and No. 3 courts, so that play may be quickly resumed after showers.

Follow The Straight Line

"A STRAIGHT line is the shortest distance between two points." That holds for any two points—your pocketbook and your list of wants, for example. Follow the straight line, and you'll save yourself time, trouble and money.

Use the advertising columns of this newspaper as guide posts. In them, you find late news of what's to be had in the markets of the world. No need for you to meander about from store to store, comparing, pricing, judging, guessing values. The advertisements tell you the names of merchants and manufacturers you can trust. There you read what's new, what's favored, what's offered confidently for your inspection. The advertisements in this paper take you into more stores than you could visit in a month.

There's no high-pressure selling, no rush, no uncertainty to this daily review of markets. Form the good habit of shopping by the straight-line method—you'll buy with assurance, with economy and with satisfaction.
