Lagging—

The undercurrent of revolt against President Roosevelt on Capitol Hill gains converts every day. If the boys voted as they talk in the cloakrooms they would defy the White House by recessing until late fall.

The members want to go home. They are dog-tired physically, mentally and politically. They judge from their letters that the country would like to relax and rest. The great majority of their mail is critical and querulous. It reflects a general revulsion against any more reform measures at this time. The literary trend against the President started after the Supreme Court decision and has increased in volume.

The President is popular, personally. Constituents still seem to like his underlying objectives. But his more recent demands—constitutional revision, power legislation and share-the-wealth program—have not made people rush to the ink bottle.

Sunk—

The tax bill may set the spark to this talkative tinder.

Except for liberals and a few White House friends almost nobody on Capitol Hill sympathizes with the three-point program. Democratic leaders on both sides privately eviscerate it. The rank-and-file would like to duck the issue until after the 1936 elections. In committee or on the floor they may subject it to some sick sabotage. The Republicans welcome the chance to make political capital.

Inflationists and bonapartists mean to load it down with amendments distinctly unpalatable to the President. GOP-ers and La Follettians will move to broaden the base and tax everybody. They will get reinforcements among the Democrats. His leaders may then advise Mr. Roosevelt that they cannot check these thrusts. High-up Democrats are betting that there will be no tax bill at this session, and it's certain the gang won't stand on the eve of 1936.

Reforms—

The Harvard professor spends a lonesome but laborious week-end at the White House last Saturday and Sunday, although nobody but official scribes knew of his presence. He remained there while the President fished on Chesapeake Bay. The professor called for books and ink and paper. When he departed there were many mysterious accounts awaiting presidential perusal.

Minor brain trusters smiled over this visit. According to them, Mr. Frankfurter framed a six-point program for Congressional study and enactment after the Supreme Court decision. The taxation, youth and gold clause prohibition proposals are supposed to constitute half of the new demands. New NRA legislation is believed to be another, but the other two points remain a mystery. But Congress will howl if and when it is asked to undertake more reforms.

Cramped—

Brain trusters don't make the charge publicly, but off the record they insinuate that the House investigation of White House lobbying was inspired by GOP.

The man they blame is Chester C. Bolton, astute Ohio Representative and co-chairman of the Joint Republican Congressional Committee. They say they have proof that Mr. Bolton held many conferences with Ralph Brewster of Maine before the latter charged that "Tommy" Corcoran threatened to kill the Quoady project unless Brewster voted "right" on the holding company bill. Another conspirator is supposed to have been Rep. Carroll Beedy of Maine.

Mr. Bolton is understood to have discovered the political dynamite in the incident. Mr. Brewster's charge worries the official fixers more than any recent development. It cramps their style in pushing through other bills with the same kind of tactics.

Hopeful—

A small slight to Rules Chairman O'Connor of New York is causing the administration more worry than many major blunders of strategy and policy.

Mr. O'Connor's post as Rules Chairman is one of the three most important in the House. But it doesn't suit his temperament. John is a showy talkative, excitable fellow. It has been his ambition to become Floor Leader, leading the charge and orations. He sought the place when Rep. Barkhead of

Jack Lamb, Nationally-Famous Bass Fisherman, To Appear Here

You may have heard some fish stories in your time, but until you've met Jack Lamb, nationally famous bass fisherman, and listened to some of his true stories, you, in the classical words of Al Johnson, "ain't heard nothin' yet."

Jack Lamb is coming to Big Spring soon to give one of his demonstrations of bait and fly casting which have brought fame to his name. For the past 17 years Jack has worked in the Fort Worth offices of the Gulf Refining company, but his reputation as a fisherman has gradually grown until his employers now let him off occasionally to go into other parts of the country and teach less successful anglers some of the rudiments and prime factors of scientific fishing.

Hailed as the champion bass fisherman of the world, Lamb has caught and released more than 40,000 black bass. He knows all there is to know about bass fishing, and his articles upon this subject have been syndicated throughout the world. His book "How to Catch Old John Bass" has been recognized as the last word in authority on bass fishing.

Last winter Lamb was in Louisiana on a goose hunt, and came across a great marshland covered with water. He sized it up as a likely place for bass, and came back there a few days later with his fishing rod instead of a gun. He also took a motion picture camera along, and the result was that they took about 2,500 feet of action pictures. It is Jack's intention to bring some of his motion pictures when he comes here and show them in the local theatres. He explains that it is impossible to take everyone fishing, so he conceived the idea of running motion pictures concurrent with his appearance in each town.

Jack has fished in more than 3,500 lakes in Texas alone, in addition to hundreds of streams, and he perhaps knows Texas bass fishing better than any other person. He has a genuine heartfelt interest in the man who likes to fish but does not know how, and spends a great deal of his time in helping them. His demonstrations are nothing more than a free casting school for the novice fisherman where he can learn the proper methods of casting, and also learn the different kinds of lures which Lamb has found to be best.

Lamb was invited as a special guest at the opening of Lake Sweetwater two years ago, and has staged his famous exhibitions in Abilene and Sweetwater, but has never given one this far west before.

Made Stage Bow With Barrymore

Chester Morris and Jean Arthur in "Public Hero Number 1"

A few years ago a seventeen-year-old boy stepped into the stage of a New York theatre, for his first stage job. His father, himself a stage star, was a friend of the star of the show. This boy played an outstanding role, and under the kindly tutelage of the great star won prominence, went into more roles and became a stage star in his own right.

They met again when Lionel Barrymore and Chester Morris, the boy he had launched to stage fame in "The Copperhead," played together the first time since, at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios, in "Public Hero Number 1," which comes Friday and Saturday to the Ritz theatre.

Old Friends on the Stage

Barrymore and William Morris, Chester's father, had been old friends on the stage. Through the years that followed the boy's first appearance in "The Copperhead," Barrymore had watched with almost paternal pride as Chester scored in "The Big House" and other hits, most recently, "Society Doctor."

"He taught me a great deal," says Chester, "and still when I watch him work today I feel as though I didn't know anything."

"He's one of the finest actors on the screen," Lionel says of Chester. "He has it in the blood. His father was great before him."

In the new picture Morris plays the adventurous Jeff Crane, and Barrymore an eccentric physician whose fate is woven into the doings of a criminal gang. Jean Arthur, Joseph Calleia, Paul Kelly, Three guests played with the club: Mesdames George Tate, A. G. Schlegel and G. N. Crosshwait. Members present were: Mesdames Ed Allen, J. N. Blue, William Dehlin, and Frankie Rutherford.

Mrs. Gene Wilson will entertain next.

Marine Trounces Jimmy Cagney In Horseshoe Game

Here's one story without a happy ending for James Cagney, who is appearing in the Cosmoopolitan production, "Devil Dogs of the Air," at the Lyric theatre.

Principal sequences of the story were made at the Marine flying field on North Island, San Diego, Calif. With the 1,000 enlisted men at this base there is one sport which dominates all others. It is the game of horseshoes.

From morning until night the clink of the steel shoes and the scatter of dirt at the pegs may be seen and heard at the Marine field. Unless the boys on the field can make a ringer on every toss of the shoes, they are considered elementary by their brothers in the service.

"Devil Dogs of the Air," a story by John Monk Saunders, is written about the aviation corps of the U. S. Marines with snappy, fast action and thrilling air stunts.

and Lewis Stone have prominent roles.

Nearly half of the persons killed in motor vehicle accidents during 1934 were pedestrians, according to the National Safety Council.

Mrs. J. B. Hodges Entertains For Mrs. W. D. McDonald And Friends Of The Bluebonnets

Pretty Morning Party Given At Home Of The Hostess Followed By Luncheon After Bridge Games

One of the most attractively planned parties of the week was that given at the home of Mrs. J. B. Hodges, Sr., Wednesday morning complimenting her friend, Mrs. W. D. McDonald of Los Angeles, Calif., who is visiting Mrs. Hodges and Mrs. Bob Eubanks.

Brilliant hues of red and yellow zinnias and a large bouquet of bluebells furnished a colorful summer note for the party.

Members of the Bluebonnet Bridge club and friends of the honoree were the guests.

Mrs. McDonald scored highest among the players and was awarded a set of Madeira napkins. She also received lingerie for a guest prize.

Mrs. Shive captured the bingo prize and was given a Madeira holly cover. Mrs. Baker received a pin cushion dressed as a Colonial doll.

A pretty luncheon plate was served at noon with candy dolls as favors. Three guests came in at that hour to visit with the honoree. They were Mrs. J. L. LeBlau, Mrs. Bob Eubank and Miss Forest Ruggles, of Hope, Ark.

Guests of the morning were: Meses. E. C. Boatler, Sam Baker, W. A. Robertson, Bob Thompson, L. M. Bankson, J. H. Kirkpatrick, E. D. Merrill, W. D. McDonald, L. W. Croft, C. E. Shive.

Mmes. Albert M. Fisher, H. W. Loeper, L. E. Eddy, J. B. Young, V. Van Gieson, Noel T. Lawson, P. W. Malone, Grover Cunningham, Arthur Woodall and Mae Battle. Mrs. Baker will be the next club hostess.

RAIN AND SUN REVIVE THE PLAINS

Weeks of cool, rainy weather followed by a hot sun that shone relentlessly over much of the Middle West brought smiles again to the faces of worried farmers. At top, W. M. those islands as a major of the U. S. Medical Corps, gave this collection to the museum last summer. I bet you'd hate to meet a native with a knife like that one!"

Miss Ruth Mellinger who has been away studying at one of the leading universities in the United States, exclaimed on her visit to the museum after an absence of two years, "I can't believe my eyes, it has grown so much!" Miss Ruth was an outstanding student in her own hometown school, where she graduated with honors, and one of the best secretaries to the History club it ever had.

One cannot stay long here without catching the fundamental spirit of the place—ownership, partnership, for each child feels these inductive qualities and sooner or later expresses them by some act or saying.

We have all heard about school pride, but what about museum pride? Museum pride has been shown by the children who have helped to make the West Texas Memorial museum grow, and by hundreds of adult friends who have made their contributions from time to time.

It is this museum pride which has created in the visitors a desire

Code Of Ethics, Aims And Objects Discussed By Dr. P. W. Malone

In a Lions education program, the Big Spring club was reminded Wednesday of the institution's objects and told of the international organization's history.

Dr. P. W. Malone listed the code of ethics, the aims and objects of the club and pointed to opportunities for putting many worthwhile activities into operation. He said that unanimous participation in service endeavors was one of the best ways in which to build up and sustain club interest.

Lee Hubby gave a brief sketch of Lions history, recounting the formation of the international set up, the phenomenal growth of the organization within the past year until it outnumbers any other single service body in membership and club members.

Dr. C. W. Deats explained the plan by which a registered English springer spaniel which he gave the club, will be given away. He has three children display as many spaniels from the litter out of which the dog will come. The pup was sired by Tunstillo Boggie Boy, ACK, and dame Deats Lady Soto, ACK. The litter has already been registered. He pointed out that the pure bred dog industry is a large thing involving $35,000,000 in equipment and $40,000,000 in animals. There are 400,000 registered dogs, he said, valued at an average of $100.

entertainment of the thrilling, chilling type that has always pleased audiences the world over.

"Werewolf of London" is a story of a cultured English gentleman who, in carrying out his hobby of securing strange flowers from the far corners of the earth, finally meets with a fabled werewolf in the mountains of far Tibet. The werewolf bites him in the arm and then he knows, according to the fable, that he is doomed to turn into a wolf each month during the full of the moon. The only thing that can prevent this terrible thing from happening is a plant called "wolf flower."

Henry Hull, in the role of this scientist, finds the wolf flower and brings several specimens back to England. But then comes the difficult task of keeping the flowers alive. They bloom only in the light of the moon, so he constructs a laboratory in which he creates artificial moonlight. And then thieves break in and steal his precious blossoms and he is left to the fate of becoming a wolf. Frantically he strives to avert the transformation. Frantically he watches the hair grow on his hands and face. He becomes a wolf and runs the darkened streets of London bringing death to the innocent and suffering to himself, for the next morning when he awakes he is a man again, but knows what he has done during the dark hours of the night.

Cramer's Relief Twirling Fails To Stop Big Springers

FORSAN (Sul).—The Big Spring Giants chased Bob White from the mound in the early innings here Wednesday and although Bert Cramer stepped in with a masterful bit of relief twirling, the Giants came out 8-5 victors.

The Big Spring boys tallied in the first inning when Ray McMahan binged with the bases jammed and succeeded in counting all their runs before White retired.

Curly Ebbs, on the rubber for the Giants, was wild but held the better of the argument throughout the game. The Giant fingers twice sent Freddy Townsend into the dirt hitting him once on the head and again under the arm.

Ebbs aided his own victory with a mighty triple in the third stanza. A nice fielding exhibition was given by "Duke" Pickle, who saved the winning runs late in the game when he brought in a hard hit by Cramer after a dash into deep center.

Batteries: Big Spring—Ebbs and Smith; Forsan—White, Cramer and Wiggins.

TEXAS TOPICS

By Raymond Brooks

One young Dallas lawyer's disagreement with Amon G. Carter, Fort Worth newspaper publisher, produced the entire episode labeled throughout the state as a Young Democrat's revolt against Elliott Roosevelt and the New Deal.

The young lawyer is Phil Overton of Dallas. He got more square yards of publicity out of a one-man attack upon the prominence of the Roosevelt name than anyone in recent history.

Overton was in Austin during the recent session of the legislature as an attorney fighting the bill strongly urged by Amon G. Carter of Fort Worth, friend of the Roosevelt administration and the Roosevelt family. Mr. Carter protested strongly against practice that permits hospitals to schedule the family doctor of a patient. Overton, as attorney, represented the hospitals and doctors aligned with the hospitals.

It is always open season to capitalize on the name of a nationally prominent person, and no name ranks for the purpose with that of the Roosevelts. So when Elliott Roosevelt, vice president of the Texas Young Democrats, made a fine fight at the Amarillo convention against resolutions attacking the new deal policies and administration, and when James Roosevelt also joined in this program, the field was all set.

So Overton went back to Dallas and announced a "revolt," with all the trappings, including a proposal tooust Elliott Roosevelt. Chmn. Cusack of the Dallas club, called a meeting and the Overton resolution, as offered by a third person, was overwhelmingly defeated. That put an end to the one-man "revolt" that had gained front-page space throughout Texas—solely upon Mr. Roosevelt's prominence. The only possible hang-over is the proposal of some other ambitious Young Democrats that they would oust Mr. Overton and one or two others for having sponsored the attack on Elliott Roosevelt.

So much for the Young Democrats' one-man revolt. In Texas if a definite poll were taken, it is clear that about 85 per cent of all adults would record their support to the principles and policies of the New Deal administration. Most of the remaining 15 per cent would not be business people, as is assumed, but would be the world war veterans who feel, with controversial justice, that they have been made to bear too great a share of the retrenchment and shifting of government benefits to others.

Mr. Overton got glorious publicity out of it while it lasted; and it took only the first official action by the first Young Democratic club to repudiate his whole undertaking and to support the stand of young Roosevelt at the Amarillo convention.

Mrs. Jack Gorman of Abilene is visiting her sister Mrs. Harry Lester.

Personally Speaking

Misses Dorothy, Louise and Jenn Jordan and Mrs. C. L. Wasson plan to leave Friday morning for Denton where they will pick up Miss Lillian Jordan who is completing six weeks in the summer school at N.T.S.C. They will return via Fort Worth and Mineral Wells, visiting in both points.

Mrs. Ira Thurman and daughter, Marjio, have returned from visiting relatives in El Paso.

Mrs. Wayne Rice and children have gone to Ponca City, Okla., for a visit with relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. R. T. Piner, accompanied by their daughters Winifred and Robbie and by Mary Louise Inkman, left Thursday for Long Beach, Calif., where they will spend a month's vacation.

READY MADE WIFE

Chapter Three
THE TRAVELER
 "Don't bother with thanks," the stranger returned. "I didn't know there was a girl left who would admit that she didn't do everything properly."
 Another slap in the face. What an odious man!
 She could not help looking at him, as he sat in his corner, reading. He held the paper in a curious way, far from his eyes. So she could see his face.
 It was an unusual face, cast in a rough mould, though lean. The brow square and rugged; the nose held with a slight upward tilt; mouth long, firm, angry-looking.

clothes were very shabby and looked foreign. She supposed he was a traveller from abroad.
 Several people passed going to the dining car. Laurie was dying for a cup of tea. But pride forbade it. The man had asked her and she had refused.
 She could not help getting up and looking at his suitcases. But there was no name on them, not even a label with his destination. He came back.
 "Tastes good, one's first cup of English tea!" he said in the same abrupt, impersonal way. "About the only thing that hasn't changed in the old country, I expect."
 Laurie resented his manner so much that she tried to prevent her-

"Have you been away from England long?" she asked.

But his eyes gave her a little shock when, accidentally, she caught his direct gaze. They were the strangest eyes she had ever seen. Light, clear eyes, grey, staring in his deeply-tanned face. Steel grey she thought at first, but when he looked up they seemed almost white, like snow with a shadow on it.
 His hair was dark brown, growing squarely back from his forehead, and was rather untidy.
 His face went with his manner, Laurie thought. A pity he was such a boor. It might be quite a nice face. Especially when his eyes were bent down on his paper, and his thick, dark lashes shadowed the high cheek bones, it looked as if it might be a very nice face. But he evidently had a horrid disposition.
 Presently he put down his newspaper and got up.
 "I'm going to have some tea," he said. "Would you like some?"
 "No, thank you," answered Laurie, on her dignity.
 "But don't you want any? You were trying to buy a tea basket?"
 "I know. But I don't want any now." She emphasized the last word.
 "All right!" He slipped off his overcoat and went out.
 He was tall. His figure expressed abstract qualities, as his face did. His mouth was angry. His broad shoulders were impatient. His

ENTERS PLEA TO SLAYING FATHER

ly. "You see, I've only just lately recovered my sight. I've been blind for—a long time."
 "Oh!" She mused instinctively. "I'm sorry that must have been dreadful. But aren't you glad that you've got your sight back? I couldn't see—the waste! You don't like the world."
 "I'm an ungrateful devil, I suppose. I grudge the time when I couldn't see—the waste! You don't know what it's like to be helpless, all in the dark, not to be able to move, when you're used to an active life."
 "Of course, it must have been awful for you," Laurie assented. It was as if an invisible wire were stretched between them, and on it a tiny tone had been struck that rang with an unknown but pleasant sound. "Are you quite cured?" she added gently.
 "They say so. It was a kind of nervous trouble. But who knows? It may come back."
 "You mustn't think so." There seemed to be nothing more to say. He took up his paper again, and Laurie, overcome by a sudden shyness in his presence, decided that, after all, she would go and have a cup of tea.
 The train was rushing through the Northern suburbs. In a few minutes they would be in St. Paul, and the great world of London would swallow them both up. Laurie had lingered over her tea as long as possible. When she came back, her fellow traveller was in the corridor, smoking a cigaret that smelt very nice.

 He stayed there for some time, and when he entered the carriage again, Laurie was gathering her things together.
 "Funny, isn't it," he said in the same abrupt way, "when I was blind I didn't care about smoking a bit?"
 "Yes, very strange," she agreed. She could not understand why, as he so obviously disapproved of his fellow creatures, and particularly of her sex, he should take the trouble to talk to her at all.
 She looked up and found his eyes fixed on her with an intent, penetrating glance.

City Paving Is Suspended Temporarily

City Manager Says Projects To Be Resumed Within One Or Two Weeks

City paving project was suspended temporarily Tuesday pending revamping of the project for resubmission under the Works Progress Administration.

When the project is resumed, said City Manager E. V. Spence, topping of the city park roads will be started immediately. He estimated the project would be suspended from one to two weeks.

Meanwhile the city has launched a park project to care for relief workers during this period of inactivity.

One of the principal items in the park job is the preparing of tennis courts. They will be made ready for a rock asphalt topping.

City Water Consumption On Increase

Pressure Drops Noted In Late Evening Due To Undue Consumption

Undue consumption and not a shortage has been responsible for low water pressure in Big Spring during July.

Pressure drops sharply from 4 p. m. to 9 p. m. or later, the city pressure gauge shows. This is due to heavy drains by nearly 500 families who have signed the city's special residential irrigation rate.

Recent rains gave flowers and grass a phenomenal growth, but when the weather turned off hot and dry, residents were forced to pour city water on their yards to keep vegetation alive.

At the present time the city is pumping only 14 of its wells, six of the number being small wells. Within a few days two other large producers will be cut into the reservoir. Utilization of a larger booster will also aid in increasing pressure.

Plans to increase the height and capacity of one city reservoir and the auxiliary pressure tank atop a hill near Edwards Heights are calculated to give far greater sustained pressure when effected.

City wells, gauged daily, have not shown the slightest sign of weakening, water works employees disclosed Thursday.

Mrs. Burrus Buried In Lubbock Thursday

Mrs. Joe Kuykendall, accompanied by her brother, Claud Burrus, left Wednesday afternoon for Lubbock, in response to a message telling of the death of their mother, Mrs. Burrus, which occurred in Lubbock Wednesday afternoon.

Mrs. Burrus, about 75 years of age, is well known in Big Spring, where she spent most of the winter in the home of her daughter. Several months ago while visiting here she fell and broke her arm at the home of her daughter. She returned to Lubbock about a month ago, and recently suffered a slight stroke of paralysis. She formerly lived at Matador.

Funeral services were held in Lubbock Thursday afternoon. Mr. Kuykendall and daughter, Eloise, went to Lubbock this morning to join Mrs. Kuykendall at funeral services. A son, Harry Burrus, of this city, was unable to attend on account of injuries sustained several weeks ago. The Burrus Grocery, at Ninth and Main, remained closed during Thursday afternoon in respect to Mrs. Burrus.

E. FOURTH BAPTIST CHURCH TO BEGIN REVIVAL JULY 21ST

REV. W. S. GARNETT

JOE TRUSSELL

The East Fourth Baptist church will begin a revival Sunday, July 21st, and will continue through two weeks. The pastor, W. S. Garnett, will do the preaching. Services will be held in the church auditorium each evening at 8:30. The hour for the morning services will be announced later.

The song services will be under the direction of Joe Trussell of Brownwood. Mr. Trussell is one of the best known Gospel song leaders in the South, and a treat is in store for those who like good singing. Cecil Floyd, choir director of the Fourth Street church, has organized and trained a large choir of more than forty voices for the meeting.

All departments of the church are making special preparations for the meeting. A religious census is being taken of the city, groups of visitors and personal workers are being trained, and plans are being made to extend a personal invitation to the Baptist constituency of Big Spring to attend the services.

Misses Ruth Cotton and Nellie Mae Robinson will play the piano.

TODAY and TOMORROW

By WALTER LIPPMANN

There is yet no evidence that the administration has any clear idea of what it wants to do about the tax program. The President, in his message of June 19, put all his emphasis upon a better distribution of wealth and economic power. Only in one clause did he refer to the budget and then only to say that the inheritance taxes would "incidentally assist in our approach to a balanced budget." But the latest reports from the House Committee say that "we must have a bill that will raise substantial revenues" and that this means at least $340,000,000. Which is it? Until Washington makes up its mind whether its primary purpose is to redistribute wealth or to balance the budget, it cannot begin to legislate intelligently. Nothing but trouble can come from confusing the two purposes.

Let us suppose that the primary object is to balance the budget. Is it not self-evident that the time to discuss new revenues is when the new budget is presented next winter? What is the point of discussing taxes until it is known what the expenditures are to be? The whole purpose of a budget is to enable the country to consider its expenditures in relation to its revenues and its revenues in relation to its expenditures. When a budget is in balance or is being balanced, the first rule is that no money must be appropriated for which revenues are not provided. It is no less contrary to orderly budget practices to raise revenues which have no relation to expenditures. It leads to such absurdities as the suggestion that the government must immediately have $340,000,000 more to reduce a prospective deficit of over $4,000,000,000. Why $340,000,000? Would a deficit of $3,660,000,000 be in any real sense different from a deficit of $4,000,000,000?

The proposed new revenues will not balance the budget or bring the balance into sight. The only effect, therefore, of imposing new taxes now is to add to the burden of a few thousand individuals without lightening in the least the burden on the national finances. Burdenous taxation that does no one any good is just stupid and arbitrary.

The only wholesome way to impose new taxes is to impose them as part of a comprehensive plan to bring the budget into balance. Opinion is divided as to whether it is necessary or wise to balance the budget at once. But if the budget is to be balanced at once, then new taxes should accompany retrenchments. To add to the taxes with-

United States 1.9 million individuals and without defenses against extravagance and the squandering of the large accumulations of the nation's capital. Those large accumulations ought eventually to be taken out of private hands. But they cannot safely be entrusted to a legislature elected by a population which is not conscious that it pays taxes. An electorate contain-

(1) that new taxes for revenue should not be considered apart from a budget which retrenches and (2) that new taxes to redistribute wealth should not be considered apart from new taxes to redistribute responsibility among very much larger number of come taxpayers. Since Congress is not now ready to deal with either question in this fashion, this is the time to legislate.

Alabama fell ill, but House bosses handed the Acting Leadership to the plodding, diplomatic, elderly Mr. Taylor of Colorado. Tammany stalwart O'Connor got no help from F.D.R.

As Rules Chairman Mr. O'Connor has granted plenty of debating time to administration opponents. He has refused to permit roll calls desired by the White House. He has held up "must" measures in his committee. He fathered the investigation of lobbying by presidential spokesmen. Still hopeful of the leadership, he rides with the boys whose votes he will need if the position becomes vacant.

Revival

Unprintable rumors about the President's health are circulating throughout the country as they did during the 1932 campaign. A quiet check-up reveals that the sea of the whispering seems to be New York, Boston and Chicago. Congressmen and correspondents receive the most fantastic queries every day.

It is true that the President appeared to lose his air of confidence for a while. His political savvy seemed to desert him. Personally, he acted like a thwarted and frustrated man. His friends noticed it. But lately he has been chummy, aggressive, determined. He appears to have no serious worries.

Politically, he is taking a definite health cure. He is swinging more and more to the left. He has thrown off all problems of flirting with business, industry and bankers. He was down for a while—quite naturally—but he is back in the ring now.

Several diplomats assure Whirligig that they expect to see the British government clamping down upon Italy's use of the Suez Canal for troop transport to Africa in case of an Italo-Ethiopian war. They say Britain can base this action upon the treaty which recognizes the territorial integrity of Ethiopia, to which both Britain and Italy are parties. By denying access to the canal to both belligerents Britain could be ostentatiously neutral. Of course this action would be a strong British element believes that this risk is worth taking rather than the greater risk of a general war resulting from Italian aggression in Africa and a Nazi push against Austria.

One diplomat asked: "Why do you suppose Britain holds control of Suez, if not for her advantage?"

Notes

Reports in Europe tell the State Department to look out for a German march on Vienna as soon as Mussolini gets tangled up in Africa.

When states and cities press him too hard on work relief projects, Secretary Ickes tells 'em they must put up 55 per cent—and that holds them a while. Californians say that Farley will have to make a bargain with Upton Sinclair if Roosevelt is to get the delegation next year. Federal judges show more spunk since the Supreme Court walloped NRA—they resolve "reasonable doubts" in favor of the Constitution.

NEW YORK
By JAMES McMULLIN

Abolition

Most of the leading New York banks are also trust companies. They value their trust business highly and in the past two years—when Washington seemed to be giving them too rough a ride—several of them have given more than casual thought to the possibility of chucking the headaches of commercial banking and restricting themselves to the calmer trust centers. Trust activities—being purely intrastate—offered an appealing shelter from federal interference.

But these institutions find they are threatened with a smartly conceived flank attack. Co-ordinator Joseph E. Eastman is lining up an impressive array of statistics to prove that the railroads pay them too much in fees for acting as trustees, transfer agents, etc. He wants the roads to break off these relations with the big banks and get up trust companies of their own to perform the same services at a nominal charge. There's no doubt this would save the roads a lot of money—but to the banks it's hitting below the belt. The railroads are among their most profitable customers.

Worse still, there are rumblings that Mr. Eastman has a far-reaching plan in the back of his mind to suggest that industrial corporations do the same thing. If this should ever work out it would be a lethal wallop at income from trust departments. It isn't entirely irrelevant to note that the New York institutions which would take the worst beating have hardly been New Deal enthusiasts. Worried bankers may not think much of F.D.R.'s ethics, but they do admit his ingenuity at thinking up ways to make them uncomfortable.

Easier

But danger from this quarter is still remote and there's more cheerful news at hand for the banks to celebrate. After two years of involved bickering Federal Judge Mack in the New York district has at last decided that the banks which loaned Sam Insull money shortly before the collapse of his empire have a clear title to the collateral Insull put up—which other creditors have contended was improperly pledged. The ruling will probably be appealed but the banks are confident of winning all the way through.

The decision is much more important that it looks on the surface. The whole principle of collateral loans is involved. If the banks had lost, it would have meant they had a terrific responsibility for tracing the complete history of every security offered them as the basis for a loan. In self-defense they would have had to require exhaustive proof from borrowers that no strings were attached to securities offered. A collateral loan isn't worth a hoot to a bank if there's any doubt about its power to close in case of default. The result would have been tighter credit than ever.

It's a great load off bank officers' minds to know they can take a borrower's word for it that he has the right to pledge the collateral he offers without conducting an investigation. This will make life easier for borrowers, too.

SPORT SLANTS

Enough thrills and excitement have been packed into the first half of 1935 to fill an ordinary sports year. Every sport in the book has done its share toward making this a banner year.

There has been more than usual activity in the boxing world with Jimmy Braddock's surprise victory over Max Baer in the world's championship contest standing out as one of the biggest upsets in the history of heavyweight title battles. The "story-book" comeback of Braddock from the ranks of flaccid losers to the highest honors the ring game offers thrilled followers of the sport.

The sensational rise of Joe Louis injected new life into the heavyweight division. Climaxing his march of 23 consecutive victories, 19 of them knock-outs, by stopping the giant Primo Carnera in six rounds, Louis proved that he could punch and box and was ready to make his bid for the top honors.

In the lighter divisions, also, ring history was written. Tony Canzonci beat Lou Ambers to win the lightweight title vacated by Barney Ross and thus became the first lightweight to regain the championship in that class. Bayron Rosa and Jimmy McLarnin met in a rubber match with Ross regaining his

End

Keep your eye on the Committee of Americans—headed by Charles F. Sabin, Jr., whose object in life is to substitute a federal sales tax and economy in government for direct income levies.

The Committee's wealthy backers will see to it that it has ample funds to make plenty of noise. The group was planned to supplement the efforts of the American Liberty League and the Crusaders and is closely linked to both. Each of these organizations fits a niche in a broad anti-New Deal program. The League works up the issues to be fought, the Crusaders popularize them—and now the Committee is set up to specialize on the thorny tax question just as it begins to get hot.

Conservatives are delighted with the way the tax debate is working out. They figure the public can soon be educated to realize that levies confined to the rich are futile as revenue-producers. Once that point is registered, they believe the popular reaction to the pain of paying as you go will put a speedy end to "Santa Claus experiments."

Villain

Engineers in charge of the Passamaquoddy power project are discovering they have a huge collection of complications on their hands.

The building of the dam itself will be the least of their troubles. The population of the Maine villages of Lubec and Eastport (about 7000) probably will be more than trebled by the importation of workers and camp followers. All arrangements must be made for this army—housing, feeding, water supply, power supply, sewage disposal, policing, etc., before anything can be done on the project itself. These details will keep the planning staff on the jump for several months.

The real villain of Passamaquoddy may turn out to be—not Thomas Corcoran—but Comptroller General McCarl. Unless he approves the vouchers nobody will get paid and insiders get word that he might choose to get tough.

Boost

New York credits Congressman Hamilton Fish with canny politics in his move to get the soldiers' bonus paid out of work relief funds. What could be sweeter—from the Republican standpoint—than to force the Democrats' hand on the issue and get out of the way before the GOP comes back to power?

And at the same time what a happy boost for Mr. Fish's Presidential (or Vice-Presidential) aspirations to appear again as the stalwart champion of the downtrodden veteran. He can't lose no matter what happens.

Sidelights

Moody Comeback Thrills

Mrs. Helen Wills Moody stole a march on the tennis public when, after months of secret practice, she announced that she was going abroad to attempt a comeback on the courts. Her efforts are being watched with great interest for tennis enthusiasts keenly hope for another meeting between the former title-holder and Miss Helen Jacobs.

America's Davis cup hopes rest on the shoulders of the veteran doubles pair, Wilmer Allison and John Van Ryn, Sidney Wood and a pair of youngsters getting their first taste of international competition on foreign courts, Gene Mako and Donald Budge. Budge proved one of the sensations at Wimbledon and bolstered our cup chances considerably.

Track and field athletics this spring came through with its share of sensational performances. Jesse Owens, of Ohio State, stole the spotlight with his four-day triumph in record-breaking fashion, topping them off with an amazing leap of 23 feet 8 1/4 inches in the broad jump. Keith Brown, of Yale, wound up his varsity career by clearing 14 feet 5 3/8 inches in the pole vault. Eddie O'Brien, Tom Keane's latest quarter-mile flash at Syracuse, stepped into the front ranks when he outstepped Glenn Hardin, Jimmy La Valle and Ivan Foujita in the "440" at Princeton. The convincing manner in which Jack Lovelock, the New Zealand miler, outfooted Glenn Cunningham, Bill Bonthron and Gene Verzie served to emphasize the spell British mile runners have held over American trackmen.

New Pitchers Identified

Babe Ruth held the interest of the baseball fans with his ill-fated splurge with the Boston Braves. The Babe's attempt to stage a comeback in the National League went up in thin air when the big fellow failed to come up to the mark and suddenly quit the team in disgust. While everyone was looking for a worthy successor to the slugger Bambino a flock of capable fingers sprouted up in the new crop of mortals—Cy Blanton, Clyde Castleton, Vito Tamulis, Whitey Wilshire and Jeth Whitehead.

The failure of the Dean boys to show their 1934 form left the Cardinals floundering in the first half of the race while the Giants rushed along in front thanks to great pitching, and threaten to make a runaway of the National League race.

The Cleveland Indians failed to show the strength they promised mostly because they were victims of unfortunate "breaks." The loss of Earl Averill coming on top of Knickerbocker's enforced absence weakened the Cleveland entry in the National open golf championship at Oakland left golfers with plenty to talk about for some time to come. Sam Parks, an unknown, shot a 299 which was good enough to beat the fine field entered. Walter Hagen's magnificent bid for the title—the veteran only missed by a couple of strokes—was one of the features of the tournament.

Yakima Canutt As Big-Shot Bandit

The big-shot bandit leader who seldom comes into the open, but directs his outfit-masters to successfully that a big reward is offered for him, dead or alive, is impersonated by Yakima Canutt, in "Outlaw Rule," the new Red Russell Western, playing Friday and Saturday at the Queen Theater.

For many years Canutt has been identified with the role of border ruffian, so much so indeed, that the fans only need one glimpse at him when he appears on the screen to be aware that he is plotting something sinister and out for mischief. The number of Westerns in which he has appeared, shot and fought his way to infamy is so large that Canutt himself has lost track of their titles. Among recent productions in which he figured, the fans will best remember his work in "Two Plated Justice," "Cheyenne Whirlwind," "Telegraph Trail" and "The Pony Express." He is as likable a fellow in private life as he is an infernal rascal in films, and his work in "Outlaw Rule" is distinguished by his usual ferocity and hard-boiled cynicism, which always results in the audience praying fervently that he may be put out of business in the next reel.
