Throngs Pay Famous Pair Last Tribute

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP)—Three airplanes trailing crepe circled above Oklahoma's limestone capital Thursday as the state paused to bury one famous son and mourn another.

Wiley Post's body lay in the rotunda of the capitol building in view of packed crowds gathered. Simultaneously with services for Will Rogers in California, memorial rites were held in Claremore, where thousands paid tribute to the humorist.

Thousands flooded the capitol building for memorial services led by Governor Marland for Post. Afterward, rites were planned from the First Baptist church.

GLENDALE (AP)—Massed solidly on three sides of the Forest Lawn Memorial Park, a crowd estimated at 30,000 came from all parts of California Thursday for a final glimpse of Will Rogers. Hundreds of those filing past the closed casket gave flowers to an honor guard of army fliers from March Field.

Spectators filed past the casket at the rate of 90 per minute, paying a last tribute to the man who died with Post in a tragic Alaskan plane crash.

East Part Is Soaked, West Gets Sprinkle

Lees, Big Spring, Coahoma, Vincent Get Most Moisture

Timely rain fell over a large part of Howard county Thursday, bringing relief to parched crops.

The rain proceeded across the county from Lees store to Vincent, ranging in intensity from showers to more than an inch north of here.

Big Spring reported the heaviest fall with 1.15 inches at the U. S. Experiment Farm. Coahoma and Vincent estimated rainfall there at three-fourths of an inch.

Very little moisture got more than four or five miles west, however. The U. S. Weather Bureau at the airport registered only .44 inches.

Stanton had received only a light sprinkle at 2 p. m. despite overcast skies most of the day.

Knott was having a light sprinkle after noon but scarcely enough had fallen to wet the dust.

Ackerly had a brisk shower at 11 a. m. but it quickly faded into a sustained light sprinkle over most of the surrounding country.

Coahoma reports indicated at least three-fourths of an inch fall in that vicinity with the amount increasing somewhat to the north.

Vincent had a similar amount but milder reports seemed to indicate a lighter fall to the north and west.

Gail had none at all, but heavy clouds hung over the town and 2 p. m. and a thunder shower appeared probable.

Garden City did not receive rain Thursday but had an intense thundershower Wednesday at 3:30 p. m. A heavy downpour continued in that locality for 40 minutes Wednesday, covering an area of approximately 10 miles square.

Thursday the Lees community just over the line in Glasscock county had a brisk rain which was heavy to Forsan. It did not extend to the west, however. It was thought the Garden City mail carrier had become mired in the roads of this section since he had not arrived at the Glasscock county seat at 2 p. m.

In the belt which it covered, rain fell in sufficient amounts to revive withered feed and cotton crops.

Pilot Of Mercy Ship May Be Here Tonight

Joe Crosson, ace pilot of the northwest who flew the bodies of Will Rogers and Wiley Post from Point Barrow, Alaska to Seattle, probably will be aboard the American Airlines ship when it stops here at 12:40 p. m. Friday.

Advice says Crosson has booked passage to Alaska via American Airlines. This could be neither confirmed nor denied by terminal officials here.

Crosson had been with Post and Rogers in Juneau not long before the trim death ship dashed the famous pair into eternity.

The Weather

Big Spring and vicinity—Cloudy with additional showers tonight and Friday.

East Texas—Partly cloudy tonight and Friday with widely scattered showers in extreme east portion tonight.

West Texas—Partly cloudy this afternoon and evening with scattered mild thundershowers. Fair and warmer Friday.

New Mexico—Partly cloudy tonight and Friday. Probably showers and thundershowers in north-west portion.

LOCALS CLASH WITH LAMESA IN THIRD GAME

Around And About

The Sports Circuit

By Tom Beasley

MAYBE IT'S a foolish thing to do this time of year, but here's our pick for the winners in district three:

- 1st—Big Spring
2nd—San Angelo
3rd—Sweetwater

OBIE CONTINUED to shove his youngsters around Wednesday afternoon, the second day of practice.

HE expects the size of his squad to increase slightly within the next few days. One of the new hopes this year, a boy who is being counted on to show a lot, is a kid named Trainer.

TRAINER HAS had one year football experience, at Sonora about two or three years ago.

He was wanted by a majority. So the commission rejected a petition signed by a majority of tax paying citizens.

ROADS

Mentioning roads often times becomes like constant dropping of water on your head.

So with this in mind we again mention two worthwhile road projects in which this county should be vitally interested.

TAHOKA IS TAKEN OUT

Red Berry Twirls Good Ball Wednesday As Lamesa Advances

LAMESA (Spl.) — Big Spring Cowboys, heavy threat to take the Lamesa baseball tourney, encounter another Lamesa team in their third tourney battle here Friday afternoon.

The B'Springers eliminated the Lamesa second string club in their opening game this week.

The Lamesas advanced in the tourney Wednesday afternoon by polishing off Tahoka, 8 to 1. Tahoka put men on base but failed to hit at opportune moments.

Louie White stemmed a Tahoka threat in the fifth by making a sensational snag in left field.

Punkin' Center and Ackery play a Class A tourney game Thursday.

Women Golfers Not To Play On Rix Award This Week

Women's Golf association will play on the Latson Trophy Friday. Play will be on nine holes and will be staged on the Country Club back nine.

Three trophies have been awarded the Women's Golf association, and play on the trophies is running consecutively.

The Rix Trophy, donated by the Rix Furniture company, is a coffee table. The Bristow Trophy, donated by Country Club President Obie Bristow, is a cup.

ARIZONA SOFTBALL CHAMPIONS CLASH WITH MIDLAND SATURDAY

MIDLAND (Spl.)—Boasting some of the star softball players of West Texas, Midland will pick an all-star aggregation to clash with one of the fastest teams in the United States here Saturday night—the state champions of Arizona.

The blue ribbon team from the west has failed to chill the Midlanders, who believe they have a team capable of drubbing the champions.

The Arizona team is bound for the national tournament to be held in Chicago some time this month. They won the tourney in '31, '32 and '34.

The till here Saturday night will be the outstanding softball game of the season for West Texas fans. The game will be played in one of the best lighted parks in the country, and arrangements have been made to take care of a large crowd.

Admission will be fifteen cents.

Down The Fairways

Curtis Bishop won but lost in the West Texas Press Convention golf tourney for the Bill Parker trophy.

Tripping over a field of four golfers, Bishop put in a claim for the trophy. He came too late, however, as the award had disappeared.

In the investigation which followed, it was discovered that Bishop had not registered. That, of course, was enough to quash his claim on the trophy.

Willie Pendleton, often alluded to in this column as "Wild Bill", has objected strenuously to the name after making a birdie 3 on No. 1 at the Mundy course a day or so ago.

Supt. Blankenship is taking his golfing seriously these days. He broke a 90 this week for the first time, making eighteen holes at the Country Club in 89.

Amos Melton, Fort Worth Star Telegram golf writer who usually makes most of the West Texas tourneys, will not be able to cover this year's Country Club event, he informed in a letter received here Wednesday.

There seems to be some misunderstanding among golfers concerning plans for the Country Club tournament. The championship flight will have only thirty-two players, which will force the meet to be extended an extra day.

Much publicity material and news mails have been sent out to West Texas newspapers and golf clubs concerning plans for the annual CC tourney which starts August 31 with eighteen hole qualifying rounds.

HERALD, FLASH ARE VICTORS

Held at bay for six innings, the Herald Type Lice broke loose in their last time at bat for eight runs to hand the Carter Chevrolet boys their first reversal in the Mundy league softball playoff, defeating the Ketterer forces, 13-6.

The Flash Refiners, counting all their runs in the first inning, put the final elimination touches on the WOW, walloping the Woodmen in the evening's second game, 11-4.

Dunor Davidson gave up a total of ten hits through the first six innings of the Newey-Carter clash and escaped early trouble when his mates contributed good support.

The Mechanics, taking the field with only eight men, showed up in an impressive manner by slugging out six hits for a total of five runs during the first six innings, but their twirler weakened in the seventh to give up five safe hits and a free pass and the infield kicked in with a pair of costly miscues to decide the question.

Davidson experienced the most trouble with Joe Pickle and Howard Swatzy, each man working the Carter flinger for a trio of safe blows. One of Pickle's hits went for a home run, the blow tying the count in the fourth frame.

E. P. Ketterer and "Elmer" Rowe collected half the Carter hits with two bingles each.

The Refiners wasted little time in the evening's second game in showing their way into the third round of the playoff by counting ten runs in their first appearance at the bat post.

Their runs came as a result of only two hits, seven Woodmen errors, and three free passes. Claude Treadway and O. Bryant were the only Refiners to get to base, but every man except Newburn succeeded in scoring at least once.

W. Bryant and Alton Underwood each recorded two runs in that first inning rebellion.

Baker gave the Sheppard forces their only lead of the evening by counting on Hull's blow as the Woodmen began the first inning but the outcome was never in doubt.

Wyatt tallied the second Woodman run in the third frame and Hull and Gensberg recorded the final two markers on Patton's hit in the sixth.

Wednesday evening's victories enabled the Herald to enter the third round of the playoff without a defeat and lengthened the Flash chances at the league crown.

SEEK PEACE IN SPORT TIFFS

British Dislike Squabbling Of International Competition

By Albert W. Wilson

LONDON (AP)—International sports involving England have shown an unfortunate tendency to turn into international squabbles these last few years.

Columns of type in British newspapers have been given over to these disputes with Australian cricketers, Italian, French and Spanish soccer teams, American yachtsmen and American boxers and promoters.

Leaving aside merits of the disputes—in which the English are at no loss to present arguments—there are a large number of sportsmen and writers in this country who are eager to see an end to these squabbles.

The Englishman's historic reputation as a true sportsman, they urge less talking and more "playing of the game" in these so-called international "good will" matches.

The recent cricket dispute with Australia so strained relations between the mother country and its Antipodes that a cabinet minister, "Jim" Thomas, secretary for the dominions, was drawn in as peacemaker.

Australians and English bowled so heated over the "leg theory bowling" of the English—bowling at the batter instead of the wicket in the same manner that the "bean ball" is used in baseball—that lives of players were in more danger from irate fans than from the ball.

Spectators Get Rough: The big soccer games between England and continental teams inevitably stir up a hullabaloo over the "rough games" played by the continentals. The fans were downright menacing when the Italians came here last fall but British sportsmen are frankly in a dilemma, as to how the game could be made more to their liking.

The Anglo-American yachting feud over the Endeavour-Rainbow race was apparently forgotten in this summer's event off south England but in the realm of professional boxing bitter disputes continually arise.

America's scornful attitude toward what its writers delight to call England's "horizontal heavyweights" is resented. The latest grievance arose from the New York boxing commission's refusal to permit Bob Olin to meet England's Jack Peterson in a title fight before meeting John Henry Lewis or Maxie Rosenbloom.

Yale and Harvard track coaches and captains have expressed the hope that disputes which have so often arisen in American meets with Cambridge and Oxford will be prevented, once and for all, before the English athletes invade America in 1937.

To avoid ties, Americans urge the abandoning of the English system of counting only first places or the addition of Woud Change Scoring: Some English sports writers have urged adoption of the American point scoring system, counting first three places. The hitch is that in distance events the English second stringer is entered merely as a "pace setter". On the other hand, the Yale and Harvard or the Princeton and Cornell runners, when they meet the English, are just as keen to beat each other as to outfoot the English.

Lael of rules and changing of previous agreements threw this year's London meet into confusion. Three times Yale and Harvard had victory snatched from them as a result of post-mortem rulings after events had been completed. Each of these three post-wows was called at the instance of the British and the net result was a declaration that the meet was a draw.

In advance that seconds would count they could have been sure of both high jump places by entering Keith Brown of Yale, who set a British pole vault record. Just for diversion, Brown walked over to the high jump standard and cleared 6 feet.

It was better than either first or second, 5 feet 10 and 5 feet 8 inches. The Americans had figured correctly that Hall of Harvard was a sure first place.

Anne Tells Of Spill In Swirling Yangtze River

By JOHN SELBY
NEW YORK (AP)—"And for three weeks, I thought, 'I've been brushing my teeth in boiled water!'"

Which was the first reaction of Anne Morrow Lindbergh to the spill which almost changed America's Public Hero No. 1 and his wife into muddy corpses floating down the flooded Yangtze river in China.

Mrs. Lindbergh tells the story of her 1931 flight to China with her famous husband in "North to the Orient," her first book, published today.

Anne Morrow Lindbergh . . . Lindy told her to jump in the river.

The Hankow Spill
Before China was reached there had been adventures with her radio sending and receiving set, nights spent in isolated Canadian cabins or anchored off odd bits of Alaskan coast, visits to Russian homes, a dangerous forced landing in the Japanese archipelago, and an adventure near Nanking when an errand of mercy almost sacrificed the Colonel and two doctor companions to sullen Chinese flood sufferers.

The spill was at Hangkow, where the British plane carrier "Hermes" had arranged an emergency hoisting apparatus and had taken the Lindbergh "Sirius" aboard to protect it from the flooded Yangtze, and marauders who might be afloat on its boiling yellow surface.

There was not enough slack to detach the plane from the derrick rope when it returned to the water.

"My husband, opening the throttle, tried to work back upstream. But the plane had already swung in the wind sidewise to the current . . . Out of control. Current pulled against cable . . . Down went the wing . . . It acted like a paddle, too, that large flat surface stemming the stream, forcing us over."

"Better get ready to jump!" My husband's voice shot at me tersely from the front cockpit. I climbed out . . .

"Jump!"

"I looked down into the muddy current. In that fleeting second . . . I thought only, with incongruous complacency, 'Now I will find out how this new life preserver works.'"

"For not only did I have no fear, I had no sensation at all—no realization of going under water, or of getting wet or of my clothing being heavy to swim in, or even that the life preserver had not worked. Quite typically I had not pressed the lever far enough."

"It did not matter. I had come up and was swimming along easily with yards of deflated life preserver dragging after me . . . I saw my husband just behind . . . We were swept downstream to the lifeboat, where we climbed on board and wiped our faces. I coughed up some Yangtze water."

And then thought about that tooth brushing matter.

The critical point in Mr. Roosevelt's career will be reached when congress adjourns. For then, with all his program enacted into law, the country will be waiting to learn what course he proposes to take.

Does he look on the adjournment of congress as the end of the period of emergency, or does he propose to continue, as long as he is er he is engaged in substituting some kind of planned collectivism for a free economy? Why should he not take the American people into his confidence and tell them, not in vague phrases, but in plain language, what he believes?

He also will have to say with some definiteness whether the legislative framework of the New Deal is completed, whether he intends now to devote his main energies to administration or whether there are other large projects still to be put forward. If he is returning to the normal practice, he will review the past and outline his course for the near future in some sort of comprehensive speech which the public can understand and judge. It is only in great crises that democratic leaders have a right to act quickly on sudden announcements of policy. This is the acid test: his willingness to give up the sudden announcing of great policies and other summary execution.

Once a deliberate procedure is restored, once the mood and the method of personal leadership under der crisis conditions is abandoned, there falls away automatically the only justification there is for the delegation of blanket powers by congress and the signing of blank checks. They can be justified only if there is time to legislate carefully. If there is time to be careful—and in the absence of emergency, there is time—blanket powers and blank checks are an abdication by congress, a usurpation by the executive, and contrary not only to the letter but to the spirit of the constitution.

What Mr. Roosevelt says or fails to say between the adjournment of congress and its assembling in January will call for unusually careful scrutiny. For it will supply the evidence on which the people may judge—whether the president now will return to them the extraordinary powers they granted him in a moment of grave danger for the single purpose of achieving recovery, or whether they must take these powers away from him.

The people gave Mr. Roosevelt a sword to lead them in a particular battle. That battle is over, and that sword now should be returned to its scabbard.

A museum dedicated to the heroism is to be opened at Emlen, Germany, the old North Sea port where the German herring fishing industry centers.

Basic Recovery

There is no time left to consider the various bills which are to be railroaded through congress this week. The bills are to be made into laws and then, as they are administered and interpreted judicially, the country will come to understand them. But, for the time being, there is no opportunity to analyze and to judge them. The ordinary man can reach an opinion about the procedure, about the lack of adequate hearings, the perfunctory debate, the attempt to deal with a dozen big subjects at once, the hurry and the haphazardness. But about the substance, the real effect, the practical consequences of this great push of new laws it is not possible to have clear ideas.

As a matter of fact, however, the manner in which these laws are being enacted is more important than the substance of any of the bills. The recovery, not so much as it is measured by the statistics, but as it appears in the returning self-reliance of the people, may be counted on now to deal with ill-considered laws, to make them workable, to force amendments or to bring about their repeal. For the essence of recovery in America is the revival of private and of local initiative. Once that revival has occurred, the fundamental balance of the American constitutional system is restored. Private and local energy is there to check centralized and official actions.

It is this check, applied by the local communities and by individuals who have confidence in themselves, which is now being applied. It accounts for the growing impatience with emergency government, with startling announcements and summary action. It is the best evidence we have that the paralysis of the depression, the prostration of the crisis is over. It is a healthy, an inspiring sign. For a beaten, frightened, disorganized, hysterical people cries out for demi-gods to save it. A free and self-reliant people has no doubt that it can save itself.

Does he look on the adjournment of congress as the end of the period of emergency, or does he propose to continue, as long as he is

"Dig In" Advice Is Given Relief Clients In Texas

AUSTIN (Sp.)—Re-emphasizing the fact that the government eventually is getting out of the relief business, Texas Relief Commission officials have sent instruction to district administration offices to analyze more minutely than ever each relief client's private resources before giving him aid, making certain that his last possible private source of sustenance has been exhausted before he is allowed aid from the dwindling relief funds.

If a relief applicant has enough partially to live on, then the government can supply him with only supplementary aid to meet his basic requirements, but first however every available resource must be carefully taken into account, including possible aid from relatives.

"Family responsibility should be strengthened during these times of readjustment," Relief Commission officials emphasize, urging that families able to assist destitute relatives recognize their obligations.

General "dig in" advice has been issued to relief clients. Pointing out that present federal funds have been narrowly limited and that no more appropriations are likely, relief officials urge the necessity of conserving every cent possible in order to stretch the present funds until the Works Progress Administration gets fully under way. They have told district administration officials, particularly case supervisors and case workers, to investigate thoroughly the client's ability to support himself at least partially through his own resources.

"By resources," officials say, "we include such items as garden products, milk from the family's cow, help from relatives, aid from churches and other sources, saving accounts, insurance loans, odd jobs, income of children, etc."

Another step toward weeding out the relief rolls was taken when the Board of Control ruled that tenant farmers who are actually growing a crop or have already harvested one this year are not eligible for relief. Assistant State Relief Director J. T. Duke, has instructed district administrators to rule out all such applicants, pointing out that the responsibility for sustenance is with them and their landlords.

Continuing its consistent drop, the Texas relief load fell to 158,506 cases in July, the lowest it has been since the Federal Emergency Relief Administration was established in April, 1934, figures compiled this week by the Texas Relief Administration revealed.

Significance is given the July figure when it is compared with figures for the corresponding month a year ago, when the case load was 236,732.

"The fact that 78,226 fewer cases were on the Texas relief load in July this year than in July last year is a cause for genuine optimism," State Relief Director Adam R. Johnson declared.

Texas has been under seven flags instead of six as heretofore recorded in history. The Comanche flag also waved there, finds Author Mary Jordan Atkinson.

Fields-LeRoy Continue Feud In New Show

Fast Moving Comedy Having Last Day Run At Lyric

Baby LeRoy and W. C. Fields, the Hollywood feudists, are together again in Fields' newest starring picture "It's a Gift." Produced by Paramount, it is now at the Lyric theater.

Fields, in "It's a Gift," is head of a thriving family who eat him out of house and home, plague his days and torment his nights. He is also the proprietor of the town's leading grocery store.

He has always cherished the dream of owning a California orange ranch where he could luxuriate and just watch the oranges grow and, when his daughter's young man comes to him with a "gyp" proposition, he swallows it hook, line and sinker.

The family is transported across the country in a dilapidated, pre-war automobile. When they finally arrive at the ranch, miraculously alive and uninjured, they discover it to be a barren bit of sun-baked desert.

But Fields is not licked yet. And by good fortune and ingenuity he manages to acquire the orange ranch from whose porch he can watch the oranges grow—through the bottom of a glass.

Early Success No Indication Of Life Work, Says Actress

Claire Dodd, beautiful Warner Bros. leading lady in "Don't Bet On Blondes," which comes to the Ritz theater Thursday, has an interesting theory that what a person is "good at" in school is no indication of what he will become later in life. She cites her own case.

Claire was an algebra 'shark.' Any form of mathematics came so easy that she didn't have to do any studying at home. On the other hand, English, especially oral English, was her bugaboo.

"I could parse the sentences all right," says Claire, "but when it came to English composition, I was simply terrible. And when I had to get up and recite, I was scared. Claire, and all her family, thought she would probably turn out to be a great mathematician. So, she became an actress!"

"I still have the old stage fright though," Claire confessed. Having gained success in a long series of siren and "other women" roles, Claire Dodd now has a straight romantic lead in the new Warner Bros. picture, "Don't Bet on Blondes." The cast includes Warren William, Guy Kibbee, Hobart Cavanaugh, William Garret and Vince Barnett. Robert Florey directed.

Mrs. Dewey Willis, who has been occupying the Seth H. Parsons home for the summer, left Thursday for Dallas to visit her sister. She will return to Hamlin from there to make her home.

Paris Offers New 'Pick Up' Sport Frocks To Brighten Drooping Summer Wardrobe

By ADELAIDE KERR (Associated Press Fashion Editor)

PARIS (AP) — "Pick up frocks" have stepped out in Paris to bring new life to end-of-summer wardrobes.

Since the new Paris winter fashions cannot be on the market until late September, these are designed to fill in the gap, revivify wardrobes and provide smart frocks for late season wear.

Velvet pipings, sequins darts, fur trims and colorful accents are used to give the designs chic. Most of the town models are made of crepe, since that is wearable on both late summer and early fall days, though a number of wools are shown too.

Sports Frocks In Brown
Black is a favorite town color, with dark blue, wine red and mustard green likewise shown. Brown and beige appear more often in sports frocks.

There are a number of black crepe frocks designed with slender waists and big sleeves just short of full length, which are finished with striking accents. One has a cluster of mother-of-pearl leaves at the base of the draped neckline, another is trimmed with white silk braid frogs. Colorful touches such as an irregularly shaped pimento red crepe yoke or a wide green leather belt finish others.

Trims Colorful
Some of the new black wools are marked by such fur trims as a black breitchants plastron or a shaved lamb cowl collar and belt, while others have bodices worked with shiny black sequins darts or belts touched with a paillette design. A dark carnation red crepe frock is smartened by velvet pipings of the same color which encircle the round collar and band the wrists. A red velvet carnation closes the neckline.

Wools, both knitted and woven, make the smartest country frocks which often appear in wood brown and sand beige tones. Some of the smartest are cut with divided skirts and topped by short jackets so that they are ready for golf links or fields.

A FROCK which Paris designs to brighten drooping summer sports wardrobes is this one of beige wool barred in brown. It has a divided skirt and is fastened with brown leather buttons and belt. A slouch hat in the same tones and a brown wool jacket complete the costume. Designed by de Nagornoff.

Murphy Family Holds Reunion In Snyder

The children, immediate friends and relatives of Mrs. J. E. Murphy gathered at her home 25 miles west of Snyder Tuesday for their annual family reunion. Mrs. Murphy was 83 years old that day.

The seven children present were: J. S. Murphy, Gunsight; E. H. Webb, Breckenridge; Mrs. George Tomlinson, Cisco; Mrs. George Thorp, Tucumcari, N. M.; J. E. Murphy, Ira; Alex O. Murphy, Knapp; Ed Murphy, Knapp.

Big Springers Prefer Canada For Vacations

More Big Spring people have wandered across the U. S. borders this summer than the number grouped together during the past five years. Early in the summer they started trekking to Mexico, but Canada has seen more local tourists than the nearby Mexico.

Latest to return from a vacation trip that included Canada are the C. L. Wassons who drove back in their new car from Detroit. They stopped over in Chicago and visited relatives in Dayton, Ohio. They crossed the Canadian border into Windsor, Canada with the Roy Carters and went to Detroit also to buy a car. Both couples were ferried across the border in the Carters' new automobile.

Others who have recently been in Canada are the Albert M. Fisher family who went from New York City to Quebec. Mrs. George Wilke, who is visiting in Seattle, Wash., sent cards to her friends from Vancouver, British Columbia.

TIPS on Contract

Costly Finesse
Finessees are avoided by the better player unless they are necessary for meeting the contract. The expert will take particular pains not to finesse when the play endangers the contract or takes out a highly necessary entry.

Here is a hand from South, N. Y., in which the declarer was set at a game contract by finessing when he could have made a slam by not finessing:

hand, bid three no trump and every body passed. The dealer reasoned that he had a loser in spades, another in hearts and possibly three losers in diamonds, making game in diamonds dubious. If North should have a bust. And he wanted to play no trump because of the ace and diamond tenace. If North, in response to a two-diamond bid, should bid two no trump, the South hand at a no trump contract would be faced, its weaknesses apparent.

Another school of bidding would have opened the auction with two diamonds. North, having a five-card suit and a trick plus, would have bid two hearts and eventually there might have been a contract for six no trump, with South the declarer.

As the hand was played, West led the jack of spades against the three no trump contract. The trick was taken North with the queen. The jack of hearts was finessed. West won the trick with the queen and led another spade, which South had to win with the ace. Eventually South had to lead a losing diamond, which East won. A spade was returned and the defense took heart, a diamond and three spades to set the contract one. South could not get into the North hand.

North, Mrs. Mary Louise Peavy, made no point about the bidding in the post-mortem, but did reprove South for the way the hand was played.

"All you had to do," she pointed out, "was to cover the queen of spades with the ace, then play the ace-king-queen of clubs, then the ace, king and low heart. The king of spades would be an entry to the North hand and the hearts would be set up.

"The chances are that West in desperation would lead a diamond up to your ace-queen. If he led a spade, the king North would take, two tricks would be won with hearts, the last club could win another trick and then you could make a successful finesse of the diamond queen and play the ace of diamonds for a total of 12 tricks. But by winning the first spade in the North hand, you blocked yourself from getting to the North hand later, rickling everything on an unnecessary finesse."

READY MADE WIFE

BY CORALIE STANTON

SYNOPSIS: Rex Moore hears the bitter news that Laurie is marrying her employer, Mark Albery, as soon as the pretense of marriage of Laurie and Rex can be disposed of. Rex discusses his proposed Pacific flight with Albery, who commands most of the air routes of the world. Then he leaves Albery's office high up in a huge hangar, and almost falls through a hole in the catwalk. Rex and Albery stare at each other in horror.

Chapter 39 DISAPPOINTMENT

Across the six foot gulf, the two men looked at each other. Rex Moore had, in his miraculous act of saving himself, landed on the farther side.

"If anything had happened to you, my dear fellow, I should never have forgiven myself," said Albery. "I am responsible for my men."

"Oh, don't worry!" replied Rex, and just to show that nothing had happened to him, he leaped over the opening and landed lightly by his employer's side. "You can give me another drink, if you like," he said. "I could do with one now. And then I'll get off to bed."

Mark Albery sat on in his chair for some time after the airman had gone.

There were papers in front of him on his desk, but he was not looking at them. There was a contemplative expression on his face. His eyes were almost shut.

The madness in his brain, fed by the accident, was increasing, was growing beyond control.

While Rex Moore was alive, Laurie would not give a thought to any other man. He knew that beyond a doubt.

If Rex Moore had fallen down on to the floor of the hangar, he would have been dead by now.

He would have been out of the way.

The next day Rex Moore again came up to Albery's office in the hangar, and laid on his employer's desk a little bundle of bank notes.

"This is the other half of the money you lent me," he said. "Thank you very much."

"You didn't take long paying it back, Rex," said Albery. He spoke with indulgence, and yet a touch of sarcasm. It was the first time he had called the airman by his Christian name. It seemed as if the accident of the night before had changed their relations.

"I've been lucky in getting several articles to write," was the reply. "Journalism seems to be a paying game."

"When you're a public idol, certainly!" remarked Albery, with genial cynicism. "It's a different story when you've got nothing but your brains to sell. Try it, my boy, apart from flying."

"I know all about that," was the young man's quick rejoinder. "I owe it all to you. I couldn't pay for my flights by writing about them."

"I have told you until I'm tired of it that you needn't worry about money. Then, his voice changed. "You're worth far more than money, Rex. You're an asset—you belong to the nation—to England."

And, apart from the personal madness in his brain, he was speaking the truth. He needed this man more than he needed any man upon earth. And yet he wished him dead.

"Rex," he added earnestly. "I definitely want you to put off the Pacific flight. I'm sure it will be best for you, as well as for me, if you wait until we're quite certain about the new fuel. If it comes off, it'll be the biggest triumph for you. If it doesn't, you can do the flight all the same."

Rex Moore shrugged his shoulders; his angry mouth looked petulant as a child's. But, of course, he did know what it would mean to him if the new fuel turned out a success. He would be the first man to fly at a speed hitherto believed impossible. Although he hated this inaction, he could not deny that it was worth waiting for.

"That's settled, then," said Albery. "By the way, I didn't sack the chap who left the trap open last night. You asked me not to, for one thing. And it turned out to be Flood, the foreman of the hangar, one of the men we could least spare. He was in a terrible state when I told him what might have happened to you."

"Yes, I've seen him," Rex replied carelessly. "He's a good fellow, I know. He seemed frightfully upset. And he said he had strained his arm rather badly and was afraid he couldn't manage the trap alone, and all the others had gone. I'm glad you didn't sack him, Mr. Albery. He won't do it again."

Rex Moore was in London on the following Sunday.

He rang up Mrs. Steele from the Chelsea flat, which he was still occupying, at Albery's urgent request, or, rather, command. Albery said that Rex should use it when in London, after Laurie had left.

Rex did not want to see Mrs. Steele but he could never get over his bad conscience where she was concerned. He had behaved to her with such rank ingratitude.

She was at home, and invited him to come to lunch, with that throbbing emotion in her high-pitched voice that made him so uncomfortable.

"I thought I was never going to see you again," she said, when he arrived. But this time there was no reproach in her voice, only unshamed delight, which made him feel very small and unworthy.

He explained how busy he had been, as they sat in the sitting-room of her luxurious suite. And then, realizing that he might have had the decency to pay her some slight attention, such as sending flowers, or an invitation to a meal and a show, he ended up awkwardly:

"I'm afraid I'm not fit for civilized life, Wanda. I must seem abominably ungrateful."

"That's all right, Rex," she said, when he arrived. But this time there was no reproach in her voice, only unshamed delight, which made him feel very small and unworthy.

WHY ITALY WANTS ETHIOPIA

This map illustrates why Italy desires Ethiopia. The areas of crossed lines represent Italy's extensive potential irrigation and power development areas along the Blue Nile, and (lower), extensive coffee, cotton and rubber producing areas. Control of the cotton and coffee trade alone would pay for the war, according to opinions expressed in Italy, even though the cost was 1,000,000,000 lire. Black bars across the Blue Nile indicate possible dam sites for power and irrigation. Ethiopia, according to reports, offered Italy part of Ogaden (in solid black), but the land was termed "a strip of sand." Ethiopia desires for herself a sea port; the country is now served by Djibouti, French Somaliland.

"My dear, I know you only live for your job," she answered generously. "As long as you don't try to pay me back what you think you owe me with money! That hurts too much. I have a terror of opening a letter again, like that last one you sent me!"

Her eyes were misty; her large, eager red mouth trembled, as she gave him a smile of pathetic tenderness.

The man was touched. They talked of all sorts of things, over the delicious and light luncheon. Wanda skillfully led him on to his own subjects. He told her about his preparations for the Pacific flight, and she said she would love to travel to South America with him on her way home. Perhaps she could arrange it, as he was having to postpone his departure.

He did not tell her about his accident of the middle of the week. For some reason that he did not quite understand, he would not allow himself to think of it. It was too fantastic, and at the same time too dull. He had looked death in the face many a time, but never in an ignominious way like that.

It was not until the end of the meal, when the coffee was bubbling in the glass globe on the table, and a box of cigars was laid by Rex's side before the waiters withdrew, that Wanda Steele asked him the question he had been waiting for.

"Is it true—what one hears, that you and your wife have parted?" "How did you hear?"

"I heard it from a friend of mine," she said. "I'm sure you must have heard it from somewhere. It's a pity you didn't tell me sooner."

"I'm sure you must have heard it from somewhere. It's a pity you didn't tell me sooner."

"I'm sure you must have heard it from somewhere. It's a pity you didn't tell me sooner."

"From several people I have met." He gave a rather doleful laugh. "I didn't think we were important enough."

"But, of course, you are, Rex! The public is wild for the slightest bit of news about you. I was very much surprised."

"Yes, it's true. You see, it—well, it wasn't fair to her. I mean my coming back like that. After all that time—without letting her know."

"You mean she wanted to leave you?"

"Of course. She was very sporting about it. She did her best."

"What are you going to do—get a divorce?"

"Yes. What else can we do?"

"I see!" Wanda burst out indignantly. "And you'll take the blame, Rex, and she'll marry Albery."

"I am to blame," he said simply. "How did you know about Albery?"

"Anybody with eyes could see that he's crazy about her. And, of course, he's a great catch for a girl like that!"

She had slightly forgotten herself. She flushed and apologized. "I didn't mean anything against her, Rex. I know how chivalrous you are. And she seemed a nice, quiet little thing. But I can't help being angry with her for letting you down."

"She hasn't let me down, Wanda. Please, I'd rather not discuss it. We have agreed that it would be for the best to part."

Male Gets A Ride

JOPLIN, Mo. (UP)—It took Joplin firemen and a switch engine more than an hour to rescue a mule from a railroad bridge. The animal's legs became wedged between ties when the mule was freed, an improvised sled was made of two freight car doors and the switch engine skidded the beast to safety.

SPORT SLANTS

That blast from Charles Whitcombe, 35-year-old captain of the British Ryder cup squad, wherein he declared that Great Britain will win, without even the slightest hint of qualification, sent the captain of the American squad scurrying to rally his forces. The American captain is, of course, Walter Hagen. There never has been another leader of the United States entry in the international professional matches since they were inaugurated back in 1920. Sir Walter has led the team on each of the four past meetings and has been chosen to do so again when the teams tee off for their matches at Ridgewood, N. J., late in September.

Hagen is still rated as the personality man of the American professional golfers. Not that he was chosen for the position of captain for that reason alone. No, indeed. He can still play a bang-up game of golf. Two years ago when the American Ryder cup team was to invade England someone made the suggestion that Gene Sarazen be named leader. "There's only one man for that job, no matter how many titles the other fellows may hold," replied Sarazen. "Make Hagen captain of course."

BRITISH PLEASED, TOO The British team hailed Hagen's selection for the fifth time as enthusiastically as our own pros. Things wouldn't seem right to them if some one else were running things for their opponents. To them the selection of Hagen emphasizes the element of sport in the meet.

Although the American contingent lost by a margin of 1-2 to 3-2 in England in 1933, Hagen feels just as certain of victory in the coming matches as does the British captain who opposes him. He has lined up a spectacular team. Just run your eyes down the list. It includes Paul Hurney, the P.O. A. champion; Sam Travis, the open champion; Lou Dutter, the open champion of 1934; Ky Latton, Johnny Revolta, Henry Picard, Craig Wood, Horton Smith and Gene Sarazen.

The four newcomers — Parke, Larson, Kevoit and Richard—take the places of Denny Shute, Leo Jeger, Billy Burke and Ed Dudley who were members of the 1933 team.

In all, Hagen's troupe represents the usual strength and showmanship and is one that can be counted on to make things most interesting for the invading British contingent.

BABE'S TELL THE STORY Babe Ruth, making his debut into tournament golf play in the westchester County club invitation meet, stole the show in the qualifying round with an ordinary yard of 81. The main attraction as far as the gallery that braved the rain was concerned, the Babe caught the eyes of the golf writers as well. Their stories featured the former home run king's play, with only scant mention of the fact that one Bill Tobin carded a rain-splattered 72.

Even so the Babe shot a fair game of golf if you are generous enough to overlook his weakness with the putter. If he ever brings his work on the greens to a par with the rest of his game he is going to shoot plenty of very low 10s.

Since quitting baseball Ruth has played golf daily and his game has shown amazing improvement. Ruth himself feels that this outstanding practice has taken 10 strokes off his average score.

Under the direction of State college, farmers in 15 North Carolina counties are carrying out systematic reforestation of idle lands with loblolly and longleaf pines.

Number of students in such schools is variously estimated from 50,000 to 100,000. With the present per scholastic base of 7.97 cents, the cost would likely not exceed $100,000 per annum and might be as low as $50,000. It is further argued that enough books are now supplied above actual needs to care for this additional burden.

Opponents of the measure counter with the opinion that this does not constitute an argument against added expenditures for books. Since state institutions have found it impossible from accumulating book surpluses, private schools would likely do the same. Texas Outlook, official organ of the State Teachers' association, says the majority position of teachers and school officials against the bill "represents rather a protest against any semblance of an effort to use public funds to subsidize a private or relief enterprise."

Likewise it is argued that since sectarian schools would not be permitted to participate in the available school fund regardless of the amendment passage it would be a violation of the spirit of the constitution to furnish them text books out of the available fund.

One final argument and a rebuff on this portion of the amendment is that the state can exercise authority to overcome abuses of free text books in state schools while none is given over sectarian or private schools. The rebuff is that such laws could be enacted.

would be on an attendance basis, thus making census roll padding fruitless.

An objection to this is that temptation to pad attendance rolls would be as great as to pad census rolls.

In voting on this amendment, it should be kept in mind that two issues are involved; first, to grant free text books to children in private and parochial schools, and second, to allow the legislature to adopt some other plan of distributing the state available fund.

INTEREST IN WOMEN'S INVITATION MEET BECOMING STATE-WIDE

MINERAL WELLS (Spl.)—Interest in the Second Annual Women's Invitation Tournament of the Mineral Wells Golf and Country Club, to be held August 27th through the 31st, is becoming statewide.

Invitations having already been accepted by Miss Helen Warren of Dallas, Mrs. R. E. Winger, Mrs. W. E. Acers and Mrs. W. G. Carter of Fort Worth, Mrs. J. Lee Wilson of San Antonio, Mrs. Ben Harrison, Taylor, Miss Bud Grant of Terrell, Mrs. John Edmiston, Mrs. C. L. Dean and Mrs. Mary Lois Thompson, Lubbock; Mrs. Francis Awtry, Mrs. Larry Paddon, Mrs. Dallas Kirby, Mrs. Allen Kemper and Mrs. J. G. Schourer, ace of Electrica, Breckenridge, San Angelo, Austin and Abilene have promised several players each, and it is beginning to look as if this is going to be "anybody's" tournament.

Mrs. R. E. Winger of Fort Worth showed a 75 in a practice round last week, and Miss Helen Warren, youthful Dallas player, having topped in an 82 last Sunday, making all tee shots from the men's tees. Mrs. J. Lee Wilson of San Antonio, twice State municipal champion, is not to be overlooked as competition to any player, so the Championship Flight this year promises to be a toss-up.

Mineral Wells has five women golfers who brook no interference with their practice rounds for the approaching tournament. Mrs. J. G. Brown, Mrs. L. H. Creager, Mrs. Jack Amberg, Mrs. Clarence Hart and Miss Durvell Davidson never miss a day shooting from 18 to 36 holes in an effort to master the new grass greens before August 27th. Mineral Wells also has about eight or ten players who are getting ready to give the visitors trouble in the nine hole division.

The greens are in good condition and the fairways unusually fast at this time.

SELL Through the WANT-ADS

A "bargain" is sometimes a bargain--

A GOOD many people look on August as their lucky month—and we don't mean those who spend it lying on the sand and taking in salt air.

We mean those people who have formed the habit of buying things when other people aren't... porch rugs and luggage and towels and lamps and all sorts of things, for use now and for use next season.

Of course they have learned that "bargains" are not always bargains. They know how to recognize quality and style and worth, how to find the strong points and how to avoid weaknesses. And much of their knowledge has come from the advertisements in this newspaper.

All of us follow advertising, but some people study it so thoroughly that they know exactly what they want and where to get it. They are the ones who find the real bargains. Their money buys more things and better things—in August and all through the year.

CHAPTER 5
WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

From galley-prisoner, Jean Valjean, inspired by the kindness and faith of the Bishop Bienvenu, becomes mayor and magistrate of a small French town. News is brought to him that one Champmathieu, half-crazed paroled convict, has been identified as Jean Valjean and is about to be sent back to the galley for Jean's failure to report to the police regularly. He presents himself in court, frees the luckless man by revealing his own identity and then promptly loses himself in the cluttered grounds of a convent. After five years he has taken a small house in Paris, the never-tiring Javert still on his trail.

The words have the desired effect. "I didn't—until this happened. I never thought of leaving you. No one could have been happier than I. I'll go to England—I'll forget him somehow, I will—I swear I will—"

Jean clutches at this last straw. He tries to persuade himself and her that it is best to go. His one idea is to get her away—rush the journey before she can have time to think. "Of course, if I could do anything for you, I would—you know I would, but I can't. We don't even know where he is, and if we stay here they'll arrest me and heaven knows what will happen to you. No, it's best for us to go, isn't it? We can make all inquiries about him from England—that's best—isn't it?"

Cosette nods half-heartedly. The door to the street is pushed back violently and Epounee staggers in, panting and exhausted. "I've run halfway across Paris with all the gendarmes and police in France on my trail—and if I'm not mistaken there's still a couple on the corner waiting—pshaw!"

"Who are you?" asked Jean. "I've come to see a girl called Cosette. I've a note for her—from Marius."

"Yes, the only man who ever meant anything to me and I—have to carry messages of undying affection to another woman—Fanny, isn't it?"

"Where is he now?"

"Fighting for his life in the Faubourg St. Germain—troops all around him—and his stupid students, getting themselves slaughtered—for what? I'd have kept him out of it, but he didn't hear from his sweetheart he didn't care what happened. Now he's in it—trapped in a blind alley determined to die for his silly cause. Aren't men fools?"

"Now (continuing), when will this

A Hot Tip ON Keeping Cool in warm weather

ABOUT the first thing I do when I get home all STEAMED up and weary from THE office these warm days IS to open up a bottle of SCHLITZ and soothe MY soul in that chilled GOLDEN goodness.

I pour it out gently and WATCH the creamy head rise AND stay there as I drink IT SLOWLY so that not a drop SLIPS by untasted and pretty SOON I am friends with all the WORLD again and treat my FAMILY like a good husband AND father should. SCHLITZ is more than a beer; IT'S a bottled blessing AND all because of a unique SCHLITZ method with a big NAME... precise enzyme CONTROL... Enzymes work FOR mother Nature, ripening FRUITS and beer and other GOOD things but they never KNOW when to quit. They MAKE an apple perfect.

THEN go right on until IT'S spoiled. They do the SAME to beer, too... except SCHLITZ! Schlitz has a SECRET method of making THESE enzymes behave... THEY bring every bottle to its FULLEST goodness, and send IT to you just that way. I SAY it's no wonder that SCHLITZ made Milwaukee FAMOUS... no wonder they PROTECT its rare goodness FROM light in brown bottles, BUT, pardon me... just FLOOD your dry throat with a COLD clear glass of Schlitz AND you'll see why I'm not MAD at the weather-man SINCE I disco vered...

"OUTLAWED GUNS"

Also—TARZAN

It was Mr. McCarl whose report criticizing expenditures furnished anti-TVA ammunition to Senator Austin of Vermont a few months ago. The GOP senator's revelations on the floor almost blocked the more to shore up this experiment. How the report fell into senatorial hands before TVA's managers were given a chance to answer it has never been explained, but Mr. McCarl is still suspect.

But the TVA amendments put the comptroller general in his place. Hereafter he can publicize financial faults without affording the ham-builders an opportunity to answer and explain. The new provision was written by Senator Norris, who gave Mr. McCarl his start at Washington many years ago. But there is no love lost on this subject between the senator and his former secretary.

Rectified—
As a rule, President Roosevelt makes no special mention of an award of PWA money to cities and states. But he sent out congratulations when the allotment board advanced money for construction of a public power plant at Danville, Va.

Perhaps the president thought this was a delicate way to warn the private utilities that he wants their scalp. But he was really making up for a blunder of his own, though he was unconscious of it at the time. Danville had agreed to borrow PWA funds at a time when the government gave only 30 per cent of the total cost and loaned 70 per cent. But on the day that Danville voted on issuing bonds for the project, Mr. Roosevelt announced the new arrangement for grants of 45 per cent. Naturally the voters defeated the less favorable proposition.

Stubborn Harold Ickes refused to extend the more generous terms to Danville. He tried to force the city to go through with the original bargain. But the president sided with Altonna and Guards and Morris L. Cooke, who argued that the Ickes position was unfair.

Notes—
A powerful coterie is planning to sabotage the Frazier-Lemke farm moratorium bill. The senate lobby committee has enormously enlarged power to probe into corporations—not necessarily utility corporations. Committee wants to know if utility holding companies have a stranglehold on Western Union. Congress leaves the oil industry unregulated. "Don't envy me my vacation," said a flitting congressman, "I've got to explain this session to my constituents."

Method—
Eastern industrialists who are leading the fight on processing taxes had better look out for the cannily concealed club up the sleeve of the new AAA amendments. They authorize the diversion of 30 per cent of gross customs receipts to encourage agricultural exports. The net effect is to interlock processing taxes and the tariffs which are close to industry's heart. The implication is that an assault on processing taxes will also undermine the tariff.

New York sharps recognize that farmers are in no mood to stand for anything which might seriously decrease or eliminate their benefit payments. A sizeable fund has actually been raised by agricultural interests to test the constitutionality of protective tariffs as distinct from import duties for revenue only—in the event that processing taxes are eventually banned by the supreme court. You may have noticed that the New Dealers have done nothing about providing alternative sources for farm benefit payments in case processing taxes are annulled. There's the method in that omission. It invites the farmers to concentrate their ire on the New England textile mills and others who instigated the amendment.

New York conservatives have no love whatever for processing taxes. But the wise ones figure that no development would come closer to landing FDR's re-election than to have these taxes and the benefit payments derived from them outlawed by the supreme court.

Hollow—
Utility circles are privately swearing at the latest example of "Roosevelt guile." Despite the president's insistence that the mandatory death sentence in the senate version of the holding company bill be included in the final draft and his outward reluctance to accept a compromise, they are now convinced he was prepared all along to give ground when it came to a showdown.

They contend that by harping on the death sentence and riding the house for being too gentle he has headed off enactment of amendments which would have been much more favorable to the power companies. In this way he has outmaneuvered one of the most strenuous lobbies ever organized. Comment runs that he simply followed the time-honored legal tactic of asking for three times as much as he expected to get.

His alleged defeat is certainly a hollow victory for the utilities. The revised bill will be just as severe a pain to old-timers as the original. The younger men say it will be a good thing for their future.

Contrast—
The large volume of corporate financing so far this year means little to date in terms of business stimulation. Analysis shows that 73.6 per cent of the bonds floated were for refunding purposes, 16.5 per cent were for the purchase of securities by investment trusts and such 5.5 per cent were for working capital and only 4.1 per cent for plant, equipment, etc.

Anti-New Dealers make much of the contrast with Great Britain. There has been a large increase in securities issued over there recently—but very little money has been raised for refunding purposes. Most of it has been for construction or for investment in durable goods.

The inference is that those good old standards—political uncertainty and lack of confidence—are responsible. Wise observers doubt that the explanation is quite as simple as that remark that the British still have a long way to go before their production facilities are completely modernized.

Feast—
Air transport circles are feeling decidedly chipper these days. Passenger traffic has increased enormously this year over last. The significant item of passenger-mail jurisdiction over the air mail routes is running about months of 1934. The gain is attributed chiefly to new and more comfortable equipment. Mail subsidies don't look nearly so important as they did a while back.

At the same time the air lines are delighted with enactment of the Mead bill which transfers jurisdiction over the air mail routes from the post office to the interstate commerce commission. The commission is expected shortly to authorize a rate feast which will atone for last year's famine.

Henry Ford isn't satisfied with keeping Chevrolet and Plymouth executives awake at night. Insiders learn that he will present a new car—to be called the Edison—next month. It will be a 12-cylinder baby. Lincoln and will be priced around $1,400.

The informed predict that Buick and Chrysler will have to step lively to keep their places in the parade.

Practical—
The New York State Chamber of Commerce—staunchly and consistently anti-New Deal from the beginning—has decided to go in for serious crusading. It summoned its members to an August meeting this week for the first time in its history. The purpose was to demand that the government cut down on its spending forthwith. The chamber feels that the crisis created by lavish outlays demands immediate action. So far it has offered no alternative suggestion to federal relief for the care of the unemployed.

Unkind critics wonder whether it's the heat or second childhood or what. They call King Canute practical by comparison and wonder whether the chamber realizes what lovely ammunition it is presenting gratis to politicians who have no love for New York.

If Senator Pope of Idaho runs into a chilly reception at our European embassies and legations during his present trip abroad, he will have only himself to blame.

Mr. Pope's office in Capitol Hill unfortunately gave out the impression that he was visiting London, Paris and Rome as an unofficial observer for the administration. Whereupon such foreign experts as Joe Robinson and Key Pittman, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, got in touch with the White House. They wanted to know why such an honor fell to a newcomer.

There issued a polite disclaimer that the senator was representing the president on the trip. And the state department has quietly notified its foreign representatives that Mr. Pope represents nobody but himself so far as it knows. Another who would like to ascertain the Pope purpose is Colleague Borah, who can't forget that he was

Jean looks at her a long time in bewilderment. The whole of his break of cards tumbles down and he looks into a hysterical little laugh at the way Fate has played with him. "But me—me! Have you nothing for me?"

"But you're my father—I mean I always think of you as my father. I know you're really not, but you see, with Marius, it's different. It isn't just that lovely sense of companionship that I have with you—it's like every girl feels for the man who is going to be her husband."

His whole expression begins to change. He wants to take Cosette away; he is searching for a line to take, searching cunningly, calculating as to how to play on her emotions. "Yes," (deliberately) "it's natural you should want to leave me."

Liability
According to its sections the O'Mahoney bill proposes the federal incorporation and licensing of all corporations doing business between the various states. It proposes to increase the membership of the Federal Trade Commission to nine men. There will be three labor representatives, three will be industrialists and three will represent the public—to be named by the president.

The bill proposes that licenses be granted only to those organizations that protect the rights of collective bargaining for labor; that discrimination against women be eliminated and that child labor be abolished. It also provides for the protection of minority stockholders in that the Federal Trade Commission will permit proxies to be voted by those men who are approved—supposedly men who do not represent money interests.

The bill also prevents bonuses being paid to officers unless stockholders approve. It also approves a profit-sharing basis for employees. It provides for the distribution of cash surpluses to shareholders. Most important of all it makes di-

Construction awards for the first 11 days of August totalled $45,928,000. It was made up of $38,158,000 in public awards—while already recent figures from leading manufacturers. But what about bonds—especially those recently sold at 3-1/2 and 4 per cent yields?

The better element looks for a decline in the market price levels of these securities. It is thought that when business calls for money the call rate will stage a sharp spurt. A 3-1/2 to 4 per cent call money rate is likely. "In that case prime bonds should move down to where they will sell to yield about five per cent. But if the demand is heavy, then we will see good bonds ease off to a six per cent yield basis."
